The snowflakes were shiny and their structure was complicated, which fits Aferris' taste perfectly. He would have collected them if he had not known what they really were, and that was the reason why Alferris did not really enjoy the winter.

As someone who signed a 100-year contract with Lucien, Alferris happily followed Lucien to Rentato after he devoured the rare roasted whole lamb. He disguised himself as a young boy that was around seven to eight years old so the citizens would not be terrified. He had a pair of amber eyes, dark blonde hair, and he was wearing a little suit with a little tie.

In the carriage, Arthur Doyle was shivering in the corner as he knew what the cute boy really was. Although he knew a lot of things and he had a strong background, he was still scared when facing a legendary "monster".

"The arc lamp is way too hot and way too expensive. Most of the cities can't afford it, not even Rentato. You can only find such a lamp in the noble district and the busiest market." Lucien changed his outfit back to Holm style. He was smiling while looking out of the carriage.

Arthur overcame his fear with the desire for wealth. He followed Lucien's sight and looked at the night view outside. He said excitedly, "After the magic crystal light passes the field test, its cost will be lowered again, and I'll talk to the Governor of Rentato City Hall. All the streets in the city will use our magic lamp and it's hard to imagine how much money we'll get. We can also promote the product in other cities and other countries..." He could not imagine how much value the lamp could create.

Alferris turned his head around suddenly after hearing the word "money". He tried to figure out what they were discussing. Arthur was so scared that he almost knocked over the glazed white porcelain teacup.

"This business comes with great opportunity and the profit will be incredible, Alferris. If you want to join us, you must buy a share with your golds, gems, and crystals. You have a lot of them in your collection, right?" Lucien was just joking with Alferris. However, if Alferris really wanted to join in, the Will of Elemental probably would not have an issue. The initial production and promotion phase required much investment. And before the cost was lowered again, not everyone would be able to use the lamp. That would make the stingy Morris's heart broke.

"Gold, gem, and crystal? For real..." Alferris tried to make it look like that he did not care but he was actually struggling badly in his mind. The possible great wealth in the future and the shiny gold, gem, crystal in his collection. He wanted both!

Alferris struggled so bad in his mind that he did not even notice the carriage had already arrived at Duke James' mansion in the noble district.

"Welcome, Evans, our youngest and most handsome member of the Arcana Review Board. Sadly, my daughters and my granddaughters already have their own families, or they'll definitely ask me to introduce you to them." Duke James, who looked like a bald mobster, smiled as he welcomed them. Surrounded around the warm campfire in the garden, he and his guests seemed to be waiting for something.

Lucien smiled as he got off the carriage. "It's a great honor to be welcomed by Duke James himself. I feel like I'm a king or a prince. Why is everyone outside?"

The mansion is completely dark without the slightest hint of light. It almost felt like the mansion had merged with the dark night.

"All the candles in the mansion have been changed to magic crystal lights and we'll light them up one by one in the dark night. It's a memorable moment, and we should begin only when all the guests are here." The Duke's head was reflecting the orange light from the campfire.

Lucien chuckled in his mind as he thought that the Duke had the spirit of a hipster, although an old one.

There were some special set up in the garden, so that although there was only one single campfire, it was not cold at all. The noble girls and ladies were not complaining at all, on the contrary, they were considerably interested in this new party format.

"The Prince's body is weak and the night is cold, so I did not invite him. Alright, let me introduce you to some friends." Duke James led Lucien to several people that looked like sorcerers after Lucien greeted the nobles that he was familiar with. It seemed like they were the Electromagnetics Sorcerers that Arthur had mentioned about who had helped set up the routes and converters.

Approaching the two men and one woman, James pointed at Lucien and said, "I guess you already know who he is and I should probably skip the introduction. Level six arcanist, Fifth circle sorcerer, the youngest member of the Arcana Review Board, the genius who has claimed the highest Elemental and Necromancy honors, Mr. Lucien Evans."

Lucien had not submitted his sorcerer rank yet. He was waiting for everything to settle down first.

"Greetings, Mr. Evans," the old man with well-organized black and white hair said. The young man and the young woman around him also bowed politely. "Greetings, Mr. Evans."

"This is Mr. Barek Trevors, a level-six Electromagnetics arcanist and a seventh-circle sorcerer. He's a student of the Emperor of Control, Mr. Brook." James introduced the old man with blonde eyes and a serious expression to Lucien. "And they are his student, middle-rank sorcerers Lillian and Issac."

Lillian was a delicate girl with long brown hair, while Issac seemed to have the Fire Giant's bloodline as he was tall and muscular; his hair had the color of the flames.

"Mr. Trevors, Lillian, and Issac. Nice to meet you." Lucien nodded slightly and greeted them one by one.

James chuckled. "Barek is a friend from my childhood. He failed to activate his bloodline power so he became a sorcerer. However, he showed his talent as a sorcerer and was recognized by Mr. Brook. He became a high-ranked arcanist smoothly. I think it wouldn't take him too long to surpass me, although I started much earlier than him.

"This time we're trying to create some new alchemical things that deal with Electromagnetics, which is his specialty. So I decided to ask him to help."

It sounded like that Barek came from a small noble family. Although he had no title of nobility, he was still a representative of those board members who were close to the nobles. After being introduced to the liberal group by Prince Patrick, Lucien had expanded his social networks.

"Evans, the electrons you discovered are very helpful in the electromagnetic field. A lot of theories now have a deeper meaning." It seemed like Barek did not know how to interact with people. He went straight to arcana topics.

Lucien did not want to waste time on saying preliminaries anyway, so he started talking with Barek about the possible situations of the study in the electromagnetic field. Lillian and Issac decided to remain silent and just listen to their conversation on the side.

"Evans, have you heard of the experiment conducted by president Douglas?" Barek suddenly mentioned an experiment.

Lucien shook his head in confusion. "You know, I spent most of my time lately analyzing spells and improving myself, so I had no idea what happened recently."

"President Douglas designed an experiment, trying to validate that there is no relative movement against ether and the speed of light is the same in all direction." Barek was speaking in a calm tone. It did not even sound like that he was talking about a trending hot topic.

Lucien finally understood what happened. Without other things interrupting, Douglas eventually completed the experiment he mentioned in the letter and confirmed that ether did not exist. Without the ether, there was no way that light could arrive at the ground if light had been waves, and the world should be completely dark.

He denied the wave theory of light from an opposite approach.

"Evans, what do you think of this experiment?" Barek's blonde eyes suddenly turned bright and his expression became even more serious. It seemed like Lucien's answer would decide if they could become friends or not.

Lucien struggled in his mind after seeing his expression. He did not expect the wave theory supports and the particle theory supports to hate each other so much.

Recalling in the magic school that the Electromagnetic faculties supported the wave theory and The Elements faculties supported the particle theory was the main reason for their conflicts, Lucien had a deeper understanding of this principle contradiction which persisted throughout the history of magic.

When they open their eyes for the first time, people could feel the light. By comparing the day time to the night time, the ancient human beings admired the light. They thought light represented life and divinity. Ever since magic was born, sorcerers never stopped exploring the truth of the light. After they found that light was similar to spiritual power, the study of light became one of the eternal topics in the field.

Compared to theories like the Energy Essentialism supported by Viscount Roland, the Atom Foundation Theory of the Element School, and the Theory of Life Force of the Necromancy School, the Particle Theory led by Douglas and the Wave Theory led by Brook were the two major theories that involved all sorcerers of the Congress. They were also the main conflict in research.

If the board were to be turned into a church, then aside from a few people who sat on the fence, the wave supporters and particle supporters would definitely condemn each other as "heretics"!

In this environment, mentioning the wave-particle dualism would not be a compromise. Instead, it would just become a new heresy and was likely to be attacked by supporters of both theories.

Lucien thought for a while and smiled. "Based on your description, Mr. Barek, it seems like the experiment is based on the current Astronomical Revolution System, which hasn't been validated by the discovery of a planet yet."

Lucien repeated the same words he used to answer his teacher Fernando.

"That's reasonable." Barek's expression loosened. It almost felt like that as long as Lucien did not support the Particle Theory and Douglas's experiment, they could be friends.

At this moment, all Duke James's guests had arrived, so he clapped and made sure that everyone was looking at the mansion. Sorcerer Lillian walked to the entrance and smiled. "Everyone, with electricity, the magic crystal lights no longer need to be turned on by with spiritual power. Even the most untalented noble will be able to use them like using quills. Actually, it can be even easier. For example, I just need a single tap and the light in the whole mansion will be turned on."

To make sure that Duke James could show off, Barek made a temporary master switch outside.

"Great, let's put out the campfire first." James was satisfied that the gentlemen and the ladies were all staring at the mansion curiously. He waved his hands to put out the campfire.

Lillian pressed the switch hard intentionally in the darkness.

After a soft noise, all the magic crystal lights in the mansion were turned on.

The bright light tore the dark apart and expelled the fear. The place was full of a "divine" feeling. It was like the morning light driving away the night!

It was a big step in human's history!

Chapter 420: Using Electricity Safely

In the winter night when snowflakes were swirling in the air, crystal lights flowing with colors lit up the entire place of the Duke's villa, which looked like a shining gem against the black background of the night. The light that burst out from the villa was so eye-catching that it seemed as if all the stars had landed and gathered here.

Even if among the senior-rank sorcerers, no one had ever tried to use this many crystal lights in his magic tower. In most cases, they were used to using magic candles, as the candles' effects were also not bad.

For most of the nobles present tonight, it was not until today that they finally realized what the word "brilliance" meant. They had never imagined that a man-made view could be as imposing as natural scenery. This power came from human beings, and this scene could be spread and seen throughout the world!

"Ladies and gentlemen, come in, please." Barek's student, Lillian, was the emcee tonight. With a lovely smile, she invited the guests to take a tour in the luxury villa lit up like the palace of the Sun King.

The noble ladies lifted their skirts elegantly and glided in, followed by the gentlemen. All of them were very curious and could not wait to see the magic crystal lights closely.

"Very impressive. Our first stage of promotion has succeeded." Arthur was a businessman, and the impressiveness of the scene did not outweigh the importance of making money for him.

He was carefully observing how the nobles responded to the magic crystal lights.

"I want them for my magic tower!" Alferris drooled seeing how bright the lights were, as he was known for being captivated by shiny things. "I'll pay in arcana points!"

Gold, gems, crystals... Anything that had gone into Alferris' pocket would not come out again. Lucien even doubted if Alferris had embezzled half of the building materials of its magic tower, as it looked so deformed that it resembled a crooked peak — Located in Allyn, the tower's chance of being attacked was slim to none, so there was nothing to be afraid of.

"But these lights, because of the cost, can only benefit the nobles. If we can't lower the cost further, common citizens still won't be able to enjoy the light. Every single human being should benefit from the progress of civilization." Lucien was inspired by the scene; To Lucien, the standard of judging whether a civilization is advanced or not should be the popularization of technologies. The commencing age of electricity should be able to do so!

Arthur certainly was not sharing Lucien's view. "But... It is not very likely that we can lower the cost further, at least not in a short period of time."

"Well... We will need a great number of skilled workers. The procedures that don't require magic could be separated out and put on assembly lines to produce standardized parts. Then, the cost can be further lowered." Lucien nodded slightly like a sophisticated capitalist. The candidates in his mind were the dwarves on Night Highland. But since he had caused the vampires such great trouble, Lucien had to wait for at least two to three years to carry out his plan, when all the attention were drawn to the exploration into the new dimension.

"It takes lots of time training workers..." Arthur did not understand the terms Lucien was using, and he was also not interested in asking, since currently even the basic preconditions couldn't be satisfied.

At this time, Lillian turned off the main crystal light in the hall and only left several smaller ones. The light instantly became dim and soft. A romantic and elegant atmosphere was created.

She smiled humorously. "No worries, ladies and gentlemen, you won't lose the romance of having candlelight dinner because of these magical lights. Romance is in our soul and heart."

"Also," she added, "when you walk around in your castle, darkness shall never be intimidating to you anymore. We've brought light to you, forever, with the magic crystal lights."

Lucien suspected that Arthur had paid Lillian beforehand for such painstaking promotion. But Lucien liked it, for the profit it was going to bring!

Following the tour in Duke James' villa, it was time for the court dance. In the Kingdom of Holm, which was known for being very conservative, the circle dance from the palace of Tria had not yet prevailed. Many old-school nobles disdained such a dance that requires the dancers to be so close to each other. Only some young nobles, when having their private gatherings, would do the circle dance.

"Mr. Evans, your design is definitely very impressive. I've ordered a set from Mr. Arthur. I had never imagined that crystal lights could be so accessible." A dignified young lady walked to Lucien holding a glass of water in her hand, her eyes full of admiration.

The "a set" she was talking about was a set for an entire villa, and the cost was equivalent to that of a single magic crystal light before.

Lucien swirled his glass of liquor, Sky Blue, and smiled. "This is because now electricity can be delivered very efficiently."

"Honestly speaking, when the lady turned on the lights, I was shocked by how bright the lights were. I can't describe it with my own words... It was like a dream. And somehow I also felt very proud. You're a sorcerer who creates miracles..." The young lady's face flushed. "I am neither a sorcerer nor a knight... But now I can enjoy the light as well."

Lucien grinned. "Popularizing alchemical items so that most ordinary people could be able to use them is always my dream."

"You're such a great person."

The young lady's sincere praise made Lucien, who was in most cases a relatively "cheeky" person, blushed a little.

"... To make most ordinary people be able to use them... Great vision, Evans." Duke James and Barek, the seventh circle mage, together walked toward them. Hearing what Lucien just said, Barek released a soft sigh, as if he had seen through Lucien's hiding intention.

Seeing the Duke, the young noble lady's face burned. She hurriedly said, "Mr. Evans, I'll leave you alone to the Duke."

"Ha, Evans, why are you just standing there like we old fellows? Can't you tell that Julie was waiting for you to ask her for a dance? Don't tell me you don't like Julie. She's the beloved granddaughter of Count Hackson." James joked. "And obviously, Julie is not the first lady who you have refused."

Lucien took a sip of Sky Blue and spoke half-dramatically, "Perhaps... I'm an old man in my heart..."

Young and good looking, promising and talented, wealthy and of high social status, Lucien was quite popular among the noble ladies. At this banquet, the ladies present were all from the liberal families which were open-minded to magic. They did not mind marrying a sorcerer at all, and some of them even had this fantasy.

Duke James laughed and said, "When there are more water-current magic circles for generating electricity and more electric wires, perhaps the ordinary people can also benefit from magic. The great changes in their lives will be brought to them by magic, not by any divinities. At that time, your vision will be accomplished."

Lucien realized that maybe he should reconsider what kind of person the Duke was. Although the bareheaded duke looked quite robust and ferocious from the outside, he was, in fact, quite sharp and open-minded, as he had figured out this much information from one single comment of Lucien. Fortunately, James was in alliance with them.

"When electric wires and electricity-powered devices are more accessible, we have to consider one important factor — Electricity can be dangerous, much more dangerous than candles. Touching flame with your hand will only burn you, but touching a broken wire will probably kill you. The Church will depict electricity into something vicious to prevent its popularization." Lucien put forward his concern. At the moment, electricity was both the cheapest and the easiest-to-transfer energy; Spiritual power, solar or tidal power were not its rivals.

James looked sideways at Barek and received his confirmation, "Every year there are sorcerers who forgot to cast adequate protection dying from electric shock in electromagnetics labs."

There was a rank in Allyn for the dumbest ways to die, and electric shock ranked the 50th:

The poor sorcerer, Osan, discovered a powerful lightning spell by accident in his experiment. When he approached the ball lightning, he was shocked to find that the power of the lightning balls which were rolling all across the room had exceeded the limit of his protective shield. Let us thank him for his remarkable contribution to the magic of lightning, and for telling us, with his charred body, that we must stay away from uncontrolled electricity currents.

"So what shall we do? You've put forward the question, so you must have already figured out the solution." James smiled and looked at Lucien confidently.

Lucien took his time with his answer. "Electricity is always dangerous to the human body. We can neither require all our users to be sorcerers nor cover every single piece of wire with magic protection. I hope that, Mr. Barek, your sorcerers from the school of electromagnetics can work out a Handbook of Electrical Safety to teach people how to avoid the possible risks."

James nodded thoughtfully.

"Facing something unknown, and especially when it can be both beneficial and dangerous, we shall not simply and blindly reject it like fools. Instead, we should try to make the most use of its positive sides and minimize the hazards. And this is the value in arcana that we should promote. It's the same as how we use fire." Lucien added.

"Also, if the Church and the conservatives are going to encourage people to refuse the use of electricity by exaggerating its possible hazards, we should raise people's awareness by teaching them what electricity really is, letting them understand the pros and cons. It's not going to be an easy job, but it's meaningful." Lucien kept going, and his tone was quite alike to that of a proper member of the Arcana Review Board.

James nodded and turned to Barek. "Evans' words make sense. Can you find the right people to work on the handbook?"

"No problem," Barek replied.

In their eyes, although Lucien's teacher was the Lord of Storm, Lucien had not revealed much talent in the school of electromagnetics and had not presented any outstanding outcome — For many mages majoring in electromagnetics, the discovery of the electron was just a side product from Lucien's exploration of elements.

"Evans, when can you finish the simplification of the record magic circle? Nobles will definitely like it!" said James.

This was the purpose of James coming to Lucien.

Right now, the study on electromagnetism messaging had stepped into a dilemma and they did not believe that Lucien would be the one solving the problem, so they never mentioned it in front of Lucien.

Lucien shook his head. "I'm still looking for the proper material by conducting experiments over and over again. When it comes to choosing materials, it takes time."

In fact, because of his knowledge from the Earth, Lucien had some clues already, but he was not going to publicize it right now. Lucien would wait until the promotion of crystal light became a success first, as the early stage of the electrical revolution requires all strength to be concentrated on one aspect.

"I see..." Duke James sighed.

In the Sorcerer Administrative Department, Eric said to the poor middle-aged man who he was familiar with, "Levski, long time no see. Are you here to submit your new paper?"

"Long time no see, Eric. I've... improved my previous paper..." said Levski in a low voice. His yellow hair was as messy as a bird nest, and his blue eyes were dim and weary. This middle-aged man was as thin as a pole.

Eric frowned. "But... the previous one... was rejected by the board members, right?"

"I have improved it," Levski said firmly, "and I was told that papers putting forward subversive theories can now be submitted to Mr. Evans."

"I mean... Those board members said that the geometry you were talking about was just based on your own imagination. Your theory was ridiculous..." Eric said awkwardly, trying to persuade Levski to give up.

Levski tightened his fists and lowered his eyes. His voice trembled a bit, but was still firm. "I don't think I'm wrong. I want to show it to all the arcanists. Eric, please."

Eric nodded and took over the paper. The title was,

New Principles of Geometry with Complete Theory of Parallels.

Chapter 421: Levski's Perseverance and Expectation

Chapter 421: Levski's Perseverance and Expectation

Seeing the title, Eric sighed. "This is of no use, Levski. It's not worth your effort. No one from the Board would accept it. What you're saying goes completely in the opposite direction from our observation and the basic geometry principles. Without a doubt, this is not correct. This is not the first day we know each other and I'd suggest you to stop wasting your time on it."

Because of the need for magic pattern construction and the substantiation of the cognitive world, the study of math had a long history. I was widely acknowledged that Geometry was based on the five axioms and the five postulates put forward by Muenterse, a legendary archmage from the Magic Empire, in his work Geometry. Thus, it was known as Muenterse's Geometry. And also because that Muenterse was the founder of Tower, Muenterse's Geometry was also called Tower Geometry.

Among the five postulates, the fifth one was the source of much interest for being very prolix and looking more like a theorem that needs to be proved rather than a postulate. But it was, in fact, equivalent to a proposition that was popular on the Earth: In a plane, through any point not on a given line, only one new line can be drawn that's parallel to the given line. Since the establishment of the Congress of Magic, with the fast development in mathematics, more and more sorcerers, who pursued the sense of aesthetics that values simplicity in math, attempted to prove the results without using the postulate. However, no one had succeeded yet.

In Eric's eyes, Levski was one of them who failed. Levski tried to use proof by contradiction to support the fifth postulate and started with the assumption that: In a plane, through any point not on a given line, at least two new lines can be drawn that's parallel to the given line.

However, the result he got was surprising. By combining the assumption, the five axioms, and the rest of the four postulates, Levski drew up a geometry system that was logically consistent yet at the same time greatly conflicted with reality. The arcanists from Tower all believed that the system was absurd and treated it indifferently.

After Levski submitted his paper against the oppositions, the criticism of his reasoning was like a fierce storm. Without a doubt, his paper failed to pass the review.

“Eric, have you carefully read my paper? Do you see how I demonstrated it? Both the premise and the derivation are correct! Why you just can’t accept it?” Levski’s body was trembling from anger. Years of criticism and poverty had not made him yield: For more than ten years, his magic level and researches remained paused, countless mockery and satire were directed at him, but Levski never gave up his theory.

Eric raised his hand, signaling Levski to lower his voice. “Yes, I admit that your use of proof by contradiction and your logic reasoning are absolutely correct. But Levski, open your eyes and see this world. This table, the room... They all look different from what your geometry describes! They are real, my friend. And you tell me what we should believe! You’ve tried so many years, even printed out numerous copies and propagated them to the other arcanists, but has anyone believed in your geometry system so far?”

“No...” Levski lowered his head, dispirited. In the past, he thought that his paper was rejected because the members of the Arcana Review Board and the arcanists from Tower were too conservative, so he submitted his paper directly to the younger arcanists and to the authorities in mathematics including Douglas, Hathaway, and Paris. However, the younger arcanists still mocked his proposition, calling it “lacking common sense”.

Meanwhile, the authorities in mathematics also chose to keep silent.

“I’ve modified it...” Levski hurriedly emphasized; his tone softened for only a single second. “This time it should be able to pass. Eric, please.”

Eric sighed. "But you can't keep acting like this, Levski... You've submitted this paper multiple times in the past ten years. And you never succeeded. Also, we have regulations. You can't submit the same paper for multiple times. It's a waste of the board members' time. You're already in your forties... I have to remind you. You're still a junior-rank mage..."

"This time is different! I've perfected it. Eric, please... Let Mr. Evans read it... I promise I'll focus on studying magic in the following years." Levski begged with hope in his eyes.

Eric's serious face slightly twitched. "Mr. Evans only reads those subversive papers... You know, those that will make sorcerers' brains explode. But yours only discusses the pure theories in math, and it won't affect one's cognitive world. So I'm afraid..."

A sorcerer's cognitive world was based on his or her exploration into the truth of the world. Math was just their tools and thus could not affect its stability.

Before Levski kept insisting, Eric sighed again. "What about this... I'll put 'subversive' and 'math' on the front page of your paper. So your paper will be sent to two board members specializing in mathematics, and Mr. Evans as well."

Eric understood that it was Mr. Evans who brought Levski the gleam of hope. The board members had not changed much within the past several years, and they were all quite annoyed with Levski's paper. If it were not for newly-joined Mr. Evans, Levski would not have been so determined to submit it once again.

At least there was still hope!

"Thank you, Eric..." Levski became speechless from the surprise.

Eric waved his hand. "Go back and wait for the result. Hope your life can back on track as soon as possible."

Levski nodded seriously, feeling anxious but also full of hope. He had no idea if Mr. Evans would treat his paper fairly.

.....

On the fifteenth floor of the magic tower, in a bright and spacious room.

Arms extending from both sides of a magic circle were busy sorting the papers.

“Math, Subversive...” The cold, metal voice paused a bit before making a final decision. “To Mr. Neeshka, Ms. Milina, and Mr. Evans.”

In his cognitive world, where strings of starlight hanged down while elements and electrons revolved, Lucien spread out his spiritual power in waves and let the power fuse with starlight, elements, ice, and snow. Then he carefully vibrated his spiritual power waves to add the properties of spiritual particles onto time’s instantaneity.

Lucien was being extremely careful with the tiny modifications, for if his spiritual power went out of control, his entire cognitive world could be ruined within a second.

After a long time, Lucien finally ended his early morning meditation and left his bedroom to enjoy breakfast. Then he walked to the Congress of Magic’s headquarter tower as part of his physical exercise.

As soon as he stepped into the institution, he saw Lazar, who never came to the institution early, was walking back and forth in the office with a big smile on his face.

“Hey, Lazar, what makes you so happy today?” Asked Lucien.

“You come so early, Lucien!” Lazar was quite surprised, and then he said in a triumphant tone, “I can fly now!”

As he spoke, Lazar started flying in the office, almost hitting the ceiling.

“I see... So you’re a middle-rank now. Gotta celebrate that.” Lucien grinned.

Lazar, whose landing still lacked some balance, laughed. “Of course! We’re having a party!”

Then he said to Lucien with gratitude, “Thank you, man. I’ve learned a lot in the past several months doing experiments with you. Your advanced research in the field of Element, especially the discovery of the electron, helped me gain a better insight. My cognitive world has become more stable since then, so I am able to make such a progress while I am still working on math.”

“That’s why we are always exploring the truth of the world.” Lucien smiled, but then his tone became a bit more serious. “But Lazar, you still have to work hard on your math. The more progress you make, the heavier you will rely on math as your tool.”

Lazar nodded seriously. “I know where my problems lie. Also, since joining the institution, we’re all making great progress. Annick, Sprint, Katrina have told me that they are almost ready to become real sorcerers. They just still need some time to build up their spiritual power and to get some potions as aids.”

When Lucien was absent, Lazar and the students followed their prior plan and kept working on studying cathode ray and cryogenic materials. But their schedules were not that tight anymore, so they could have some time to do their own experiments.

“I’m glad to see their progress.” Lucien nodded in satisfaction.

After chatting for a while, Lazar suddenly jumped to a new topic. “So Lucien, how do you think of Mr. President’s recent experiment?”

This was a heated topic for almost every arcanist recently, and it had to do with the long-time debate over waves vs. particles. Lucien answered briefly, “If Mr. President’s theories are proven correct, we should be able to abandon the theory of Ether as a medium.”

Of course, many would still try hard to come up with all kinds of theories to mend it.

“This’s the Evans I know. Lucien Evans is always sharp and loves to see people's brain explode." Lazar joked. This comment was agreed by many arcanists.

"Maybe I'll get a title because of this... Lazar, I'll go and check out the Review Board first, and go to visit my teacher. When I'm back, I'll celebrate for you." said Lucien.

Seeing that the other students were showing up one by one in the institution, Lucien decided to spend some time in his office of the Arcana Review Board. Although even if he did not show up, the golem would always send the papers to his place in the early evening. But since he was here in the headquarter tower, Lucien decided to take a look in the office so that it wouldn't be empty forever.

As soon as Lucien stepped into the luxury office on the fifteenth floor, the golem welcomed him and said in its cold voice, "Master, a paper has just been sent to you."

"Paper?" Lucien was a bit surprised, since rarely were there papers qualified for being subversive.

Taking over the paper from the golem, Lucien saw the two words: Math and Subversive. Instantly, he had some expectations, since there were just a few possible findings in math that could be regarded as subversive within the current level of study.

" New Principles of Geometry with Complete Theory of Parallels"

Lucien quickly browsed the paper and noticed that it was an improved version. Slightly frowning, Lucien said to the golem, "Go and get me the previous papers submitted by this person... together with the review comments of the board members."

Chapter 422: Lucien's First Review

Commnen

Sky cleared up after the snow. Sunlight warmed up everything on the ground.

The heavy steps of the steel golem echoed from within the corridor. Pushing open the office door, the golem said to Lucien in its cold rigid voice, "Master, here are the six papers submitted by the same author, as well as the comments by the board members."

This was one of the advantages of being a member of Arcana Review Board — A member did not need to spend any arcana points for checking papers and their corresponding comments. This was for encouraging the in-depth study of arcana and the prudent attitude for writing reviews.

Lucien took over the pile of papers, signaled the steel golem to guard outside his office, and immediately started reading.

From the several papers submitted in the past, it could be seen that the author, Levski, had delved into a geometry system which was contradictory to the current Tower system. In his most recent paper, Levski had developed a brand new system of geometry based on the five axioms, the four postulates, and the premise that in a plane through any point not on a given line, only one new line can be drawn that's parallel to the original one.

Lucien was very surprised that, a person in this world had worked out Lobachevskian geometry on his own!

Lobachevskian geometry was the first non-Euclidean geometry system developed on the Earth, and it was named after its discoverer Lobachevsky. When Lobachevsky first came up with the system, he was still a widely-recognized, young and promising mathematician. However, the cost of him introducing the new geometry system was life-long criticism and humiliation. The authorities either fiercely attacked the new system or ignored it completely. Even Gauss, the foremost of mathematicians, who in fact saw the rationality of Lobachevskian geometry, chose to remain silent in fear of the great pressure from the whole academic community.

But despite the miserable situation, Lobachevsky never gave up. He kept on trying for the new geometry system that he invented and even published another monograph in geometry in the last year of his life. Unfortunately, by the time he died in great pain and poverty and nearly blind, the academia still refused to recognize the enormous value of his geometry system.

It was only more than a decade after his death that his new geometry system was proven correct on special surfaces by another mathematician. Finally, the significance of his finding was acknowledged and it was thus highly appraised by the academic world.

It seemed that in the current stage, the study could neither help the progressing of arcana nor the improvement of magic. However, when the development of arcana and magic proceeded further and reached the realm of space and the universe, the current mathematical tools would become insufficient for describing and solving practical problems. By then, development in math studies and new math models would be in need.

For example, another non-Euclidean geometry, Riemannian geometry, was the mathematical foundation for the great General Theory of Relativity which addressed the problems of space and time, while the application of Lobachevskian geometry was seen in human being's exploration of the universe.

If it could be said that Tower Geometry (Euclidean geometry) was human beings' direct perception of the world, then the two non-Euclidean geometry systems were closer to the objective truth — In fact, the three geometry systems were just different in curvature.

Compared to studies in magic, subjects that were being used as tools, such as math, faced a more challenging and tough journey for the discovery of subversive theories, for the authorities were even harsher and more conservative. Lucien sighed as he saw the comments given by the board members:

"A ridiculous reasoning has led to a ridiculous result. I'd suggest that the author should look through a window and see the real world. The paper shall not pass."

"... full of mistakes and useless. Fail to pass."

"... this is a vagarious and incomprehensible dream talk. The best and only use of this paper is to be thrown into a fireplace. Obviously, fail."

...

Lucien shook his head repeatedly when he read through the comments. Although his paper had also been looked down upon in the past, the comments were still given in a standard tone, and they were mostly due to the inability to understand the paper or incapacity to verify the results with experiments. Yet the review comments here looked more like attacks and calumniations towards the author, which should never come from a board member, whose duty was to review a paper based only on its theorem and proof.

After informing Fernando, Lucien spent his time reading Levski's paper carefully from the very beginning to the end, while doing the deductive reasoning on his own. Then, he picked up the quill-pen and started writing down his first review result as a board member.

"A daring hypothesis, rigorous deductive reasoning..."

The dusk light in the early evening dyed Allyn with a layer of shining gold-orange color, which made the whole city look stunning.

In a very tall magic tower which rose into the sky, a frowning old man was concentrated on deducting a math problem, over his white eyebrows was the special grey pointed hat of Tower. The several complex magic circles which occupied most of his desk space burst out light from time to time, assisting him with the sophisticated calculations.

At this time, his assistant knocked on the office door.

"Come in," said the level-eight, seventh-circle mage in a bit short-tempered tone, as he hated to be interrupted in the middle of his work.

His assistant was a young beautiful lady who always looked serious. Wearing a traditional Holm dress and holding a pile of documents, she said, "Teacher, the puppet has sent today's papers over. Please take a look at them."

The old man in his sixties rubbed his brows and nodded. "Give them to me."

If the papers were not that serious or difficult, his students should be able to handle them.

The emotionless young lady approached him with a constant pace and put the papers on the desk beside his right hand.

The old man first took a glance at the title of the paper, and then the look on his face instantly changed. Banging the desk fiercely, he yelled,

"Again! Levski's submitting his imagination geometry again! Is Eric daydreaming? It's such a waste of our time! The Board should prohibit him from submitting this paper again forever!

"Samantha, just scribble something based on the comment I wrote last time and throw it back!"

.....

Meanwhile, in a villa in Allyn which claimed to have the biggest collection of flowers in the world.

A beautiful and elegant lady, whose hair was tied back, threw the paper in her hands on the ground. "Levski still won't give up?! What a waste of his talent and life! What's the point of submitting the same ridiculous paper again?"

With a second thought, she picked up the paper from the floor and grabbed a unique-shaped pretty quill-pen. Within two minutes, she had finished her comments.

Then she said to her servant angrily, "Give it back to the Board two days later, in the evening."

Let this stubborn madman live under the torture brought by hope for two more days!

After sending his comments back to the Board, Lucien started working on his own paper with a smile on his face.

Three days after in the morning, as soon as Lucien stepped into Fernando's office, he saw Douglas, the president of the Congress. Douglas was wearing a black suit and looked kind and easygoing as usual.

"Morning, Mr. President." Lucien greeted, wondering what was going on this morning.

Douglas grinned. "Quite surprised to see me, right? I'm here to talk to your teacher about the two theories published on Arcana and Magic — the two that disproved my experiment."

"You know, I like to talk to Fernando face to face at times like this," Douglas added. "Listening to him roaring against the theories lifts my spirit up."

Lucien almost burst out laughing.

Fernando looked quite pissed. Shaking his head, he said, "I don't get it... Why these worthless papers could even be published on Arcana and Magic? I know their standards has never been impressive, but now it is becoming unacceptable! What does it mean by 'charged particles are shortened when put against ether, so there would be a deviation in measurement'? Are there any evidence from solid experiments to prove this?"

"Comparatively speaking," Fernando calmed down a bit, "Brook's paper which throws doubt against your system of celestial body motion is more powerful. After all, those planets only exist in your dreams right now."

Douglas did not feel offended by Fernando's comments at all. Smiling, he turned to Lucien. "What do you think, Lucien... with regards to my experiment and the debates?"

Lucien was a bit speechless, as he had been asked about the same question almost every day recently. But this time, in front of the president, he had a prepared answer which derived from his careful thinking:

"Mr. President, I do have some thoughts here. The core of your theory is based on the existence of planets, which is also the most problematic part, since we haven't found a planet yet. Therefore, your theoretical system lacks firm support."

"So what? You can find a planet?" Fernando questioned bluntly.

Lucien looked very serious, and he said firmly, "If we can't find one, why don't we make one?"

"Why don't we make a small planet that rotates our world following the orbit that we calculated?"

"If it moves as what we expect, and if it can be observed, then gravity system can definitely be proven!"

This was Lucien's proposal! He had been reflecting on it for a very long time ever since he read the letter from Douglas!

The study suddenly quieted down. Only the sound of the wind shuffling papers could be heard.

In Sorcerer Administrative Department, Levski, who wore the same old magic robe, knocked on the door of Eric's office. His heart was full of hope, but also fear and anxiety.

"You come here quite early..." said Eric stiffly. In fact, he was not surprised at all.

Levski nodded, his face pale from the cold wind on his way here. "Yesterday was the third day. Today the comments should be available..."

Eric had just arrived in his office. Tidying his desk up, he answered, "wait a moment. The earliest results should be available at around a quarter past nine."

"Alright..." Levski sat down. But a few minutes after, he sprang up from the chair and paced back and forth. He wished that he could light a cheap cigarette, but it was in Sorcerer Administrative Department.

Time passed by seconds. Suddenly, the iron cage burst out milky white light.

"Is it...?" Levski hurriedly asked, excited and scared at the same time.

Eric picked up the pile of papers and leafed through, then he looked up abruptly, appearing very surprised. "No, your paper is not here!"

"W-why?" Levski had no idea what was going on.

.....

On the fifteenth floor of Sorcerer Administrative Department, in the hall of Arcana Review Board.

Holding the three review results, the alchemical life was in a great dilemma.

Chapter 423: Thank You Also what the author wants to say to you all, dear readers

Chapter 423: Thank You (Also what the author wants to say to you all, dear readers)

The alchemical lives that worked for Arcana Review Board were responsible for several tasks: First, sort the papers received based on their keywords and forward them to the board members in the assorted fields; Second, send review results to the Sorcerer Administrative Department; Third, work out the weighted average of the comments given by the two assigned board members to conclude the final descriptive evaluation as well as how many arcana credits and points should be rewarded; Fourth, when two members' comments differed greatly, send the paper to a third person.

And if the two board members did not agree on the review result given by the third person, a small meeting consisting of all the board members in this field and the author of the paper should be called for, during which the final decision would be reached after an oral defense of the author and discussion among the attendees. The meeting would be audited by a special consultant from the Highest Council.

The Arcana Review Board, as the most special department in the Congress, did not follow the formal organizational form and had no president or vice president. The entire fifteenth floor only consisted of the members, their servants, and some middle-rank sorcerers doing administrative work.

The alchemical life was now in a dilemma: It had somehow made a mistake and sent the paper to three board members at once. Now that all three of them had reviewed the paper, yet their opinions diverged remarkably like the difference between heaven and hell.

Finally, it left behind its own mistake and found a way out: Send all the comments to Mr. Neeshka, Ms. Milina, Mr. Evans, and the author Levski; Invite them to attend the small meeting which was going to be held at nine in the morning tomorrow; Also, send invitations to the other board members specializing in mathematics and to the Lord of Storm.

As the grand arcanist who had been guarding Allyn in the past several years, Fernando was the most ideal person to be the special consultant. If he was too busy to spare time for the meeting, he would be able to turn down the invitation at as soon as possible, leaving enough time for the alchemical life to invite other grand arcanists or legendary sorcerers.

In Sorcerer Administrative Department, Eric scratched his thin hair in confusion. He vaguely remembered that something similar happened before, but he could not come up with an accurate answer on what was happening.

Levski's face, which was pale from catching the train early in the cold morning, now looked beyond miserable. "M-maybe, my paper was thrown into a garbage can..."

It was something that he had once experienced. At that time his paper had failed to pass, so he tried to submit his paper to some journals including Arcana Discussion, hoping that more people could see it and maybe even approve it. However, he never heard back from any journal, not even a rejection letter. Later, Levski was told that the editor had thrown his paper away after reading only one-third of it, believing that it was someone's mischief.

"..." Eric was not sure. Although he knew Lucien relatively well and regarded Lucien as a mature young gentleman, Eric was uncertain if Lucien would throw the paper away, since it was understandable for someone so talented like Lucien to be proud and perhaps, a bit arrogant.

Suddenly, the iron cage burst out white light again. Levski got slightly startled, and silence seized the office.

“Maybe your paper is there... It was missed.” Eric comforted Levski.

Levski nodded fiercely, bereft of speech.

When the light disappeared, Eric took a closer look at the file and grinned. “It’s yours.”

Levski released a sigh of relief. But just in the next second, he became nervous again. Levski tried to reach out his hand several times, but retreated it in the end. He said in a trembling voice,

“Eric, please read the comments for me, one by one.”

Eric was also curious, so he agreed. In his mind, he hoped that Lucien’s comment could be sharp and straightforward, so Levski could finally know that it was time to give up and return to his normal path of life — Before Levski got obsessed with his geometry system, he was a hard-working promising arcanist majoring in Astrology and Math, who was appreciated by both the Congress and Tower.

Picking up the file, Eric saw two pages of comments and started reading.

“Mr. Neeshka, level eight arcanist, seventh-circle mage, authority in Astrology, Force Field, and Math, commented, ‘If Levski’s dream was to develop a paper that no one in the world could understand or accept, his dream would have come true. This paper is full of ridiculous errors. Like what I said, I strongly recommend Levski to look out of his window to see the bright sunlight and blue sky. This is our true world, and it has nothing to do with the geometry system in his imagination. My conclusion remains the same. The paper is useless.’”

Levski lowered his head. The comment from Neeshka was within his expectation, but was even bitterer than the last time. His hands clenched in fists, and his body uncontrollably trembled slightly.

Eric cast a sympathetic look at Levski, and he continued to read.

“Ms. Milina, level seven arcanist, seventh-circle mage, authority in Astrology, Electromagnetism, and Math, commented, ‘This paper is full of strange reasonings that do not make any sense, and the conclusion goes the opposite from common sense. Here I warn the author: Stop harassing the board members using your paper. Except for the format, the paper has nothing that meets the requirement for submission, but format will not help it pass the review. I don't think there would be a new geometry system that differs from Tower Geometry.”

Levski lowered his head. It was not known whether he was trying to hide the rage and despair on his face, or was he simply too embarrassed to look up. But judging from his still tightly-clenched hands, the answer was quite obvious.

At this moment, Levski felt like he was falling down from a cliff. He tried hard to fly up, to grab onto something, but he was not unable to do anything. He was going to fall into the pit of forever darkness, with his eyes wide open.

Then Levski heard the sound of Eric turning the pages. Levski's face flushed, and his body shook, as if he had just caught a last glimmer of hope.

After a second, there was only silence. Ten seconds later, silence. After a minute, there was still only silence. Unable to bear it anymore, Levski finally looked up, only to see that Eric was just standing there, staring at the page, like a statue.

Like he had just woke up from a dream, Eric started reading as if in somniloquy.

“Mr. Evans, level six arcanist, fifth-circle mage, authority in Element and Thermodynamics, commented, ‘A daring hypothesis, rigorous deductive reasoning with no mistake at all. The author shows us a brand new geometry system that differs from Tower Geometry. If we can put aside our past experience and what we can see with our bare eyes, we will recognize an independent, well-developed, true, logical geometry system that should be named as Levski Geometry.’”

Levski's mouth opened subconsciously. He was completely shocked. What he just heard made him feel it was a dream.

Eric was now staring at Levski as if he had never known this old friend. Then he kept reading.

"Although the value of this finding cannot be compared to that of calculus, I would still like to use the award given to the discovery of calculus as the standard to address the significance of this paper. May us all appreciate Mr. Levski's great contribution to geometry, as well as his long-time perseverance."

His head was buzzing. When Levski heard the thankful words, his eyes were blurred with tears.

Eric shared Levski's feeling, and his voice softened.

"This is a groundbreaking, innovative, and universally-applicable paper, which deserves extensive discussion and surely will play a significant role in the development of arcana. I suggest that six hundred arcana credits and five thousand arcana points be given as awards."

Levski opened his mouth, trying to say something, but failed. Suddenly, he burst into tears. Finally, his many years of hard work paid off! His many years of suffering and pain paid off!

Levski had a tough character and had never cried over this issue in the past decade. But now, he could not control himself anymore.

In fact, Lucien had thought of regarding the paper as "of extreme importance". But since Levski had not provided any mathematical model so far, Lucien decided to give the paper a slightly more moderate comment.

Reading the remaining content the file, Eric waited until Levski calmed down a bit and said, "Since the comments vary greatly, a small meeting is going to be held at nine tomorrow morning. Remember to come."

"I will," Levski answered firmly. As long as there was one board member who saw the value of his paper, Levski was already very encouraged and believed that his life was no longer a waste.

Standing up, Levski murmured in low voice, "Thank you, Mr. Evans."

In Fernando's study.

After a minute of silence, Douglas stood up excitedly. "Young people are indeed more creative. Lucien, although what you said isn't an easy job, your words have made me feel energized again.

"Maybe Bergner said is true... This is the era of great revolution and rapid development. I can't wait to carry out the idea!"

As soon as Douglas finished his words, he summoned a space gate and went back to his own demiplane at an astonishing speed.

Fernando's red eyes were now staring at Lucien thoughtfully. After a while, when Lucien was starting to feel a bit uncomfortable, Fernando finally said,

"I don't think your proposal is that simple..."

"It's not that complicated," said Lucien "full of confidence".

When Fernando was about to ask some more questions, the magic circle on his desk lit up and a file appeared.

Picking up the file and skimming through it, Fernando grinned. "You're such a troublemaker, Lucien. Tomorrow morning at nine, on the fifteenth floor there's going to be a small meeting for the paper you reviewed. Huh, why are you always different from other people?"

Lucien was not surprised, "So, are you joining the meeting, sir?"

Fernando glared at Lucien and said sarcastically, "I gotta think carefully whether I should get involved in something that is supported by you. After all, it's probably very dangerous... Wait a second, oh it's a mathematics paper, so it won't affect the cognitive world. But I still have to read the paper first.”

Lucien was a bit speechless. He was not sure how Fernando actually thought of his student in his mind.

In the tall tower, Neeshka was looking at the file silently. After a while, he threw the file onto the desk and said angrily, “What is Lucien Evans thinking about? Does he just simply supports everything that is shocking? Does he know what logic is?! Can he see the real world?!”

Chapter 424: The Roaring Lucien Almost twice the regular length, thank you all

Chapter 424: The Roaring Lucien (Almost twice the regular length, thank you all)

Winter sunlight pierced through the thick layer of cloud, went through the window glass and fell on the astrology maps hanging on the study's wall. The light yellow halo made the space warm and cozy.

Neeshka's student, Samantha, wore the same you-still-owe-me-ten-thousand-arcana-points blank expression. "Sir, are you joining the meeting tomorrow?"

"Of course, why not?!" Neeshka was rather pissed. "I'll teach Levski and Lucien Evans a good lesson! This rubbish should never be sent to the Board again!"

Samantha nodded slightly, obviously not affected by her teacher's fury at all.

"I'll tell the coachman to prepare for tomorrow morning and don't be late again."

Then she picked up the pile of files and left the office, leaving the furious Neeshka alone staring at the paper and the comment from Lucien.

In the villa surrounded by flowers, Milina was standing in front of a dressing mirror, looking at her own face which was written with sheer anger. Beneath her feet, there were a few papers torn into pieces. She lowered her voice and murmured, "Lucien Evans..."

In her eyes, Tower Geometry was the only geometric system in the world and there was no other "new geometry" that was essentially different from it. It was just so obvious that Levski's paper was full of stupid errors, as it conflicted with the real world. All the good words that Lucien Evans used on the paper were complete nonsense. What Lucien Evans was trying to do was to confuse right and wrong, to disguise a pile of cow dung as whipped cream!

There was no doubt that Lucien was now slapping her face, as well as shaming all the Tower arcanists studying mathematics, as the achievements in the field of math were rarely able to receive an appreciation like this. Even her achievement in math, which had made her win Arcana Scepter, never got such a high comment!

Walking away from the mirror, Milina came to her bookshelf and pulled out the papers that she had published. Combining the viewpoints together, she quickly developed a new paper.

Only when she finished did she put the title on: On Parallel Lines .

As a rigorous mathematician and astrologist, she never fought unprepared!

As for the rest of the authorities who had received and read the paper and its comments, they shared the same attitude with Neeshka and Milina. When Levski's paper was first submitted, they had all contributed to the crucial criticism against this poor arcanist.

In the early morning, the haze that had lasted several days finally disappeared. Now the sky was as clear as washed.

Standing in front of the mirror, Lucien leisurely adjusted his black double-breasted suit, white shirt, and light yellow waistcoat. After carefully checking his appearance was proper and decent, Lucien smiled and said to himself, "You gotta change your style today."

Then he put Element, Electron, and Origin on his right thumb, middle finger, and little finger respectively. The flowing light and colors of purple and blue enhanced each other's radiance, making the rings rather dreamy and eye-catching.

Following that, Lucien took out his shining six-silver-star arcana badge and his Review Board member badge, on which was a hand holding a quill pen, and set them on his left chest.

Meanwhile, on Lucien's right chest, there was a prominent pattern of a magnificent throne supported by bones. The pattern was there because Lucien had transformed his Immortal Throne magic robe into this black, double-breasted suit.

Although most members in the board had won the highest honor in the fields that they specialized in once or twice, Lucien's case was still very rare as he had won the most influential awards in three different fields and so many rings. Apart from Fernando, among those who would attend today's meeting, the best had only won the top awards twice. So Lucien should be able to bring them some pressure by showcasing his achievement. The only problem was that Lucien had not won Arcana Scepter, which was the most authoritative award in Math.

Checking his appearance in the mirror once again, Lucien picked up his black top hat from the hat rack and put it on as he left his villa.

Past the streets, into the headquarter magic tower of the Congress, into the elevator, and up to the fifteenth floor, Lucien arrived at the meeting room at a leisurely pace.

"Mr. Evans?"

When Lucien was about to push open the meeting room's door, he heard a hoarse male voice calling his name.

Turning around, Lucien saw a middle-aged man who was standing on the nearby patio, looking quite uneasy and restless. The magic robe he was wearing was rather old and out of date, and smoke was slowly rising from the lighted cigarette between his fingers.

"Mr. Levski?" Lucien figured that the middle-aged man was the main character for today. "Why are you still here?"

Levski combed his messy hair with his hand and put on a bitter smile. "As soon as I get in there, the six board members will for sure start criticizing me right away. I'd better just stay here, and... you know, to calm down a little bit.”

Compared to the numb and reserved Levski from several days ago, today's Levski was definitely more encouraged and confident. Now he could at least express himself efficiently.

Lucien understood his feeling, and he smiled gently. “So, are you ready? Are you ready to face their coldness, attack, and sarcasm, and show them your new geometry system?”

Levski frowned, as if seized by the pain in his memory. He said, with less confidence, “I'm ready... but them... I once introduced my paper in front of all the math arcanists in Tower. That was my first time... No one believed in me. There was no follow-up discussion, and all they gave me were nothing more than indifference, ignorance, criticism, and howls of derision. I'm afraid you have to suffer from this with me later, Mr. Evans.”

“I have faith in you, and in your new geometry system. So I am not afraid.” Lucien said to Levski sincerely.

Levski cheered up again, as he finally found the one person in this world who understood his perseverance and his work. “Mr. Evans, thank you so much. You're the first person who's willing to accept my geometry system, and the high appraisal you gave me, even I myself had never described my paper with those words... They really mean a lot to me. Thank you, thank you...”

Levski had devoted most of his time into studying math and arcana, so he was not good at eloquence and could only show his gratitude towards Lucien by saying “thank you” over and over again.

At this time, Fernando, who was wearing his floor-length red magic robe, arrived and asked the two of them to get in.

“Morning, sir. Thank you for coming.” Seeing that Levski had sat down, Lucien turned to greet Fernando.

Fernando wore a solemn expression used when discussing serious matters. “I've read his paper. Although his geometry conflicts with the world that can be perceived directly, it is still kind of interesting, kind of entertaining.”

The Lord of Storm never gave direct praise to anyone.

In the meeting room, there were six other board members besides Lucien. Compared to other conventions which usually involved fifteen or sixteen people, meetings in the Mathematics field were much smaller.

There were not as many math arcanists as those in other fields. Many board members specialized in more than one field and could thus attend different meetings, for example, Lucien was able to attend meetings in Elements and Thermodynamics. However, most arcanists were not willing to dig into math as it was only a tool, which could not directly lead to a change in the cognitive world or an improvement in magic. Therefore, only nine members of the Board in total were qualified for reviewing papers in math.

“Mr. Evans, I’m Neeshka.”

Neeshka, who was wearing the grey pointy hat, greeted Lucien with no smile on his face. However, when seeing the pattern on Lucien’s suit and his three rings, his white eyebrows twitched slightly. Subconsciously, he wobbled the black, mysterious scepter in his hand.

Milina and the rest of the members in the room also stood up and greeted Lucien. Although they were not at all enthusiastic, they still remained polite. After all, Fernando, who was famous for his cranky and merciless temper, was also here today, and he was Lucien’s teacher. No one wanted to be furiously shouted at on matters not related to academics.

Lucien also responded politely. He noticed that five out of the six members belonged to Tower. They were all wearing the unique, pointy grey hat, including the two ladies. Somehow the hat looked a bit funny to Lucien.

In Lucien’s opinion, it was obvious that the hat did not suit ladies at all. He purposefully on the opposite side of the long table, facing against the six members directly.

Fernando hated wasting time with words, so he said straightforwardly, “Because Mr. Neeshka, Ms. Milina, and Mr. Evans hold completely opposite opinions for the paper, New Principles of Geometry with Complete Theory of Parallels, written by Levski, we are having the small meeting today. First of all, Levski will explain his paper to us. You board members can raise your hands and ask questions at any time.”

Levski silently picked up his paper and walked to the small magic platform in the front. However, just after a few steps, he stumbled against a chair, made a loud noise and almost fell over.

Neeshka, Milina, and the other board members sneered. Levski’s face flushed instantly.

Forcing himself to calm down, Levski projected his paper onto the wall using the magic circle and started explaining his geometry system.

“Yes, Mr. Neeshka?”

Levski’s explanation was interrupted by Neeshka when he reached the first conclusion drawn by deductive reasoning.

Holding the black Arcana Scepter, Neeshka said coldly with suppressed anger, “You tell me, why is the sum of angles of a triangle smaller than 180° ?”

Neeshka snorted. “Alright, then you find one for me.”

“...” Levski was speechless. This was sheer logical reasoning, and it was not built on a physical model.

Neeshka ground his teeth and said word by word, as if to express the anger inside him. “If you can’t find it, it means that it contradicts with the reality, then your paper is completely a mistake!”

Then Neeshka sat down, giving no chance for Levski to explain himself.

Levski wilted like a piece of limp lettuce, but he still tried to look up. When he saw Lucien's smile, Levski felt encouraged again.

Fernando lifted his hand. "Keep going."

"Yes, Madam?" Levski asked. He found that he was trembling a bit. Based on his years of experience, he could guess what question was to come.

Holding the Arcana Scepter inlaid with many star-like gems in her hand, Milina stared at the poor, middle-aged man. She put on a cold smile. "So, Levski, tell me, why the perpendicular line of one line does not always intersect with the oblique line."

"It's also based on the earlier reasoning..." Levski said in a way rather lacking confidence. Lucien could not help shaking his head. This was the very moment that Levski should show his confidence and firm attitude!

Milina picked up the pile of papers in front of her, her smile disappeared, and said, "Show it to me, or find the model."

"I haven't..." said Levski honestly, "but if we follow the logic reasoning, there is no problem with it."

"This is your problem, not mine. We live in this real world, not your imagination." Milina criticized without mercy.

Then she started reading her own paper, in which every single argument accused Levski's absurd belief.

Her arguments were stabbed into Levski's heart like daggers. Levski's face turned so pale that it looked like he was going to faint at any time.

"That is all," Milina said indifferently. She turned around without sparing a single further glance for Levski, as if he was a clown who intentionally presented exaggerated eccentric papers to draw attention from others.

“Keep going.” Fernando said to Levski.

Lucien cast an encouraging look at Levski, which gave this poor man some power, although his voice still lowered.

The board members raised their hands from time to time. Some deliberately distorted Levski’s idea to prove his fallacy, while some followed Milina and Neeshka’s method and objected him based on real life. Since this question had been bothering them for more than ten years, all of the board members were subconsciously using bitter words to attack Levski and his geometry system. Levski’s face turned paler and paler.

He, however, still managed to finish his part politely.

Returning to his seat, Levski closed his eyes, as if he had already seen the final result. He had to admit that there was no solid model to support his belief. Finally, he opened his eyes and cast a sorry look at Lucien.

“The members have explained their point of view during Levski’s presentation,” said Fernando, “so now let’s have Mr. Evans explain to us why he believes this paper is of great value.”

Lucien adjusted his collar a bit and walked to the platform in the front at a firm pace, with a pile of files in his hand.

“If I were you, Mr. Evans, I would not keep insisting,” said Neeshka suddenly, “I understand how much you appreciate subversive theories, but we still have to respect what is true.”

He was being this polite to Lucien only because Lucien was the student of the Lord of Storm.

Lucien smiled and looked at him. “Truth is the only thing that I respect.”

Judging his expression and tone, it was obvious that Lucien was referring to Levski’s paper.

Milina chuckled, however, the look on her face was as cold as a winter blow. “Mr. Evans, I’d like to remind you that you might be expelled from the board if you make a mistake too obvious on purpose.”

“This is what I’d like to remind you all as well.” Lucien’s smile was gentle, yet his tone was firm and sharp.

All the board members present felt like something exploded in their mind.

— Was this young man accusing them?

Fernando blinked his eyes, feeling a bit surprised that his student, who was always elegant and polite, would say something so aggressive. It’s so abnormal, and it looked like that someone’s in trouble...

“Mr. Evans, you better first think about how to bring an imagined geometry into reality.” said another member, Mabel, who was a serious, ordinary-looking woman. Wearing the grey, pointy hat, she looked like an old nun.

Pinching his face, the middle-aged man with messy black hair named Salgueiro asked in a low voice, “Mr. Evans, I’d really like to know why you think his paper will bring a revolution to geometry like how calculus changed maths. How can you prove it?”

“You never made any achievements in math. I doubt that you’re qualified for reviewing this paper,” Neeshka said rather straightforward.

Pissed off by Lucien’s words, the members had become as aggressive as a rooster.

Lucien raised his hand to quiet them down. His voice was loud and clear. “If any of you doubt my capability in maths, please go and talk to the Board after this meeting.”

Lucien paused a bit and then raised his voice even higher. “From now on, all things that are not related to this paper shall disappear. You are all board members, not kids!”

Lucien's sudden roaring made the meeting room silent.

Lucien looked around and nodded to Levski slightly. Then he said in the same volume, "When I speak, no questions, no interruptions. All the questions should be raised after I finish. But during my speech, I am going to ask you questions. Please answer my questions honestly, for the sake of the board member badge you're wearing and for the starlit sky above you!"

The board members were silent and were at a sudden loss of any excuses to reject Lucien. As a board member, three-time winner of Holm Crown prize, and winner of Immortal Throne, Lucien was qualified to make some reasonable requests. Also, Lucien's imposing and aggressive manner made them wanted to avoid getting into trouble with him.

"If no one says no, then I'll take it as a yes." Lucien looked at his teacher.

Fernando said with a straight face, "then do as Mr. Evans asked."

Lucien turned around and operated on the magic circle, so that now only the most basic axioms and postulates were shown.

"Mr. Neeshka, let me ask you. Are these axioms and postulates wrong?" Lucien asked.

Neeshka answered subconsciously, "this is different from the real world."

"Mr. Neeshka, forget about the sunlight outside, forget about the world outside, forget the contents of that paper. Tell me, honestly, are these wrong?" Lucien further raised his volume and demanded harshly.

Shocked by Lucien's manner, Neeshka took a closer look and found out these were the five postulates from Tower Geometry, the four axioms, and the hypothesis put forward by Levski. So he nodded. "These are correct, but the last one is ridiculous."

"It is proof by contradiction. Don't you know proof by contradiction?" Lucien asked, his voice full of reproach.

Neeshka's white brow twitched a bit. Obviously, he just could not say he had no idea what it was. So he nodded. "Then..."

"So anyone? Anyone here thinks proof by contradiction is problematic? Raise your hand!" As if he had been teaching in a magic school facing rows of pupils, Lucien maintained his imposing manner.

The rest of the members all shook their heads.

Lucien then projected a few more lines of Levski's paper.

"Ms. Milina, following the logic, do you think this part of the reasoning is problematic, based on the premise?" Lucien cast a rigorous look at her.

Milina sneered. "It's different. You can't find..."

"Forget those! I said forget them! Only think about the premise and the deductive reasoning! Think about math!" Lucien interrupted Milina, roaring. "Tell me! Is it logically problematic?!"

Faced against Lucien's roaring, Milina was unsure how to refute him. She carefully deduced from the given premises and then shook her head. "No... Logically speaking, it is correct. No equivalent proposition is used as a condition here."

"Good." Lucien gestured Milina to sit down, and then showed a few more lines.

"Ms. Mabel, following the logic, do you think this part is problematic, based on the premise?"

Lucien kept asking and roaring, over and over again. He kept pushing the board members to only think of the axioms and postulates and logical reasoning.

Answering "No" to Lucien's questions again and again, the board members faces gradually paled. While the board members had sweat on their foreheads, Levski felt more and more encouraged. Every time when Lucien roared, he became a bit more confident. Meanwhile, Fernando nodded thoughtfully.

With the last a few lines of the paper projected on the wall, Lucien turned to Neeshka and asked in a low voice, “So, Mr. Neeshka, following the logic, do you think this part is problematic, based on the premise?”

His hands clenching tightly, Neeshka could feel himself sweating. He gulped and did not dare to mention the real world again. “No...”

“Good. No.” Staring at the six members, Lucien murmured.

Then, suddenly, he roared at the top of his lungs like a violent storm.

“No problem with every single line! Then tell me why this paper is wrong!

“Tell me!”

Startled, Milina burst out, “It conflicts with the reality and what we know...”

“Throw them out of your brain!” Lucien roared, “Tell me, in the sense of pure math, following the logic, based on the premise, where is it wrong?!”

“Tell me!”

Neeshka, Milina, and the members all remained silent, having no idea what to say. If, as Lucien said, only in the sense of pure math, the paper was indeed correct.

Levski held his fists tight, his head slightly raising. Closing his eyes, his face was written with complex looks, a mixture of elation, sorrow, pain, and hope.

Somehow, the members started thinking to themselves:

Lucien’s roaring resembled Fernando a lot. He was indeed the student of the Lord of Storm. Maybe... this was another the Lord of Storm...

That was what all the members were thinking right now.

Fernando shook his head and murmured to himself amusingly, “I don’t remember I’ve got a love child.”

Seeing that the members were all shocked, seizing the momentum, Lucien put another paper in the magic circle and projected it on the wall together with that of Levski.

“An Attempt to Explain Non-Tower Geometry...” Milina silently read the title of the paper, and then she went on reading further.

One by one, the pages of Lucien’s paper were cast on the walls surrounding the board members.

Neeshka rubbed his brows and said confusedly, “So this is differential geometry that he’s using...”

Mabel and Salgueiro started reading as well. A while later, their faces lost colors. Beads of cold sweat rolled down from their foreheads. They could barely hold their quill-pen.

“This is...!” Levski sprang up from his seat, as if he saw the Goddess of Magic standing right in front of him. Because what was in front of him was the very geometry model he had been looking for! This is the Hyperbolic Geometry model that went beyond normal imagination and experience. This was the most powerful proof!

He cried out silently. After so many years, he finally saw the sun rising in this world, driving away all the darkness. After so many years, he finally saw hope!

Lucien’s paper was not complex. To be more specific, it was in fact very simple. Using stereographic projection on the unit circle, Lucien proved that Levski Geometry was compatible with Tower Geometry. Thus, if Tower Geometry was tenable, so was Levski Geometry!

Lucien’s concise derivation and wonderful proof were full of the beauty of math. This was the most shocking as well as the most solid proof to persuade the members!

Levski cried out loud in his mind: He was not wrong! He was the one who had been right all the time!

At this time, Lucien started speaking again, but his voice had softened. “As is known to all, we are only able to see light within part of the spectrum. To see more, we have to use tools, but the tools also have their limitations.”

Since some prerequisites that the paper was based on were not available beforehand, Lucien had to prove them in his paper, which made the paper to some degree more complicated than Levski’s, but the members could still understand. Hearing Lucien’s words, the board members wondered what Lucien was trying to say.

“... So, when light plays tricks in some scenarios, our eyes can deceive us, thus we have illusions. Some illusion spells were created based on this.”

The board members nodded, agreeing with Lucien’s words.

Lucien kept going in the soft voice. “Similarly, our ears can also deceive us. We can’t hear when sounds exceed a certain frequency. And under some circumstances, we hear things that do not exist.

“So, our knowledge and experience are limited to the design of our body and soul. We all know how to transform. When we transform into other creatures, do we still feel the same way in this world as we do right now?”

“No,” said Levski firmly. Although many transformation spells came from the advancement of anatomy — before the discovery that bats used echolocation, the bat transformation spells all had similar errors — ancient sorcerers still managed to see the world in the eyes of other creatures with the transformation spells obtained from those creatures’ magic patterns.

Looking at the confused board members in front of him, Lucien smiled. “So are we correct? Or are those animals and creatures correct? Obviously, we are all correct. We just have different perspectives. The truth we see is part of the bigger truth. Therefore, our knowledge and our experience are always limited.

“Our imagination is based on our experience, thus our limited experience can easily put constraints on our imagination. As we explore this world further, we'll see more and more things that go beyond our perception and understanding.”

Fernando nodded seriously. He knew what Lucien was trying to say.

Neeshka, Milina, Levski, and the rest of the members were still feeling a little confused. They stared at Lucien, waiting for further clarification.

Lucien raised his right hand and his look became serious.

“So, your eyes can lie to you; your ears can deceive you; your experience can mislead you; your imagination can restrain you.”

Lucien paused a bit. Under the board member's gaze, Lucien pointed at the paper projected on the walls and said in low voice,

“But maths won't.”

Chapter 425: The Belated Recognition

Chapter 425: The Belated Recognition

Lucien's voice wasn't loud, but his words were beyond shocking to the board members present.

As the authorities in math who had won the Arcana Scepter Award, they had to admit that they were more or less proud. However, in fact, they only regarded math only as a tool for studying arcana and analyzing magic spells. Very few arcanists were willing to devote their entire life to the beauty of math, most of them would never explore further in maths past what is sufficient for their purposes.

The Tower's arcanists who were fond of math more or less shared the same belief before, but it was either a occasional remark of pride or just a flash in the pan. No one had ever, like what Lucien just did, managed to prove by using such shocking reasoning and imposing manner the great value of math: Math went beyond human beings' intuitive understanding and experience. Thus, maths' importance and significance had been raised to a degree no one had ever dreamed of before.

Although they understood that Lucien was helping Levski, the board members, who were also mathematicians, were the same excited and encouraged.

Levski's body was trembling out of great excitement. He knew that math would not lie, or New Principles of Geometry with Complete Theory of Parallels would have never been born. In the furious ocean of arcana, Levski clenched tight to the vessel named Math. Because of his belief, he could travel across the ocean without being overwhelmed by the waves and tides, or by despair!

Fernando did not say anything but merely nodded. He knew that Lucien's words were indicating something even deeper.

Lucien put back his right hand and removed the projection from the walls. Then he put another thick pile of paper on the magic circle and smiled gently. "Now let's see if we can find more from another perspective.”

Despite all the proof, so far the board members were still reluctant to admit the errors they made, reluctant to admit that they had been wrong for more than ten years. Although, in their mind, they had already begun to accept the new geometry system — They had to, or otherwise Tower Geometry, which was compatible with it, also had to be overthrown.

Besides, they had to admit that Lucien’s words were persuasive. Therefore they were now quite calm and objective towards the new paper.

“Another Perspective on the Parallel Postulate...” Milina read the title in a low voice, and she had some clues in her mind...

“Another perspective...” Levski felt that the mist in front of his eyes was slowly dispersed. He saw something that he had ignored in the past decade.

Like teaching in the magic school, Lucien pointed at the lines on the wall one by one. “So Mr. Levski postulated that ‘For any given line R and point P not on R , in the plane containing both line R and point P there are at least two distinct lines through P that do not intersect R ’. Here we can make another postulate to complement the entire geometry system: For any given line R and point P not on R , in the plane containing both line R and point P there is no line through P that does not intersect R .

Levski took a deeper breath and became excited once again. The rest of the board members stared at the paper’s projection and looked very serious.

Lucien went through the paper very fast as he was facing the authorities in math. However, the board members looked more and more grave, more and more confused. Finally, Mabel burst out, “This is another crazy conclusion... different from Levski’s geometry system!”

“Why...” Salgueiro’s murmur was drowned out by Mabel’s voice.

Milina was very perplexed. “Is this a new geometry system different from Tower Geometry?”

Just a few hours earlier, she firmly believed that Tower Geometry was the only geometry system in this world. However, in less than one day, her belief was mercilessly shattered, for twice.

She was glad that knowledge in maths did not affect the cognitive world, or her head would have exploded already. Lucien definitely deserved the titles that people secretly gave him, namely, Headcrusher and Brain Eater...

Levski was not confused, instead, his mind was seized by many thoughts: Why could this happen? Why completely different yet equally correct geometry systems could be deduced from the fifth postulate? Did this have anything to do with the real world?

Under the influence of president Douglas, many arcanists tended to ask “why” very frequently, but few were like Lucien.

“Interesting...” Fernando nodded slightly.

Time flew, and Lucien’s paper had come to the end. Using a spherical model, Lucien proved the system’s compatibility.

Neeshka sighed, “This is another new geometry system... Evans Geometry...”

The board members missed the chance of naming a new geometry system after themselves because of their own prejudice and arrogance, as if one accepted Levski’s hypothesis, then the postulate that Lucien Evans just put forward was in fact not difficult to come up with.

Lucien had not finished yet, and he showed the last few pages to the audience. “In my paper, I’ve defined the term ‘curvature’. Based on calculation, we can know that when the curvature is zero, we get Tower Geometry; when the curvature is below zero, we have Levski Geometry; when the curvature is above zero, we see the geometry system that I just introduced. They have commonalities in their essence, and they are compatible with each other.”

Milina released a soft sigh. Now the two new geometry systems seemed more acceptable to her.

Enlightenment came to Levski. When he was about to applaud out of great excitement, he saw Lucien’s gesture asking them to remain quiet.

What else did he want to say?

This was the question shared by all the members of the board as well as Levski.

Lucien was not roaring anymore, instead, he said in a very soft voice,

“As we can see, under some certain situations, the math questions we’re trying to solve exceed our experience and knowledge. We are therefore restrained, so is the development of math...

“So, maybe we can try to separate our understanding of math from the reality, and temporarily put aside their physical models and meanings; Maybe we can start from the purest axioms and concepts, and, through strict deductive reasoning, derive new consistent math systems logically. As for how to apply those systems, we can think about it later when there are needs...

Lucien mentioned the notion of axiomatic systems briefly, but did not dig deeper into it. He preferred to wait until most arcanists had accepted the concept. Everything took time.

Levski started applauding. His applause was lonely in the meeting room. He shared so many commonalities with Mr. Evans, and what Mr. Evans just said was exactly those things that he had been searching for — He had the impulse, and he could feel there were things he wanted to tell the public, but he failed to put them together into words. Levski felt that Mr. Evans just saved his geometry system, as well as his life.

Hearing the applauding, the look on Neeshka's face changed several times. Finally, he slowly lifted his hands and also started applauding.

Following him, the rest of the board members all joined in. After an initial hesitation, their applauding became more and more sincere.

"So, is there anyone who still rejects Mr. Evans' comment on Levski's paper?" Asked Fernando after the applauding stopped.

Neeshka rubbed his white brow and sprang up from the chair. Looking at Levski, he said, "Please accept my apology. This is a paper that deserves Arcana Scepter, yet my arrogance and prejudice had deprived me of judgment. I completely agree with Mr. Evans's comment."

"I would also like to apologize to you, for the past years of criticisms and attacks I imposed on you. Levski, you are a talented, outstanding mathematician. My stubbornness and shallowness had blinded me. You deserve Mr. Evans's comment and Arcana Scepter." Using the manner of Arcana Above, Milina put her hand on her forehead and bowed deeply to Levski.

Levski knew that the board members would no longer object his theory, but he never expected that they would apologize to him in public. Instantly, his head buzzed, his nose felt sore, and his eyes became blurry. Seeing that the board members all stood up to apologize one by one, he was dumbstruck.

Was there sorrow? There was!

Was there pain? Of course!

But now all the pain and effort had paid off!

Levski's eyes were red. His lips quivering, but not a single word could come out from them. Neeshka looked at Levski and sighed understandingly. Then he turned to Lucien, "Mr. Evans, I also owe you an apology. You are, without a doubt, a genius and authority in math. Your geometry system and Mr. Levski's will for sure win

Arcana Scepter!”

“Thank you.” Lucien replied in a very low voice.

Milina noticed Lucien’s unusual behavior, and she asked, “are you alright, Mr. Evans?”

Lucien smiled wryly. “My throat hurts...”

It was never easy to mimic how the Lord of Storm talked!

Chapter 426: A New Journal

Hearing Lucien's words, the gentlemen managed to refrain themselves, but the two ladies present could not hold back their giggles — Mr. Evans had to pay for his roaring!

Levski's paper introduced a brand new geometry system, and it included lots of propositions. The length of the paper way exceeded that of an ordinary paper and was almost equivalent to a book. Although Lucien skipped many parts when lecturing, his throat still hurt, despite of the fact that he was also a knight.

Lucien's answer amused the rest of the board members, and also more or less healed their mind after the intense roaring. During Lucien's speech, they were so shocked by Lucien's imposing manner and violent roaring that they subconsciously assumed that he was another Lord of Storm, who would never be bothered by too much roaring. Now the problem had been solved, they started to feel that Lucien was in fact quite easy-going.

"You need some potions?" Milina chuckled.

Lucien shook his head, and his voice was still a bit dry. "I'm okay. I'm a level-two knight, so I should be able to recover after one or two hours."

Neeshka sighed and then said, "Mr. Evans, you just read Levski's paper for the first time a few days ago, right? It's unbelievable that you managed to find two ways to prove it in such a short time. The second method is particularly concise and beautiful, which has perfectly proved the compatibility between Tower Geometry and Levski Geometry. Facing it, we can no longer let arrogance and prejudice blind us anymore. You're such an incredible genius in the field of Maths."

"Um... In fact, it's the studies of differential geometry and sphere surface in recent years, the studies that have been done by you all, that provided me with a solid foundation and inspirations. Without your studies, even though I was able to see Mr. Levski's paper from a relatively objective perspective, I wouldn't have been able to finish the reasonings in such a short period of time," said Lucien.

He was being rather humble. After all, he could not tell them that the credits should all go to the great mathematicians on the Earth.

Lucien expected that, if he had not stood out to support Levski's theory, the great value of Levski's paper would be realized around four to five years after the death of Levski, if Levski could not advance to middle-rank. What Lucien did just now was returning to Levski his rightful honor and award when he was still alive, not until after he died in misery.

Lucien's sincere attitude completely resolved the board members' uncomfortable feelings. They apologized again, in the most earnest manner.

Neeshka looked at Levski, who had gradually calmed down, and said, "It's such a pity that so far the new geometry systems put forward by Levski and Evans cannot be applied to our daily arcana study, nor could they be accepted by Arcana. This pity is often shared by we arcanists in math. I guess we can only publish them on the journal Astrology funded by Tower."

This was a world where a theory would only be valued when it could be applied to reality. The reason why calculus was called the tool that had changed the entire era was that it could help a sorcerer accomplish the complex calculations required for completing a magic model, thus simplifying the process and lowering the requirement for the level of spiritual power. In the past, a sorcerer would need ten to twenty years to become a middle-rank, but now it could be done within five to six. Some geniuses even made it in one year! Of course, when exploring the truth of the world, calculus was an indispensable tool as well.

Also, the reason why complex variables functions had been the most heated study focus in recent decades was that they could be used to describe and calculate the force field of spiritual power. All the valuable papers that focused on complex variables functions were very likely to be published on Arcana and Magic.

So Levski's and Lucien's findings, despite that their mathematic models had already been established, might be gems that only thrilled the mathematicians in their own world. It is very unlikely that these papers would be published on Arcana.

Lucien said in a half-joking manner, "Perhaps the other side of the world fits perfectly into the new systems. When we find it out, maybe Arcana will do us a special supplement to acknowledge the significance of our findings."

Although Lucien could use his privilege as the member of the Review Board to publish the paper on Arcana, it would not help Levski much. So Lucien preferred to publish his and Levski's papers on Astrology together. He believed that this month's issue of Astrology would be remembered by all the arcanists in the future because of their papers.

"Hopefully." The rest of the board members did not really think that it was going to happen and simply offered their sincere wish. Even with President Douglas' theories that the world is a sphere, and with the important role that Evans Geometry played in the study of spheres, it was still quite hopeless for the paper to be published on Arcana. Since the coverage of most of the magic spells was limited, Tower Geometry and the properties of curves were equivalent tools for the sorcerers. There was thus no need to get too complicated.

Except for Ross who was a firm representative of the Congress, the rest of the board members present were all upper echelons of Tower, so they could decide what to be published on Astrology. After a brief discussion, Milina said to Levski and Evans, "the month just started, and this month's Astrology just came out. But to acknowledge the great contribution from you two, and to let most of the arcanists access your papers as soon as possible, we want to put your papers on a supplement for this month. What do you think?"

In many arcanists' mind, a supplement was not formal enough.

Levski was totally fine with it. His paper had passed the review and won such high recognition. Because of it, he would become a level-four arcanist and was now a candidate of Arcana Scepter. To him, ensuring that his paper was available to the public earlier was more important, as his dream was to make his geometry system be accepted by as many arcanists as possible.

But Levski did not respond immediately. Instead, he looked at Lucien and waited for his answer. After all, it was Lucien who brought him all these.

Hearing that, Lucien had a new idea. When Lucien was thinking on it, Milina took his silence as reluctance, so she hurriedly added, "Since the two papers are quite long, if we put them together and publish them on the next month's issue, it's gonna be too thick to make room for other papers. So either for this month or next, we still have to make a supplement. It's the first time that we only publish two papers on one issue since the era of calculus. So it's actually an honor..."

Lucien waved his hand and smiled. "It's not a problem to me. I was thinking of something else... I mean, since now we're planning on adding a supplement, why don't we establish a new journal that affiliates with Astrology for publishing math papers exclusively? While Astrology can focus on publishing papers in the astrological field and avoid being criticized that math papers are taking up space for papers focused on blessing, prophecy, and curses, arcanists who are devoted to math study can also find their own platform for discussion. I think this is gonna be a great encouragement to them."

Producing a new journal was not an easy job. Also, the math papers that they could collect at this stage might not be enough for establishing a new one. But for an affiliated journal, many worries could be saved.

"Affiliated journal... We don't have it before. How do we determine its Influence Factor?" asked Neeshka. He was an authority in math, thus, having a journal exclusively for math was a great temptation to him.

Lucien first briefly introduced the benefits of having an affiliated journal, and then said, "As an affiliated journal, its Influence Factor should also follow Astrology but at one level lower: Astrology's Influence Factor is 2.5, then we should give 2.0 to it."

"We're very interested in the proposal, and we'll apply to the Board tomorrow," said Milina after a short discussion with the leaders from Tower, and then she turned to Lucien and Levski. "... So, if you two publish your papers on the new journal, the Influence Factor is 0.5 lower, and the arcana points awarded for citation will be less..."

Lucien smiled gently. "I'm fine with it. It is my honor publishing the paper on the first issue of a journal."

Levski also nodded. "Me too. So far I can't see a wide application of my new geometry system, so there shouldn't be a big difference in the citation credits. It's also a great honor for me."

Levski thought about it carefully and nodded. "Thank you, I'd love to. I'll try my best." He believed that compared to other jobs, this job would allow him to spend more time on studying math and arcana.

"No problem." Lucien laughed. Could this count as Tower's pay to him?

Neeshka added, "Mr. Evans, can we put the short speech that you just delivered on the front page of the journal? We'd like to have your words to be the inscription as well."

"My great honor," responded Lucien briefly. His throat still hurt.

Finally, Milina realized that the new journal was still waiting for a name, so she said, "Mr. Evans, since you made the proposal, why don't you name it?"

The board members all nodded.

Lucien thought for a while and said softly,

"Math is the most wonderful and essential language in nature, and it shows the rules that all fields and realms shall follow..."

"So, let's name it — Nature!"

Chapter 427: The Hard-won Complimen

Chapter 427: The Hard-won Compliment

“Nature...” Neeshka coughed a bit, “... Your explanation is persuasive, Mr. Evans, but... isn’t this title a bit too broad for a math journal? I’m afraid that people wouldn’t be able to understand it at first glance.”

That was the thought shared by all the board members, including Levski. Unlike the other journals, for instance, Arcana, Magic, and Astrology, whose names had a very clear indication, Nature sounded like a journal that was established by the Druids. Although they appreciated Lucien’s belief in math, they still had to face the reality that math still served the study of arcana and magic.

Obviously, Lucien couldn’t say that it just a mischievous decision — “Science” would require him to create and define a new word in this world, but for “Nature” he could quote directly — so he explained, “I’m in fact putting a lot of hope into the new journal. Although so far Nature is still a math journal, in the future, I hope it can publish all the arcana theories that are hard for people to accept or understand instantly. With its main focus still on math, Nature will hopefully become a journal describing the World’s Truth that is as important as Arcana and Magic.”

This was too ambitious to the members present. Both Arcana and Magic had a history of over several hundred years, with Arcana focused more on theories, while Magic was more on the side of application. They were the top journals to arcanists just as Canon to the followers of the Saint Truth. Their position was irreplaceable.

Therefore, the members did not take Lucien’s words to heart. What Lucien just said would be a beautiful wish or an aim that they could work towards. Milina spoke with a smile, “as you said, we use math to describe the true world... From this perspective, I guess Nature isn’t a bad name. Names like World or Truth sound too arrogant, and Math sounds too limited...”

"I agree on the point that Nature can be the platform for sharing the theories that are relatively hard to accept. Our journal could provide them help..." Levski thought of his experience and agreed upon Lucien's idea.

Salgueiro, the middle-aged man with messy hair, slightly frowned. "But how do we tell between those really valuable papers and the absurd ones that deliberately seek to be weird? If Nature opens the gate to all of them, as a journal of 2.0 Influence Factor, it would encourage many arcanists to spend lots of effort in fabricating eye-catching theories that are unrealistic and incomprehensible."

Levski did not know what to say, while Lucien answered preparedly, "Nature is a pure math journal. Then our judgment should base on pure logical deductive reasoning. If a paper logically makes sense, but it can't pass the review of the board, we can publish it in the discussion content. However, if a paper has fundamental fallacies in logic, it is not qualified and should be rejected."

"That's it!" Levski recalled Lucien's enlightening speech.

The board members present all nodded silently. They had learned from their mistakes in Levski's case.

A few minutes later, Neeshka said while he looked out and saw that the sun sinking low in the west, "This is the longest review meeting that I have ever attended, and from which I got the greatest lesson. Mr. Evans, please submit the three papers to the review board as soon as possible; we are waiting to write new comments for them. Hopefully, we will be finished before the application for Nature is approved."

Although all the board members specializing in math in Allyn were all here, the procedures for reassessing the papers should still be followed.

"I'll do it today, before the Sorcerer Administrative Department closes." Lucien realized that it was already past five, and they had all skipped their lunch.

After watching the board members leave the meeting room, Levski turned to Lucien. “Mr. Evans, thank you very much. Without you, I would still be living the same miserable life.”

Since Levski was completely devoted to developing his geometry system, he had not reached middle-rank, and he had no time for doing tasks given by the Congress to earn more money. For a long time, Levski lived a very poor life. He had to move out of Allyn as everything in this city was too expensive. His income relied on the subsidy from the Congress for level-two arcanists and second-circle sorcerers. When he was sick, life became even harder and he had to look for other sources of income.

Therefore, Levski was still very excited when expressing his sincere gratitude to Lucien again. To him, Mr. Evans saved him, as well as his theory – For the many years, Levski saw this geometry system as his kid.

“You don’t owe me anything. You deserve it,” said Lucien gently. “Try your best to run the new journal, Nature, so you can help more geniuses like you.”

Levski had experienced strong emotional fluctuations today. Now after he had calmed down, he felt quite exhausted. He grinned to Lucien. “You’ve changed my life... That’s for sure. Unfortunately, I don’t know much about elements, or I would definitely try to work in Atom Institution to learn more from you, Mr. Evans.”

“I’ve learned things from you as well – Perseverance. You can just call me Lucien or Evans by the way,” said Lucien. “Every single person has his or her own strength. Both of us know that our new geometry systems are still frameworks right now. They lack analytical abilities and still require further exploration. I hope we can all work towards this direction.”

“... Also,” Lucien added, “don’t forget about arcana and magic. To explore further and solve more problems in the field of math, you have to improve your knowledge of arcana and magic. Only in this way will you live longer, and when you’re elder, your brain will still be able to function well.”

“Yes, yes!” answered Levski excitedly.

Seeing the fatigue in Levski’s eyes, Lucien asked him to go back and have a good rest.

His hands in the pockets, Lucien watched Levski left the meeting room. When Lucien turned around to collect the documents, he heard Fernando’s voice.

“Your speech isn’t bad. The closer we are to the truth of the world, the greater the limitation our body and soul can impose on us. We have to stick to our tools — math and magic — to free ourselves from what we see and feel. Abandoning its correspondence with reality and focusing exclusively on axioms and deductive reasoning, this might be the direction for math development in the future.”

Staring straight ahead, Fernando paid a compliment to Lucien, which was very rare of him.

Lucien was quite surprised. He carefully examined Fernando, making sure that he was not Little Crystal in disguise.

Fernando stared back at him. Confirmed, it was indeed Fernando.

“I was inspired by what Levski and his New Geometry had experienced...” Lucien said.

“Really?” Fernando looked at Lucien meaningfully.

Lucien replied fast, “Of course. By the way, what are you studying recently, Sir?”

Fernando looked a bit pissed. “I did the experiment on cursing substance, and found that it could radiate electrons and a new element, as expected. But I also detected the trace of another strange unknown element. The amount was extremely low, so it will take some time and effort for extraction.

“But this is finding is enough to make most arcanists crazy. What are elements and atoms in essence? What do they look like inside? Why are there new elements being radiated out?”

“So... I’ve been trying to probe into the inner structure of an atom. Unfortunately, there are currently no proper and handy magics available to assist in the exploration of the microworld. We’re indeed limited by our soul and body.”

Lucien finally realized why his short speech was able to touch Fernando and win his rare compliment. After weighing his words, Lucien said carefully, “we can make bold assumptions first, and then rule them out using experiments. We can’t see the inner structure of an atom directly, so we can only rely on indirect methods...”

“You think I don’t know it?!” Fernando roared at Lucien.

Inside Tower.

Holding a thick stack of papers, Samantha knocked at the door and heard her teacher’s voice, which sounded a bit melancholy.

“Come in.”

Samantha was quite surprised seeing her teacher in such a mood. She lifted her blond brow slightly while maintaining the serious look on her face and pushed open the door.

“Sir, these are the papers today.”

“From Lucien Evans?” Asked Neeshka, looking back.

Samantha browsed the paper stack,

“Another Perspective on Parallel Postulate... from Lucien Evans... Sir, you lost today?”

“Lost... Yes, we lost... in a very bad way. Arrogance and prejudice defeated us. Levski’s right. His new geometry system is different from Tower Geometry, but compatible with it,” said Neeshka, who now looked ten years elder when he was with only his student.

Samantha was slightly shocked. “So Lucien Evans came up with a real model?”

Samantha was also an arcana genius and enjoyed the same reputation as Larry, Jurisian, and Rachel. She specialized in Astrology, Electromagnetism, and Maths. After reading Levski's paper, she also could not accept it.

“Yes... It is a hyperboloid that looked like a saddle...” said Neeshka in the bitter tone, “He also provided the proof showing how the two geometry systems are compatible using the unit circle. And he put forward another new geometry system that corresponds to Levski's system. He is indeed a genius. Maybe next month he will be winning Arcana Scepter with Levski... Not sharing, but separately.”

Samantha's attempt to keep her face expressionless finally failed, and the look on it became complex. “Why I didn't think of this... winning the highest honor in three different fields before senior-rank...”

“Pass me the paper,” said Neeshka briefly. After leafing through the paper, he picked up the quill-pen and wrote, “Starting from Levski's geometry system, but heading the opposite direction, Lucien Evans assumed that for any given line R and point P not on R , in the plane containing both line R and point P , there is no line through P that does not intersect R . Using perfect deductive reasoning, he obtained a series of propositions and conclusions that no one could ever imagine. Thus, a new, fully-developed, and independent geometry system has been established — the Evans Geometry. He also proved the realizability of the system on a curved surface. Therefore, it is no more just an imagination.

“Putting aside practical significance, focusing simply on axioms and postulates as well as strict deductive reasoning, Lucien Evans has shown us his unique conception. His geometry system is of great impact, and has brought us a conceptual revolution.

“Without doubt, his new geometry system is a great contribution to the development of geometry. It is universally-applied, groundbreaking, has a significant position and deserves broad discussion. I suggest four hundred arcana credits and four thousand arcana points be given as a reward.”

When Neeshka was writing, Samantha stayed beside him, watching. The look on her face kept changing, from frustration to admiration to disappointment.

“Samantha, a new journal is in preparation, and Lucien Evans’s speech will be put on the front page as the inscription. You read it carefully. It can be inspiring to you.” Neeshka added while putting down his quill-pen.

“Uh?” Samantha was first surprised, and then she became very curious.

Chapter 428: Nature

In the villa surrounded by flowers, Milina was shocked again by the beauty of math in Lucien's paper. After quite a while, she finally picked up her quill-pen and wrote,

"With amazing conception and precise demonstration, Lucien Evans's paper shows us the beauty of math and also proves the compatibility between Levski Geometry and Tower Geometry. The paper gives a solid foundation to the establishment of the New Geometry System and changed the world of Math, which was constructed based on our direct perception of the world. This paper reveals to us another path for math development and demonstration.

"This groundbreaking paper is apparently significant to the establishment of the new geometry system and deserves broad discussion. Forty arcana credits and five hundred arcana points are suggested to be given as reward."

Strictly following the standards of review, Milina gave her comment objectively. If she had let her preference played the leading role, as an authority in math and mathematician, she would have given the paper an even higher comment because of the beauty the paper displayed.

Meanwhile, Salgueiro was also reviewing Lucien's paper An Attempt to Explain Non-Tower Geometry.

"The paper provides a math model that contradicts our knowledge but actually exists; it makes a breakthrough contribution to the establishment of Levski's geometry system. It makes us realize that Levski Geometry is a new system which was essentially different from Tower Geometry.

"Given the groundbreaking contribution brought by its math model and the demonstration, this paper's content deserves broad discussion and research. Thus, sixty arcana credits and six hundred arcana points are suggested to be given as reward."

When he put down his quill-pen, Salgueiro realized that the winter evening had already closed in. The wind was blowing outside of the window, and everything had been encased by the darkness. However, from this cold darkness, he seemed to notice a slight glimmer of light; there was light in the future of math.

"If the new geometry system is actually applicable to arcana...

"What Evans said earlier today was interesting... the axiomatization of math..."

.....

After a week, in the morning, Samantha came to Tower to study with her teacher as usual.

"Morning, Ms. Samantha," greeted the several low-rank arcanists.

The dome of the hall was black, inlaid with magic crystal lights that lit up the entire space. The arrangement of the lights followed the order of constellation, forming a huge astrology chart above.

Samantha nodded politely but also seriously. Then she asked out of confusion, "Leo, Gina... Why are you two here so early?"

According to what she knew, their teacher, level-four arcanist and fifth-circle astrologer Da Serra, who was also her friend, never taught students on Fridays. And the time right now, the labs and libraries inside Tower are not open yet. There was no reason to come this early.

"Ms. Samantha, don't you know?" Said the round-faced Gina, "Tower sent a notice yesterday that today a new journal is going to be issued. We're all curious, so we came early to wait."

In order to improve one of her magic spells, Samantha studied the stars at night and slept during the day in the past two days, thus she never heard about it. Now the look on her face slightly changed and she murmured, "A new journal... Is it the one with Lucien Evans's inscription?"

"No... No idea..." The young man named Leo, who developed a middle-aged spread before the age of 25, shook his head.

"Hey, Samantha! Are you here for buying Nature as well?"

It was Rachel. She was always full of energy and cheerful. Everyone liked her as she lifted people's mood.

Samantha also smiled, which was unusual for her. "Are you here for this as well?"

Although they had opposite personalities, they were very good friends.

Rachel sighed deliberately. "Yup, as a member of the Arcana Review Board, my teacher Ms. Isabella should have enjoyed delivery of the journal. But she's out of the town right now exploring new materials, so I have to come here myself. Poor me..."

Facing Rachel, the low-rank arcanists were more respectful. For one thing, they were unacquainted with Rachel; for another,, Rachel was the winner of Sorcerer Laurel. The crystal hairpin on her linen-colored hair shocked the students.

"You know about Nature's content and inscription?" asked Samantha. After all, Rachel did not have to come here so early; with her status, she would definitely be able to get a copy.

Rachel looked at Samantha confusedly. "No... But this is the first issue of the journal. I'd like to put it into my collection! It's even better if I buy it myself!"

"..." Samantha forgot that her friend was an enthusiastic collector.

At this time, the library behind the reception desk opened. Two female apprentices pushed out several stacks of books with a black cover.

"I've gotta take a look at it," said Rachel curiously as she pulled Samantha's arm and walked to the reception desk.

Samantha recalled, "Should have things to do with math..."

Her teacher, Neeshka, mentioned about it before. And when she was helping her teacher send back the review comments, she had a look at the new geometry paper from Lucien Evans and found the paper was too mind-blowing for her to accept.

However, soon, she was shocked by the math model provided in the paper. Despite the strong resistance in her mind, she was persuaded by the strict logic reasoning and the solid math model. After reading the paper, she was at lost for at least two to three days. And then she finally started accepting the fact that new geometry systems did exist.

"Finally! Tower has a journal for math! Awesome!" Rachel became very excited.

Tower sorcerers were all more or less emotionally connected to math in a complex way, and Rachel was one of them.

"Ladies, can I have two of them, please?" Rachel took out her magic badge.

"Sure, sure! Ms. Rachel" The two young ladies answered as they hurriedly put the badge into the magic circle to deduct arcana points and handed two new journals to Rachel and Samantha.

Almost everyone in Tower knew Rachel after she won Sorcerer Laurel.

"So thick!" Rachel exclaimed, while Samantha quickly looked at the cover of the journal — After all, her teacher's words had made her curious for the entire week!

Like Arcana, Nature also had a black cover, on which silver lines formed many math symbols, equations, numbers, and geometry shapes. Joining together against the black background, they were like stars in the dark universe.

Samantha believed that the cover was designed to express the aim of the journal: Using the language of math to describe the truth of the world...

That was also her first thought after she saw the cover.

Against the starry sky, there was a big word — Nature — written in a special fancy font. The characters looked like a wonderful formula.

Under the big word, there were several lines of smaller words:

Your eyes can lie to you... , beside it was the numbers showing visible light spectrum;

Your ears can deceive you... , surrounding it was the numbers showing human beings' hearing range; your experience can mislead you... , following it was the simple but significant formula in calculus - $0.99999... = 1$;

Your imagination can restrain you... , under it was the hyperboloid model looking like a saddle and a sphere-like curved-surface model.

Samantha's eyes traced the lines and figures. She felt that she had understood what the words meant.

Her eyes fell on the last line... It was a brief but powerful one:

But math won't!

This line was a size bigger than the above ones and was on its own on the cover, with no figures following it. But all the symbols, equations, and numbers were its best testimonies.

It was shocking beyond words.

Samantha did not know what others felt, but she knew that there were a lot of things going on in her brain. She felt like she had understood many things, however, she also felt that she had not figured out anything yet.

Beside the last line, there was a name,

Lucien Evans X.

Samantha wondered if that was Lucien Evans' perception of math.

Rachel, who was standing beside Samantha, also remained silent. She hurriedly opened the journal and started reading the inscription, which was Lucien's speech. Then she browsed through the paper, sighing and exclaiming from time to time.

After a long while, she finally woke up from the world of math. Following a long sigh, she said,

"Is he still a human being?"

"Levski Geometry... Evans Geometry... If they were not findings in math but in other fields, countless people would have their head exploded! Although I've seen the demonstration and the models... It's still hard to believe..." added Rachel.

Then her face lit up, "But I love what he said very, very much!"

The low-rank arcanists also got a copy. They were the same deeply shocked by the lines on the cover, but the content was still too difficult for them to understand so far. They had to take the journal back and slowly dig into it, treating it like their textbook.

... Ms. Florencia, Mr. Gaston, and my teacher, Mr. Larry cheered that you've shifted your focus upon math, so the arcanists in the Congress are now much safer. Ok, no more jokes. They, including me, hope that you won't waste too much of your time in the new geometry system. Your talent belongs to the world of element and atoms, where findings of practical arcana and magic significance can be made. Leave geometry to Tower; they should get their own job done. Your friend, K.

After Nature issued, Lucien had received lots of letters. Some were sending congratulations, some were invitations for speeches, and some were from his friends. In Lucien's friends' eyes, the new geometry system was just like a piece of toy for Lucien, as it was of no practical arcana or magic significance.

Lucien sighed, as he knew that the new geometry systems were going to bring a more horrible and powerful impact than anyone had imagined.

Putting aside the letters, Lucien said to the apprentices waiting outside of the study, "Let's go to the garden. We'll see what are keeping you guys busy recently."

Lucien learned this free-communication method from the several physicists on the Earth who were good teachers.

Chapter 429: Being A Teacher

Chapter 429: Being A Teacher

Although it was already winter time and the freezing wind was blowing outside, Lucien's garden was still warm and cozy, with lots of blooming flowers spreading a sweet aroma.

With his hands in his suit pockets, Lucien did not start asking the students about their studies right away. Instead, he asked about their progress in promotion, "I've heard it from Lazar that you're all very confident in becoming real sorcerers soon, and maybe a few months later, you will be able to do so with the help of the magic potion, Silver Moon... Is that right?"

Annick, Heidi, Layria, and Katrina exchanged a look between each other, having no idea whether their teacher's true intention was to praise their fast advancement or to criticize their arrogance. They got a bit nervous and did not reply.

Yet Sprint, the apprentice who was always the most confident one among them all, nodded confidently. "Under your teaching, our math and magic analysis level is no inferior to that of the low-rank sorcerers now, Sir. The requirement for our spiritual power level is thus lowered. We'll try advancing in a few months. We've talked to a few low-rank sorcerers and they all agreed."

When mentioning Lucien's way of teaching, Sprint's heart twitched a bit. Memories of the high piles of test papers and exercise books still lingered around in his brain.

Lucien paced leisurely and said casually, "In the Ancient Magic Empire, barely one out of a hundred apprentices could become a real sorcerer. Ever since the establishment of the Congress, in spite of the multiple developments and perfection of arcana and teaching methods, we still only have three to four students in a senior apprentice class who can finally make it."

Annick and Layria's face flushed, and the words of apologies almost burst out from their mouths. While Sprint, Heidi, and Katrina felt that they were wronged and were about to explain.

Lucien waved his hands and continued. "But you all are different. You're relatively talented, and plus my strict teaching, you have a relatively solid foundation for further studying math and magic. Ha, this is how a large amount of exercise and practice can help you. Also, you guys have been working in the most advanced institution, and all the studies you have been exposed to in every single day are only available on the journals to most people, and those are studies that most low-rank arcanists find very challenging to understand. In this case, if any of you fail to promote, it is surely because of your own inattention and carelessness, not because you are not ready. Am I clear?"

"Yes, Sir!" the apprentices all grinned. They realized that their teacher was encouraging them!

During the long journey of studying magic, to become a real sorcerer was the first biggest challenge to these cubs. Although they were quite confident, there must still be worries and anxiety deep in their hearts. These apprentices had seen their peers failed promotion, and this must have left negative impacts on their young mind, further strengthening their worries.

Now that Lucien had analyzed their strengths for them, he relieved their fear and gave them lots of hope to succeed.

After encouraging his students, Lucien smiled and said, "so, what about the studies you guys are working on recently?"

Sprint answered first, as always. He said in frustration, "Sir, you asked us to study gas discharge to figure out its causes. But as soon as we discovered cathode ray and electron, Mr. Brook found the answer from lightning between clouds: It is the free electrons that caused gas discharge. So we lost our direction and have to go back to study cathode ray and electron to see what we can find here in this new field."

Brook's experiment was very simple but extremely risky. Only a legendary arcanist could manage to do so. Even he himself would have to resurrect from prepared methods if anything went wrong.

Therefore, the apprentices lost their precious opportunity and could only watch Brook publish the paper.

“Cathode ray and electron are related to the inner structure of an electron. Studying them will help you guys step into the real microworld. Even if Mr. Brook hadn’t found the answer, I would still suggest you go for this direction. This is a brand new realm, a vault full of treasures. Within reaches, you can find things that are totally inconceivable in the past.” Lucien spoke seriously, like a real teacher.

Heidi and Sprint nodded enthusiastically. For countless times in the past, it had been proved that it was the bold pioneers who got the biggest gains when a new field was discovered, while the cowards were left with nothing but regret.

“Sir, can we also study cathode ray and electron, apart from the low-temperature studies?” Katrina asked anxiously.

In the experiment of charcoal’s absorption of air under low temperatures, Katrina and Layria helped Jerome a lot as his main assistants. However, because it was a project assigned by Lucien, Lucien was unquestionably the first author, followed by Jerome who conducted the experiment. As apprentices, they could not even have their names put on it. At that time, they could only watch their teachers gaining lots of citation credits and patent use income, as they were not yet formal arcanists.

But Lucien was quite generous to the apprentices. Although he could not give any arcana credits to them, since it was the rule of the Congress, Lucien gave them a proportion of arcana points from selling the patent of creating vacuum using low-temperature charcoal. Although it was not a lot for Lucien who, after all, had a dragon as “pet”, Katrina and Layria quickly saved up enough points for buying the magic potion they needed and could now afford their own experiment materials.

Therefore, Katrina was full of passion facing the brand new realm of atom. She hoped that she could win the highest award in this certain field like Mr. Evans and Ms. Isabella, and fulfill her dreams.

“Of course. In your spare time, you all can do whatever experiments you’re interested in. You can use the magic circles and alchemical circles in the institution as well.” Lucien nodded.

“Awesome! Thank you, Mr. Evans!” Layria cheered. “In the past two to three months, we haven’t made any substantial progress in studying cryogenic materials, only collected some more data. It can be boring sometimes...”

“Studies on alchemical materials require repeated experiments and extensive collections of data. Thus, it is one of the most time-consuming projects and requires lots of patience. Don’t think about making a huge achievement right away, but don’t underestimate your work either. Every single experiment can be vital for your future finding. In the future. Your finding can be significant in popularizing level one and two alchemical items and lowering the price of high-rank items. You may win the Holm Crown prize because of it,” said Lucien.

After chatting with most of his students, Lucien looked at Annick, the young man who was always quiet and shy. “What are you working on recently? You’ve got a direction?”

Annick’s face slightly flushed. “Mr. Evans, I’ve been studying electron as well. Since free electrons are the cause of gas discharge, I wonder if the electric current is caused by electrons as well.”

“Interesting. Go on.” Lucien slowed down his pace and walked with Annick side by side. The other apprentices were also looking at Annick curiously.

It was a rare experience for Annick to attract so much attention, so he got a bit nervous. “I’ve been trying to design an experiment to prove it, but my knowledge in Electromagnetics is too shallow, so I could not find a way out. I-I then turned to some of the books by Mr. Brook, including Electromagnetics and his most recent papers, and his paper discussing the surprising result of the photoelectric effect experiment inspired me.”

“So you’ve figured this out?” Asked Lucien, feeling a bit amused. Obviously, Brook had great faith in his quantum theory, which had been forgotten by most arcanists. Right now most arcanists were directly using the thermal radiance equation without giving any thoughts to why it works.

Annick hurriedly shook his head. “No, no... There’s no way that I can figure out something that has been able to bother Mr. Brook for so long. I was inspired because the paper showed that, when casting a certain frequency of light on a piece of metal, there were electric currents. As a piece of metal itself does not carry any electricity, and light cannot be converted into electric currents, then what created the currents?

“If it’s like what I assumed... that an electric current is related to electrons, does it mean that the projection of light makes the piece of metal carry electrons? If the answer is yes, does it prove, from the other way around, that an electron is part of the inner structure of an atom?” Explained Annick.

“Good, very good. A very daring hypothesis...” Lucien was generous with his compliments, “So the next step is to prove it. You will need a carefully-designed experiment to show that the photoelectric effect produces electrons.”

Hearing the encouraging words, Annick’s face turned into a red, ripe apple. He nodded hard. “I... I’ll try my best.”

Annick was not afraid of Mr. Evans stealing his idea, as Mr. Evans was always surrounded by the highest awards in different fields: He had won Holm Crown prize and Immortal Throne, and he was going to win Arcana Scepter.

There was no way that a teacher like Mr. Evans would steal his student’s idea.

Also, as Mr. Evans was present, the rest of the apprentices would not dare to put their hands upon it, unless Annick invited them, or he gave up upon the project on his own.

The rest of the apprentices more or less envied and had some dark thoughts flashing past. But seeing Mr. Evans’s warm smile, they quickly drove the dark thoughts away.

“Soon you’ll all be real sorcerers...” Lucien paused a bit on purpose, and continued when the apprentices’ face lit up, “... but don’t think that you do not need to study hard anymore after that. On the contrary, more profound knowledge is waiting for you. To get you all more prepared for the future study after becoming sorcerers, I’ve prepared many sets of calculus and math analysis exercises.”

The lovely smile on the apprentices’ face suddenly disappeared.

“Also, I will turn the contents from the school of Electromagnetics, Light-darkness, Force Field, Thermodynamics, Element, Alchemy, Illusion, Astrology, Transformation, Necromancy into basic modules and exercises. So you guys can learn better,” said Lucien.

Summoning was not Lucien’s strength, and he was not planning on delving into it any sooner.

The apprentices were now very dispirited. Heidi murmured to herself,

“May I’m not in a hurry to promote...”

After the apprentices left, Lucien’s villa had a new visitor.

“Mr. Evans, my teacher, Mr. Douglas, wants to invite you to his demiplane to talk about artificial planets,” said the young man not even in his thirties.

He had the typical black hair and blue eyes of Holms and was wearing a monocle. The young man with fine features looked gracious and gentle, but the badges in front of his chest clearly showed that he was a level-six arcanist and eighth circle sorcerer, as well as the member of the Affair Committee.

Is it about to begin?

Lucien has some unreal feeling in his mind.

Chapter 430: The Intense Argumen

Douglas's demiplane was very different from Thanatos's The Resting Place, Fernando's Thunder Hell, and Hathaway's Element Paradise. When Lucien first stepped in the demiplane with Norman, a member from the Affair Committee who was here to guide Lucien, he did not even realize that they had arrived in a demiplane. Douglas's demiplane looked just like an extension of the real material world. Everything in here functioned following the same rules. Although they all looked plain and normal, fascinating secrets were hiding behind.

Although the demiplanes all looked different because the legendary sorcerers had different understandings of the world and different preferences, they all represent unique features. Yet in Douglas's demiplane, there were lush black forests, and mirror-like lakes, connecting to tall green mountains at the other end of the sky. The magic tower was surrounded by a green lawn that was like a fuzzy carpet. This place had no difference from the real material world.

"My teacher's dream is to understand the world. So his demiplane resembles the real world the most." Norman smiled and explained.

Lucien nodded slightly and looked around. "No wonder Mr. President chose to name this place Linsorde."

In the language of the ancient Sylvanas Magic Empire, Linsorde meant the truth of the world. Therefore, Douglas's demiplane was also called the Land of Truth, and the World in Mirror.

Entering through the magic gate guarded by two mythrill golems, Norman led Lucien into a small living room. Two guests, one male and one female, were already sitting there.

The living room was decorated with scarlet carpets, scattered armchairs, tea tables, and several rows of bookshelves. The arrangement was rather casual and cozy. This place looked like Douglas's private meeting room for seeing his friends and the juniors.

"Mr. Douglas, His Excellency the Lord of Storm, and His Excellency the Prophet are still doing the last test. Let's wait here for a moment." Norman explained, and then he introduced the two guests to Lucien. "They are Mr. Douglas's students as well. They happened to be in town right now and are thus here to witness the historic moment: If the planet created by Mr. Douglas can revolve around this world, and be observed by the astrology towers on the ground, it will be a powerful proof for his celestial bodies motion system. There'd be no more queries or suspicions."

Norman was, obviously, so excited that he almost forgot to continue the introduction. Thankfully he realized in time and, pointing to the middle-aged man with grizzled hair, hurriedly said to Lucien, "This is Artil, the student who has followed Mr. Douglas for the longest time. He specializes in Astrology, Force Field, Transformation, and Light-darkness."

Artil had a thin face and protruding cheekbones. His eyes were narrow, and so were his lips. The badges he wore showed that he was a level-eight arcanist and ninth circle archmage, but was not a member of any board or committee, nor of the Highest Council.

He nodded and said in a plain but slightly biting tone, "I'm not the student who has followed Mr. Douglas for the longest time. There is one who's elder than me and has been the student of Mr. Douglas for even longer."

Hearing that, Norman and the female were quite embarrassed, having no idea how to respond. Lucien realized who Artil was talking about: He was referring to the Emperor of Control, the Poem of the Goddess — Mr. Brook. It was said that now Brook and Douglas had become strangers because of their divergence over the particle or wave nature of light.

Norman and the female arcanist were still relatively young, and they never experienced this with their own eyes. To them, the past between Brook and Douglas were written legends and, without experiencing it by themselves, it is difficult to hold extreme disgust and hate towards Brook. Artil, however, had been following Douglas for a long time and probably had also been classmates with Brook for a long time. In his eyes, Brook's behavior was a filthy betrayal. No wonder Artil was showing no respect to Brook at all.

Seeing that Lucien did not try to dig further into the topic, Norman hurriedly turned to introduce the young lady to Lucien. "This is Luciana, also a student of Mr. Douglas. She specializes in Element, Astrology, Force Field, Summoning, and Transformation. Also, she has an in-depth study in math. She should share many topics with you, Evans."

"I've just finished reading Nature, and I'm very interested in the new geometry systems put forward by you and Mr. Levski. I'm planning on further developing them." said the young lady with red, flame-like hair. It seemed that she was not even twenty-five, but her badges showed that she was a level-seven arcanist and an eighth circle sorcerer, as well as a member of the Arcana Review Board.

Before Lucien could reply, Artil smiled and said, "Luciana, why waste your time on math? It's useless for practical arcana and magic. Time is precious to everyone. Although we live quite long, we need to spend hundreds of years to get an inch closer to the truth of the world. So, we can't afford wasting time at all. If our teacher's experiment on artificial planets works, it's going to be a huge breakthrough in both Astrology and Force Field. You'll be overwhelmed by the new research projects."

The new geometry systems were nothing important to him, obviously.

Norman, standing beside, nodded imperceptibly. He seemed to agree with Artil, but he could not speak it out right in front of Luciana like Artil, especially when Lucien was present.

"It's my habit. It's what I like to do to relax," refuted Luciana coldly. She loved studying the beauty of math, but, in fact, she also had not seen the practical value of the two new geometry systems for arcana and magic.

"... So, this is Mr. Lucien Evans... I believe I don't have to say much here. Mr. Evans is the most well-known genius arcanist, and has a special talent in Element, Thermodynamics, and Math." Norman quickly changed the topic.

Artil pointed at the couch and said, "take a sit, Evans. Before our teachers come back, we can have a talk. Although I don't know much about elements, I do know that what you recently found - electron - is the cause of lightning. Interesting, I thought the school of electromagnetics was based on the wave theory."

When Artil was not expressing his contempt, he was okay.

"In fact, the school of Electromagnetics always believes that electric current is the external expression of the motion of electric charge. Before, the only problem was that it was never connected to microscopic particles," said Lucien justifiably as he took a sip of the lemon black tea brought by the servants.

"Anyways, particles form the essence and foundation of the world!" Artil said in a frenetic way, "as long as the experiment works and artificial planets are created, Brook will never be able to attack our teacher's theory anymore! There must be other reasons why we haven't found any planet yet! In this case, our teacher's experiment on light speed will strongly prove that the medium Ether does not exist, and without medium, the wave theory of light will collapse like a tall building that has lost its foundation!

"Light and spiritual power come in the form of particles! They must be particles!"

Norman frowned and interrupted Artil. "Mr. Douglas's experiment has not succeeded yet. Even if it does, it will only be a powerful proof, not a complete proof. Maybe there will be other explanations of this experiment based on theories containing Ether. So far, we cannot use the particle theory of light to explain the diffraction of light and the spot discovered in Brook's experiment. We can't get too optimistic."

"Okay, Norman, I get it. You're in fact an advocate of wave theory, right?!" Artil flew into a rage. "Why isn't it the other way around? Why don't you say that the diffraction of light is only a powerful proof, not a complete proof, and there may be other explanations based on the particle theory? "

Offended by Artil, Norman became a bit irritated. "Open your eyes, Artil. In the past decades, all the theories trying to explain the particle theory have been proved wrong. How many arcanists in the Congress are still supporting particle theory? If you want to overthrow wave theory, you first explain the diffraction of light! Your eyes have been blinded by jealousy!"

"Jealousy?!" Artil pointed to himself angrily and unbelievably. "I'm jealous of Brook, that jerk?! I'm merely believing in my own judgment!"

Luciana also joined the argument. "Unfortunately, Norman, sorry to let you down, but I'm also one of the few arcanists who still support particle theory. You don't possess truth simply because you've got more people on your side!"

"It's true that sometimes the truth may be held in the minority's hands, but particle theory cannot even explain the experiment phenomena! How could you make the arcanists believe in it!" Norman unconsciously revealed his true inclination.

"You betrayed us!" Artil's narrow eyes widened because of anger.

"I'm simply adhering to the truth!" Norman refuted tersely.

The three students of Douglas were involved in a fierce quarrel because of the wave theory and particle theory, and Lucien was left aside by them, forgotten.

Lucien wiped off the few beads of cold sweat on his forehead, worried that they might start fighting at any time. Obviously, any debate over the wave theory and particle theory in the Congress could be very dangerous...

"Norman, are you still working on the first driving force? Such arrogance! Even our teacher cannot solve the problem! Who do you think you are!?" Shouted Artil.

"It's none of your business. Mr. Douglas also put much emphasis on it, as it has something to do with the ultimate destination of his theoretical system. Artil, I know you've been working on it secretly as well! Look at yourself first!" Norman yelled.

Their argument became more and more intense, and suddenly, the three of them turned and looked at Lucien simultaneously.

"Evans, what do you think? Is it the wave theory or particle theory?"

"Evans, I was told that you are the one who proposed the experiment on artificial planets to help Mr. Douglas prove that Ether does not exist?"

"I believe every arcanist specializing in Element should be a firm supporter of the particle theory."

Lucien was suddenly forced into the argument. When he was still weighing his words, Douglas, Fernando, and the Prophet from Tower walked down the stairs.

Chapter 431: The Launching

Chapter 431: The Launching

The formal evening dress that Douglas used to wear had been replaced by a flowing grey magic robe of fine texture, on which countless dots and lines formed various mysterious patterns. He was also wearing an ancient Magic Empire top hat of the same color, surrounded by many colorful crystal stones that resembled a tiny celestial system.

The way how Douglas was dressed reminded people that Douglas was not only the establisher of the Congress of Magic, but also a survivor of the ancient Magic Empire after its downfall. The aesthetics that had been fostered when he was young are still imprinted in his brain.

“Lucien, thank you for your suggestion. With strict calculation and complex alchemy procedures, I have made an artificial planet. The next step will be sending it to the preset orbit.” Douglas greeted Lucien genially.

Meanwhile, Douglas put his right hand on the magic pouch, and a silver-grey sphere instantly rose up in the air in front of him.

As the product of a first-time experiment, the size of this artificial planet was quite small, only half the size of a human body. The tiny, mysterious planet was covered with silver-grey metal gloss and inlaid with all kinds of gems and sophisticated magic lines. The whole sphere seemed to be completely wrapped in layers of magic circles.

“It looks very sophisticated...” Lucien murmured. According to Lucien, the purpose of the experiment would be achieved as long as Douglas could prove that a satellite was able to revolve around this world. Other further functions were factors that could be considered later, such as communication, investigation, location, as well as being used as a weapon, or it would be a waste of time.

Douglas grinned. “Not really, not really... This universe is full of hazards: this magic circle is designed to resist low temperature..."

Very patiently, Douglas started introducing every magic circles on the surface of the metal ball to Lucien.

Lucien could not agree with him in his mind, yet he still listened to Douglas carefully to learn more about the magic circles and asked questions from time to time. In the end, Lucien asked on purpose,

"Mr. President, why don't you add the magic circles for receiving and sending signals? So we can locate it from here and keep a closer track of it."

"I've put the similar permanent magic circles in it," Douglas was not disturbed by Lucien's many questions at all, but answered him with patience, "... also, the function of its main magic circle goes beyond your imagination. It's a magic circle that could almost rival legendary magic."

"What is it?" Asked Luciana curiously.

"I'll keep it as a secret for now. You'll see when it works." Douglas smiled at his students.

Artil's narrow eyes stared at the metal ball frenetically. "I can't wait to see it... I can't wait to show those idiots that our teacher's theory is correct, to show them that their dream about Ether is just an illusion!"

Fernando snorted. "Claiming victory before the experiment even started. You're the most stupid idiot I've ever seen."

Fernando's words lashed out as usual, even though Douglas was just beside him. If it had been Douglas who said those words, Fernando would have given the same response as well.

Artil dared not to debate with Fernando. He lowered his head, feeling quite humiliated.

Bergner, the Prophet from Tower, looked at Douglas with slight concern. "The reason why no planet has been found yet is complicated. Maybe we can't observe an artificial planet in the universe neither. Mr. President, you have to be prepared for the possible failure. The failure can't completely deny your theory."

Bergner was wearing Tower's unique grey, pointy hat. His brows and beard had all turned white. Except for his eyes, which were as deep as the starry sky, he looked like an ordinary old man.

Since it was a reminder from the Prophet, the look on the students' face slightly changed. They wondered if Mr. Bergner had already seen the result by casting Horoscope...

But their concern was wiped out by Douglas immediately. Douglas smiled casually and said, "I have failed many times trying to find a planet. One more failure isn't something that can defeat me. It only means my theory is not yet perfect. Maybe I missed something, and all the failures will lead me to find the answer. A throne of success is always made by failures. Don't be dazzled by my current reputation and status so that you forget that I have also already been through countless failures."

Douglas looked up and stared at the virtual starry sky of the demiplane above. "The world is so vast and broad. The further you explore, the smaller you feel about yourself. What did this world look like at the very beginning? Where will the many questions lead to in the very end? We have no idea. Anything that is unknown deserves our reverence. We can't keep ourselves away from them because of fear and uncertainty.

"If today our experiment works, we will prove that human beings can also create planets and create a world. We are taking the first step!"

Douglas' smiling eyes turned to look at Lucien, "And this is all thanks to Lucien. His unrestrained thoughts and reversed way of thinking have freed me from my past experience."

Hearing the praise, Lucien thought to himself that the president's small step probably meant one giant leap for mankind.

Fernando noticed that Lucien was being absent-minded. He gave Lucien a threatening stare and then turned to Douglas. "No more lecturing. An award-winning speech should be saved until success, or it would turn into a joke.”

Bergner also smiled and explained, “What I just said was not a prophecy. I was simply showing my care to an old friend. If I want to do a fortune telling for Douglas, I would have to prepare for at least a month for the result to not be too ridiculously wrong.”

Artil, Luciana, and Norman gradually cheered up.

Douglas did not say anything. He nodded slightly and put the artificial planet back into his pouch and turned on the magic tower.

The stars in the virtual night sky suddenly went out. The mountains, forest, lake, prairie, and the magic tower itself were completely encased by the darkness.

Then the white lines on the magic tower lit up one by one and formed a very complex magic circle.

As soon as the magic circle became complete, the magic tower started trembling fiercely with a loud buzzing noise. A great power, like a roaring ocean, gathered in front of Douglas and formed a mysterious gate inlaid with countless constellation symbols.

“All of you, go back to Allyn, and watch the sky carefully,” said Douglas.

Meanwhile, his formidable spiritual power spread out. The power was like a burning sun, and it made Lucien and the others unable to open their eyes or spread out their spiritual power.

Finishing his words, Douglas pushed his spiritual power fiercely toward the stargate and opened a gap. Then he stepped in and disappeared in the darkness and void.

This was how a satellite was launched in this world. Lucien stared at the gradually vanishing gate, speechless. No expensive fuels, no giant rocket, no ignition device. All Douglas needed to do was to take the satellite with him and do a space jump.

Lucien truly realized that, in this world of magic, there were still many aspects that were more advanced than that of the Earth. It's just he still had no clue how they worked.

In this world, a grand arcanist himself was a rocket, a satellite, an intercontinental missile, a combination of power and glory!

"To explore the planets far away from us, it will take two to three years to prepare a space jump. The longest might take several decades. As for a short-distance jump like this, it only takes a few days of preparation," explained Fernando.

Bergner, the Prophet, looked at the crystal ball in his hand. "Let's go back to Allyn. We cannot miss this great moment. Three to five minutes later, Douglas will be able to enter the preset orbit."

Douglas will be able to enter the preset orbit... Lucien thought this sentence sounded a bit weird, and had a deeper understanding of the grand arcanists' non-human nature.

Then he went back to Allyn with rest of the people in the demiplane.

Standing on the thirty-third floor of the headquarter's tower, they stared at the night sky. Time went by, but nothing happened.

Luciana asked nervously, "is there a problem?"

It sounded like she was asking other people, but also like she was murmuring to herself.

"No, there will be no problem. It is just somehow delayed," said Artil decisively.

Norman remained as calm as the two legendary sorcerers. He said in a low voice, "Mr. Douglas's theory should be correct..."

Lucien stared at the sky, feeling both excited and worried. This was another exploration of the truth of the world.

Would it work?

Would a new star be born?

The stars in the sky were like countless eyes. Following the tracks that they had been obeying for millions of years, the stars were always the same silent.

.....

Watching the stars on her own platform at home, Samantha was trying to improve a magic spell for interfering in destiny.

During her short break, she was still looking at the night sky with pure appreciation.

“A starry sky is the most gorgeous scenic beauty in this world. It is deep and boundless. It is charming, and also formidable...”
Samantha murmured to herself as if reciting a poem.

All of a sudden, her beautiful eyes opened extremely wide! So wide that her eyeballs could probably fall out from her eye sockets.

In the starry sky, a new star appeared without any prior signs!

It was so close, so bright, and its track was so special!

“The birth of a star?”

Samantha could not close her mouth.

.....

Lance, the Holy City.

The pope was leafing through a book. Suddenly, he felt something and looked out of the window. He saw that, in the sky, there was that dazzling bright star that had never been seen before. The star was so bright that it had lit up half the sky. Even the sunset glow could not hide the light of the star!

The book dropped to the ground from Benedict II's hand. Totally shocked, he murmured subconsciously,

“A new star...?”

“Who did it?!”

.....

In Allyn, when the star lit up in the sky, Artil burst out a low roaring, giving a full vent to his feelings.

“It worked! Mr. Douglas is correct!” Luciana hailed, with tears in her eyes.

Fernando slightly shook his head, “So bright... like he’s afraid the others won’t see it.”

Lucien rubbed his forehead, feeling a bit speechless. So that was the function of the main magic circle? ... To burst out bright light like the sun? Was Douglas worried that the Church might miss this historic moment?

But Lucien thought that since this satellite would soon be shot down within several hours because of the main magic circle installed in it, the launching of other satellites with different functions could be put on their agendas.

It actually worked...

It really is a planet...

.....

In Rentato, in Antiffler, in Tria, in Aalto, and in countless other cities, no matter it was day or night, those with extraordinary power and the ordinary people were all staring at the sky, totally stunned.

They had never seen the birth of a new star!

Chapter 432: Reactions of Different Parties

The stars in the sky all dimmed under the dazzlingly bright light from the new star, as if a new sun had appeared. Radiating a glaring light without any constraint, the new star orbits along its own track unaffected.

Feeling that something was going on, Brook walked out from his demiplane. Standing on the thirty-fourth floor of the Allyn magic tower, he stared vacantly at the starry sky,

"This isn't the birth of a new star..."

"Its orbit is too close. If it's a real star, it will crush into this world, destroying everything..."

"What is it?"

"The power is beyond mighty..."

As a grand arcanist and legendary sorcerer, as well as the student of Douglas, Brook had figured out in his head the range of the orbit based on only observing the size of the star, its brightness, and some other parameters. Although it was not accurate, it was enough for him to tell how far the star was from this world.

For this very reason, Brook was a bit shocked. To him, if it had actually been the birth of a new star, he would not have been so surprised and confused, but would have rather taken it as something worthy of in-depth study and prepared the relevant spells for research.

But this one was an artificial star!

In the Kingdom of Brianne, in a tall magic tower reaching the sky.

Staring at the stars in his crystal ball, a senior-rank astrologer who was supposed to be doing his fortune-telling was, however, now gazing at the night sky with his mouth slightly open. He had never seen such a bright star before, and the birth of the star just happened like that without any signs!

This was even more bizarre than the scarlet moon!

"What star is it?" The astrologer murmured after quite a while.

Then, he hurriedly looked down at the crystal ball in his hand. When a new star was born, the track of destiny would surely be affected. He was somewhat annoyed and frustrated, as the birth of a star will bring great changes in the River of Destiny and he would have to restart his divination.

Half an hour later, he suddenly raised his head and looked into the sky, stunned.

"Why is there no reflection of fate?"

"Is it a real star?"

In the Dark Mountain Range, at the campsite of adventurers.

Stanis, the King of Nightmare, who enjoyed living among ordinary people and observing their dreams, was appreciating his afternoon tea in a small cabin. Suddenly, the white porcelain cup fell from his hand to the ground and broke into countless pieces.

Stanis did not care about it at all. Instead, he flashed to the window, raised his head and looked to the East.

Across the sky, a brilliant star suddenly emerged and lit up half of the sky. It was as bright as the sun!

Stanis wondered if his cognition world had gone wrong and he had been affected by his own dream or illusionary spell.

After a glance at the sinking sun in the west, Stanis turned back to the newly-born star, which was moving unaffectedly following its own track.

"If this is a dream, what does this horribly bright star stand for?"

"If it is not a dream, who did this?"

"Such a miracle can never be performed by a mundane..."

...

In Rentato, at the avenue which had not been equipped with arc lamps, it was dark and cold. Only several stars in the sky slightly lit up the way.

Because of the increasing number of alchemical workshops, the spinners had been improved by the alchemists. More and more commoners in Rentato had to work extra hours for higher productivity. Now, a few clusters of them were walking on the street. Feeling the harsh winter wind whipping, they all picked up the pace to return home as quickly as possible.

As they were walking, they saw the road in the front was strangely bathed in bright light as if it had been daytime.

Astounded, they looked up and then lost all their words. There was a bright star hanging in the sky, moving slowly in its own track. It was completely different than the silver moon, but was equally outstanding.

They wondered if this was a miracle from God.

"The almighty God of Truth..."

"Only Truth lives forever..."

Out of great astonishment, they thought that it was the God of Truth that created this miracle. They kneeled down on the ground regardless of the mud from the melted snow, and they prayed with passion and devotion.

...

In Aalto, Natasha, who was wearing a full set of hunting suit, was riding a horse through the thin forest.

Suddenly, she put an arrow to her bow and shot it out fiercely. With great power and momentum, and twined with illusional space gaps, the arrow showed up in front of a big tree several hundred meters away in a blink of eye. It then penetrated dozens of thick trees one by one like a hot knife through butter. Finally, the arrow nailed a grey hare to the ground which had just jumped out of the bush.

The scene was like a sketch, and as if someone had made a hole in the middle of the trees using an eraser, everything in this picture was safe and sound except the trees.

Natasha, however, was not paying attention to the perfect shoot she just made. Instead, she looked eastward and saw the new, bright star.

She instantly recalled the scarlet moon incident a while ago.

"Is it because of him, again?" Murmured Natasha.

...

In the Holy City of Lance, the pope, Benedict II, was standing beside a window, holding the staff. The new star was under his close scrutiny.

"It's not vanishing..."

"The track doesn't make sense..."

"Based on the position... Is it from the Congress of Magic?"

Soon the pope calmed down. He gazed at the new star indifferently and observed its orbit. When he believed that he had understood and remembered all the information about it, the pope raised the staff, his body bending slightly backward. Benedict II half closed his eyes and said to the sky in a low voice,

"Almighty God of Truth, you are one and everyone."

"You are the instant and the forever."

"You are the creator and the master."

As he was praying, a layer of white holy light covered him. The divine powers started collecting from above, and slowly spread out and covered the entire city and its surrounding areas.

Feeling the power, the Grand Cardinals, Divine Knights, the Cardinals, and the common followers all calmed down from the great shock of seeing the new star. The look on their face softened as they were deeply touched.

It was the air and power of the Lord!

"You are one and everyone."

"You are the instant and the forever."

...

Hundreds of thousands of people started praying. Under the dominating power, their voice joined together and an astonishing resonance was created.

The scene was beyond magnificent.

When the praying became louder and louder, the pope pointed at the sky with his staff!

In the sky, a white light spot emerged from nowhere. It grew bigger and bigger. Soon, its light became as bright as the artificial star and the sun.

From inside of the light ball, a beautiful and refreshing hymn came out. The entire sky became holy and clean.

In Lucien and the rest of the sorcerers' eyes, the entire night sky had been lit up by the light ball. They could also faintly hear the hymn.

Lucien had expected that the Church would not keep the artificial star in the air for too long, since it was a great provocation to the authority of the Gold of Truth.

If sorcerers could create stars, then what was the God of Truth who was said to have created the world? Just a sorcerer who is a bit more powerful than the grand arcanists?

But what Lucien did not expect was that the Church would react in such an exaggerated manner.

The light ball became clearer and clearer. It seems that its inside was divided into seven layers. In the first layer, beautiful angels with a pair of wings and pure white souls were playing the wonderful hymn praising the true God on the pianos, harps, clarinets, and horns.

From the second layer to the fifth, the convivial scenes were similar. The angles and souls had nothing but pleasure and happiness to enjoy. The only difference was that the angels had more wings - there were Virtues, Principalities, and Cherubim.

In the sixth layer, there were the illusional figures of six Seraphim. They each stood in one direction, as if they were escorting the seventh layer.

In the seventh layer, besides the endless holy light spreading out, there was a Seraph holding canon. Lying prostrate beneath the light, the seraph was serving the God of Truth.

Lucien knew exactly what it was!

This was the real divine spell, which killed the last consul of the Magic Empire!

This was the real divine spell of great cost to the caster!

This was the real divine spell that only the pope could cast!

God's Arrival!

While observing the divine spell very carefully, Lucien turned on the monocle permanently enchanted with electromagnetism messaging to test how the artificial planet responded to signals.

In the light ball, all the angels burst out pure divine light, and the light joined with that of the seventh layer. Like ocean waves, the light spread out and covered the entire sky.

"This is the response from Antiffler No. 1..."

Then the sound of electrical noise took over.

Staring at the sky which had turned milky white from the holy light, hearing the electrical noise, Lucien subconsciously compared the power to that of the God of Silver Moon and concluded that, although the two powers were within the same level, Alterna was slightly weaker.

Then again, this was just a vague conclusion drawn by a senior-rank sorcerer. Maybe it was far from being accurate. Even for a legendary like Douglas or Dracula, evaluating these kinds of power could be very difficult.

The reason why the artificial planet was named Antiffler No. 1 was that Antiffler was the capital city of the ancient Sylvanas Magic Empire, where Douglas was born and grew up.

A mysterious gate drawn with countless constellation symbols suddenly showed up in front of Fernando, Lucien, and the other sorcerers. Douglas in his grey magic robe staggered out of it. The colorful gems circling above his head had mostly disappeared.

However, Douglas was in a high spirit. His excitement could not be hidden on his genial face.

"Finally, I've experienced God's Arrival..."

"Unless he wants to fall early, the pope won't be able to use God's Arrival in the next five years!"

Lucien finally realized why the president made the artificial planet so bright. It was not simply for showing off his achievement.

Chapter 433: The Change and The Plan

In the Radiance Church in Holm.

Awoken from their prayers, Philibell, Vaharall, and Stone were staring at the night sky, which was dominated by the holy light and the projection of Mountain Paradise, with a blank expression.

"God's Arrival... The pope used God's Arrival!"

"The new star was made by the heresies? ... No, it was made by the vicious sorcerers!"

"But the made star could move around this world like a real one... No wonder the pope had to use God's Arrival..."

The looks on their face were complicated. There was awe, admiration, joy, confusion, and anger.

Ever since the scarlet moon incident, the focus of the South Church shifted again. Now, they were focused on exploring the unknown dimension and the solidified shadows of black, white, and grey. Therefore, Varantine, the leader of the Ascetics, had returned to Lance, and soon Vaharall would be back as well. Only Stone would be left to lead the Knights of Grail in Rentato to help Philibell and the four parishes in Brianne, the Duchy of Calais, Colette, and the North Coast to guard against the Congress of Magic.

The great war plan against the Congress of Magic that they had been preparing for almost two years was thus halted. Now the Church was taking a strategic defence position.

To the Saint Truth Church, nothing was more important than finding the fallen Alterna and the mysterious existence.

Besides, they believed that the Congress of Magic had shifted their focus as well and would not have much time to work against them either.

"The glory of God is everywhere. Please show mercy to the mundane, and save them." prayed Philibell in low voice.

Vaharall drew a cross in front of his chest and said sincerely, "The pope is the true spokesman of God. He is beyond decisive. If it had been me, I would have spent hours hesitating. In that case, more people would have seen the vicious symbol in the sky, and their faith would have been affected."

Although the pope could not use God's Arrival anymore within five years, he was still the most powerful man in this world, surpassing all the legends, and his presence was threatening enough for all the enemies. However, the fact that the most powerful divine spell could no longer be used again in five years would definitely be a temptation for many, which would have a very negative impact on their search of Alterna. Therefore, in Vaharall's eyes, this was a tough decision.

However, now, under the frightening holy power, the vicious symbol had turned into ashes. Even if the Congress tried to show off their achievement, it would only become a joke. Any attempt into the realm of God would face the fury from God. Only the God of Truth could create this world and the other planets, and even if others could make similar things, they would not exist for long.

"That thing's dangerous. The sooner it is destroyed, the better it is." Stone, the divine knight, nodded. He felt extremely uncomfortable when he thought of the fact that an artificial planet made by sorcerers was looking down upon them from the sky.

Although, there was no such concept called air supremacy in this world yet, anyone who could fly understood how important this ability was to a fight. Except when fighting indoors, based on the ability to fly, a radiant knight could easily attrit more than ten grand knights to death even if he was seriously injured, as the grand knights had no methods to strike long-range.

Therefore, a planet made by sorcerers would be a nightmare to the Church if it had been equipped with all the methods for surveillance and striking.

After the prayers, Philibell looked as if he had aged a bit. With a slightly exhausted blank expression, he said, "the Congress of Magic chose to reveal the artificial planet on purpose, or we wouldn't be able to find it out this soon. If the artificial planets become more advanced in the future... say, if they will be equipped with Invisibility, Deflect, or even Space Jump magic circles, we would be in great trouble.

"We have to improve some of the divine spells. Besides God's Arrival, we have to have other powerful spells for extra long distance attack.

"... Also, we have to have new divine spells and items that can detect artificial planets, so we can turn on the defense divine circles in time.

"If possible, we need to steal the information from the Congress of Magic to see what are their plans for the artificial planets, so that we can make similar products. An artificial planet will be the best self-defense weapon against other artificial planet... That's for sure.

"We have to set up space jump circles near-orbit, through which the saint cardinals and divine knights can reach the target in the shortest period of time without extra preparation.

"... Find the leading sorcerer of the artificial planet plan. If we can, we cleanse them. I don't think it's very possible though... Only a legendary sorcerer could carry out such a plan."

Philibell's many suggestions made Stone slightly frown. Obviously, the strategies they were taking now were completely different from those adopted before.

.....

Under the pure divine light, Duke Paphos' villa was as bright as a crystal palace. Inside it behind the big windows stood James and Russel, the Duke of Wolfburg.

"The power of God is so broad and vast that it's impossible to resist." The bareheaded James released a long sigh as he watched the holy sea of light slowly retreating.

Holding a glass of wine, Russel slightly lowered his head and gazed at the red liquid inside, as if he dared not to directly look at the projection of Mountain Paradise,

"Since the establishment of the Church, God's Arrival have been used for only eight times. Among the eight times, six witnessed the falling of one of the most powerful existences in this world:

"The Light of Stars - the last consul of the Magic Empire; the Lord of Death; Abel - the vampire prince; Aflora - the ancient dragon of Time; the fiend of the Church of Sun; and the "goddess" Mother Earth. Only Alterna and Maltimus, the Lord of Hell, survived so far.

"It's hard to believe that the pope just used it, facing this new star..."

"Maybe it's not a real star..." As the leader of the Liberals, James knew more about the Congress of Magic than Russel. Although he was not certain about it, he was told that Douglas was working on something big.

Ross was very surprised, "What do you mean?"

"Maybe... Just maybe... It is an artificial planet made by Douglas. I hope he was not killed by God's Arrival..." said James, slightly excited and worried at the same time.

If the president had fallen, it would have been a fatal strike to the Congress of Magic. Although the many powerful grand arcanists would not let the Congress collapse, the inner conflicts between the grand arcanists and legendary sorcerers would be very hard for the Lord of Storm and the Hand of Annihilation to control. Thus, the Congress would start falling into decay day by day without a doubt, which was, of course, no good news to the Liberals.

"Ar-Artificial planet?" Russel was startled. Unlike building a demiplane, making a planet meant a new world had been built! — According to Douglas, the main material world was just a larger planet.

The shades on James's face fluctuated under the candlelight. "That's true. The Congress of Magic is even more powerful than we expected, and also more dangerous. Maybe in the future we'll be collaborating with a 'God'..."

"Only Truth lives forever..." Russel, who still had a small amount of faith remaining, drew a cross in front of his chest.

.....

On the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower.

"Sir... the pope used ... God's Arrival?!" Luciana exclaimed unbelievably. Every sorcerer knew how horrible the power of God's Arrival was. Luciana wondered if her teacher Douglas had reached the level of Alterna, the God of Silver Moon?

Douglas grinned and waved his hand. "The pope's target was Antiffler No. 1. He had no idea that it was me who launched it and brought the initial velocity, so I was out of the range and only experienced it from nearby, or I would not be able to come back."

Mentioning this, Douglas did not feel depressed or scared at all. Now he knew the power of God's Arrival and saw how it worked by observing it from a close distance, it would benefit him a lot in the future.

"I'll write to you all to share this experience when I've finished digesting it," said Douglas to Fernando, Lucien, Artil, and the others.

Except for teaching and sharing his experience, he also planned to write the letters to express his appreciation — Without the help of the Lord of Storm and the Prophet, Douglas would not have been able to make the artificial planet within such a short period of time; without Lucien, the plan would have never even existed.

Lucien thanked Douglas, while feeling a bit melancholy in his mind. Was this the end of the first artificial planet project? It started so fast and ended so fast. Several hours earlier, Lucien, who was very excited and in the spirit of acting, was about to name this project the Star Wars Project.

"Sir, the project is a success! Your theory has been proved! No one can doubt you anymore!" said Artil very excitedly, his lips slightly trembling.

Although Douglas's theoretical system had been planted into every arcanist's heart, there was still criticism. The criticism had become particularly loud when Douglas' experiments based on this system proved that the velocity of light did not change in different directions, that ether did not exist, and that the wave theory of light was rather problematic.

Norman and Luciana were the same excited. The artificial planet had strongly backed Douglas's theoretical system.

"It's just the first step. Antiffler No. 1 was destroyed by God's Arrival before it could finish a complete revolution around the world. Next, we'll have Antiffler No. 2... Of course, it's gonna be done in a very secretive way." Douglas answered smiling. Although he was being very humble, his tone now contained more confidence.

Mentioning this, he became a bit emotional. "My theoretical system has been proved, but this has brought me more questions and make me feel even more in awe of the unknown truth: How did the gravity system come into shape at the very beginning? Why did it happen?"

Here he goes again... Fernando's mouth twitched a bit.

Seizing the chance, Lucien hurriedly said to the grand arcanists, "Mr. President, teacher, Mr. Prophet, I've tested the signal from Antiffler No. 1, and it was very clear! If we put a magic circle for transmitting signals in an artificial planet, we could significantly enlarge the coverage range of Electromagnetic Message. After all, signal transmission is much easier in the sky than on the ground. If that's the case, we will be talk to the Dark Mountain Range when we are still in Allyn. That's even more convenient than Space Jump!

"Also, we have to consider the functions of surveillance, locating, and attacking. We need different kinds of artificial planets!"

Douglas smiled and nodded. "Very interesting suggestion. Better communication will for sure bring a great revolution to society. However, the cost is still too high. The alchemical products needed should be of at least the fifth circle. Only senior-rank sorcerers could possibly be able to use them. I'm afraid that we cannot popularize it so far."

Under the influence of Jinkela, the word, popularization, was being mentioned more and more often by sorcerers.

"I do have a package plan for this!" Lucien was already prepared.

Lucien was not able to launch a satellite himself, so he had to try his best to cooperate with the president and Fernando.

Fernando chuckled briefly. He knew that his student was already preparing for this when he proposed the artificial planet project.

Chapter 434: Lucien's Package Plan

Douglas looked around. All the people here were either the members of the Highest Council or his student, and they could all be trusted.

So Douglas smiled and asked, "a package plan? You've been thinking about this for a long time?"

Douglas worked all the way through and finally established the Congress of Magic. His theoretical system had influenced not only sorcerers generation after generation, but also even his enemies including the Church and the vampires. Whether speaking of intelligence or wisdom, he ranked top three in this world. Therefore, although he did not know Lucien as well as Fernando did, he could still find some clues to Lucien's real intention in this single sentence.

Cheeky as he was, Lucien did not mind that his true intention was detected by the two grand arcanists. He said with a smile, "firstly, as for satellite communication... I've read your article, Sir. If we want to build a communication domain that covers the entire continent and the oceans, we have two choices. Option A: The satellites' orbital planes need to be above the Northland and the South Ice-ocean, so we need at least two artificial planets. Option B: we put a synchronous orbit satellite above the right ascension..."

The arcanists present were all experts in Astrology, so Lucien did not explain in details, but only presented the outline of his plan.

"... But the best way would be to combine the two options together. And to guarantee the quality of communication, the more satellites we have, the better it is. Of course, because of the high cost of producing an artificial planet and space jumping, we have to do it step by step and turn it into a long-term plan. I propose that we name it Constellation Plan — The plan of making constellations around the world using artificial planets.

"... Also, we better set up a company for this and charge every sorcerer who needs to use the satellites to compensate for the costs. The company will sell special products for satellite communication. If anyone wants to make one on their own, they still have to buy a license for it."

As an authority in Electromagnetics, Fernando slightly frowned after he heard Lucien's speech. "The problem still hasn't been solved. To ensure the clarity of the signals, a higher standard of Electromagnetism Messaging will have to be adopted when the satellites cover the entire continent. Then again, only sorcerers above the fifth circle would be able to use it, which only accounts for a very small proportion of the entire sorcerer population, since few middle-rank or low-rank sorcerers could afford it."

"So we should charge a bit more, and open some unimportant satellites to the rich nobles. Presumably, they should welcome the convenience and they can certainly afford it," said Lucien.

He had not mentioned the next steps yet: to build magic base stations. He would wait until there were enough satellites.

Planets up in the sky were hard to strike, but base stations on the ground were easy targets. Only when the nobles started relying on the convenient communication method would they willingly defend the base stations.

Lucien continued. "As for the need of the low-rank and middle-rank sorcerers, I have come up with a new second-circle spell called Electromagnetic File Transfer by simplifying Mr. Fernando's Electromagnetism Messaging. Although it can only work in a limited range, and cannot support real-time calls, it can still serve the function of transferring documents similar to the magic circles inside a tower. I think it should be enough for them right now."

This so-called Electromagnetic File Transfer was in fact radiotelegraphy. As for the invention of intercom, it was only of very limited value because of the existence of Secondary Telepathic Bond, so Lucien had not spent time to invent the spell.

"A second-circle spell... Then most nobles with titles and manors should be able to use it." Norman nodded slightly.

"Yes, it is going to be one of our products for popularization," said Lucien in a businessman tone like that of Arthur. "Also, inspired by the power lines that have been installed recently, I've got a new idea. The high requirements of Electromagnetism Messaging are from the fact that this spell relies on electromagnetic waves transmitting in the air. During the process, the waves can encounter all kinds of environments and landforms, and they are thus weakened. To make up for this loss, we have to enhance the signals by using more complicated magic circles.

"... Using satellites as relay stations can be one solution. And there's also another one: To set up exclusive pathways for the transmission of electromagnetic waves just like the power lines. So the transmission will be limited within the wires, and we could avoid the complex environments when installing the lines. Where the wires join, we set up magic circles for selecting and forwarding signals.

"... If the wires can extend to every city, every manor, and every house, it will be a great benefit to the ordinary people. The only problems are that the popularization requires a huge amount of investment in the beginning, and the Church can easily destroy the wires."

His fingers showing numbers, Douglas said, "to make this come true in Holm, the first step of establishing the wires itself would be a long-term plan... something that has to be measured in decades, not to mention other countries like Brianne and those across the strait.

"... But in the many decades to come, based on the current speed at which we are developing, we should be able to suppress the power of the Church within the Kingdom of Holm. In this case, maybe your plan can be partly carried out first in the prosperous places like Rentato and Paphos. An ordinary person can talk to her friend through an alchemical item."

Then Douglas smiled warmly. "There are multiple layers in your plan, Lucien. The artificial planets for communication cover sorcerers above the fifth circle, major nobles, leading businessmen; Electromagnetic File Transfer targets at low- and middle-rank sorcerers, smaller nobles, rich business people; and there is also the establishment of wires aiming at serving apprentices, dilapidated nobles, and common citizens. You've taken all of them into consideration."

"In fact, the plan for setting up wires can still be further divided into two parts: one is to enable users to talk through wires directly, and the other is like using Electromagnetic File Transfer. The latter has an even lower requirement for the terminal magic circle. Also, we can first open up service branches in some smaller cities for now. When people are in need, they come to us to use the products. In this way, we won't need to wait until the wires are popularized to most of the families to begin our plan." Lucien pictured the image according to the images of earth in his mind.

The feeling that he was able to change this world gave him a thrilling feeling.

"Good. When most commoners start to benefit from magic, their belief in the Church will be shaken as never before. We need to be prepared for counterattacks from the Church." Douglas nodded in satisfaction.

Obviously, the president and Lucien's teacher were also aware of the fact that the popularization of magic items would greatly challenge the foundation of the Church. Lucien realized once again that he was definitely not the only smart guy in this world, so he hurriedly put forward another plan.

"I've been working on producing a new, affordable alchemical item. It can receive electromagnetic signals within a certain range and turn it into voice. Although it cannot accommodate point-to-point communications, it can still change ordinary people's life!"

What Lucien was saying was a magic version of the Crystal Radio that belongs to level-one alchemical items. Through mass production, the technique requirement could be lowered to the apprentice level. A common citizen could afford it with several years of saving.

"Life-changing?" Fernando directly got to the point, even though Lucien was not being very specific.

Lucien put on a mischievous smile. "We can form a radio program and send message to the countries across Storm Strait at a specific frequency. We can play symphonies, pianos pieces, operas, stories, and legends. We can even introduce some basic knowledge of arcana and magic to people, as well as the dark history facts of the Church..."

Hearing Lucien's words, Luciana slightly opened her mouth and exclaimed in a great shock, "It's tearing down the foundation of the Church. They will go crazy!"

"Therefore we gotta be careful with the time and the frequency band. The programs should also be interesting so that once people start liking the programs, they will keep them as a secret and gradually be converted. Of course, at first, we have to protect our listeners by choosing the areas where we are able to exert our power. We have to make sure that they won't be put on the gallows even if anyone inform against them." Lucien answered seriously.

Douglas released a sigh. "Very good. You shall name the program then."

All of them present were aware of the value of the plan.

"Um... Let's name it Arcana Voice." Lucien would not tell anyone that he had decided the name a long time ago.

"Let's set up a company for turning all the alchemical items and communication plans that you just mentioned into real. The shares are divided according to our own contribution and investment. As the initiator and the inventor of the alchemical items, Lucien, you will get 25 percent." Fernando made the final decision. It looked like a fair decision, but in fact, favored Lucien a lot.

Fernando was the one who created Electromagnetism Messaging. Douglas, Fernando, and the Prophet would be responsible for launching the satellites. Luciana and Norman would be the ones to carry out the specific plans and make investments. All of them, including the sorcerers that were going to join them in the future, only owned 75 percent of the company.

Douglas agreed as he was grateful to Lucien who suggested the artificial planet project. He smiled and asked, "what about the name for the company?"

"Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company..." Lucien responded subconsciously, then he hurriedly explained. "... It means using electromagnetic waves to communicate and transmit messages."

After drawing the basic plan, Douglas looked at Lucien. "So for the applications of artificial planets, you got any other suggestions?"

He was sure that this young man's ambition was far more than this.

"First of all, we shall conduct more in-depth studies in the ionosphere to look for a better plan for transmitting electromagnetic waves. Secondly, we have to put more defensive magic circles to protect the planets, including Invisibility and Orbital Transfer," replied Lucien without hesitation. "Thirdly, since the planets are high above, most attacks from them will be weakened greatly before they reach the ground, so we have to come up with super-range attack magic spells with much more concentrated energy... hopefully the spells will be lower than legendary level."

Or the cost for producing a legendary-level artificial planet would be too high.

"Fourthly, we can use artificial planets to monitor our targets on the ground..."

Lucien indeed had a complete package plan. Many of his suggestions made the grand arcanists present feel deeply refreshing.

"You have too many suggestions. We have to go back and digest them first. We'll set up Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company first; forming Arcana Voice will be our current priority." Douglas was affected by God's Arrival, and he sounded a bit tired after the initial spirit-lifting buffering expired.

However, standing beside Douglas, Artil was rather excited. "I'm going to write papers and challenge all the arcanists who ever doubted your theories and experiments on the velocity of light, Sir!"

Chapter 435: Start of the Debate War

Chapter 435: Start of the Debate War

In the next half month, besides the birth of the new star and God's Arrival that everyone was talking about, everything else was quiet and peaceful in Allyn, Rentato, Lance, and the other cities.

The strange peacefulness continued as year 820 of the Saint Calendar came. It felt like the new star was a normal celestial phenomenon and nothing was going on.

After short vocation, Lucien entered the gate of the Atom Institution with the Sun Staff, which was transformed into a gentleman's cane. He was thinking about the initiation of Allyn Telephone and Telegraph company and the promotion of the alchemical items.

Before Lucien could take off his hat and put it on the rack, he heard Lazar's voice. "An... An artificial planet?" Lazar's voice was trembling uncontrollably.

"The star that brightened up half of the sky that night was created and launched by President Douglas!" Heidi still had a crisp voice like a girl, but it was extremely sharp at the moment. It seemed like she was shocked by some unimaginable power.

Lucien realized that Douglas had published the experiment on Arcana. He then smiled and greeted Lazar and Heidi who were still in shock.

"Hey, Lazar. Hey, Heidi. Happy New Year. You're so early."

After reaching the third circle, Lazar already knew what he should do now as a middle-rank mage. He would read every issue of Arcana and Magic as soon as they were released. Before, Lazar could barely understand any articles that were published on Arcana and Magic, so he had no interest in buying them. Most of the time, he simply borrowed them from the arcana library. He was more interested in Element and Common Arcana. Now, Lazar would arrive early only on the release days of the two journals every month and Lucien was thus not surprised.

What surprised Lucien was that Heidi, who usually woke up late, could get up so early.

“Mr. Evans, Annick has become a formal sorcerer!” Heidi turned her head around and answered Lucien’s question without thinking too much. “I’m motivated! I’m going to get up early and meditate. I am going to get up early and study!” She tightened her fist.

Lucien did not know that Annick had become a formal sorcerer. Although the communication satellite had not been launched yet and no long-distance calls could be made, Lucien still spent most of his spare time on the initiation of Allyn Telephone and Telegraph Company and its subordinate Arcana Voice. He only had time to chat with his apprentices during the New Year’s party and did not know that Annick was already very close to advancing.

This made Lucien consider handing the matters over to professionals or sorcerers who enjoyed running businesses after setting everything up. He could just sit there and get his share. The most important thing for him was to advance his arcana and magic level. He also needed to improve the alchemical items.

“When did he rank up?” Lucien asked delightedly.

Heidi tightened her fists.

“Yesterday! He has been working on his private research recently and he didn’t even rest during the New Year holiday. He suddenly had some breakthrough yesterday. Then, he successfully advanced without the help of potions, before he had enough spiritual power! If I hadn’t gone to ask him on a difficult problem I encountered, I wouldn’t be able to find it out!”

“Advancing just several months after his adult ceremony, Annick is not bad at all when compared to the other apprentices at his age.” Lucien nodded, satisfied. It seemed like Annick made quite some progress on the verification of the photoelectric effect, proving that it was electrons that were emitted.

It suddenly occurred to Lucien that he might have trained a bunch of future Holm Crown Award (or Silver Moon Medal, etc.) winners. In the future, there might be a sentence like this in the History of Magic: “Atom Institution, a small place with a lot of honorable names and forerunners that are respected by the later generations”.

Although with Lucien’s paper on his discovery of the natural radiation ahead, Annick would probably not be able to get the Holm Crown Award this time. It was highly likely that he would be able to get the award later if he could keep exploring at the frontline of elemental research.

Heidi tightened her fists again. “I’m certain that I could do better than them!”

At this moment, the other apprentices arrived, all appearing energetic and excited.

“Congratulations, Annick, you’re a formal sorcerer now,” Lucien smiled and greeted.

“What? You became a formal sorcerer?” Sprint burst out. He thought he would be the first one to advance among the apprentices.

Layria and Katrina also stared at Annick with surprise, joy, admire, and depress. They could not believe that the always reserved Annick could become a formal sorcerer so fast.

Annick blushed under the attention of the others. “I made some progress with my experiment yesterday; my meditation environment then changed, so I consumed the potion and tried to construct a first-circle spell. I only tried it once and I somehow succeeded.” He sounded a bit shy.

Annick had never been stared at like this and he felt a bit uncomfortable. He lowered his head as if he wanted to bury himself into the ground.

“You’ve verified that it’s the electron?” Lucien asked. He was happy with Annick’s achievement.

Annick nodded. “Yeah.”

Heidi, Layria, Katrina, and even Lazar suddenly gasped deeply. They thought for a while and realized that there was indeed a chance for Annick to be awarded the Holm Crown prize.

Yesterday, he was still a sorcerer apprentice, but now there was a chance that he could be awarded the Holm Crown. It sounded more like a legend than an actual legend. Even Lucien, who got the most honorable reward when he was not yet 19, had already become a formal sorcerer for almost a year by then.

Annick felt even more uncomfortable after he heard the gaspings.

“It’s impossible. I can only prove that the electrons come from the metal, but no practical evidence shows that it comes from inside the metal atom. There’s a chance the atoms absorbed the free electron when binding together.” Annick shook his head.

Then, Annick sounded as if he was talking to himself. “I don’t want the reward even if I have the chance to get it.”

“Why?” Lucien was not the only who was curious here. It’s surprising that someone would decline an honor like the Holm Crown prize.

Annick responded, “I don’t like standing in the center of the stage. I can just study, do my experiment, and improve quietly, right?”

“If you’re qualified for the award one day but decline it, you’ll draw even more attention. It’s something that has never happened before.” Lucien smiled and explained why Annick’s plan was impossible.

“That’s right...” Annick belatedly understood the reason.

At the same time, Lazar finally realized what was happening. He raised the Arcana he was reading and exclaimed, “everyone, do you remember the newborn star that was destroyed by God’s Arrival about half a month ago?”

“Yeah, why?” Sprint’s attention quickly shifted to Lazar. The incident that night had left a deep impression in his mind.

Layria and Katrina also turned to look at Lazar curiously. They beautiful bright star was still clear in their memories.

As the other apprentices’ sight shifted away from him, Annick was relieved and his expression loosened. Then, he also turned to look at Lazar in the same way.

In Allyn, every sorcerer who knew about the background are shocked by or, at least, interested in the Newborn Star.

When Lazar was going to show off the big news he found and tell everyone how shocked and respectful he was, Heidi took his chance and spoke first. “The star was created and launched by Mr. President!”

“What?!”

“That’s impossible!”

The exclamations expressed how surprised everyone was.

with an Artificial Planet, is from the President!” Lazar quickly waved the Arca in his hand.

“The experimental data, the actual data, the comparison between the two, and the descriptions of the trajectory. It must be true!”

With the idea of the artificial planet, it would not be hard for people who had studied Douglas’ theoretical system and achieved some results to create the whole model with the previous data, so Douglas did not try to hide his experiment. For people who could understand the experiment, it would not take them too long to figure everything out, and for people who could not understand it, they would never be able to figure out the truth.

Though obviously, he hid some of the actual situations and Lucien's plan was only mentioned in a small discussion, so the enemy would not be enlightened by the published materials.

"H-How is this even possible?" Layria muttered. To the sorcerers specializing in Astrology, the stars in the sky represented the fate of all creatures with intelligence. No one believed that "fate" could be man-made.

Sprint, Annick, and Katrina were all in a state of absence. Their pride from their recent improvement of skills and knowledge was destroyed by the shocking truth.

Lazar noticed that Lucien was simply smiling silently, as if he was not surprised at all. Suddenly, Lazar had a flash of intuition.

"Lucien, don't tell me you participated in the experiment?"

Everyone's sight instantly fell upon Lucien's face.

"I provided some suggestions." Lucien smiled and nodded. He had nothing to hide as long as no one knew who initiated the experiment. After all, the Church's attention was on the one who completed the experiment.

Lazar clicked his tongue twice. "I don't why, but I was not surprised at all when I heard you were part of it."

Heidi quickly turned the pages and, not surprisingly, she saw Douglas's words at the end.

She started reading in a clear silvery voice. "Special thanks to those who helped me during the experiment, Fernando, Bergner, Lucien, Artil, Luciana, Norman... Teacher's name is really here..."

Once again, they realized how talented Lucien was.

"Let me what else is published on this issue." Lucien raised his hand and took over the journal. His own issue was probably in his office of the Arcana Review Board.

Lucien checked the titles and suddenly saw an article published by Artil by the end. The title was Does Ether Really Exist . It was an article for pure discussion purposes and could not earn any reference credits.

Lucien inhaled slightly and slightly read the short article, which sounds like a declaration of war.

“... The artificial planet experiment strongly proved the President’s theories, and the lightspeed experiment based on the theory has proved that Ether does not exist.”

“... I will offer a reward of 50,000 arcana points for other theoretical explanations of the experiment, explanations including Ether!”

“The arcanists who question the experiment and believe in the existence of Ether, please use your wisdom and ‘imagination’!”

Lazar was reading the article by the side and he abruptly shouted in excitement, “that’s it! It’s time to make the ones who believe in the wave theory face their mistake!”

Elemental sorcerers like Lazar and Rock always believed in the particle theory.

After hearing Lazar’s words, Lucien felt like that a debate war was coming.

Chapter 436: Progression

Douglas School, in a mansion for the teachers.

Rock, who went to drink at his friend's home during the New Year holiday, was shouting with Arcana in his hand.

"How's that even possible?!""Great job!" Surprised and excited, he exclaimed from time to time.

"Damn, I'm gonna be late!" Rock saw the time on the clock in the living room while cheering, and he suddenly bounced up. He realized that he just made a big mistake and quickly put on his soft hat. He said goodbye to his friend and opened the door in a hurry.

On the street in the school, the falling autumn leaves created a peculiar romantic atmosphere. But Rock had no time to enjoy the beautiful view as he was rushing towards the carriage rental center.

"Isn't this Rock? An important member of the Atom Institution just returned to the school?" A mocking voice came from the side.

As heard the deep and hoarse voice, Rock paused abruptly. He turned his head to the other side of the street and noticed that Beate and several other people with innocent looks were standing under the tree.

"Beate?" Rock's expression became excited. He did not mind Beate's hostility and said with a laugh, "have you read today's Arcana?"

Beate was stunned. He and Rock would argue every time they met. He wondered why the situation changed this time.

"No, what's up?" A teacher from the Electromagnetics Faculty asked curiously.

Rock tried his best not to just tell Beate everything. Instead, he smiled mischievously and asked, "do you remember the bright star from around half a month ago? The star was created and launched by the President! The first paper is about the details of the experiment!"

"What? H-how's that even possible?" Beate did not connect this news with other things. He was just surprised as he did not know that it was something that human beings could accomplish.

The other teachers around him had the same surprised look on their faces.

Rock patiently guided them. "It proves that the President's theory is correct, and it has successfully answered the questions of the past several hundred years."

"You're right." Beate agreed. Douglas's theory system left a deep impression in people's mind and he nodded without thinking much.

Rock suddenly laughed. "Do you remember the last time we talked about the President's lightspeed experiment? You didn't agree because you thought the President's theory system was wrong, right? What about now? Do you believe it or have you found another reason?"

"Rock!" Beate raised his right hand and pointed at Rock, his fingers shaking violently.

He was just a level-two arcanist and he could not think of another theory to argue back.

"Wait, one more thing, the two theories that were proposed in the last issue of Arcana and Magic have been rejected by the Lord of Storm. The first theory was rejected based on the errors in it; the other one required experimental proof. However, I'm certain that the one who suggested the theory would have attached the result of the experiment if he had it. If he didn't, it means that the result his experiment was against the theory." Rock was not giving Beate any chance.

The furious and threatened Beate had a hard time accepting this, and he yelled, "Then you explain the Double-Slit lines and Brook Spot with the particle theory!"

"This is not the point that we are discussing right now. Come on, give me another explanation regarding the President's lightspeed experiment so you can prove that Ether exists! If Ether doesn't exist, the wave theory will be pointless. Also, in Arcana, Artil offered 50000 arcana points for similar theories. He wants the Arcanists who support the wave theory like you to use their imagination! IMAGINATION!" Rock dodged Beate's question and emphasized on the term "imagination".

Beate's mind would have already changed without the support from the classic light image theory and he now kept his end.

"Even if we can't come up with any theories now, it doesn't mean we can't in the future! Why don't you explain the experiments like the double-split diffraction experiment with the particle theory first! It's been over 100 years!"

"Stubborn. You should just accept the reality!" Rock mocked in a loud voice.

"You too. You should take the classic experiments more seriously!" Beate raged.

The long debate between Rock and the teachers started like this. But they were just talking about what they considered correct and no one was trying to answer the opponent's questions. It seemed like they could not reach an agreement even until the end of the world.

"Damn, I'm late!" Rock finally panicked when he felt the warmth of the winter sun. His heart ached at the thought of his arcana points that were about to be deducted.

Rock stared at Beate and the others after realizing he was getting late. "Stop playing around. You can go and claim the reward if you can refute the President's lightspeed experiment! I'm waiting for you to claim the 50000 arcana points, exchange them for bronze coins, and throw them all over my body!"

"Don't promote the wave theory if you can't do this!"

He turned around and left after finishing the sentence, leaving no chance for Beate to reply. Obviously, he knew very well how to end an argument with an advantage.

Beate wanted to argue back with the classic experiments but he noticed that Rock was already gone. The anger of unable to vent was like a flame burning his mind. "That damn fool! Dumbass! Stupid!"

Similar events were happening all over Allyn. However, it was only a small group of arcanists who support the particle theory that was arguing with the many supporters of the wave theory. Yet with the evidence from the lightspeed experiment, they somehow gained the advantage over the wave theory supporters, who were furious but had no way to argue back.

The only good news was that the arcanists whose cognitive world was based on the wave theory did not endure any serious injuries, thanks to the existence of the classic light experiments. They believed there will be other theories that included the Ether to explain Douglas's lightspeed experiment.

In the Electromagnetic Kingdom, Brook was reading the latest issue of Arcana.

Rubbing his wig, Brook sighed slightly, "I didn't expect teacher to prove it in this way... He's incredible..."

He turned the magazine to the last page and read Artil's "War Declaration" carefully. He shook his head, then stood up and walked to the window. Staring at the twisted magnetic field, running electrical current, jumping electrical arcs, and the invisible electrical waves, he muttered,

"What is the problem with the lightspeed experiment?"

"The result is correct, but Ether might still exist. Maybe Ether is all over the sky in a way that we can't imagine.

"We should thank teacher for the experiment. It helped us filter out many thoughts we had about Ether. We are getting closer to the truth.

"In what way will the existence of Ether fit in the result of this experiment?" Brook immersed himself in thoughts.

Unless faced with irrefutable evidence, every Grand Arcanist extremely persistent in their theories.

In the Theatre of Destruction.

Oliver Constantine was lying leisurely in a chair in his pajamas. His wife, Florencia, was feeding him grapes while he read Arcana.

"Heh, Artil is challenging us?" Oliver smiled and looked at Florencia.

Only about a dozen years after Brook became Douglas's student, Artil also became Douglas' student. He thus had a deep background and was familiar with every Grand Arcanist and legendary archmage.

Florencia raised her brow. "Challenge? What challenge?" Her magazine was taken away by her husband after she just finished reading the first article by Douglas.

Oliver spoke after murmuring two lines of opera, "he offered a reward for a theory that could explain the lightspeed experiment, but the theory must include the Ether."

"Hehe, it's a good thing, isn't it?" Florencia had a charming smile on her face. As a high-level arcanist, she quickly understood the relationship between Douglas' artificial star and the lightspeed experiment. As a sorcerer specializing in Element, she supported the particle theory, which contradicted the wave theory that Oliver supported.

Oliver smiled. He raised his hand and squeezed Florencia's nose tip.

"Why? Are you going to argue with me again? Regarding the wave theory and the particle theory?"

"Of course, I think you can't explain the lightspeed experiment." Florencia was very firm when it came to arcana theories.

"If I can explain it, you'll have to do one thing for me." Oliver chuckled.

"No problem, if you can't explain it, you must do one thing for me too." Florencia helped Oliver turn the theory argument into some fun bet between a couple. That was how they stayed peaceful when they had different opinions on various theories.

Olive straightened his back and smiled. "I think I'm filled with motivation now!"

...

Lauren, the winner of the Silver Moon Medal and authority in the Electromagnetics, stared at the journal in front of him gloomily.

"Damn Artil!" He shouted in a low voice.

He did not only support the Energy Essentialism but also promoted the wave theory. The two theories had no contradiction as the energy theory was about the materials, while the other one was about light and spiritual power. He even believed that wave was the only way to represent energy other than the materials.

"Damn Norman, damn Luciana, damn Lucien!" He dare not to say anything bad to Douglas and Fernando, but he cursed everyone else that was on Douglas' appreciation list.

He finished swearing and started to focus on the paper again. He paced around in the room and tried to find a way to explain everything.

Every arcanist who believed in the wave theory and who was above the mid-level was doing everything they could to find a way to explain the experiment after they calmed down.

...

However, Lucien remained silent this time, which was rare as in everyone's eyes he loved to cause arguments and solve difficult problems. He did not make any valuable comment on the wave theory and the particle theory.

When the Congress of Magic was once again lost in a debate war between the wave theory supporters and the particle theory supporters, the second artificial star successfully revolved once around the world, and the third communication star entered its track secretly. The Allyn Telephone and Telegraph company was founded.

The theory war became more and more intense as the end of January approached, when Lucien received an invitation from Tower. Levski and Lucien would be awarded the Arcana Staff at the Tower's headquarter in Allyn.

The carriage carrying Lucien, Lazar, and several other people from the Atoms Laboratory stopped at the entrance, encountering Levski, who arrived at almost the same time.

"Good evening, Levski." Lucien greeted Levski as he got off the carriage.

Levski had a bitter smile on his face.

"Not good at all. The new geometric system was hard to analyze and my friends were always arguing about the wave theory and the particle theory. I'm in dire need of some peaceful time."

Lucien was also a bit speechless as he did not expect to hear about the debate war here.

Chapter 437: The Undercurrent

Allyn sat in the midair, and the tower, which was used as a platform to observe the stars, was high above the clouds. Sometimes, bright colors rippled on the dark body of the tower and it almost looked like the entrance was shimmering under the light.

Lucien closed his mouth and smiled after hearing Levski's word. "The particle theory can't explain most of the results and the wave theory can't find its foundation. They both have big problems. I think they should just marry each other. It'll solve all the problems and the war between wave and particle will end peacefully!" Lucien spoke in a joking way.

"That's impossible. Your thought is interesting, Evans," Levski chuckled. Although he was good at math, he was still an arcanist and had done some research on the wave theory and the particle theory. He thought Lucien was just joking.

Lazar and the others who got off the carriage after Lucien all started smiling. Heidi even burst out laughing uncontrollably. The two theories should get married? Only Mr. Evans could think of a lame joke like that, and "lame joke" itself was a strange term coined by Lucien.

Lucien waved his staff and said, "anyway, when there's no result that can decide the outcome of the war, the third war between the two theories will not be ending very soon. We should probably just focus on our own studies."

He was not worried that his joke could enlighten Levski, Lazar, Rock, and the others. To jump outside the box of the conflict between the wave theory and the particle theory not only needed some incredible ideas but also a series of supporting experiments. Without the experiment results, the wave-particle dualism could never even be imagined. A great scientist as Einstein, his thesis only suggested the concept of the light quantum and used the instant and the average to discuss light. It was far from the actual wave-particle dualism and was more like the particle theory.

And whether it would make the arcanists think of the hypothesis of the light quantum, the answer was obvious just by looking at the recently published papers — there was not a single thesis trying to explain the black-body radiation and the energy quantum hypothesis! Almost all arcanists considered it as something that they should not touch and wanted to drive the thought out of their minds. Under a situation like this, how could they be enlightened and develop new ideas?

Although students like Annick, who were pretty much worshipping Lucien, might accept the hypothesis of the energy quantum as their meditation environment had not been completed yet and their belief was not stable. However, they did not have enough knowledge to explore the field of heat radiation and they had no chance to use or study the quantum theory. They had a general idea of it but they did not know how to learn about it and it was thus impossible for them to use it to come up with hypotheses for light.

"You're right." Levski nodded seriously. Compared to the argument between the wave and particle theories, he preferred studying the two new geometric systems and the theory displayed by President Douglas' artificial planet experiment.

Then he saw the ninth-circle archmage, Annonis the Astrologer, walking to him from the entrance. "Mr. Annonis is here."

Annonis was known to the public as was the president of the tower and a member of the Highest Council.

Annonis was wearing a tall grey hat. He was tall and strong, like the strongest warrior, and there was no beard on his young-looking face. However, the pair of deep black eyes gave the feeling that he had experienced a lot of things and that although he looked young, his mind and body were already very old.

"Mr. Annonis." Lucien, Levski, and the others greeted Annonis respectfully.

Annonis was a person who did not smile often. He nodded slightly and said to the two in a serious tone, "come in, please, you're the stars of today's party."

In the hall, under the "stars", many guests were toasting each other.

Entering the hall, Lucien noticed many familiar arcanists such as Raventi, Florencia, Neeshka, and Milina.

After exchanging eye contact with Levski, Lucien picked up a glass of "Starlight" drink from the waiter's plate and then headed to the group of people from the Will of Elements.

"The most talented person of the whole Will of Elements is here, the genius who claimed the most honorable rewards from three different fields before reaching the high level." Florencia clicked her tone and smiled lazily. She jokingly mocked Lucien, implying that he had not entered the headquarters or the divisions of the Will of Elements for a very long time as he was busy with studying and dealing with affairs of the Atom Institution.

Lucien smiled and raised his glass. "I was really busy recently. I was helping my teacher with setting up the Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company."

"It seems that you're very interested in the projects that will bring you money. The magic crystal light is still in the promotion phase and you're already starting something else." Gaston chuckled.

Raventi scrunched his brow. "Lucien, you do need a lot of resources to explore the unknown world and to increase your own power. However, money is not the most important thing. The most important thing is to study and do research. Don't forget your original intention." He did not want Lucien to choose the wrong way so he decided to tell Lucien what he was thinking directly. He was not worried that what he said would make Lucien angry as that was just what he would do.

Florencia giggled after hearing Raventi's word. "Lucien is still doing research. He had just created a new geometric system, right? That's why we're here. This is the ceremony for his Arcana Scepter Reward."

"The first part of the set up has been completed. I'll focus on increasing my magic skills now." Lucien was talking about creating his own meditation method, however, it sounded like he was going for the senior-rank to Raventi and the others. They all nodded as they agreed with Lucien's plan.

Raventi stared at Lucien with his deep grey eyes and followed Florencia's words. "The field of math used to be the weak point of your arcana ability but it seemed like you've already solved the problem. Great, you have the ability to succeed. However, I suggest that you stop continuing your research in the new geometric system. The research has no actual arcana or magic meaning at the moment. You should spend more time on the functions of the complex variable so you can build the foundation for calculating the complicated spiritual power fields after you reach senior-rank.

"You have the highest chance to become a legendary sorcerer in the Congress of Magic, so don't waste your time."

Raventi had a high expectation of Lucien, so he was trying to give him some suggestions. He knew that Lucien's cognitive world was preliminarily substantial. With Lucien's age and arcana ability, reaching senior-rank shouldn't be a problem, what he needed was the foundation of reaching the legendary level.

"Yeah, Lucien, you can leave the new geometric system to the arcanists of Tower. You can just use the systems after they find the actual meaning of them," K added, as a friend.

There were many people who were jealous of Lucien's relationship with the organization and talent and some even tried to trick him, but that was not the only problem — Lucien also had a lot of pressure on him from the people who cared about him and might even receive wrong advice. Many talented people lost their path to success because the people who cared about them gave them the wrong suggestions.

Sometimes, one might do the wrong thing even with good intention.

"I'm already trying to learn more about this field." Lucien nodded and responded, "however, I always think that we should pay more attention to the math. It's like we need better equipment before a battle. We don't know what's waiting in front of us so we need more math tools, even if we can't find the arcana meaning of them at the current moment."

"Well..." Raventi was going to say something else but Florencia stopped him. "After reading Nature, Oliver agreed with your point. He had trouble finding the correct math techniques for the field that he was researching until he saw the two new geometric systems."

Since the grand arcanist agreed, Larry and K decided to remain silent. Lucien seized the chance and changed the topic. "has the War between Wave and Particle spread into the organization?"

"Yeah, there are many arguments going on and I can see sorcerers arguing every day. Some of them were so angry that they started fighting. Thankfully they were stopped in time and no one was hurt." Gaston sounded a bit frustrated.

The fact that there were still many sorcerers who supported the wave theory of light in the Will of Elements, the base camp of elementalists, proved the dominance of the wave theory of light.

It seemed like Gaston was not interested in the War between Wave and Particle as he had seen too many situations like this and this group consisted mostly of particle theory supporters. He looked around and said, "the Hand of Paleness did not send any members are not here."

"Why?" Lucien was a bit curious. He knew that they definitely received the invitation.

Florencia checked the surroundings and lowered her voice, sounding a bit hoarse and sexy. "The Highest Council and the Affair Committee are investigating the relationship between Heidler and the solid world of black and white. The Hand of Paleness was causing trouble for them and they had some conflicts, so the members of the Hand of Paleness are probably trying to show their altitude in this way."

Lucien's brow furrowed. He didn't expect that after discovering the mysterious existence in World of Souls and the hidden threats, the Hand of Paleness would still try to keep it as a secret. It was such an unwise decision! He wondered if Thanatos and the demi-god liches wanted to explore it by themselves.

But they were weaker than Alterna and the mysterious being. As grand arcanists, they should not make mistakes like this. Maybe, there was something else going on.

He wondered if he could learn something from Felipe.

At this moment, Annonis the Astrologer walked to the stage and invited Levski up, as he was going to award Levski first.

Annonis was holding a wavy dark staff. He looked at Levski and said seriously, "it has been over ten years, yet no one discovered the true value of your thesis. You were looked down and attacked. It was Tower's mistake and it was also my mistake. I've never even thoroughly read your thesis before throwing them aside.

"Luckily, we still have a chance to make up for it. We'll use the 21st Arcana Scepter, Levski Geometry, to honor the new geometric system you created and to honor your contribution to the field of math. You passed through the difficult challenges and you insisted on what you believed. This is the true spirit of arcana and magic!"

Levski took over the scepter with many emotions going through his mind. He almost cried and he spoke briefly.

"First I would like to thank Evans. Without his proof and his logical insights, I would not be able to receive the scepter today.

"Also, I want to tell everyone that the field of math is different from other arcana fields. In this field, we need to make purely logical thoughts that are not based on reality. We need to be brave."

His emotion got unstable as he talked and his voice was a bit blurry.

"It might not be a happy thing to believe in your own belief, but it is definitely a worthy thing!"

Everyone was clapping, not only as congratulations but also as apologies.

After Levski finished the speech, Annonis asked Lucien to get on the stage.

Chapter 438: The Second Reward

Chapter 438: The Second Reward

Annonis, the Astrologer, took out a unique-shaped bracelet, on which a pocket watch was attached. He said in a serious tone, “many thanks to Mr. Lucien Evans, for putting forward the mathematic model and demonstration for Levski Geometry, which freed us from our own arrogance and prejudice and made us see the beauty of math from another perspective. He showed us the great necessity and sufficiency of correct axioms and rigorous logic. Only an arcanist with such courage and intelligence like Mr. Lucien Evans can make such a great contribution.

“... Also, many thanks to Mr. Lucien Evans again for building another new geometry system, and making our overall geometry system more complete. Using the twenty-second Arcana Scepter, we commend him for Evans Geometry and his outstanding contribution to mathematics.”

Lucien had Sun Staff already, therefore he asked Tower to turn the Arcana Scepter into a bracelet-like accessory — a “hand watch”.

Touching the silver-grey watch, on which constellation patterns and diamonds were engraved in golden ratio, Lucien left his spirit imprint in the core of the sun pattern surrounded by the zodiac stars.

“Arcana Scepter: Evans Geometry. Level-seven perfect rank item. Requirement: Sixth-circle spiritual power and primarily-substantialized cognitive world.

“This unique-shaped bracelet is enchanted with two permanent magic effects: Improving the accuracy when casting Horoscope, and increasing the owner’s presentiment against danger by allowing him to connect to his Host Star of Destiny without entering meditation status

“As a piece of work from a Tower alchemist, it is also enchanted with the power of stars and destiny. Its owner could cast the fifth-circle spell Curse of Doom twice a day, the fifth-circle spell Star Blessing twice a day, and the seventh-circle spell Destiny Interference three times a day.

“January, year 820. In acknowledgment of Mr. Lucien Evans’ great contribution to mathematics.

“The flow of time is independent, absolute, and mathematical; so is destiny. We can observe it, refer to it, predict it, and even interfere it to a certain degree!

“—— Caxias Annonis”

Putting on the watch, Lucien turned to the arcanists down the stage and said to them meaningfully,

“from the ancient Magic Empire to the Congress of Magic, hundreds of years have passed. During which, there were many times when an initially ignored research finding became widely recognized when arcanists encountered bigger difficulties later.

“Our research projects should be practical, of course. But we should also encourage the arcanists who have spare time and vigor to be more far-sighted and take on projects that are more advanced than what we understand right now. Only by so can we have handy tools in future explorations to guarantee the rate of our development .”

Neeshka, Milina, Gaston, Rachel and many started smiling. Lucien was obviously very stubborn. People were saying that his new geometry system was of no practical use, so he now was repeatedly arguing that his system was, in fact, too advanced to be employed right now. Was he right? No one knew it.

Lucien did not stop because of the kind smile on his acquaintances’ faces. “Mr. President’s artificial planet experiment has proved to us the rationality of his celestial bodies motion system, and also the profound mystery of the universe. When the gate of micro-world first opened, we saw for the first time how small a world can be. As we can see, there is a world way bigger than we can imagine, and another way smaller than we can imagine, and both of them are beyond our current ability of direct observation by using magic.

Recently, I believe all of you have experienced, or are currently experiencing, the helpless feeling of unable to carry out experiments despite having ideas and theories.”

Studies of the micro- and macro-world had also attracted the attention of countless sorcerers. It was currently the second hottest topic aside from the debate war of the wave and particle theory of light. Most sorcerers attending the ceremony had more or less ventured into it. They nodded as they could all relate to Lucien’s words. When studying the micro- and macro-world, the current magic methods have reached their limitations.

Lucien’s face had the same gentle smile as ever. “Therefore, math becomes the only tool that we can rely on. We observe the phenomena, and we find its rules. Math is going to play a vital role when we explore the micro- and macro-world and will beacon the darkness in front of us!”

Raventi listened to Lucien’s speech seriously. Although there were vague concepts of micro- and macro-world before, Lucien was the first person who clearly categorized the two and used them to divide magic sectors.

The look on Lucien’s face suddenly became serious, “The world we live in is totally different from the micro- and macro-world. In the future, maybe we will find our theories and beliefs totally inapplicable to them. Maybe everything in the two worlds goes far beyond our imagination. Maybe what can be considered miracles in our eyes are nothing more than normal there.

“Then, we cannot rely on our eyes, ears, or even soul; neither can we depend on our past experience and theories. Math will be our only tool!”

The arcanists present started applauding, showing their respect to the winner of the award, but they were not paying real attention to Lucien’s prophesy since it still sounded too bold to be true. The field of Math was set in an abstract world, and it was thus understandable that unimaginable new geometry systems could be found. But it is hard to believe that, in the real world of arcana and magic, unimaginable miracle-like phenomena and theories could appear.

Although the School of Transformation, Summoning, and part of Illusion still could not be brought into the current arcana system, the arcanists believed that with a more in-depth understanding in the human body, time and space, as well as the application of electromagnetic waves, these schools that still bore the impression of the ancient Magic Empire would also fit into the system.

Using the grand arcanist Brook's words, "They should be included in the arcana system, and will be!"

At this moment, they had forgotten Lucien's Energy Quantum Theory which they left behind their mind on purpose, the hypothesis seemingly containing the power that could destroy the entire arcana world.

...

In the garden villa.

Lucien put on the monocle that he had improved himself, and turned on Electromagnetism Messaging. After a while of electric current noise, he heard Natasha's surprised voice.

"Lucien? Are you close to Aalto right now? Again?"

Through the satellite, her voice sounded a bit different, and the quality of the connection was not very good.

"No, I'm calling you at a super long distance through the artificial planet." Lucien smiled. The quality of the call was within his expectation, and it could be improved later after they had more experience.

To utilize a satellite properly for communication, locating, and monitoring was not an easy job. With the more extensive applications, more and more problems would appear, some were going to cause a headache for the grand arcanists as they would not be able to find the reasons behind.

However, problems were exactly what Lucien was expecting!

He had two major aims behind putting forward the package plan besides proving Douglas's celestial body system: First, to talk to Natasha; Second, to make the problems emerge, and thus the foundation of the special theory of relativity and the general theory of relativity could be laid.

Although the related books in his spirit library had not yet been unlocked, Lucien still got to know the great influence that the two theories of relativity had on satellites, such as the velocity time dilation effect and the gravitational time dilation effect. Without a doubt, the problems were caused because of them.

Since he was using a synchronous-orbit satellite, the velocity time dilation effect can be ignored. Lucien only had to consider how to deal with the gravitational field. Also, because the satellite system was still very simple and there were very few users right now, he was able to talk to Natasha.

Natasha remained silent for a moment and asked, "So the newborn star that day... was an artificial planet? No wonder the Pope used God's Arrival..."

Then Natasha recalled the scarlet moon, and she asked with complex emotions, "you made it?"

"I made a proposal. Mr. Douglas put forward the theories and made it." Lucien answered honestly.

Natasha clicked her tongue. "I knew it! It was your idea. I feel like I am lagging behind those all kinds of thoughts of yours. And you're always able to turn these thoughts into reality! Making friend with you is something full of surprise, but I'm also concerned that maybe one day, you will fool me easily. Anyways, talking to you like this makes me feel we're in fact not far away from each other. I like it."

"So I called you immediately after I could," said Lucien ambiguously. He was too shy to say it out directly that talking to her was one of his main purposes for launching satellites.

"Haha, it's my great pleasure that you still remember... me." Natasha laughed, but her voice paused a bit. Maybe it was because of the quality of connection, or something else.

Their conversation was very convivial, and it lasted until both Natasha's and Lucien's spiritual power could not support the calling devices anymore.

"Right, I noticed that the Grand Cardinal Sard disappeared from the public since what happened to the scarlet moon. No idea what he is doing right now." Natasha gave Lucien a warning.

Lucien nodded as he felt the heat of the monocle that he was wearing. "Considering what has happened, it's not surprising that he's behaving weirdly. Well... I'll put a cryptographic magic circle on the electromagnetism messaging devices as soon as possible, or our conversation can be easily exposed."

"I see." Natasha did not know much about electromagnetism, but she was rather assured that Lucien would take care of it.

After the conversation, Lucien saw Annick walking towards him, surrounded by the other apprentices. The apprentices all talked at once,

"Sir, Annick's paper has been published on Arcana! He's a level two arcanist now!"

Due to the citations of the study on cathode ray, Annick was not far from promoting to the next level. After gaining fifty credits this time, he became a level-two arcanist naturally.

"Really? Let me take a look." Lucien was quite gratified and took over the journal. At first glance at the table of contents, he saw Artil's name. His paper was the last one in the issue and was still a discussion paper. The title was A Reward offered for Theory Explaining the Photoelectric Effect.

"... From Annick's paper we can see that the electric currents produced by casting light on a piece of metal consist of electrons, which has made the question even more prominent: For light under a certain frequency, no matter how we try to increase its 'wave' intensity, photoelectric effect and electrons are always absent.

Why? And also why, when we increase the energy intensity of the same frequency light, more electrons were emitted, but they are of the same intensity? It obviously contradicts the classic wave theory of light.

“... Here I offer a fifty-thousand-arcana-point reward to seek explanations, especially from you who support the wave theory! Use your imagination!”

Seeing the second declaration, Lucien became silent. He wondered if he should say something to first plant a seed in the arcanists' mind.

Chapter 439: An Enlightening Viewpoint

Lucien had reasons for being so cautious about the wave-particle dualism. Besides the fact that he was still exploring his own meditation method, the most important reason was that it was such a subversive and revolutionary concept that it could easily explode the head of ninety-nine percent of the middle-rank arcanists in the Congress if he just threw it at them. And without the support of the Congress, Lucien would for sure meet his own end as well.

Also, to prove the wave-particle dualism would require a series of experiments, new discoveries, and new theories, or it would certainly undergo fierce attack. Some experiments could not be carried out within the current research level, for example, the experiment for verifying light quantum. Maybe after a year or two, someone would make this achievement, but if Lucien put it forward right now, no one would believe in it. The mass-energy formula that Lucien needed was based on the special theory of relativity, which also received countless years of attack and discredits after it was proposed.

Therefore, previously, Lucien was planning on first putting forward the prerequisite theories and discoveries gradually, and when they were widely accepted by people, he then would throw the more shocking experiments and findings at them. Finally, he would join the debate war between wave and particle.

However, things were different now, as Lucien found that the two sides were completely against each other. So to make sure that most arcanists' cognitive world would not collapse when the war ended, the best solution was that Lucien introduced the related findings and perspectives to the arcanists bit by bit, starting right now, in order to shake their belief step by step. When arcanists became capable of carrying out the important experiments, the impacts that they were going to face would become less intense. Admittedly, there would still be some arcanists whose heads were going to explode, the number could be controlled, so the Congress' overall strength would not be damaged greatly within a short period of time.

"Then... before the experiments come out, my papers are going to suffer from broad neglect, queries, and even fierce attack," murmured Lucien, "... but just like what Levski said, the effort is worthwhile... I have to pay in advance for the benefits that I'll get later..."

Lucien's careful consideration was not only for the Congress but also for himself. If Lucien's finding exploded most of the middle- and high-rank arcanists' head, the Church would probably give him tons of gold to reward his effort in destroying the Congress of Magic before burning him down to ashes on the gallows.

So far, Lucien hoped to see the Congress of Magic survive and thrive, even though he had to pay something for it.

"What was it, Sir?" asked Heidi curiously. She thought her teacher just made a comment on Annick's paper.

Lucien shook his head and said, "Nothing."

Then he turned to Annick, "It's a very good start for you, Annick, to have your paper accepted by Arcana as a low-rank arcanist. But don't let the small achievement blind you. Remember, arrogance and laziness are your biggest enemies against success. Never lower your standards for yourself"

"Yes, Sir," Annick replied seriously.

Lucien smiled, "You may call me teacher."

"...?" Annick did not understand.

Layria nudged him gently, while Heidi said to him directly, "idiot. Mr. Evans has accepted you to be his real student!"

Annick suddenly became the envy of all the apprentices!

Annick instantly got very excited. Since he first met Mr. Evans in Stuart, he had already regarded Mr. Evans as his own teacher and treated Mr. Evans with heartfelt respect. However, seeing Mr. Evans winning so many major awards and becoming the most promising arcanist of the Congress, Annick started doubting himself whether he was qualified to be Mr. Evans' student.

"My... My great pleasure!!" Annick's face flushed. He was about to salute Lucien using the most formal and solemn manner of the Congress.

Lucien smiled and raised his hand. "Save that. I'm not a big fan of formalities... as long as you consider me your teacher."

Then Lucien turned to the rest of the apprentices. "You all have been working in the Atom Institution for a while, and I am quite impressed. You all are confident but not arrogant, diligent and full of imagination, and those are the qualities that I am looking for in my ideal students. When you become a true sorcerer, you all can become my students, just like Annick."

"Really?!" Heidi burst out, looking very excited.

Lucien smiled and nodded.

"Awesome!" Katrina cheered. Katrina thought that she would never become Lucien's real student since she and Sprint did not leave a good first impression on Mr. Evans, although Mr. Evans still tried his best to teach them and recruited them into the Atom Institution. Now, she could not hold back her complex emotions of surprise, excitement, gratefulness, and regret.

Meanwhile, Sprint also compressed his lips into a thin line and hid his slightly-trembling hands behind his body.

In the Congress, where part of its tradition was inherited from the ancient Magic Empire, the relationship between a teacher and a student was very serious.

Lucien left the excited apprentices aside and turned to Annick again. "I've prepared all the exercises, tests, and textbooks covering the ten magic schools. They are on the desk in my study. Go and grab them yourself."

Annick's face instantly dimmed. Here came the haunting nightmare, again. Although Annick was a very diligent and hardworking young man, he was still scared of the tons of exercises.

Heidi burst out laughing, with her hands on her waist. She took pleasure in seeing Annick, who was the first to become a formal sorcerer and Lucien's true student, to also become the first to face the nightmare of exercises and tests.

Although she'd probably face the same fate in the future, she would not worry about herself right now. After all, there was still a period of time to go.

When the apprentices all left, Lucien paced to his study and pulled out the rolls of parchment made specifically for writing arcana papers. After sitting quietly in front of the parchment rolls for a while, he finally picked up the quill-pen and wrote,

"An Enlightening Viewpoint on Light."

Starting from black-body radiation, bringing in the classical kinetic theory of gases, Lucien generalized the hypothesis that "the absorption and emission of energy came in portions" into "the electromagnetic waves also came in portions". Then, since the light was also a kind of electromagnetic wave, then light should also be delivered in portions. The portion of light was termed the light quantum, and its energy was determined by its frequency, by which it interacted with all kinds of substances.

Then Lucien introduced the hypothesis of light quantum into the photoelectric effect and explained the phenomenon perfectly. He also made many predictions based on this theory, including that at a fixed frequency of light, the energy of the electrons emitted was also fixed.

"... based on the instantaneity of time, light presents the prominent property of quantum. However, based on time average, light shows the property of wave. Therefore, perhaps we should be more open-minded facing the wave-quantum argument."

After careful consideration, Lucien still put the vague but meaningful words on, although every arcanist who read the paper would see it as an improved version of the particle theory, despite the fact that the paper started from the unpleasant concept of quantum.

Finishing the paper, Lucien made another two copies of it. He would send one to the Arcana Review Board, one to his teacher Fernando, and one to Artil — Lucien needed the fifty thousand arcana points from Artil as a comfort.

Even though Artil did not like the concept of energy quantum, as a firm advocate of the particle theory, he would still support Lucien's paper, in which all electromagnetic waves were believed to be in the form of separate portions. Maybe Artil would even directly name light quantum as quantum photon.

After putting the papers into file cases, Lucien started writing to his friends one by one. Although there was no solid experiment to support his theory yet, and although his standpoint was the quantum theory, which was a beyond controversial topic, Lucien still wanted to give them a reminder first to be as safe as possible.

"... The paper I am going to submit, from my personal perspective, is the only one among all the papers that I've written that can possibly match the revolutionary meaning of the article that put forward the hypothesis of the energy quantum. Fortunately, it is not yet supported by any solid experiment..."

.....

In Sorcerer Administrative Department.

Eric carefully checked the file submitted by Lucien, and he released a long sigh when he made sure that the word "subversive" was not on it. Something that was probably a smile appeared on his stiff face. "Every time you submit a paper, I'm a bit scared..."

"It's just a viewpoint to see if it can enlighten other arcanists. No experiment support yet. Hopefully, the phenomena derived from the hypothesis can be verified in the future." Lucien smiled and answered.

He was saying the truth, but only part of it. The most subversive step had been taken by the hypothesis of energy quantum, anyways.

Writing "Light-darkness" on the file, Eric thought for a while and said to Lucien, "you're good at Elements, Lucien, so I'd assume that you used particle theory in this paper on light. Am I right? If I submit the paper to the authorities in the school of Light-darkness, the comments you'll receive might be bad. If the paper also has to do with other fields, you know... we can submit it to other reviewers."

The school of Light-darkness was established based on the school of Electromagnetics, and in it the wave theory was the exclusive ruler.

"It's not necessary. The more we argue, the sooner we'll find the truth," said Lucien humorously. Unless the paper could be submitted to someone he knew well from in the school of Element, the review comments on this paper would always be quite bad. Eighty percent of the members in the Arcana Review Board supported the wave theory of light, and among the remaining twenty percent, less than three were interested in the hypothesis of energy quantum. Before any solid experiment evidence was to be carried out, it was almost impossible to find another person like Artil, who was so stubborn and firm a supporter of the particle theory that he would be willing to reluctantly accept the energy quantum theory.

Eric nodded, and submit the paper to the Review Board.

"Light-darkness... To Mr. Lauren and Mr. Teixeira," said the alchemical life without hesitation.

.....

On the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower, when he saw the title of Lucien's paper, Fernando could not help rubbing his brows.

"Enlightening viewpoint..."

Chapter 440: Reviewing and Being Reviewed

"It's just about using the hypothesis of energy quantum to explain the photoelectric effect," said Lucien honestly with a constant smile on his face.

The corner of Fernando's mouth twitched a bit. "You call this 'enlightening'... I don't think there are arcanists who want to be enlightened like this."

Fernando and Lucien had excluded all the other possible explanations together, and the only possible answer left was the hypothesis of energy quantum. Therefore, after the initial reluctance and struggle, Fernando was the one who accepted this hypothesis the most. However, even so, Fernando would only use it when analyzing the black-body radiation, but never in any other fields.

Then Fernando mumbled. "So you want to use the hypothesis to build your own system?"

If Lucien's paper was just a further explanation of the hypothesis of energy quantum, it would not be that subversive. As long as Lucien had not proved the hypothesis with experiments, Fernando would not need to be too worried that Lucien might destroy the entire Congress with his theory.

As he turned the pages, Fernando's expression became more and more serious. "Although in the studies of the black-body radiation, I've started to feel inclined to use the quantum hypothesis for explaining the energy absorption and emission, I still don't think it's necessary to further apply the hypothesis to explain the presence and transmission of light. Brook's equations have well offered a good explanation, and hypotheses should not be multiplied unnecessarily."

Although Fernando was on the side of the wave theory of light, he was not a firm supporter. But any arcanists who specialized at Electromagnetics would be deeply shocked by and fell in love with the beauty in Brook's equations, which was like an elegant piece of poetry of the Goddess of Magic. Therefore, facing the hypothesis that challenged Brook's theory, Fernando still had spontaneous rejection in his heart, although the hypothesis perfectly and precisely explained the photoelectric effect.

Lucien was not surprised that this idea was very unacceptable even for an open-minded grand arcanist like Fernando.

Fernando put down the paper and said in a serious tone, "however, this is the best explanation of the photoelectric effect that I have ever seen so far. If you spend some time to improve the magic circles and conduct an experiment with great precision as your evidence, it might be easier for people to accept it."

"So far I'm not capable of doing such an experiment." Lucien did not mention the true reason behind it was if he included the experiments, some sorcerers' cognitive world would be shattered or injured.

After he read the paper, Fernando knew that the requirements for carrying out the experiment were extremely high, so he didn't think much after hearing Lucien's excuse. "Although I do not agree with you, yet based on the entire process, I still have to admit that your viewpoint is very enlightening, as it reasonably and succinctly explained the photoelectric effect. Your explanation does leave a deep impression on me. But, the last part, in which you talked about the particle-like property of the instantaneity of time and the wave-like property of the time average... It's too weak and redundant! It makes people feel that you're not even a firm supporter of your own hypothesis yourself! You're trying to find a peaceful place to get along with the wave theory, in a ridiculous way!"

"In fact, this is my true point, or we can't explain the diffraction of light, nor the photoelectric effect." Lucien tried to be bold.

Fernando gave him a stern look and asked, "so you're saying it's both wave and particle. Then what on earth is light? You assume that quantum effect divides light into portions, so it's a combined formation. But why don't you think further? Why these many light quanta generally show the properties of wave? Why do the quanta march forward following the rule of wave?

"Did you ever see the knights charging? Without strict command and training, their charging would be a disaster, instead of in an organized form of a triangle. But who commands the quanta of light so that they move in the form of waves? The God of Truth?!"

"Have you ever thought about it?!"

Even when talking to his favorite student, Fernando was still the same strict and straightforward. Lucien could almost feel the sprays from his teacher.

"... No one's giving command, Sir. It is wave itself, and, of course, exhibit the features of wave. Sir, I don't think it will work trying to explain why light carries the features of waves from the perspective that light is particles. Light is wave itself," said Lucien sincerely.

However, Lucien's words did not make any sense at all in Fernando's ears. To him, light's form of existence could be something beyond his imagination, but it still had to make sense!

Thus, he roared. "What about the photoelectric effect?!"

"Light also consists of light quanta. In this case, we don't need to think about it from the perspective of waves." The way Lucien was talking started to become philosophical.

But Lucien was not planning on roaring against Fernando right now, not at all, since he was still far from revealing the final answer. So he said, "Sir, this is not yet a mature theory... I'm still thinking. So it's not included in the paper."

Fernando slightly nodded, although he still kept a straight face. He allowed his student to have a rich imagination, but it had to base on solid reasoning. "Comparing to your true viewpoint, I find this paper much more lovable. I don't want to arcana studies to fall into a philosophical debate in the end."

Then Fernando knocked at the desk and said, "are you sure you're going to submit the paper without any experiment support? Be ready to face the attack from most of the arcanists."

"It's okay. Without a conclusion, they'll soon forget about it." Lucien did not really care.

Looking at Lucien, Fernando shook his head, "Don't underestimate the perseverance of the arcanists. Some won't let you go."

...

Returning to his own office in Arcana Review Board, Lucien saw a paper on his desk. However, as soon as he picked it up, Lucien frowned. Since people got to know how he helped Levski and saw how successful Levski was right now, many arcanists started submitting their own "subversive" papers directly to Lucien, hoping that Lucien would support them so they could become famous overnight.

However, their papers did not even respect basic logic, and Lucien could not even take a second glance at their derivation processes. Claiming that they had overthrown Brook system and Douglas system, the papers were more than absurd. Lucien had to try his best to hold himself back from the urge to tear down the papers into pieces, throw them on those people's face, and call them "folk arcanists"!

However, after calming down a bit, Lucien still wanted to be objective, since he was well aware of the fact that how destructive prejudice and stereotype could be. He started reading the paper carefully.

It turned out to be worse than ever. The author did not even understand the theoretical system that he wished to overthrow before claiming that he had found its problems. Lucien started to feel that the previous authors were in fact quite sweet, since at least the problematic parts were in the reasoning sections.

"Not bad as a joke though..." Lucien picked up the quill-pen and started marking.

In Sorcerer Administrative Department, there was a totally absent-minded look on Eric's face. He sat still with his eyes staring forward at the void.

Sitting in front of him was a black-haired, blue-eyed, good-looking young man in his early thirties. Words were pouring out from his mouth. "Based on my years of studying, I have located the fatal error in Mr. President's theoretical system in Force Field. My finding is powerful enough to pierce through the seemingly solid system and save all arcanists in the Congress from the misunderstanding which has lasted for hundreds of years."

Eric did not want to say anything else. The man sitting in front of him was a sorcerer specializing in the school of Electromagnetics. Obviously, he knew nothing much about the Force Field theories.

"Unfortunately, most members of the board don't have their own thoughts. All they want to do is to follow the authority. However, now we have Mr. Evans, a young and brave board member who dares to challenge the errors. I'm sure he'll be able to understand my paper and face the errors. I will earn my honor back," said the man triumphantly and confidently.

Eric touched his thin hair and said, "Peavy... There are still other people waiting... You can come back three days later."

Peavy shrugged. "What a pity. I was going to tell you some details about my theoretical system."

Suddenly, the iron cage burst out white light, and a document appeared inside.

"Hey... I think it's yours, Peavy." Eric called Peavy, who was already at the door.

Peavy was very surprised. "My paper deserves this fast response?!"

He wore a badge for fourth circle sorcerer and one for level-one arcanist.

Eric took a quick glance at the paper. The muscle of his face twitched a bit, and then he handed the paper back to Peavy. "You may want to take a look at it yourself."

Peavy turned the pages, only to find the many crosses in red ink. Following each cross, there were comments and the corresponding correct derivation process. At the edge of each page, there were strange comments such as "Two points are deducted."

Seeing the red crosses, a blue vein bulged in Peavy's forehead. All he could see now were the red crosses.

He quickly turned to the last page, and saw Lucien's comment: "Starting from the full score, 100 points, after deducting all the points for the errors, only 1 point is left. Ten points are given for the clean-looking handwriting. 11 points in total. The standard for passing is 60 points. Therefore, the paper fails to pass."

Lucien had veto power on deciding whether a subversive paper could pass. Also, the paper had been rejected by the other members before as well. Therefore, the alchemical life directly gave the final decision — Fail.

Peavy's face burnt as he saw Lucien's many comments.

In his mind, since all of Lucien's comments were against his derivation and reasoning, Lucien must be wrong!

"Evans has nothing different! He's just another puppet of the authorities! He doesn't want to see a genius like me to rise, doesn't want to see me overthrow the president's system, doesn't want to see me win even more prizes than he had!" Peavy turned around angrily and left the office. There was hatred in his voice.

Eric released a long sigh. In his opinion, the Congress should put these people together, and let them have fun and argue within their own small circle.

...

One day later, archmage Lauren came back to Allyn and started reading the paper.

"Stupid and stubborn! Why is he still bothering with his hypothesis on energy quantum? Ridiculous..." Lauren dropped the paper, looking rather pissed. "How dare he to even try to quantize light?! That's drawing close to the particle theory!"

Lauren started doubting Lucien's past achievements, wondering if it was just because of his good luck. The paper submitted by him completely made no sense, and there was no evidence at all!

"I am going to do an accurate photoelectric effect experiment and throw the result on your face!" Lauren's fury was burning, as the two theories that he believed in were under the attack from Lucien's absurd hypothesis.

However, after he calmed down, Lauren realized that currently, he was not capable of carrying out the experiment because of the limitation of apparatuses. But this did not mean that he could not give the review comment. So he sat back at the desk and grabbed his quill-pen.

Chapter 441: Crisis

Chapter 441: Crisis

“This is a hypothesis made exclusively for explaining the photoelectric effect. It does not apply extensively as a standard hypothesis is supposed to be, for it cannot be used to explain other phenomena of light. It even contradicts to what the diffraction image tells us. With no experiment as its support, the hypothesis is rather doubtful. It is a hypothesis with logical, succinct, and beautiful reasoning yet goes the opposite way from the true situations...

“Arcanists have made lots of similar hypotheses like this one. When a hypothesis does not have broad application, it usually means that the direction of the hypothesis is problematic. I share the same opinion for this paper...

“I believe that Mr. Lucien Evans is also aware of this fact. He knows that his hypothesis contradicts Mr. Brook’s electromagnetism system, as well as the series of classic photics patterns. This is why he added to the last part of his paper that he is only addressing the instantaneity, while light was still wavelike from the whole picture.”

The more Lauren wrote, the angrier he got. What was preventing him from scolding Lucien right in the face was the fact that Lucien was the Lord of Storm’s student, a member of the Review Board, and someone with many awards. In his eyes, Lucien should be realistic, give up his ridiculous dream pursuing quantum theory, and open his eyes to see the stable and perfect current arcana system.

Taking a deep breath, Lauren continued to write. “... Also, this hypothesis, which seems to be another version of the particle theory, starts from the idea that energy is not transferred successively, which is absurd. Even those who support the particle theory would not agree with this. However, what has to be admitted is that this is a complete paper that can be quite inspiring, and it offers a temporary solution to explain the photoelectric effect. So my review decision would be:

“It is a paper worth of broad discussion, but its value is also limited to this for now. When there is precise evidence support, the review result can be changed. My current suggestion is that one arcana credit and five arcana points should be given as the reward.”

When writing the conclusion, Lauren was being quite cunning. He dared not to speak out his true opinion, because Lucien Evans was very famous and the young genius arcanist also had lots of support from his teacher. If Lauren was not being careful enough, he might lose his job and position on the Board.

Lauren had his reason for letting the paper pass. In the Congress, there were still supporters of the particle theory of light. If he rejected Lucien Evans’s paper using the fact that the paper contradicted Brook’s electromagnetism system, the same thing would happen to all the submitted papers advocating the wave theory, as the Review Board members supporting the particle theory would reject the wave papers using the fact that they contradicted Douglas’ light speed experiment and the photoelectric effect. Therefore, he had to make a compromise. Although wave theory had taken the more dominant position out, the particle theory out there had not admitted its failure yet.

After he finished writing the comment, Lauren picked up his pipe and took a drag. There was a cold smile on his face — He was going to recommend Lucien Evans’s paper to Drummond and make him publish the paper on Arcana as a paper open for discussion, whether Lucien Evans wanted this or not. This young genius had to prepare himself for the endless criticism and attack.

Because currently no other theory could be found to explain the hypothesis of energy quantum, rarely were there any arcanists who would write a paper refuting it. But now the situation was different: Lucien was directly challenging one of the two classic arcana systems. In other words, he had chosen the opposite side against most arcanists. With classical theories and experimental data, they would not let Lucien get around that easily!

Lauren then wrote a letter to Drummond and sent it. Standing up, he paced back and forth in his study with his hands folded behind his back, and he murmured to himself, “The best way is to refute his hypothesis by using a hard experiment result. A decisive result will leave Lucien Evans no space for finding excuses...”

In the Allyn branch of Moonsong League, a unique-looking, middle-aged man was reading a paper. He had lots of electric-arc-shaped tattoos, and there were fine tiny electric currents sparking on his bare head as if he had thick silver hair. His eyes slightly squinted, in which there were electric sparks as well.

“Finally, Lucien Evans has revealed himself as a supporter of the particle theory. Or... is he trying to promote his quantum theory?” Teixeira, the level-seven arcanist and eighth-circle sorcerer, sneered. “No matter what his purpose is, this paper is useless except that it does explain the photoelectric effect. He scraped together the entire paper just for the sake of explaining the effect. Of course, Lucien Evans does not have any hard experiment evidence to support, or his head would have been exploded from seeing the experiment image.

“Lucien Evans had written this much words and formulas in the paper... I’ll let the paper pass but only admit its value for discussion. Heh, I wonder how that crazy hound, Artill, would respond?”

Teixeira then started putting his thoughts down into written words. “... It is undeniable that the paper deserves some discussion, and it offers us a possible direction in explaining the photoelectric effect. Two arcana credits and six arcana points are suggested to be given as the reward.”

Before, Teixeira had nothing against Lucien. But now it was different as Lucien was attacking the system of electromagnetism, which was the foundation of Teixeira’s cognitive world, using the particle theory and the quantum theory.

If it had not been for Lucien’s many previous achievements,

Teixeira almost started doubting that if Lucien was actually a real arcana genius like what people said.

Putting down the quill-pen, Teixeira picked up the materials on the photoelectric effect, which had been his very interest recently. As he read further, he could not help frowning.

If Lucien Evans's hypothesis was applied, the photoelectric effect indeed could be explained precisely and briefly.

"Why..." Teixeira was rather bothered. "This hypothesis completely contradicts the classic experiment image, but it could explain the photoelectric effect which contradicts with the wave theory..."

...

Unwilling to see Brook, his students, and his supporters, Artil chose to live in the small town which was his hometown. His black, pointy magic tower always attracted lots of attention from the residents and travellers, who were in awe of it.

In his study, the extremely furious look on Artil's face had been replaced by appreciation and ecstasy,

"Haha, Light quantum, light quantum... Don't think I can't recognize you when you just changed the word! It's just another name for the quantum photon in the particle theory! Portions, with a minimum limit... Isn't that particles?!"

"Quantizing light is no more than another exposition for particle theory, and the hypothesis explained the photoelectric effect perfectly! Lucien Evans deserves the reputation given to him! He's a genius! For sure, he's the most promising one who's gonna be a grand arcanist in the future!"

Lucien's proposal for launching the artificial planet helped Douglas greatly, and now he was explicitly supporting particle theory. Therefore, Artil started regarding him as his most trusted friend.

He felt thrilled imagining how those idiots who supported the wave theory of light would respond to the paper.

Feeling rather refreshed, Artil started writing to Drummond. He gritted his teeth while maintaining a big smile on his face. The only part that he was not perfectly happy with was the last paragraph of the paper, as it sounded a bit hesitant. But it did not really matter. If no one could overturn Lucien's hypothesis in a year, the fifty thousand arcana points would go to Lucien Evans. In fact, Artil wished that Lucien Evans could have taken away the points already!

After sending the copy of the paper to Drummond, Artil cheerfully thought to himself that now Lucien's hypothesis of energy quantum had sounded more reasonable to him if he set off and think deeper from the perspective of the particle theory.

In Sorcerer Administrative Department, Eric received the review result of Lucien's paper.

As the witness of Lucien's multiple success, Eric turned the pages out of curiosity. Then his face stiffened, as he was also a firm supporter of the wave theory of light.

After he skimmed through the paper and read the comments, Eric had the impulse to write something to refute Lucien's idea. However, what happened when Lucien first came up with the periodic table of elements came back to his mind. At that time, Lucien's paper also got a very poor result, but it turned out to be rather valuable later when the new elements were discovered. The two board members that reviewed the paper apologized to him and re-evaluated the paper, giving an extremely high appraisal this time.

"This paper also contains many hypotheses based on the existence of the light quantum... Maybe..." Eric started feeling suspicious, but he soon decided to stop thinking about it. "... I should wait until an accurate experiment comes out..."

Under Lauren's effort, although it was still around two to three weeks ahead before the next issue of Arcana , all the arcanists had already been informed that Lucien Evans, the young genius arcanist, used the particle theory to explain the photoelectric effect and had put forward the hypothesis of light quantum. Many were hurling abuse at Lucien. But most people, like Eric, were more cautious and chose to remain silent for most of the time due to the many awards that Lucien had won. They were afraid that, if they get too emotional, once Lucien could carry out a solid experiment to support his paper, their head would explode.

Those people's attitude was further shaken when they found out that Lucien's hypothesis indeed could explain the photoelectric effect. Although from time to time, people would whisper criticism against Lucien's hypothesis, they were still waiting, waiting for the final answer.

In Allyn, the intense atmosphere lingered. Even Lazar and the apprentices had felt people's hostility. However, Lucien was not affected by it at all. He was still working on improving his meditation and constructing his sixth-circle magic.

Yet, radicals exist in every population. By the end of the month, Lucien received a thick pile of letters. These were all anonymous threatening letters.

Smiling, Lucien leafed through the letters, feeling like that he had turned into the shared public enemy of Allyn. However, when he saw one of the letters, he suddenly frowned,

"... Maybe I'm not capable of killing you, but what about your friends and students? Take back your ridiculous hypothesis, and admit your fault in front of all arcanists!"

Chapter 442: Unjustifiable Self-defence

Lucien narrowed his eyes, his monocle reflecting the cold light of spring.

The message on the letter was composed of words cut down from newspapers, and the paper had been processed by tracing-proof divination spells. However, the person who sent this letter had obviously underestimated how well Lucien had mastered senior-rank Astrology.

Lucien pulled out the anonymous letter and laid it under his Morning Light crystal ball. There was a forbidding look on his face. He put both hands on the crystal ball and stroked it in a specific rhythm.

The crystal ball dimmed and turned black quickly. Shiny stars emerged inside. Meanwhile, the Arcana Scepter watch that Lucien was wearing also started to be covered by a vague layer of starlight. The miniature sun and constellations inlaid in the plate began to revolve silently.

In the starlight, Lucien saw blurry pictures, which depicted the many steps of how the letter was delivered.

Owl... Allyn Animal Post Office... the Magic Steam Train Company belonging to the Affair Committee... The train... Tracks... Forests, fields, and hills... Cocus, the capital city of Calais... An apprentice that Lucien did not know... A request from a friend...

All the major steps were reflected one by one. Then the letter finally returned, unexpectedly, back to Allyn, back to the Animal Post Office, and to the hands of a restaurant waiter.

At this time, Lucien had used up most of his spiritual power. The pictures became vaguer and vaguer and were soon about to disappear.

Then a next picture came. Lucien could only faintly see a man wearing a black hooded robe handing the letter and some gold Thales to the waiter.

The ring on his left hand, the Origin, lit up in time. A cool refreshing feeling came from it and restored some of his spiritual power. Removing his right hand from the crystal ball, Lucien quickly lifted his Sun Staff.

The Sun Staff could enhance the power of Astrology spells under the ninth circle by one level!

The light from the staff lit up the picture in front of Lucien's eyes. Behind the sorcerer whose face was hidden under the black hood, a misty, distorted star rose. The fine, nebula-like, shimmering lines linking to his Host Star of Destiny were now visible to bare eyes.

"Got you," Lucien whispered in a low voice.

He recorded the features of the Host Star of Destiny and its track. When his spiritual power recovered partly, he figured out who this man was using the help of Sun Staff and Arcana Scepter.

"Peavy Belges, a member of Moonsong League, specializes in Electromagnetics... Egocentric and prone to go extreme..."

Lucien found the name somehow quite familiar. After a while, he recalled that this name was on the paper that he rejected a few days ago.

The man named Peavy definitely hated Lucien for turning down his paper; then his hatred was further stimulated by Lucien's hypothesis about light quantum, so he wrote this letter to threaten Lucien.

When not used for predicting the obscure future, and when an important item that had gone through the processes was at hand, the power of senior-rank Astrology was beyond the imagination of low or middle-rank sorcerers. With the assistance of Sun Staff and Arcana Scepter, Lucien could divine many things in great detail like an archmage. Also, since the Congress of Magic had Peavy's personal information, the features of his Host Star of Destiny was not at all a secret. After careful comparison, Lucien could find him relatively easily.

Every person had his or her own Host Star of Destiny. However, if the person never studied Astrology, they would not have the host star reflection in their soul.

Therefore, Lucien had been very careful with erasing important traces left after anything he did. If it was not possible, at least he would use some senior-rank spells to cover his Host Star, or turn the black hole side to the front, which was only known by Fernando and Thompson.

Lucien thought about it for a second whether he should report this to the Affair Committee. However, the punishment for menacing, presumably fifteen days of detention, would be too weak to prevent this lunatic from hurting Lucien's friends and students, and it might even further infuriate him. So Lucien shut down this option.

Although most people see Lucien as a young, talented arcanist who was usually very polite and gentle, Lucien never showed any mercy to those intended to hurt his friends and students.

Facing this vicious, overreacting letter, Lucien was determined to overreact to it.

Lucien weighed the cost seriously — With this letter and the information he just collected as evidence, unjustifiable self-defense, in the worst case to him, would put him into prison for six months and cost him a good sum of arcana points as a penalty.

And he made the decision.

Finding the materials he needed, Lucien started to make a puppet, which was essential to his plan. After several hours, Lucien was holding a brownish, creepy puppet. The puppet had long narrow eyes and a tightly-shut mouth. Its arms were so long that they dropped down under its knees. The entire puppet was also covered with unique patterns and symbols which was very similar to the trace of Peavy's Host Star of Destiny.

"You better not try, otherwise..." Lucien said coldly while putting the anonymous letter on the puppet and activating his Arcana Scepter watch.

The constellation symbols on the watch suddenly started glowing together! Some were radiant and enchanting, some were bright and clear, some were broad and cold, some were eternally unchanging...

The seventh-circle Astrology spell, Destiny Interference!

Wriggling, a thin layer of human skin quickly grew out of the lifeless puppet and covered its face. The layer of skin became the face of Peavy, but its eyes were closed as if it was unaware to what was now happening.

Lucien then started casting on the Peavy Puppet.

In a garden villa.

Peavy was humming a new piece of music from the most recent play in the town in a very good mood. His high spirit was not because of the melody, but from the pleasure imagining the great panic that Lucien Evans was now suffering knowing that his friends and students were in danger, imagining him running back and forth making sure no one had been hurt.

Lucien Evans would submit the letter to the Affair Committee, but so what?

In Peavy's eyes, this arrogant so-called genius deserved this, for rejecting his paper out of jealousy and attacking Mr. Brook's theoretical system.

He had done some research and knew that only legendary archmages could locate the sender of an anonymous letter. He also had done everything he could to avoid the tracing of most Astrology spells. He chose not to directly attach a self-destroying spell to the letter, since Lucien Evans would definitely notice the magic waves coming out from it and wouldn't even bother to open it, then sending the letter would be pointless.

Not to mention that whether Lucien Evans would ask an archmage to cast spells just because of a threatening letter, even if Evans found out that if was him somehow, he would only be fined a few arcana points and be confined for a few days. The minor punishment would be nothing to him.

Furthermore, Peavy believed that all sorcerers who supported the wave theory of light would be on his side. Maybe Lucien Evans could protect his friends and students right now, he could not do this forever. Lucien Evans had to pay blood for what he had done! Only blood could make him realize his huge mistake!

The look on his face was completely distorted and vicious, as if Lucien had killed his father or cut off his path leading to becoming a grand arcanist. As an experienced fourth-level sorcerer who was experienced in fighting, Peavy was confident with his ability of killing. He knew well that if killing sites were well-chosen, even a legendary archmage would not be able to get any results with Horoscope.

In such a good mood, Peavy suddenly got inspired. He believed that he had come up with an experiment on testing the photoelectric effect accurate enough for exploding Lucien Evans's brain!

Unable to hold back his excitement, Peavy believed that he would become the new genius after Lucien Evans's head exploded. And by that time, his theory would be long remembered by the entire Congress just like that of Mr. Brook. Needless to say, he would become an almighty grand arcanist respected by everyone!

Walking into his lab, Peavy found his brain extremely clear. The procedures of the experiment emerged readily in his brain. Then Peavy started to reconstruct the magic circles.

The equipment for carrying out the experiment would cost a senior-rank sorcerer months to finish setting up, but he finished it within just ten minutes! Peavy wondered if his long-suppressed talent finally burst out.

With the equipment all set, Peavy started to conduct the experiment and collect data.

A few minutes later, beads of sweat dropped down from his forehead. He could not believe what he saw.

"Impossible... Impossible! Something's wrong!"

The experiment showed clear quanta features!

He hurriedly restarted the experiment all over again, but the result remained unchanged.

"No... No..." Peavy shook his head helplessly.

Bang!

His head exploded. Small pieces of red and white were everywhere on the floor and the walls of the lab.

"Ahhh!!!"

Peavy released a bitter scream and sprang up from the couch. Lips trembling, Peavy murmured to himself,

"Ha..Haha, that felt so real..."

His laughter sounded dry and embarrassed.

Wiping off the sweat from his head, Peavy walked to his lab. The horrible dream he just had reminded him that he had still got an experiment on lightning to do today.

As he walked into the lab, Peavy's heart was still beating fast, and his mind was still a bit confused. He turned on the magic circles while he tried to calm down.

In the magic circle, bolts of lightning grew and began to bounce around within the lab. Peavy, as usual, was about to turn on the most powerful defensive magic circle to shield himself from the lightning.

However, his face immediately paled.

"Why... Why can't it be turned on? Right, it broke yesterday..."

Peavy finally recalled blankly that the defensive magic circle probably had been out of order since yesterday, and he was planning to pay a senior-rank sorcerer from the Magic Engineering Department to come and repair it.

But he just forgot it! He forgot it!

"No!!!"

Layers of defensive spells were activated; pieces of magic items glowed. However, the power of the horrible lightning arc was unstoppable, and it penetrated the spells and items promptly.

Only the bitter scream of Peavy was left echoing in the room.

...

A few seconds after Lucien confirmed Peavy's death, Thompson of the Affair Committee showed up in Lucien's study with a flash of light.

"Who did you just attack?"

In Allyn, a spell used for attacking would be detected by the mythical enveloping the city from above. The Affair Committee would then be noticed to interfere.

"Someone who deserved it," said Lucien gloomily.

Lucien threw the threatening letter and his prophecy result to Thompson. It looked like that Thompson was the designated person in the Affair Committee for handling the affairs that involved Lucien.

When he finishing reading the letter and the result, Thompson figured out what happened. He looked angry as well, and even said,

"Good job."

Then Thompson restrained his personal emotion and asked, "With these as evidence, we could charge you as unjustifiable self-defense without doubt. You wanna pay ten thousand arcana points, or go stay in the magic-forbidden prison for a year?"

"Arcana points," said Lucien word by word, his heart aching. All his income from inventing magic crystal light and promoting charcoal would go into this, but it was still worthwhile as he got rid of a lunatic.

Thompson nodded. He wrote down the punishment decision and was about to leave. Lucien could not help asking.

"Those sorcerers that have gone extreme, I don't think you guys should leave them there in the public. They need a psychotherapy center, Thompson."

Thompson shrugged. "You have to know, Lucien. With years of dangerous and lonely exploration, many sorcerers have, more or less, turned into psychos. No one will agree with this proposal."

Lucien wondered if he should propose that the Congress start giving lectures on mental health.

...

"The latest one on Allyn's Dumbest Ways to Die - No. 17: Peavy used his death to tell us that we should never forget the first and foremost rule in the laboratory manual - 'Carefully check your equipment and magic circles before starting your experiment,'" said a man with cheerful smile on his face, who was introducing Allyn to the new sorcerers and apprentices on the magic steam train.

In front of him was a beautiful girl who had a white wolf lying beside as her companion.

Chapter 443: Reunion

Outside of the windows, green fields and thriving forests were retreating quickly. Sitting in this steel monster marching forward fast and smoothly, tasting the delicious black pepper steak, Louise felt that she was in a dream. Ever since she arrived in Holm, everything she saw was beyond her imagination.

Magic apprentice could cast spells in public and not worry about attracting the Church; The magic steam train station was built right in the city within the sight of ordinary people passing by; The enormous steel monster, although it carried hundreds of people, could move so fast and smoothly...

Louise thought that only senior-rank sorcerers could get on the magic train, but it turned out that the train was even accessible to apprentices. What she saw right now was completely different from what the old books told her about the ancient Magic Empire.

Louise would have thought that she was already in a new world if she had not seen how people in Holm lived their life: They were just a bit more conservative in dressing, and other than this, they were not different from the people in the Duchy of Violet.

However, to some degree, this was a new world for Louise. Her life had turned to a new page from here!

Louise stroke her black hair gently, her heart filled with determination and hope. She came from an ordinary noble family, where magic had been a secret tradition for several generations. The family members who failed to awaken their blood power would study magic instead. In this case, her family could always access the magic potions for turning a person into a knight. Therefore, there will always be knights in the family, and its status and title could be ensured.

However, all methods and insurances were fragile against the hands of fate. Her family was involved in the war against the heresy in the north, and most male members died on the battlefield. The female members then either married or remarried. In the end, only a very young Louise and her grandfather were left, so some remote relatives started coveting their wealth and title.

Failed to awaken her blood power, Louise had no choice but to step onto the road of magic. The sorcerer recruited and sheltered by her grandfather was her first teacher.

The amazing world of magic attracted her deeply. However, the it could not provide her with peace and safety. Day by day, she lived like a intimidated mouse, worried that someone would discover her secret. Until one day, she found out by accident that the famous musician, Silvia, was in fact the apprentice named White Honey that she knew. She was therefore inspired and started to also use her music talent to cover her secret identity of a magic apprentice.

Then, she inherited the wealth and the mysterious materials from her family, which she used to trade the silver moon magic potion from her teacher and became a formal sorcerer. To hide her spiritual power, she used almost all of her heritage and savings to exchange for the Holy Water and successfully awakened her blood power, which enabled her to control animals. She also became a quite famous musician because of her blood power.

However, she was still not satisfied with the situation. The fact that her own teacher was killed by the night watchers when exploring relics in the forests caused her to frequently awake from nightmares in the middle of the night. Terrified one day that the night watchers would show up in her room, she desperately studied and worked as a musician, hoping to become more and more famous so that one day she could get to know some major nobles and receive their protection.

"I'm not asking for too much. All I wanted is to study magic quietly in peace. It seems that such a simple wish could never granted." Each time when the past came to visit at midnight in her dream, she would lament like this.

Yet one day, when the arrival of a sorcerer called Professor opened the gate to a new world in front of her, she finally saw hope. The only pity was that she had to say goodbye to her beloved music and the Aalto Musician's Association.

"Miss Louise?"

The young sorcerer sitting in front of her woke her up from her memory.

Louise put on a soft smile and said, "Sorry, the amazing magic steam train triggered some memory of mine. Mr. Pan, please continue with the Allyn's Dumbest Ways to Die... It's very interesting, and enlightening as well."

Her voice was like a piece of smooth silk. Elegant and gentle, with a hint of melancholy, Louise was unique from most female sorcerers. There were, of course, female sorcerers who looked even more gorgeous than Louise, but the aesthetic air of a musician was hard to be ignored.

Klein, the young sorcerer whose black hair was combed back neatly, also grinned and said, "that's right. I could never imagine that there could be so many dumb things happening during experimentation, exploration, and everyday life. I gotta be careful. I don't want to become a joke between sorcerers after I died."

Mr. Pan carried the typical features of a Holmish and had a bright smile. "We're almost there. When you guys have settled down in Allyn, we can have dinner together. I've got more stories."

When Pan was speaking, he took a few shy glances at Louise.

On his opposite side sat Louise, Klein, Zapataro (Flame), and Ricardo (Hanger), who had been absent-minded all the way since he saw the city of Heidler — Some apprentices never leaved Aalto; some died on their way; and in the last, only the four of them, two sorcerers and two apprentices, successfully arrived at Sturk.

Hanger and Flame were actually not qualified for coming to Allyn, since Stuart would only send sorcerers and selected apprentices here. But they managed to be included in the trip by pretending as Philosopher's students..

"Almost there? I don't see it..." Louise looked out but saw no hint of a city.

Pan smiled and pointed up. "Allyn is above the clouds. You can't see it from here."

Louise nodded and turned back her eyes. After a second of hesitation, she asked with a slight smile, "Mr. Pan, may I ask you a question?"

"You're more than welcome, Louise. Also, you can just call me Pan." Pan secretly omitted the "Miss" when addressing Louise.

Louise asked, somehow a bit nervously, "Pan, do you know a sorcerer called Professor?"

Since Professor was on the Cleansing List, she assumed that he should be relatively well-known in Allyn.

Philosopher, Hanger, and the others all turned to look at Pan. Professor was the only sorcerer in the Congress that they knew of.

"I do know him. He's on the Cleansing List and is a member of the Will of Elements that I just mentioned. But most sorcerers have no idea who he really is, including me." Pan shook his head.

They all felt a bit disappointed, and Klein asked, "Did you ever guess who he is?"

Before Pan could answer, the apprentices burst out in exclamation.

Outside of the window, the rails went straight up into the air and the train speeded in midair. The green fields, forests, and cities underneath became smaller and smaller.

"It's a miracle of God..." Klein murmured. Influenced by the Church in Aalto for most of his life, Klein immediately had these three words jumped into his mind when he saw the train flying.

And when he saw the inverted, floating mountain peaks, the cloud-covered magic towers, the beautiful gardens, and the magnificent city of Allyn, Klein did feel that they were all made by a god.

Louise murmured dreamily, "this is... Allyn..."

After they filled out in the feedback form of the train, the sorcerers and apprentices got off. They headed for the headquarter in a coach under Pan's guidance.

Appreciating the scenery along the streets, impressed by the interesting and pleasantly-surprising alchemical items and assorted non-human races, they soon arrived at the Allyn Magic Tower, where they were greeted by Prospell.

Prospell, as usual, could not hold itself back when it saw a beauty.

Although Louise knew that some of the words to her used by Prospell were not that well-mannered, she did not really care. Instead, she was impressed by the fact that an alchemical life could be so lively, and could even seem a bit like a... pervert.

"When you guys reach senior-rank, you'll have your own magic tower. Then you can make alchemical lives yourself." Pan grinned while describing the beautiful future, although he was well aware of the fact that reaching the sixth circle was an unachievable dream for most low-rank sorcerers.

"Senior-rank..."

The apprentices and sorcerers knew what it meant — A much longer life, much more powerful spells, and even the chance of exchanging to a younger body.

Pan took a glance at Louise's white wolf, which was looking around curiously. "Louise, you can take your wolf to the Task Zone to apply to participate in some breeding experiments. I believe that those sorcerers who study blood power, transformation, and companion pets would love to accept your application, and you can also get precious arcana points from it."

Louise didn't expect that such things could be discussed publicly, and her face flushed slightly. "In Aalto... castration has to be done for these large animals, in case they become out of control from rutting..."

The white wolf buried its head into the front paws.

"What a pity. But you can still take a look at the task for regrowing mutilated limbs. It takes some time, but it will work in the end..." suggested Pan.

Then he turned to the rest of them. "Alright, we'll talk about it later. I'll first take the apprentices to the Apprentice Assessment Department, and then take the sorcerers to the Sorcerer Administrative Department."

"No problem," replied Klein, overwhelmed by the surroundings in this silver hall, the style of which was totally different from that of the Church of Truth and the noble's villas.

Louise was also looking around curiously like a fledgling. She took a few steps and caught fragments of words from two sorcerers walking past.

"... though Lucien Evans is indeed talented..."

Lucien Evans?

Louise abruptly turned around, wondering if she just had misheard it, but the surprised look on her companions' face told her that she did not.

Maybe it's just someone with a same name... They wondered and listened more carefully.

"... Ever since he joined the Congress of Magic, he never made a mistake in his magic and arcana achievements. I don't get it... Why he has to be so obsessed with the theory of light quantum? What a pity..."

"The next issues of Arcana and Magic is coming out. I heard that so far no accurate experiments have been carried out for supporting his hypothesis. Maybe we can start developing papers on analyzing the errors in his paper?"

"... Let's wait a bit longer... I'm afraid Lucien Evans's reputation is going to be ruined."

"... It's not that bad. Every grand arcanist has more or less made some mistakes. But I do dislike people who support the particle theory!"

...

It sounded that the Lucien Evans they were talking about was a senior-rank sorcerer, therefore, he must be quite old. Louise released a soft sigh, believing that it was just someone with the same name.

She turned to Pan, who was also listening to the discussion attentively, and asked casually, "Pan, is Mr. Lucien Evans very famous?"

"Mr. Evans is a genius! He has won three highest awards in different fields before reaching senior-rank!" Said Pan in the tone of sheer admiration and dissatisfaction.

"So he's a member of the board?" Klein recalled what Pan told him about the three boards.

Pan nodded, "He's the only one in Arcana Review Board who is at the fifth circle."

"He sounds like a legend." Louise smiled. She started getting curious.

Pan was about to say something, but suddenly his eyes fixed on something and he pointed at the gate. "Here comes Mr. Evans."

Louise, Klein, and the rest of them turned around and froze.

Surrounded by a group of young sorcerers was a young man of medium-height wearing a black, double-breasted suit. With his hands set in pockets, a black top hat on his head. and a piece of monocle on his left eye, the young man look even more elegant and handsome.

"Mr... E... Evans..." Louise's lips moved like she was in a dream.

He was the very great musician, the angel of music who had passed away, Lucien Evans!

He was just dressed in a different style!

Chapter 444: Draw on Advantages and Avoid Disadvantages

Klein's brain started buzzing... Pieces of memory flashed back, and they started joining together to form a whole picture:

Professor's arrival when Lucien Evans was being questioned... It was Professor who launched the attack in the Melzer Black Forest incident, but it was Lucien Evans who benefited from it the most... Professor's unexpected visit during midnight... The trap they set together for Clown... And, the death of the great musician, Lucien Evans!

Everything started making a lot of sense when they saw Lucien Evans, who had already become a member of the Arcana Review Board, standing in the middle of the headquarter hall of the Congress of Magic!

Klein was almost certain that Lucien Evans was the very profound Mr. Professor!

"Prof... Evans..." Klein shut his mouth up before more words came out. Fear seized him: Klein had no idea if Lucien Evans wanted to have anyone knowing who he truly was.

As a consul who had worked in Aalto for more than a decade, he knew how to be very careful, especially when facing someone powerful and of high status.

Hearing Louise's murmurs, Pan asked her quite surprisedly, "you know Mr. Evans?"

"Isn't he... dead?" Hanger Ricardo and Flame Zapataro exclaimed at the same time in a low voice.

Dead? They witnessed Mr. Evans's death? Pan knew that they came from Aalto, and he knew that in Aalto a famous musician named Lucien Evans passed away and a grand funeral was held for him. Pan started getting some clues...

Recalling their chat on the train, Pan also felt very shocked.

He knew Lucien Evans, the great musician, whose music pieces were extensively popular even in Holm and Allyn. Although Ode To Joy was a half-religious music piece, and it thus did not become as popular as Lucien Evans's other works in Allyn, Pan knew that many sorcerers in actually loved Ode To Joy very much personally, including himself. They would often sing it in private, more often than any other songs from operas.

Although the two Evans were close in age, Pan still could not relate the genius sorcerer who was obsessed with studying magic and making money by inventing new alchemical items to the elegant and talented musician whose piano performances could be called art themselves. Pan wondered if the newcomers had made a mistake.

Louise quickly shut her mouth as well, just like Klein. Any sorcerer that could survive in Aalto for these many years without converting to the Church as a spy would form the habit of being extremely careful.

At this time, Louise saw that the young genius' head tilted imperceptibly, then turned to face them completely. Lucien put on a tender smile and, after he said something to the young students around him, started walking towards them at a leisurely pace.

"Mr... Mr. Evans." Klein was the first one to respond. He bowed to Lucien Evans politely.

Before he bowed, Klein's eyes stopped on the three badges that Lucien was wearing on his left chest: The black one with six silver stars, the silver one with five black circles, and the one which was a hand holding a quill-pen. Klein had known what they meant from Pan.

Lucien smiled. "Finally, you are all here. It must have been a long journey."

They were all very surprised, as they never expected that he would just directly admit who he was!

"Thanks a lot for guiding us, Mr. Pro... Mr. Evans." Klein was the first to recover from the shock.

Lucien looked around and asked, "only the four of you?"

Louise finally calmed down a bit and said with a hint of fear, "we ran into great troubles several times on our way. The closer we got to Stuart, the more dangerous it became. I saw several apprentices killed by the night watchers and pastors."

"There are still people on their way. They have many concerns and couldn't set off as soon as we could." Klein added.

Unlike Louise, who knew the great magician, and Klein, who collaborated with the Professor, Hanger and Flame were not that familiar with Lucien. So they chose to remain silent and listen carefully.

"Mr. Evans, who is this?" Heidi took Annick and the rest of the apprentices to them out of curiosity.

Lucien pointed at Klein and Louise. "They are my friends from Aalto, and they are here to join the Congress."

Then Lucien introduced his apprentices to Lousie and Klein. "They are my students Annick, Heidi, Layria, Sprint, and Katrina. They are currently working for me in the Atom Institution, and are also temporarily living at my place."

Hearing Lucien calling all of them his students in front of his acquaintances, Heidi put on a big smile.

After greeting each other, Heidi asked curiously, "Louise, what did Mr. Evans do in Aalto? Every time I asked him, he would just smile but never reply."

Louise did not know what to do. She looked at Lucien awkwardly, her mouth slightly opened, and her hobby as a lady made her notice that Lucien was wearing three finely-designed rings.

"Mr- Mr. Evans, are you that great musician of Aalto?" Pan finally asked, as he could not resist the curiosity anymore. When he knew Lucien Evans passed away at such a young age, he also felt very sorry with deep sorrow that Lucien wouldn't be able to compose any more classic pieces of music which would be passed down through ages.

What? Deeply shocked, the apprentices wondered if there was something wrong with their ears! Annick was from Violet, and Heidi was from Syracuse. They both heard of the name before, but never thought that the two Evans was the same person!

"The great musician already died. I am now Lucien Evans, the Demon of Origin, as people call me," said Lucien half jokingly. Professor ranked the last one on the Cleansing List, and it was nothing comparable to the rank of his true identity. Also, it had been years since the experiment for synthesizing carbamide came out; revealing it right now would not do any harm to Lucien.

Pan took Lucien's words as confirmation. He glanced at Louise, and saw her nod slightly.

Pan exclaimed in great surprise, "it's really you, sir! I'm a big fan of your music! It's great knowing you're still alive! Are you by any means planning on holding a music concert in Allyn?"

Pan temporarily forgot that Lucien was a annoying supporter of the particle theory and the one put forward the hypothesis of light quantum.

"We'll see..." said Lucien.

Currently, Lucien had no plan on doing this at all. Right now he was not that eagerly pursuing money or wealth like he was in Aalto, and there was no lady in Allyn whose attention he wished to attract. So there was no point for him to do a concert.

"I'll be waiting for it!" Pan said excitedly, as Lucien Evans did not reject directly.

"Me too!" For the first time ever, Annick spoke out this loud.

When he was studying hard all alone in Violet, and when he was about to give up facing against the difficulties, it was the Symphony of Fate that gave him the power to proceed!

Layria, Heidi, and Katrina's face flushed lightly. When they were younger, the great musician Lucien Evans was the prince charming in their dreams. Although they had only seen him on the newspapers' blurry pictures, the beautiful music triggered endless fantasies. Yet the fact that the person they were dreaming about turned out to be their most respected teacher made them feel a bit strange and embarrassed. Fortunately, they never talked about the great musician in front of Lucien Evans.

"The Demon of Origin? Is that your new title?" Asked Louise, who relaxed a bit seeing Lucien was being very friendly and kind.

Heidi answered proudly, "although the title from the Church doesn't sound nice, it matches Mr. Evans' rank on the Cleansing List — No. 53!"

Fifty-third?! Klein, Louise, and the rest two felt that what they just heard was a myth. In the past half year, they had stopped keeping track of the Cleansing List as they had to run for their lives on their way to Allyn. They had no idea since when the Demon of Origin appeared on the list. Lucien Evans must have done something that could threaten the entire Church to get to this rank. If they remembered correctly, such a high rank was supposed to be only for the legends!

They thought Lucien Evans had revealed to them his biggest secret when they found out his true identity, but now they realized that this young man who was always wearing a tender smile was much more powerful and mysterious than they thought!

Lucien noticed that more and more sorcerers were slowing down their pace and started to gather around, so he said, "I'll let you guys go for registration right now. We can talk later."

Then an idea came up to Lucien, and he quickly asked, "Klein, Louise... I wonder if you're interested in doing a part-time job for me."

"Part time job?" Louise had no idea how she could be of help for the powerful Lucien Evans.

Lucien said briefly, "I'm preparing a program called Arcana Voice, for the purpose of creating some short music pieces for the farmers, the townspeople, and the general public. I hope you can help me here, Louise. It's hard to find sorcerers like you in Allyn who is both talented in music and currently has some free time."

Lucien would prefer classical music to heavy metal in his program.

Louise was a bit lost, as she did not understand what Arcana Voice was and what a program was. However, working with such an influential sorcerer and musician sounded not bad at all to her, as she could still stick to her hobby of music while studying magic.

So she nodded. "Sure."

"Mr. Klein, I know you were the consul of Aalto, so I suppose that you know some of the secrets of the Church and how their followers are living their life. I hope that you can run a program on this," said Lucien. "... The congress will pay, and the pay will be good."

Klein also nodded without hesitation. "My pleasure."

"Good. After registration, you two can wait for me in my office of the Arcana Review Board," said Lucien.

Then he walked to the elevator together with his apprentices and headed for the Atom Institution.

...

In a desolated graveyard in Heidler, the gray fog was rather condensed.

Adol, the spectre, stared at the magic towers at distance and said gloomily, "actions have to be taken to prevent the Congress of Magic from investigating further, or it would be just a matter of time for the gaps to be exposed."

The new spectre beside looked at him. "You seem to have a plan, Adol."

Adol nodded. "Did you read the latest Arcana? Lucien Evans has joined the war, and now he's under the attack from the supporters of the wave theory."

"So?" asked the new senior-rank spectre.

Adol's voice was dry and coarse. "I know it from Rogerio that Lucien Evans killed a Electromagnetics sorcerer who supported the wave theory after receiving a threatening letter from him. This is our chance. Those wave theory supporters must be furious if they know about this. If we fuel their anger properly, some of them will do things that can greatly infuriate Lucien Evans again. According to his temperament, Lucien Evans will again seek revenge for sure.

"... Then, those who support Lucien — say, Fernando, Hathaway, and Douglas — and those who are on the other side — Brook, Oliver, Hellen, Miranda, and most of the remaining arcanists — will fight against each other. The Congress of Magic will be caught in an unprecedented mess, and at that time, Heidler will be forgotten."

The new spectre's bones clapped. "Great idea."

Then the two spectres secretly returned to the magic tower.

At this time, in the desolated graveyard, several pieces of rotten flesh suddenly started wriggling on the ground like worms and disappeared in situ.

In a newly-built magic tower in Heidler, Felipe opened his hand and stared at the flesh worms on his palm. Very rarely, he looked a bit bewildered.

Although his study of arcana had come to a pause recently because of the limitation on the observation methods, Felipe had progressed some further in magic.

The World of Souls was not a peaceful place. Recalling the scarlet moon incident, Felipe stared at the entrance of the two demiplanes and wondered why Adol still wanted to trust and work with those from the World of Souls.

However, Felipe soon made his decision. He could not see any benefits but only promised danger in betraying the Congress for their suspicious partner, the World of Souls, especially since he was only a new senior-rank.

He quickly found some letter paper and murmured to himself,

"Lucien Evans is out of his mind! This is such a ridiculous hypothesis. I must write to him and teach him a lesson!"

Chapter 445: Legendary

In the garden villa, Lucien looked at the thick pile of letters and released a sigh. After checking them carefully with magic to ensure that they were safe, Lucien opened them and quickly browsed through.

"Felipe?" Lucien looked at the letter in his hand, feeling a bit confused. He had no idea why Felipe would write to him.

Was this for an academic discussion? As younger-generation arcanists that received high hopes, they were both deemed to be of the few that were most likely to become legendary sorcerers. They were certainly competitors, but they specialized in different fields — Element and Necromancy were two schools quite opposite to each other in some fundamental beliefs. Besides, also they collaborated in private once, they couldn't even be called friends and had never written to each other before. It was very unlikely that the proud Felipe would suddenly write to Lucien to discuss academic problems.

Was this another criticizing or threatening letter? Lucien did not think so either. Although as a necromancer, Felipe was, without doubt, a supporter of the wave theory, as Necromancy perceived the existence of the soul as something close to electromagnetic waves, he was too proud to do such filthy things. If he strongly disagreed with Lucien, Felipe would directly write to the journal and dispute in public.

"Something's fishy..." Lucien carefully checked the letter again, making sure there was no cursing, poisoning, or soul controlling magic on it. Then he even cast Horoscope and activated quite a few defense spells before finally opening the envelope.

It turned out to be just a common dispute letter, in a typical Felipe tone. There's nothing really special about it, even the evidence listed inside it lacked experimental support and contradicted with the classic electromagnetic theory. However, as Lucien read further, he started frowning.

There were simply too many spelling errors in this letter — almost thirty of them, in just a few pages. Although they were just tiny errors which did not hinder the understanding of the letter, Lucien still caught them because he was suspicious about this letter and read it scrupulously.

Lucien spontaneously picked up a quill-pen and started correcting the errors in red ink, which was a habit he formed from reading the apprentices' papers.

Lucien had only read Felipe's published journal articles, so he did not know if this was the very way that Felipe wrote his letters, but he did not think a person as proud as Felipe would send a letter full of spelling errors to his despised opponent. He seemed to be the kind of person who hated to lose face in front of an opponent

Suddenly, Lucien noticed something unusual. His heart squeezed for a second. However, he face looked the same calm, revealing nothing inside of his heart.

He stared at the misspelled words and replaced them with the right letters in his head.

And the right letters formed a few words:

"Spectres conspiracy... particle vs. wave... internal conflict... inform congress..."

Lucien caught some clues, but there were still four letters that he could not make use of.

Although Lucien had not figured out the full information, he had got enough for him to understand the situation: The spectres in the World of Souls were trying to trigger an internal conflict in the Congress utilizing the wave-particle debate war.

As for their purpose... Lucien believed that it was because of the Congress's investigation into Heidler.

Lucien rubbed his chin and thought to himself that this definitely meant something big. Felipe wanted him to inform the Congress, which was probably because Felipe had confidence in neither Lucien nor himself. Facing powerful sorcerers, say, Thanatos and the Demigod-lich, senior-rank sorcerers really had nothing much to do here. The difference between could not be compensated by wisdom and strategy. Meanwhile, Lucien also wondered why Felipe would trust him. What if he was working with the World of Souls as well?

Lucien put the letter back into its envelope and threw it aside. Pacing back and forth in his study, Lucien began to think about how to make the best use of the letter and reveal the deal between the Hand of Paleness and the World of Souls.

Walking to the bookshelf, Lucien took a random glance at the books. Just as he was about to turn around, he noticed the row of language books including ancient Sylvanasian, the common tongue, ancient Meshkatish, elf tongue, devil tongue, demon tongue...

The brilliant moment came; Lucien realized that the meaning of Felipe's last four letters may not be that complicated.

"This letter is the second alphabet of the common tongue; this is the 23rd; this is 11; this is six... so, it's 223, 116." Using the mind of an Astrology sorcerer, Lucien immediately recognized that it was a coordinate pair!

It corresponded to a location within the city of Heidler... It's the entrance of the gap connecting to the World of Souls!

Lucien's plan started coming into shape:

He was going to use the Hand of Paleness to make the Congress find clues about the World of Souls. In this case, he would be safe, as he could directly submit the letter to the Congress and appear as someone who knew nothing else other than the letter. So even if the Congress decided to silence someone, it would not be him.

Meanwhile, he had an even bigger plan in his mind: He was going to expose the dangerous plotters in the Hand of Paleness together with the spectres, so the Hand of Paleness would fall into complete chaos. The Congress could thus seize the chance and incorporate the Hand of Paleness into its system, hence preventing further threats once and for all.

...

Possessing a somber air, the grey gravestones planted on the barren plain looked both lonely and miserable.

In a giant mausoleum, "Thanatos" Vicente Miranda was floating in midair, attempting to turn the powerful golden dragon in front of him into a puppet lich.

He had no flesh; only a thin layer of pale skin covered his the bones. The dark-red cluster of flame in the two eye sockets flickered, and the deadly wind traveling across the plains suddenly came to a stop, so did the legendary-level spell he was casting.

The golden dragon howled in agony and was about to seize the chance to take off and escape!

The Miranda Twelve Life Circles magic circles burst out bright light one by one and restrained the powerful creature within.

Seeing that it could not escape, great determination rose in the dragon's golden pupils, and its body started inflating quickly.

Bang!

The power of its explosion was so great that the entire mausoleum seemed to be struck by a horrible earthquake! From above fell down the stone pillars, the vault, the walls... and everything.

When stone and dust settled, what was left of Vicente Miranda was only a skull head. Vicente was now quite pissed and even more gloomy, as it had taken him lots of effort to capture a golden dragon close to the legendary level.

However, he soon calmed down and flew back to the main hall of the mausoleum. Landing on a giant black coffin, he illumined the vault, and countless stars lit up.

A moment ago, when he was dealing with the dragon, he suddenly had a great sense of danger and thus became distracted. As a result, he was almost backfired by his spell. Although the backfiring turned out to be more startling than dangerous, he still lost the dragon and his body as a cost.

When one reached the legendary level, no matter whether the sorcerer was good at Astrology or not, he or she would purposefully pay great attention to make up for it. Even if the power of Astrology conflicted with their body constitution or soul, a legendary level sorcerer would still try to find a same-level astrological magic item for compensation. Otherwise, a legendary sorcerer who specialized in Astrology could become their most dreadful enemy at any time!

The power that Astrology could give became one of the prominent advantages for being a sorcerer over being a caster or a knight. Unless their talent includes prophecy-like powers or they possess similar legendary items, a knight or a caster could only rely on intuition to predict danger within a small range, but would be completely blind when facing the unknown hiding threats in the broader sense.

Vicente Miranda's spiritual power was not in conflict with Astrology. Therefore, although he did not study Astrology in depth, what he knew were enough for him to use and actually greatly surpasses that of the other legendary sorcerers who did not have the title of grand arcanist.

Against the black vault, the tracks of the stars was rather clear. The remaining skull head of Vicente bobbed in the air, and soon figured out the result:

"Storm... Tumult... Fernando... Destructive strike..."

The two flames in the skull flickered several times, and then Vicente said to the darkness,

"Congus, Rogerio, Demartes, Adol... Come and see me."

The lid of the black coffin opened fiercely. A giant corpse surrounded with black smog sprang up. In the smog, countless layers of bodies made up the giant corpse. Those were all bodies of intelligent creatures — human beings, elves, dwarves, demons...

The huge corpse which was as tall as half a mountain possessed an extremely dangerous air, as if it could absorb all life power. Vicente's skull landed on top of it, like a pale crown.

The corpse's eyes suddenly opened wide, and two clusters of dark-red flame lit up in the eye sockets.

Only silence and darkness were left in this space.

...

On the thirty-third floor of the headquarter of the Congress.

"Sir, I received a letter from Felipe," said Lucien straightforwardly to Fernando, who was strolling back and forth in his study.

"What letter?" Fernando asked with a strange look that was both serious and confused.

"He used a secret message in the letter, telling me that the Hand of Paleness has made an agreement with the spectres in the mysterious black and white space. They are going to stir internal conflict within the Congress using the debate war over the particle and wave theory to gain benefits. Felipe worried that the mysterious space could go out of control. Thus, he's on the Congress's side and told me the coordinate pair for the entrance of the space." Lucien spoke briefly and clearly, but purposefully described the Hand of Paleness as the initiator.

Fernando nodded slightly. There was a hint of anger in his voice. "So that's why..."

"What is it, sir?" Lucien was quite surprised by Fernando's response. From what Lucien knew about his teacher, Fernando was supposed to be beyond furious right now.

Fernando looked out of the window and said in a low voice, "five minutes earlier before you arrived, Vicente came with Congus and the others. He asked to call for the Highest Council meeting."

"What?" Lucien had no clue what was going on.

Fernando snorted. "Vicente has caught all the spectres in the Hand of Paleness that came from the mysterious space, and put all the blame on Congus, Rogerio, and the others, claiming that they misled him. He then confessed all the secrets in the World of Souls, and told me that it is a space full of great dangers, so we have to take time to explore it."

"... What about Mr. Congus? What did he say?" Lucien could not believe what just happened. He had arrived here as quickly as possible after reading the letter. How could so many things happen within such a short period of time? Had they caught Felipe?

Fernando shook his head. "Congus and his people took all the blame, but they denied doing any damage to the Congress. Hiding some secrets itself won't bring them any severe punishment. The next step is to investigate those spectres..."

Fernando paused a bit, and then cast a glance at Lucien,

"If you don't know how to cover yourself using Astrology, don't ever plan on turning against a legendary sorcerer again, especially when you are trying to pose a threat to their life."

Chapter 446: Result of the Investigation

Lucien's mind became blank for a second, and then he finally figured out what Fernando was indicating.

"Sir... are you saying that Vincente sensed what I was plotting? Even it was just a thought?!"

That was too much for Lucien.

So far, Lucien had gained access to most materials under legendary level in the Advanced Arcana Library, but his knowledge of the legendary was still limited to what was in the book Astrology and Elements — the promotion of two legendary classes and the construction of the corresponding legendary magic spells. Lucien did hear more from Fernando, however, they were just pieces of information. He had no concrete knowledge that could form a complete picture of the legendaries at all.

Therefore, Lucien was very surprised with Vincente's god-like omniscience. Although he did realize Baron Habearo's conspiracy using Horoscope before, at that time, Baron Habearo had already started taking actions and they were in the same castle. This time, Lucien had just used ten minutes on conceiving the plan and hadn't even had the chance to discuss with Fernando. However, Thanatos had sensed the upcoming danger and made the faster move.

Fernando said with a serious face, "reaching the legendary level brings qualitative change to life. When the War of Dawn just began, in the Church's description, a legendary was equal to a demigod. If your plan would really work and threaten Vicente's life, the tiny deviation in his track of destiny would be amplified in his cognitive world into a very strong warning."

Fernando paused a bit here, thinking of some possible examples to make Lucien treat this more seriously.

"When you were trying to save the Observer, when you were planning on distracting Dracula, did you ever think about killing him? Did you ever had a plan that could result in his death?" Asked Fernando.

"No," Lucien answered. From the beginning, his very and only aim was to save Rhine, which had nothing to do with Dracula the Vampire Prince. If Dracula had not gotten in his way, Lucien would have stayed away from him as far as he could, and Natasha would not have had to take such a great risk.

Lucien could never kill a legendary like Dracula on his own, unless he had more legendaries on his side. He even rejected Natasha's proposal for using Sard to kill the vampire prince.

Thinking of this, Lucien finally realized why Rhine made the entire plan like this way — It was not until the God of Silver Moon and the mysterious existence from the World of Souls started fighting did Lucien realize what he was truly facing.

From the Sphinx Mausoleum to the underground palace of the Sun King to the altar of the Kuo-toans, Lucien only knew that he had to help Rhine break free from the trap so the World of Souls could become less of a threat. Rhine never told him the entire story. Obviously, Rhine was trying to keep Lucien safe from activating the mysterious existence in the World of Souls' sense of danger. Fortunately, since Its power had not fully recovered yet, they managed to get by.

Lucien then recalled more: The King of Nightmare found the complicated math problem deep in Lucien's brain due to his own actions; The King of Sphinx, when Lucien faced It, had not fully wakened up from Its thousands of years of sleep; For Sard, Lucien was just using his hands to kill Clown, but never thought of harming him; And for the other legendaries, including his teacher and the president, Lucien was always being very careful and constantly foreshadowing when he put forward those subversive papers.

Seeing the thoughtful look on Lucien's face, Fernando knew that his purpose had been achieved. "So, if there's a next time, do not draw any plan on your own. Come to me directly."

As if he were not fully assured, Fernando added. "But submitting a subversive paper is different. It has to be reviewed first, and sufficient cushioning is always necessary."

In Fernando's eyes, his student, Lucien Evans, was someone who could throw at people head-exploding papers at any time.

"Legendaries can't sense the danger brought by subversive papers?" Lucien was confused again. This was different from what he thought.

Fernando's red eyes gazed at Lucien. "A half-solidified cognitive world, its fusion with the soul between the unreal and real, and its interaction with the reality and the star sky of destiny... These are what will happen to a sorcerer when reaching the legendary level. These, together with the inverted image of Host Star of Destiny and the legendary level Astrology knowledge, are the sources of a legendary's ability of knowing approaching dangers. If a subversive paper could cause danger to a legendary, the paper must be in conflict with his cognitive world. In other words, his cognitive world does not accept this result, and will thus not regard it as a threat. Therefore, it can not be sensed."

"I see..." Lucien finally understood it to some degree, and then he asked worriedly, "then... will Thanatos know that it was me? What about Felipe?"

Being the enemy of a grand arcanist was even worse than turning against a legendary, because a grand arcanist had countless secret ways to take away one's life, not to mention that Thanatos was a grand arcanist specializing in Necromancy, cursing, and life conversion.

Fernando grinned. "Idiot. You forgot you are 'the Secretive'? Very possibly, the result of Vicente's Horoscope fell on me. This actually makes more sense, as in consideration of the close relationship between you and me, your plan will most likely be carried out by me. So, no worries, if Vicente can't trace to you, he can't trace to Felipe."

That diverged quite a lot from the truth... Lucien nodded, but in the next second, he started worrying again, "But Sir... Thanatos will resent you for this."

"So? Do I look afraid?" Fernando's eyes opened big. "... Alright, you may go now. I need to attend the Highest Council Meeting discussing this, and then investigate the spectres from the world of black and white."

"I wonder what's their plot..." said Lucien curiously, wishing to know if he had become one of their targets, as he had killed one dumb senior-rank spectre in the cave of the dwarf relic.

Fernando's scowled. "If you should know, you will know. But I don't think we'll be able to get anything valuable — The spectres were sent by Vicente, and the memory left in the him mind must have been modified by him. What we could see will be what he wants us to see."

Lucien suddenly recalled that Vicente Miranda was also the top expert in brain and soul memory. Only those mind-playing-fancying octopuses living in the Dark Mountain Range could be a possible match to him. Thanatos was especially good at intruding the mind and browsing memories, and even modifying and deleting them.

Fernando and Douglas could tell which part of memory was fake, but they would not know which part was missing.

.....

Sitting in his office, Lucien was reading the selected investigation result sent to him by Fernando.

The spectres were trying to cause an internal conflict in the Congress using Lucien. If Felipe had not sent the message, it would have turned into big trouble.

Without Felipe's betrayal, Lucien would not have had the plan; without his plan, Thanatos would not have sensed the danger, and then the Hand of Paleness's plan might have worked. In this case, Lucien would become the one in the biggest trouble.

However, Lucien was also much safer now because of what happened. Anyone who dared to use Lucien's hypothesis as the excuse to trigger any controversy would be regarded as a suspect or even a spy by the Congress.

"They knew more about the World of Souls than I do, and they are well aware of the great danger in the deep. The scenes retrieved from the memory of the spectre named Adol about the deepest place of that world shocked all the members from the Highest Council..."

Lucien could not access the information about what they saw, but Fernando made it clear what actions the Congress was going to take: They had decided to develop new magic spells for detecting the gap entrances of the World of Souls by tracing the memories and features of senior-rank spectres that they collected from the investigation. They would build stations close to those entrances and then take their time to explore further. Only until they located the new world which the God of Silver Moon and the mysterious existence from the World of Souls fell in, found the power pieces of the Gods, and gained results from researching them would they go deeper into the World of Souls.

It seemed that Thanatos was not yet completely on the World of Souls's side as he was not planning on luring the legendary sorcerers into the deepest. However, nothing about Mr. Maskelyne and Mr. Rhine being trapped in the deep part of the World of Souls was mentioned, which made Lucien wonder if it was because Adol did not have the access right to knowing it.

Lucien had been about to, when the Congress found out that Rhine was trapped by Dracula in the World of Souls, play innocent in front of Fernando. Now, there was no need for this.

The rest of the investigation result amused Lucien: Several conflicts within the Hand of Paleness were purposefully caused by the spectres from the World of Souls.

Lucien could imagine how furious Thanatos was after knowing this, but the good thing was that Thanatos would now be aware that the spectres also had some evil intents towards the Hand of Paleness.

Lucien was more assured now, knowing that the Congress had known what they were facing.

After Lucien finished reading the report, a small cluster of fire lit up above his fingertips. The parchment was burnt into ashes and then flushed down the pipes.

Standing up, Lucien was about to leave Atom Institution when Lazar also walked out.

"You stay here late, Lucien." Lazar took a curious glance at Lucien from head to toe. "... Can't relate you to a great musician. Totally can't. I thought you only know magic and arcana! I know several music pieces of yours are quite romantic... say, To Silvia, and Moonlight! Why are you still here? Some of your music lovers must be waiting to visit you at your home. I'm sure some noble ladies from Rentato are looking forward to meeting you in person!"

"This's why I'm still here." Lucien rubbed his forehead.

Lazar made an exaggerated sigh. "What a waste!"

Then he put on a funny look and asked, "so what about the rumors... You and the princess of Violet are in love? Is that why you're not interested in those beautiful ladies?"

Lucien never expected that Lazar could be this gossipy. But facing the question, Lucien also did not want to deny, so he chose to remain silent.

Lazar understood, and made a prolonged "Ohh".

"One in the east, and one in the west. One in the Congress, and one in the City of Psalm... Difficult, I must say, brother. You keep the hard work and become a legendary as soon as possible. Then you can lead the Congress to defeat the Church and go all the way to the City of Psalm. Then you have the Princess!" Lazar kept talking as they walked out together.

When they walked into the elevator, Lucien saw Felipe standing in front of them, wearing a black long coat.

"For the new arcana badge. That's why I'm here." Felipe's adjusted the level-six arcana badge in front of his chest a bit. His face was cold without the slightest hint of smile.

Since the Influence Factor was applied, Felipe had gained much more credits.

Lucien suspected that Felipe was waiting here specially for him. Obviously, Felipe had not fully calmed down from what happened a few days ago.

Lucien laughed knowingly. "It's a bit disappointing seeing you're still alive."

Felipe snorted, although in his mind he was now much more relieved. Soon after he sent the message, Thanatos suddenly took a series of actions. It posed beyond great pressure on his nerves and made him feel like that he was a cornered beast. Luckily, he always had a strong mindset so he stopped himself from jumping out in front of Thanatos.

"I'm working on developing a new magic spell for amplification. If things work well, maybe three or four years later, we'll have a much better version of it. A senior-rank version," said Lucien, looking straight ahead.

Felipe's eyes slightly looked aside, and his hands in the pockets clenched tightly. "What are you trying to imply?"

"I'm preparing a programme. I hope you can come to be my guest host." Lucien had a mischievous smile on his face. Lucien did not want to owe Felipe anything and he did not wish to make friend with Felipe at all. Lucien hoped that he could pay Felipe back as soon as possible, so he could call it even.

Felipe did not quite understand. "Programme? Guest host?"

"You'll see," Lucien answered mysteriously.

Then he walked out of the elevator with Lazar and stepped into the main hall.

Chapter 447: Arcana Voice

In the year 823 of the Saint Calendar, at the end of the Month of Dormancy (February), in the district of Sardni in Rentato.

The district of Sardni was originally a small fishing village where the fishermen and merchants selling Storm Strait fishes resided. Then the district thrived because of the development of the related industries of producing, sorting, and selling preserved fish products and the close relationship between the Kingdom of Holm and the Congress of Magic. During the second expansion of Rentato, the district was included in and named after the local bream called Sardni.

However, as magic stream trains between Patray harbor and Rentato started gaining their popularity, wealthy merchants had gradually took control of the local fishing industry using fresh goods and low prices. The monopoly put the local small shops and markets out of business. Some local fishermen gave up what they had done for decades; some were now working for the major merchants; some landed in the miserable situation of being unemployed.

Fortunately, the promotion of all kinds of alchemical items saved the unemployed. The newly-built alchemical workshops accepted them and, within just several years, Sardni turned into a half-fishing, half-alchemical district.

In the dark night, dim candlelight came out from the windows of the poor houses and shanties along the street where magic crystal lights were still unaffordable. However, the street lamps connected by the spiderweb-like electric wires were warm and bright. The light produced by the lamps intertwined with the darkness of the night.

"Shame on you!"

A teenager around fourteen or fifteen spat on the ground, staring at the young couple snuggling in the darkness behind a lamp.

Although due to the conservative style of the Kingdom of Holm, the couple was simply hugging and whispering to each other, and never did anything else too intimate like kissing or caressing, there was still strong envy and longing in the teenager's eyes.

"Andy! Stop looking! It's starting soon!"

A low voice came from behind the nearby trees along the street.

Startled, Andy hurriedly turned around and saw his three friends' head sticking out behind a thick tree with great caution.

"What? It's starting..." The look on Andy's face suddenly changed. He looked both nervous and excited. It seemed that they were doing something dangerous but thrilling.

He carefully approached the tree and grumbled. "William, Mickey, Martin... Why don't you come earlier?"

The brown-haired Martin giggled. "How dare we interrupt you? You're definitely peeping someone dating."

"Yup," the blond William cleared his throat, "... Spring has come, and creatures start getting restless, including Andy, who's already in heat..."

"You wanna try this?!" Andy was pissed off, his hand clenching into a fist. Embarrassment filled up in his blue eyes.

"Shh!" Micky, the shortest one among them all, hurriedly pressed down Andy's hand.

Andy took a deep breath and sealed his mouth. He pointed to the direction where they were about to go.

"Let's go, or we'll miss Miss Nightingale's song at the beginning," said William yearningly.

Martin put on a look of disdain. "William is in heat as well."

Giggling, the young lads secretly sneaked into the darkness and moved forward stealthily.

As they turned around the corners and traversed the trees, their voice quieted down and their breath became heavy.

They came in front of the row of low houses in a quiet corner of Sardni, and headed towards the two-story to the end.

Pulling up the collar until it covered half of his face, Andy knocked six times at the pace of two short and three long.

The door opened silently. A middle-aged man looked around in great alert, and eyed the boys to come in.

Andy, Martin, Micky, and William knew this place well and they did not need any guidance. The living room was already filled with people, a lot of people. In a circle, some were standing, some were sitting. All the curtains were drawn close; only a candlestick lit up the room with its flickering light, which seemed quite vulnerable. The atmosphere was ideal for telling a horror folktale and for one to take place.

Among the people, there were adult males and females, kids, seniors, teenage "in-heat" boys like Andy, and several blooming adolescent girls.

Exchanging a look, the boys thrust their way forward into the crowd and finally came beside the teenage girls after the great effort.

One of the boys grinned a bit shyly. "Scarlet, Selma... Good to see you two here."

The blonde girl gave him a stare and put her finger on her lips. "Shh... Quiet. It's gonna start."

Hearing that, the boys instantly quivered. They temporarily put aside the attempt to get close to the girls, but started waiting patiently and expectantly.

The owner of the house, the middle-aged, serious-looking man in an old white shirt, came to the center and started fiddling with the strange box the size of a head.

The grey box was engraved with mysterious patterns, on which there was a row of black buttons and two knobs. There were also two metal sticks on top of it that looked like ram's horns. They were of half-meter long and also had weird patterns and symbols.

No one talked when the man was working on the box. No matter men or women, young or old, no one spoke a single word. They held their breath, as devout as praying in the church. To them, the box was divine.

Hiss... The familiar electric current noise came.

People in the room instantly sat up or stood up straight.

From the box came a female voice that sounded far from them and wasn't very clear. But with the man's patient calibration, the quality started getting much better:

"Good evening, everyone, this is FM 592.6M, welcome to Arcana Voice. Now it's ten at night in Allyn and I'm your friend, Nightingale. Glad to have you in the next four hours, my friends."

The sweet female voice tickled the boys' hearts, making them wonder how beautiful Miss Nightingale must be.

"So the first section of today: General Knowledge in Everyday Life. I'll introduce you to a healthier and wiser lifestyle and help you stay away from all the possible traps in your life.

"... In recent months, in Rentato, as well as other cities in Holm, many illegal merchants are selling 'radioactive' toothpaste and body shampoos, claiming that those products are more fashionable, work better, and can help bring us longevity. Is that true?

"To find out the truth, let's start from the paper written by Mr. Lucien Evans, the member of Arcana Review Board, senior-rank arcanist, the three-time winner of Holm Crown prize, winner of the Immortal Throne, Arcana Scepter, and Ice & Snow Medal. Mr. Lucien Evans wrote the paper titled A New Element Which Emits Electron Currents and Two Other Rays three years ago, but it was not until five months ago did he publish it. It was also the very paper that won him the Ice & Snow Medal. In this paper, he coined the term 'natural radioactivity'. He believes that some elements with unstable structures might emit new elements and electron currents."

"Selma, did you hear it?! Mr. Evans is not only the composer of our favorite music pieces in the Music Gallery, but also a great scholar who has won so many awards! You know the great musician in Aalto? They have the same name!" Exclaimed Scarlet full of admiration.

After listening to the programme for over a year, Scarlet was aware of the value of the awards mentioned. And she was not the only one who felt beyond impressed in the living room. Gasps of admiration and praises filled the space.

Andy, however, held an ambivalent attitude towards this Lucien Evans. He did admire Lucien Evans's talent, but Scarlet was the girl he liked.

People in the living room knew what Miss Nightingale was talking about, as it had been several months that they lived under those merchants' constant promotion. Using the merchants' words, those 'radioactive' toothpaste could effectively remove the stains on their teeth and make their teeth white again, and the new elements contained in the toothpaste could keep them fit and healthy. According to the merchants, many nobles had started using the new toothpaste.

"... To seek for the truth, we have talked to Mr. Evans, who made a thorough explanation for the term, 'natural radioactivity'. According to Mr. Evans, while emitting new elements and electron currents, these ingredients also release 'curses', which can make your hair and teeth fall as well as weaken your body and disrupt your blood circulation. The new elements and electron currents emitted will also do severe damage to your body." said the sweet voice.

The listeners were shocked and terrified.

"... This kind of damage is not only limited within you. Newborn babies can suffer from malformation because of the radioactive substance. So please, everyone, DO NOT buy those products sold by those dishonest and mercenary people. DO NOT buy them simply because many are using them"

Miss Nightingale paused a bit and then made the conclusion. "Using Mr. Evans' words: While the Saint Truth corrupts your entire life; Radiation corrupts three generations in your family!"

The listeners were scared and shocked, but they also felt lucky that Arcana Voice had told them the truth. Their mind was completely occupied by the idea that they had to throw away the toothpaste as soon as they went back home, so they were not in the mood to object to the religious part in Lucien Evans' comment.

Suddenly, Scarlet whimpered. "I've been using it for a month... What if... "

Miss Nightingale continued. "To relieve our listeners, the good news is that since the added dosage in the toothpaste and shampoos is very small, if there is any, once you stop using it, no sequela will be left."

The listeners in the living room all released a sigh of great relief!

"After the wonderful melody, Mr. Philosopher will bring us the 'Unravel' section. Based on his thirty-eight-year experience as a consul, Mr. Philosopher will tell us stories about those pastors and cardinals he used to interact with, showing us that underneath their sacred aura, they do have their own feelings and desires, just like every human being." introduced Miss Nightingale.

"Wow! Affair with nuns again?" Andy got excited.

A brawny guy whose arm was as thick as Andy's thigh looked back at him and joked. "Maybe it's with boys like you."

Before Andy could refute, the strange box called radio started playing a peaceful, relaxing melody.

"Mr. Evans's light music, City in the Sky," said Scarlet in a very low voice, afraid that she might interrupt the wonderful music.

After the following few sections Unravel, Approaching Arcana, and the Magic Room, Nightingale's sweet voice came back again, "Next section is Body Secret, and I know it's the part loved by many of our listeners. Tonight, we are lucky to still have the authority in the study of the human body, Mr. Felipe, to be our guest speaker."

"I like Mr. Felipe. He's cold, but I like it!" Selma beamed with joy.

"Hello, Mr. Felipe."

"Good evening, Nightingale."

"As it is known to all, the human body starts to develop fast at the age around twelve, and great changes ensue. This stage of life can bring great bothers to many teenage boys and girls. So, Mr. Felipe, I wonder if you can talk more in details about the changes and make them understand that these are just natural changes and there's nothing to worry about."

"..."

"Mr. Felipe?"

"..."

"Mr. Felipe... Sir! Please calm down..."

Chapter 448: "Truth of the World"

The listeners exchanged looks between each other, having no clue what was going on. Pauses did happen in the past when there were 'technique issues' or mistakes made by the hosts, but tonight was different.

The owner of the house who was in charge of the radio was a magic apprentice sent by the Congress of Magic, responsible for promoting radios and taking in listeners, and now the corner of his lips on his serious-looking face curled up slightly, as he knew what was going on: Obviously, the director of the programme never told Mr. Felipe in advance that he would be asked to talk about pubertal development. Cold and short-tempered as Mr. Felipe, it was no wonder that he would react like this.

Hiss... the electric current noise cut off the programme. Before the middle-aged man decided to tune the radio again, Nightingale's sweet voice returned,

"Sorry, my friends, our sincere apologies. Our guest speaker, Mr. Felipe, has left because of his personal emergency. We'll have Mr. Ricardo continue with the topic. Mr. Ricardo is also an expert arcanist specializing in studying the human body..."

The voice was the same pleasant to ear but now there was a slight hint of fear.

"... Mr. Felipe has left..." Scarlet sighed and felt very disappointed. She really liked Felipe's low and charming voice, especially his tone which carried the just right amount of arrogance.

Her friend, the pretty and petite Selma, shared her feeling, but she soon realized what just happened. "Mr. Felipe doesn't like the topic! No wonder he remained silent and left!"

Then she covered her cheeks with both hands and said in both curiosity and excitement, "... But it must be so cute if Mr. Felipe took the topic! I bet his face would flush! Oh my... He's so adorable just leaving like this! So cold and proud!"

The middle-aged house owner's face twitched a bit when hearing the teenage girl's words. He could not help wondering how Mr. Felipe would respond if he had heard the comments. They would probably disturb him more than the puberty topic.

After her excitement calmed down, Selma was suddenly struck by a thought. "What if Mr. Felipe never comes back in the future?"

"I think he will be back... Don't know for sure... But next time the topic's gonna be different," said Scarlet.

Meanwhile, their eyes flashing, Andy and the rest of the teenage boys had been fully absorbed in the topic. Tonight's topic had answered a lot of questions in their mind which they dared not to speak out. And when it came to how a girl's body would change during puberty, imagination seized them.

"... That's too much!" Scarlet covered her ears and moved closer to the other girls, as if she did not want to listen to it. However, her hands were not covering her ears tight at all.

The rest of the girls who were elder finally realized what the changes were and why they took place. When they went through the changes, the girls were scared and very nervous, having no idea what was going on, and it was not until today did they finally figure out and get to know how to take better care of themselves.

The married aunties took a step forward to shield the young girls. They glared at those men and scolded,

"Hold your eyes back! Go back and look at your wife and mother!"

So those men in the house looked away. Many of them then thought to themselves that extra care should be given to their women just like what the arcanist had just said, as every month's suffering could be this bad...

After the section of Body Secret, followed a voice full of passion,

"Apollo magic crystal light! Hold light in your own hand! Have electric wires set to your place now and receive six months of free electricity! What are you waiting for? Grab your wallet and apply!

Visit local town halls, branches of Gift from Elements, and Holm Mineral Union Bank for more information!"

Because of today's topic of Body Secret, people in the room today were not as tense as usual. Although they still dared not to talk aloud, the look on their faces was quite relaxed. While the ladies were sitting together, whispering, the teenage boys were also chatting and taking glances at the girls from time to time secretly.

"Jinkela, Jinkela, the best formula! Make your harvest spectacular!"

After several ads, Nightingale's beautiful voice came back,

"Now let's have Music Gallery take the lead for introducing the second half of tonight's programme. Relax in the wonderful melody and put aside all your exhaustion and tediousness from the day. Tonight we have Mr. Evans's latest piano opusculum, Free Mind, a piece of light music but with mild passion."

As Arcana Voice started to be known to more sorcerers and nobles, Lucien's music talent was also revealed. Thus, he put forward his principle for choosing and composing music: Get closer to citizens, to farmers, and to all the ordinary people; From the grand, structural symphony pieces, develop more light music pieces which were simple, romantic, short, but still beautiful.

He composed many pieces of light music by himself, and also copied some from the masterpieces of Earth, including Castle in the Sky. The public's response was mixed, but those who were close to Lucien and knew his "great musician" identity understood the situation, as it took time for the transition in styles.

Now it had been three years, and the quality of Lucien's own light music pieces had become much better. They had gained wide popularity among common citizens and young nobles who fancied romance. The fine teahouses along the streets had started to play these music pieces to create a romantic and elegant atmosphere to attract guests, and it turned out to be quite useful.

"A new piece from Mr. Evans?" Scarlet said excitedly, her fingers crossed together against her chin.

All the listeners stopped chatting. They were common citizens, and rarely did they have the chance of visiting a concert hall to listen to music played by a real musician, but now Arcana Voice offered them this precious enjoyment. Although they did not know much about music, they were aware of the heartfelt appreciation in their mind when they first heard the light music pieces.

The melody was wonderful and refreshing. The keys jumping like little fairies pulled the listeners into a quiet and peaceful realm surrounded by nothing but mountains and trees, where birds presented their soft chirping and the stream played its crispy splashing.

The listener's mind was washed and cured, as they were in the gentle and soft embrace of mother nature, where both their body and soul could take a rest.

Leaves and branches revealed the traces of wind. The wind was free, free to travel to wherever it wanted. The wind made these people who had suffered in their lives and were restrained by their religious belief felt that they have this ticklish feeling in their hearts, that their hearts were covered with a layer of dust, so the hearts could not go with the wind freely. But yet they had not realized what exactly this layer of dust on their mind was.

The free wind gradually faded, yet the sweet aura created by Free Mind was still lingering.

"Beautiful...!" Scarlet murmured as if she was still in the dream.

Too excited to say a word, Selma simply nodded hard.

"After Free Mind, let's listen to the light music piece, Streamside, composed by Miss... Louise." Nightingale introduced.

When mentioning the name, Nightingale paused a bit.

Music had relaxed the listeners' spirit greatly, and now their peaceful mind was open to almost everything.

The silvery voice said to the listeners,

"Now, welcome to our section, the Voice of History. Today, our young historian Mr. Pande will unravel some of the secrets in the War of Dawn and the unknown facts about the Inquisition."

"I do have a book compiled by the Church here, called Hunting Sorcerer, and I do believe that the lines in the book are reliable," said Pande in his piercing voice, "... If a person lives alone and rarely talks to other people, he or she is a sorcerer, without doubt; If a person often shows up on parties and is outgoing and cheerful, then obviously, he or she is just pretending to avoid suspicion..."

The listeners' faces turned pale as Pande was talking.

It's so scary! The Church was suspicious of everything!

As the listeners of Arcana Voice, they could never be enough careful! Otherwise, if the Church knew — No! — if they suspect about this, then...

"Alright, I know the history might be quite heavy, so here comes our most favored section, the Thousand and One Nights! Previously, Harry, the poor boy from the slum, finally arrived at the amazing magic school of Pesancho, and then a series of interesting stories followed..."

Listening to the story, Andy said to his friends, "A poor lad can become a sorcerer. What about us...?"

The cheerful story made them long for the life in a magic school.

The adults were also very impressed. "Those sorcerers are living an even better life than the nobles! They are enjoying food from all over the world, and the cheap, practical alchemical items have made their life much easier and pleasant..."

Their hearts were full of admiration, and they had also learned a lot. Their horizons had been greatly broadened. If any upstart merchant dared to show off his knowledge in front of them, heh, after listening to Arcana Voice, they were not that easy to be fooled!

"... You see? Transformation, Illusion, and Necromancy are not as dark and horrible as you think..." said a listener in low voice.

Some sections in Arcana Voice aimed at eliminating people's fear and hate towards magic caused by ignorance.

"Knowing brings understanding; Communicating connects the world" — this was one of Arcana Voice's tenets.

A fruity voice boomed out from the box. "Welcome to Man and Nature... On the savannah in the south, the rainy season has just passed..."

...

In the middle of the Boundless Ocean, in the Solar Islands branch of the Congress of Magic.

A young sorcerer couldn't help but laughed when hearing Nightingale asking Felipe to calm down. Leaned against the back of the chair, the sorcerer was listening to Arcana Voice. His spirit had been lifted and now he was in quite a good mood.

He was receiving the signals using the low-frequency band made specifically for long distance transmission. Arcana Voice had made his life on the island instantly became much more colorful and exciting.

When Arcana Voice ended, he sat up straight and switched to another band.

A serious and clear voice came. "Welcome to Truth of the World..."

The young sorcerer named Blake listened to it attentively. For sorcerers like him who lived far away from Allyn and Rentato, getting the most up-to-date information wasn't easy at all. The delivery of the journals including Arcana was much slower than to the major cities, since in most cases, magic steam trains and boats were used for delivery. Transmission magic circles were used only in rare, important cases.

Living on the island, Blake belonged to one of the last groups of sorcerers to receive the journals and messages, which often took a month longer. He could not stay up-to-date with the latest currents in the Congress, and knew nothing about what was going on in Allyn except what were on the journals.

However, the living cost here was much lower than in Allyn and Rentato, and they could make twice more in these remote areas as there were few local sorcerers. They needed money and materials to get promotion, so they did not want to leave.

The birth of Truth of the World solved this big problem.

"... Then, we're going to review the major news in Allyn in the past week."

Chapter 449: The Past Week In Allyn

Chapter 449: The Past Week In Allyn

“Monday, the thirty-second ring of Holm Crown prize finally found its winner in the Year of 822. Mr. Jerome was awarded for his discovery of X-ray. He is the second winner of Holm Crown prize from the Atom Institution after Mr. Evans.

“... In the Atom Institution, Mr. Jerome always remains a low profile. He does not seem to be as brilliant and eye-catching as Mr. Evans or as talkative and open-minded as Mr. Lazar and Mr. Rock, nor does he have the same solid academic foundation as Mr. Evans’ students do. Then what made him gain such a great achievement? How did Mr. Jerome, a simple and honest gentleman in the eyes of the others, became a level-four arcanist and third-circle sorcerer, became the winner of the thirty-second Holm Crown ring?

“It’s our great honor to have Mr. Jerome here today to answer these questions. Hi, Mr. Jerome, thank you for being with us today.”

Blake, who had the typical light blue hair and dark blue eyes of the Solarians, listened to the radio very attentively. Except for the discovery of X-ray, the news about the Atom Institution in recent years basically had nothing to do with Jerome. His name was always at the bottom, attracting little attention. However, all of a sudden, he had won the top award in the School of Element and had become the envy and model of thousands of arcanists.

The rich male voice answered, “in many people’s eyes, I am not a talented arcanist. I am not a match for Rock and my colleagues, not to mention Evans. Therefore, many arcanists believe that my achievement came from the favor of the Goddess of Luck... that an accident of forgetting the fluorescence piece led to an even more accidental achievement.”

Blake nodded. He also thought so, and it was not because of feeling jealous. The paper published on Arcana last year proved that Jerome’s finding was more of an lucky accident than a discovery guided by developed theories.

“Then what do you think, sir?” Asked Lark, the host of the section, genially.

Jerome smiled. “Indeed they are all right. But I have to add something here: Before I found X-ray, I had already conducted the related experiments for a thousand two hundred and twenty-seven days. When Lazar, Rock, and the students believed that there was nothing more to explore, I was still working on it using my own spare time.

“At that time, I never expected anything big. I was doing so simply because there were still things I did not understand. I am not smart, but I am proud of my diligence, perseverance, and patience, which are the only things that I can rely on.

“Maybe arcanists like me are not the ones to come up with those earthshaking theories which required much imagination, but we can lay the most solid foundation for the high tower of Arcana and add details to it. People like us are also valuable and promising.”

Jerome’s words were simple but not plain. His words motivated Blake greatly. Diligence, perseverance, and patience... Blake repeated the words to himself in his mind.

“Diligence, perseverance, and patience...” Lark also repeated the words in the radio and smiled. “Thank you for sharing, Mr. Jerome. I believe what you just said is a great encouragement to many arcanists, including me. Anything else you’d like to share with us?”

“Umm... First of all, I’d like to express my many thanks to Mr. Evans, whose great talent in arcana is known to all. Working with him has offered me much to learn. No matter what others say about his light quantum hypothesis, I believe in him. He was the one who offered us free access to all the facilities in the Atom Institution and encouraged me when I felt like giving up. Therefore, I named the ray using the letter ‘X’.”

Jerome continued emotionally. “... Also, I’d like to say ‘thank you’ to my wife, Vera. Her love and courage have been accompanying me all the time and giving me the power to do the tedious experiments over and over again. Without her support, I would never have been able to win the prize. She shares the ring with me.”

“That’s so sweet. The couple also just got their first baby! Let’s wish them an even sweeter and brighter future!” Lark said sincerely and then turned to the other guest speaker. “... Today, we also have the president of the Will of Elements here, Mr. Morris Hoffenberg. Welcome, sir. So, for what Mr. Jerome just said, how do you feel about it?”

“Diligence, perseverance, and patience... These are very good qualities, regardless of talent.” Morris had a deep and charming voice of a mature man.

Lark agreed, and then asked, “So Mr. Morris, we had received lots of letters from our listener this week, and they shared one question — Why wasn’t Mr. Evans rewarded with the price?

“Mr. Evans’s paper on radioactive element, which won him the Ice & Snow Medal, should further win him Holm Crown prize for at least two times: one for proving that electron is part of an atom’s inner structure, and the other for leading us into the microworld and showing us the change of matters by discovering the new element Helium. His research is beyond exciting; it made us believe that we’re on the way mastering matters, which used to be the forbidden zone of Gods. But why didn’t such an important paper win the prize?”

Morris remained silent for a couple of seconds and replied, “proving that electron is part of an atom’s inner structure is a follow-up of the discovery of the electron. After discussion, we believe that this finding should not win Holm Crown prize again as Mr. Evans already has the ring Electron...”

“The emission of a new element does involve how matters produce and change, but it hasn’t been proved yet. When Evans can prove that a radioactive substance can be turned into another element due to the radiation of a new element using a solid experiment, the prize will go to him again. Hopefully, he will be able to put forward a whole set of theories explaining the complete structure of the atom and how matters change.”

... So the next Holm Crown prize ring for Lucien Evans would be able to cover all of his achievement in this field... Morris thought to himself.

Lark did not take in Morris’s words easily. “I’m afraid this isn’t convincing enough, sir. Mr. Ulysses won the thirty-first Holm Crown prize ring with his paper on measuring electron charge, and Mr. Lucien Evans’s discovery is of the same great value, isn’t it?”

“... In some of the letters, some arcanists believe that it was you who prevented Mr. Lucien Evans from winning Holm Crown prize one more time, sir, since he has already won the prize three times. They are suspecting that you see giving the award to Mr. Evans again as a waste of money and resources. Facing these rumors, do you wish to clarify yourself, Mr. Morris?”

“This is a totally absurd and groundless accusation. Openness, fairness, and impartiality have always been our principles when deciding the winners. Evans was also present during the discussion. He didn’t have any problem.” Morris sounded offended, and then he paused a bit. “Time’s up. I will answer no more questions. And I will not attend such absurd interviews anymore, unless you show more ‘sincerity’ when making the appointment.”

Blake wondered why Morris sounded a bit self-conscious.

“... Alright, that’s all for our review of last Wednesday. Now, let’s take a look at what happened last Thursday.

“... Frictions took place again between the Congress’s patrolling magic steamboat and the Saint Truth’s airship. As we’re getting closer to locating the mysterious dimension, the number of frictions is continuously increasing. We must be prepared.

“After the downfall of the ancient Magic Empire, countless sorcerers suffered day and night under the brutal hegemony of the Church and were almost erased from the ground. Fortunately, the establishment of the Congress reversed the trend. Therefore, the confrontation is irreconcilable. Every sorcerer should bear this in mind. Any attempts trying to ingratiate himself with both sides are beyond foolish.

“We shall retreat no more. Behind our back is Allyn!”

“... Leading almost a hundred elementalists and necromancers, Mr. Donald, the member of the Highest Council, the president of the Will of Elements, recently paid a visit to the royal elf court and the Druid Elders of Stroop forest. Elder Malfurion offered Mr. Donald and his companies a warm welcome. Both sides exchanged opinions on recent situations and issues and reached an agreement. Together they attended the grand ceremony Spring Sowing, which took place in the manor close to Stroop forest and where Jinkela No. 822 first revealed its veil in front of people.

“The Lord of Storm, member of the Highest Council, has submitted his paper on his experimentation using helium atomic beams to bombard a thin foil of metal. Some particles in this experiment scattered further than others. Based on this finding, the Lord of Storm has overturned the atom structure model proposed by Her Excellency Hathaway, in which electrons are believed to be inlaid in the atomic nucleus. According to His Excellency Fernando, the inner structure of an atom should resemble the celestial bodies motion system suggested by Mr. Douglas, the president of the Congress, that is, electrons spinning around the atomic nucleus like planets around the sun. The macroworld has overlapped with the micro!”

Blake suddenly sat up straight out of astonishment.

The tiny atom's inner structure was similar to the system of the entire universe! How amazing and wonderful this world was! Fernando's theory again brought out the aesthetics of science! Blake could not help wondering if there was a universe within each atom and whether if there were also life forms living there. He knew that the theory of Magic Fairy was once very popular in the ancient Magic Empire.

The truth of the world was beyond fascinating!

“... On the other hand, His Excellency Edwyn Brook, the Emperor of Control, member of the Highest Council, has also put forward that since the electrons are charged, when they spin around a nucleus, they should radiate out electromagnetic waves. Due to this loss of energy, the structure can never exist with stability...”

Blake put some thoughts into it and then nodded, as it did conform to the classic electromagnetism theory. He was a bit disappointed.

“... The Lord of Storm also said that this is so far just a rough model, and improvements have to be made for sure. But most elementalists believe that even the current rough model has already qualified the Lord of Storm for being the next winner of Holm Crown prize in the following year.”

...

“Saturday, reliable source confirmed that the Emperor of Control, who returned a year and a half ago, has finished his project of improving the magic circle for accurately measuring light quantum. Meanwhile, Mr. Lauren, member of Arcana Review Board and the winner of Ice & Snow Medal and Silver Moon Medal, has also told us that the same achievement has been made by him after three years of effort. Soon he will fight back against Mr. Evans’s light quantum hypothesis using the experiment result...”

“According to our survey, arcanists who advocate the wave theory are getting very excited, while many arcanists on the side of the particle theory are worrying about what will be coming to them and have refused to further respond to our questions.”

Chapter 450: Everyone's Experiments

"It has been three years since the Debate War between Wave and Particle was launched again after Mr. Douglas's light speed experiment posed strong doubt against the existence of Ether and reached its climax by Mr. Evans's light quantum hypothesis, and it shows no sign of calming down. Thus, it has officially become the third War between Wave and Particle in history.

"When we look back at the previous two rounds of confrontation, Mr. Brook and his team have come close to completely defeating the particle theory. In the past a few years, supporters of the particle theory relied themselves on the last piece of straw, constantly telling themselves that the existence of Ether had not been confirmed, to prevent their own cognitive world from collapsing. However, the particle theory has recently picked up its momentum again using the light speed experiment and the light quantum hypothesis, even launching a new round of attack against the wave theory. The light speed experiment and the photoelectric effect have become two heavy burdens on those wave theory supporters' mind, yet so far they could not find a proper answer to them."

Lark briefly introduced the history of the War between Wave and Particle, which made the young Blake feel the blood pulsing through his veins. Holding his fists, Blake wished that he could punch in the faces of the few sorcerers who were still being stubborn. Meanwhile, he vaguely heard some nasty comments made by other sorcerers coming from the open window. Obviously, in this place, not a single particle theory supporter could be found.

"After three years of brewing, the war is perhaps reaching its final stage. His Excellency Mr. Brook and Mr. Lauren have both completed the improvement of the magic circles and are now ready to conduct an accurate photoelectric effect experiment. If the data and images obtained can prove that the light quantum hypothesis is wrong, then the particle theory has to retreat back to its previous status again, using only the light speed experiment to sustain its last breath."

"This is going to be one of the most meaningful experiments in the history of the Congress, and the result of the experiment will direct us further into the truth of the world and tell us where to make our next step. Today, with our guest arcanists from the Congress, we are going to exchange some of our ideas and attitudes on this..." Lark's crispy and passionate voice turned to the invited guests present. "Good to have you all here. I'm Lark, the host of Allyn's Past Week."

"It's very nice to meet you, Miss Lark. You're as beautiful as your voice." said a male voice a bit excitedly.

The rest of the male arcanists sounded a bit shy and greeted Lark in a dull tone.

"Nice to meet you, Lark. I'm a fan of Allyn's Past Week, and you're even more beautiful than we thought," said a female voice, on behalf of the rest of the guests.

Lark responded in her sweet voice. "Thank you all very much for your support. So, ladies and gentlemen, how do you think of the following experimentation on light quantum which is about to be carried out by Mr. Brook and Mr. Lauren?"

"Well, we've been waiting for this for so long, you know... Ever since Mr. Evans put forward his hypothesis, we've been waiting for someone to step out and prove that the hypothesis is wrong, as we're not capable of doing so ourselves before reaching senior-rank. It has been three years, and the day will finally come, the day that we can refute this absurd hypothesis righteously. I believe that Mr. Brook and Mr. Lauren will give us an accurate and convincing result," said the loud male voice, who seemed to be quite talkative.

"I'm very delighted to see that the magic circles have been improved. I've been fed up with those who keep talking about their particle theory."

"The results will prove the wave theory."

The male arcanists answered one by one.

"Although I personally think highly of Mr. Evans, and I'm very impressed with his great achievements, as well as the fact that he has won the four highest honors before reaching senior-rank, I don't think his hypothesis is correct. I mean... even Mr. Evans can make mistakes. And I do feel that the rare mistake made by Mr. Evans has made him more approachable..." The soft female voice seemed to want to continue but was cut off by her companions.

Hearing their answers, Lark further asked, "it seems that no one believes that the experimentation result will favor the light quantum hypothesis. Does the wave theory of light really have such a solid foundation? It has been three years, and no other theories except Mr. Evans's hypothesis could explain the photoelectric effect. So far the light quantum hypothesis has conformed with all the results yielded by those less inaccurate experiments, and one of Mr. Evans's prediction has even been proved correct. Are you really so sure that the result will prove the light quantum hypothesis wrong?"

"Absolutely."

"Yes, for sure."

"Without a doubt."

...

The arcanists all answered affirmatively, but somehow there was a bit of uncertainty emerging in their voice.

Blake loosened his grip and started putting more thoughts into it. What Lark just said was true. Yes, it had been three years, yet no other theories but Mr. Evans's hypothesis could explain the photoelectric effect. All the experiment results were saying that Evans's hypothesis was correct. And meanwhile, several attempts aiming at explaining light speed experiment had failed. The existence of Ether had become a question.

Was the wave theory of light completely correct?

Would the experiment's result overthrow the light quantum hypothesis? Or the opposite?

...

A slightly dry and wrinkled hand pressed the button on the radio and turned it off when the signal had been replaced by the noise of electric currents.

Barek turned around and saw his teacher, Brook, staring ahead at the distorted magnetic fields and flashing electric arcs outside of the window, his hands folded back in the manner and air of a dominator. Carefully taking in a breath, Barek asked, "Sir, did you listen to Allyn's Past Week?"

"Yes, I did," answered Brook, who wore a wig and looked like an elegant but old-school gentleman. "The programmes are interesting. As usual, Evans makes good achievement in every field which he would like to put efforts in. But I'm not very used to his humor and the new words that he created."

"It's becoming a new trend. Using the new words has been popular among younger sorcerers in Allyn, Rentato, Cooks, and even in the Solar Islands. It seems to have already become a trend, and whoever not joining in is falling behind," said Barek, and then, looking more serious, he asked hesitantly, "so Sir... You must have listened to the interview done by Lark, right?"

"So?" Brook turned around and looked at his student.

Barek tried to be brave. "... I'm worried... about the experiment result."

"Make your point," said Brook calmly. When it came to arcana, he preferred to be straightforward.

Barek weighed his words, and said, "I've done a couple of experiments before, and all the results favor the light quantum hypothesis, which now seems to be the only explanation for the photoelectric effect. I'm afraid that the accurate experiment result might not be on the side of the wave theory. So, Sir... I hope that when you conduct the experiment, you can put aside your beliefs. The wave theory still has its chance... we still have the diffraction image and a whole set of theory..."

Brook's jade-like eyes behind the gold-rimmed glasses looked at Barek attentively. Finally, when Barek started sweating a bit, Brook looked away at the window again. It seemed that his green eyes could see through his demiplane and see the dark evening of Allyn in early spring.

"It's going to rain." Murmured Brook.

...

In the headquarter in Allyn, on the thirty-first floor, which was a section specially for the Sky radio station.

During midnight, Truth of the World had come to the end. Arcana Voice had ended earlier, so no the entire floor was very quiet.

After drinking a tube of potion for throat protection, Samantha, who used the name Lark in the radio, walked out of the lounge in a good mood and was ready to go home.

As soon as she walked out, she saw that Lucien Evans was greeting the rest of the arcanists working for Truth of the World. She kept her serious and indifferent look, but asked curiously in her silvery voice,

"Evans, why are you still here?"

It was very late. Ever since the two programmes started running smoothly, Lucien had never come here during midnight. What was going on tonight? Was it because of Mr. Brook and Lauren's experiment?

"Just finished some experiments in the institution. I know you all are still here, so I decided to drop by." said Lucien briefly.

"Experiments? On the photoelectric effect?" Samantha got even more curious.

Lucien shook his head. "No, Mr. Fernando's experiment inspired me, and I was using helium atomic beams to bombard some gases to see what I could find. Also, I used electron currents to bombard gold foil."

"You're being too honest, you know? I might steal your idea."
Samantha slightly lifted her brow.

Lucien smiled. "This isn't something fun. I had to sit there staring at the flashing light spots for a long time to seek for the traces, never knowing when I can find something, if there's any."

"Umm... I feel that your honesty comes from the fact that you've already found something." Samantha revealed a small smile.

Lucien shook his head again and laughed. "You just simply don't take my words. By the way, the programmes have been very successful. You and Louise have become the lady in the young arcanists' dream. The only thing is that staying up late all the time isn't something good."

"It doesn't matter to me. I'm an astrologer, and I'm very used to staying up late watching the stars. Now the programmes are recorded at night, so they can be aired on the next morning..." said Samantha, who was silent for a while as she saw the six-circle badge on Lucien's chest. "... It's late. We can go and grab a bit, so you can better carry on your experiment."

Lucien answered, "thank you, but I need to head back now. When my magic tower is ready, I'll invite you all to come for dinner to thank you for the great effort running the programmes." Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click for visiting.

Lucien then turned around and left. When his figure disappeared around the corner, Samantha released a light sigh.

Coming back to the institution, Lucien walked back to the lab, turned on the magic circles beside the alchemical viewer to continue with the experiment, and recorded the data.

Beside his right hand on the operation desk, there was a pile of papers left in the corner. The papers were mostly covered under the other assorted stuff on the desk. But at the bottom, one sentence could vaguely be seen,

"Above are the accurate data record of the photoelectric effect experiment and its image."

Chapter 451: New Alchemy

Chapter 451: New Alchemy

In a magic tower in Salyvaor, the capital of the Kingdom of Brianne.

The ending song of Allyn's Past Week was still lingering in the room, however, it was suddenly cut off by a hand that turned off the radio. The slender-figured archmage Lauren had a sneering look on his face, and even his little mustache was showing his scorn. "What a good student of Neeshka. Lark doesn't even want to hide her inclination."

For a sorcerer like him, knowing who was hiding behind 'Lark' was just a piece of cake.

Lauren was standing in his study, which was decorated with dark red curtains and soft crystal lights, and looking at his students in front of the desk.

A senior whose hair had all turned grey said bitterly, "Arcana Voice, Truth of the World... Lucien is the one who is hiding behind. No matter how hard they try to cover it, they are always sitting on the chair engraved with the words 'the Particle Theory'. Shame on them! A programme at least should be bias-free! How could they let Lark intently shake the wave theory supporters confidence!"

He looked much older than Lauren.

"Christal, it doesn't matter," said Lauren calmly. "The world of arcana only respects truth, which makes here the justest place to live in. No matter how tricky they are, in the end, the experiment results will speak for us."

Although he just mocked Lark, Lauren didn't really hold anything against her. As an archmage whose great honors had been piling up, he did have the confidence and tolerance to only attack Lucien in a dignified manner with the experiment results and images.

Sitting beside Christal was a young man with light brown hair, yet his yellowish-brown eyes belonged to that of an aged man. He said to his teacher hesitantly, “Sir... About the result...”

“Yes, Manuel?” Lauren looked at him, frowning slightly.

The student’s lips pressed against each other into a thin line, and finally, he became determined to speak it out, “Sir... I think we should be prepared for the fact that the experiment result might not be able to overthrow the light quantum hypothesis.”

The middle-aged woman who had beautiful light purple hair also seized the chance and agreed. “It’s True, Sir. The several experiments in the past a few years have shown that the light quantum hypothesis can perfectly explain the photoelectric effect.”

“You...!” Lauren stared at his students angrily. He did not want to believe that what Lark said in the programme had indeed shattered his students’ confidence.

“If that was true, I’d rather prefer there is no explanation for the photoelectric effect at all!” Lauren reproached his students and then walked out of the study in a rage.

Outside of the window in the darkness, the fine spring raindrops were thrumming the field, indicating the upcoming harvest of a season.

In the Atom Institution, Lucien was still working on observing the tiny flashing light spots, trying to find what he wanted from their messy traces he took down. Meanwhile, the improved magic circles were now buzzing as the powerful electric currents passing through, slightly twisting the surrounding magnetic field.

Thanks to the Lord of Storm’s experiment of using helium atoms to bombard a piece of metal foil, Lucien now had the perfect reasons for applying to Magic Research Board for introducing the lately improved magic circles and alchemical facilities to meet all the requirements for conducting the experiment — the Atom Institution specialized in studying the microworld and the inner structure of the atom. Since the Lord of Storm had proved the existence of the atomic nucleus and described the atom's inner structure by colliding particles, the Atom Institution had the very reason to conduct further studies based on the Lord of Storm's achievement, and the institution's request should be fulfilled without a doubt.

Finally, Lucien had identified the trace he had been seeking for!

Charge-to-mass ratio, charge quantity, mass... all the data flashed through Lucien's brain. In the next second, he sprang up from the chair and started measuring the particle that made the trace!

Time flew, and Lucien's work was almost done.

Charge-to-mass ratio, the same!

Charge quantity, the same!

Mass, the same!

The numbers had overlapped with each other!

Suddenly, Lucien's cognitive world embraced him again, and the elements in the sky and the environment started changing in front of his eyes: the central core surrounded by the electrons had turned into the combination of two particles! The only difference between all the elements such as hydrogen, oxygen, and carbon was the different numbers of particles they had!

This was the nucleus of hydrogen! This was proton! This was the nature of the elements!

The great shift in Lucien's cognitive world was done within seconds. Lucien could sense the fundamental changes it brought, as he could now feel the connection with all the elements much more sharply. Seizing the chance, Lucien quickly entered his meditation world and now his spiritual power possessed both the properties of particle and wave. This was not a simple combination of wave and particle, as now even a single spiritual quantum of his showed the nature of wave!

.....

In his Kingdom of Electromagnetism, Brook stepped into his lab.

His lab looked like a fantasy: Cold metals, weird patterns and shapes, jumping and flashing electric arcs, black twisted magnetic fields, as well as the vast starry sky...

He stopped in front of a complex alchemical operation table, placed on his right-hand side were all the experiment notes and records.

Brook took a glance at the records he made, and a strange look stopped for a second on his face where his years had begun to show. Then he put aside all the thoughts and started focusing on the experiment.

.....

By the time he walked to the door of the lab, Lauren had calmed down. He turned around and said to his students following him, "Manuel, Diana, you two can leave now. I will start my experiment."

Manuel tried to say something, but Lauren had disappeared behind the door.

The door charged with flashing electric currents cut the students off from their teacher.

"It's gonna be alright, isn't it?" Manuel murmured subconsciously.

Christal had a cold look on his face. "Of course. The light quantum hypothesis can not explain everything, say, the diffraction image."

"That's true." Agreed Diana.

She was not feeling too nervous, since she believed that the experiment result would not be too surprising. She was confident that the worst scenario would just be that her teacher suffered some damage to his cognitive world, which would only take a few years for Mr. Lauren to fix. In the past three years, she had gradually shifted her cognitive world to a more balanced position, if it was not more on the particle theory's side, thus she was prepared for both outcomes.

If she could do so, it should not be a problem for her teacher.

Lauren put on his magic robe, and a layer of grey covered him from head to toe. After carefully checking all the magic circles and alchemical facilities, he started the experiment conscientiously, just like every time in the past.

.....

In Lucien's cognitive world which was basically substantialized, his spiritual power had filled in every corner of this space. The joining spiritual quanta together formed mysterious and dreamlike cloud clusters, but when Lucien approached them, they scattered and became particles and waves.

When everything calmed down, the image of Lucien's cognitive world also disappeared. Lucien opened his eyes, knowing that he finally made the last step for finishing his own meditation method, called the Evans's Duality Meditation. The meditation method was still in its first stage though, and Lucien could still make further improvements on it.

With this meditation method, the cost that Lucien paid for forcing his way into senior-rank could be compensated. Lucien tried with his new meditation method and drew the conclusion that his meditation worked at least three times better than the best existing senior-rank meditation method, and it would take him just another one or two years to reach the seventh circle.

In the past three years, due to the damage done to his soul previously, Lucien did not make any remarkable progress in increasing his spiritual power. Therefore, he had spent most of his time studying sixth-circle magic incantations and creating new spells. By now, Lucien had constructed twenty-one sixth-circle magic spells within his soul. Among them, there were three newly-created spells: a curse spell Professor's Solicitude , an electromagnetic spell, and an astrology spell.

Taking a deep breath, Lucien repeated the experiment he just did. Then he took out the special parchment for writing arcana papers and a quill-pen and started writing his paper right on the operation desk:

“... The experiment showed that when using helium atomic beams to bombard nitrogen, positively-charged hydrogen atoms were produced. Therefore, a conclusion could be made here — Hydrogen nucleus could be extracted from the nuclei of nitrogen, thus a hydrogen nucleus is also an inner part of an atom. Because a hydrogen atom only contains one such particle, in the past, it was only thought of as the hydrogen atom...”

“... I'll name this fundamental particle 'proton'. The positive charge it carries is equal to the negative charge an electron carries. Considering its mass and its electric neutrality, it is reasonable to say that a hydrogen atom consists of a proton and an electron...”

“... To push the conclusion further, it is found that the listing of the elements in the periodic table of the elements also follows the number of protons. Based on the nuclear charge and the electromagnetic theory, it can be predicted that besides proton, there is another kind of particle which has the same mass but is not charged within the atom nucleus. The number of this neutral particle decides the variants of a particular chemical element...”

Lucien did not restrain himself within the experiment result, instead, he extended his conclusion to establish a theoretical system. His theories and predictions went beyond the evidence provided by the current experiments, as usual.

“... Starting from the conception of Mr. Fernando that the atom structure resembles the celestial body motion system, and by introducing the quantum theory, the structure of electrons orbiting around the nucleus could be quantized... That is to say, we no longer see electrons as particles orbiting around, but rather of different energy levels. When absorbing and emitting energy, they do transitional movements, and skipping levels is possible...”

“... This is proved by the discontinuity of the emission spectrum of atomic hydrogen...”

This time, Lucien did not choose to wait for more theories supporting him to come up, instead, he directly introduced the quantum theory into describing the atom structure by skipping many studies as prerequisite conditions and making predictions boldly.

There was roaring thunder coming remotely in Lucien's cognitive world when the electrons orbiting around the nucleus all stopped. The electrons were on different energy level tracks – Some of them were absorbing spiritual quanta and making phase transitions, and some were losing spiritual quanta when dropping to lower energy levels. There were these continuous ups and downs as well as the constant reciprocal transformations in the flow of Lucien's spiritual power.

Not distracted by what was happening in his cognitive world, Lucien kept writing very fast,

“... The number of electrons in the outside shell decides the alchemical property of an element; all alchemical reactions can be described and explained by the concept of gaining and losing electrons, including ionization and the valence state. As for the reason behind the configuration, I currently assume that each shell has a certain number of electrons, but this still requires further study...”

“... In this way, the School of Alchemy has been fully included in the School of Element!”

In his cognitive world, the electrons around the atomic nucleus started exchanging with that of the other nearby elements, and more matters and substances started to form. Lucien's cognitive world became more abundant and colorful, in which his magic model of Elements Order had been further improved, and now the structure was already very close to being completed!

The quill-pen in Lucien's hand moved fast, presenting Lucien's profound thoughts on the parchment.

The darkness of the night outside of the window became denser. The moist air foreshadowed the upcoming rain.

.....

In the lab, as more data had been collected, and the image gradually became complete, Brook's eyebrows knitted in a frown.

Taking down the last group of data, Brook did not write down any conclusion. Instead, he looked out of the window at his demiplane, the Kingdom of Electromagnetism, and finally released a sigh.

Bang! Bang!

In the deafening thunder, fierce and thick bolts of lightning directly struck the twisted magnetic field from above and instantly tore the flowing electric currents and flashing electric arcs into pieces!

Under the ground of the demiplane, all the substances and matters were collapsing under the power of the strong magnetic field. The destructive power was dismantling the space as easily as crushing dry weeds and smashing rotten wood.

The momentum was unstoppable. This seemed to be the end of the entire Kingdom of Electromagnetism.

"Sir..." In the magic tower shaking violently, Barek looked at the upper floor helplessly.

In Brianne.

His eyes gazing upon the data and the experiment image, Lauren was unable to suppress his panic.

"Impossible!"

His hands trembling, Lauren tried to stop, but his drastically-changing cognitived world interfered with his soul, and he could not resist the urge to continue.

The experiment result was there, right in front of him. The look on Lauren's face was distorted, as if he had been possessed by a demon. Boundless fear seized him.

He could not believe this.

Lauren recalled Lucien's paper.

He could not understand. He shook his head, murmuring to himself. “How could something like this exist?”

In his cognitive world, the electromagnetic waves fiercely swelled up and snapped!

Like blowing up a balloon, Lauren's head seemed to grow bigger and bigger. He burst out a painful cry.

His head had been blown up to its limit. Silently, the bloody firework bloomed.

There was red and white, falling down to the floor like raindrops.

“... In the radioactive substance, I have found the trace of the new element, which perfectly matches what I expected: In the process of radioactive decay, energy and the helium nucleus are released and thus new elements are formed...

“... Since human beings acquired magic, the dream of turning elements into gold has always been there. This is not merely our pursuit of wealth, but the longing for the truth of the world, as we always wish to master the secret of matter transmutation!

“... However, for thousands of years in the past, there was not a single alchemical reaction which had successfully transmuted a substance fundamentally without relying on a permanent magic circle... In front of the gate of the forbidden zone belonging only to gods, we human beings could not march further...

“... But now, after discovering the inner structure of the atom, by studying the nature of decay, we can find the path for fundamentally changing substances and creating new elements!

Following my theory, although the product might not be worth the cost, we can finally take over the power once exclusively owned by gods! Now we see the deepest secrets hiding behind substances, and we are on the way achieving the shared dream of sorcerers for generations!

“... This is a big step forward in the history of arcana, but more of further improvement of the human civilization!

“... The journey waiting for us is full of challenges and even risks, but I hope that we can go much further together.”

Piling up the rolls of parchment, Lucien wrote down the title,

“New Alchemy”.

Outside the window, the spring thunder came, and lives started thriving.

Chapter 452: The Two Generations

Hearing the thunder, Lucien looked outside the window. It was already early morning. The soft dawn light was a bit fuzzy in the drizzle.

Turning off the magic circles and alchemical facilities, Lucien walked to the window with a cup of tea in his hand and pushed the window open. The refreshing, moist air came directly to his face.

What a lovely day.

Thinking of the paper titled New Alchemy that he just finished, which was actually a compilation of dozens of papers, Lucien took several deep breaths of the fresh, cool air and then said to himself in low voice,

"Here comes the era of head explosion."

The realm that they were stepping into was strange and unimaginably queer, diverging completely from human being's intuition. The query brought by that 'cat' would trigger a brainstorm for every arcanist.

.....

In the Kingdom of Electromagnetism, the magnets were crumbling, the electric currents disappearing. The bolts of arc light in the sky had joined the lightning. Together, they struck the ground and the protection shield of the magic tower.

"Is this the end... Sir?" Barek looked out of the drastically shaking window, and he saw the many black cracks appearing on the shield.

Suddenly, the electric currents in the sky joined together and turned into a giant electric snake. It slithered all the way up along the magic tower and opened its mandibles wide. As the bolts of lightning in the sky were absorbed by the snake, its body had swelled up to its limit.

The snake exploded abruptly, filling the space with silver-white fireworks. Whether visible or invisible, the electromagnetic waves suddenly became prominent in the entire space, like the magnificent tides of an ocean.

Starting from the middle, the waves seemed to broke into small pieces. But the shape of the waves was maintained.

However, this spectacular scene lasted for not even one second. Before Barek realized what he saw, it had completely disappeared.

The collapsion had stopped. The Kingdom of Electromagnetism survived. However, evidence of the terrible destruction was everywhere. Less than ten percent of the electric currents and magnetic field were left, and there were even terrifying black holes in the air.

A long sigh followed.

"Sir..." Barek was worried, as he knew clearly that a legendary archmage's demiplane was the reflection of his own cognitive world. Witnessing what had happened to the demiplane, Barek knew that his teacher's cognitive world must have experienced something very bad.

Wearing a wig and gold-rimmed glasses, Brook walked down from the stairs. His face was abnormally dull-red. He shook his head, and said, "there's still no way for me to fit the light quantum hypothesis into the wave theory."

"So the result..." Barek asked subconsciously.

Brook said in a low spirit, "although I was mentally prepared, the fact that the experiment result perfectly matches the hypothesis was still a bit hard for me to accept. Thus, my cognitive world was shaken. Then I tried to understand the hypothesis from another perspective and combine it with the wave theory to reconstruct my cognitive world, yet I cannot find the breakthrough point."

Barek was not young anymore, but now he was still caught in a great panic. "Sir, your cognitive world has..."

He could not say the words out.

"Has broken and solidified." Brook rubbed his forehead, revealing a hint of fatigue and helplessness.

Barek knew how this worked, but he still could not believe it. He was even more shocked and grieved than Brook. "So Sir... You can't make any further progress anymore?"

"That's right." Compared to Barek, Brook appeared to be quite calm. He shook his head self-deprecatingly and said, "I have to be grateful. Three years ago when I first saw Evans's light quantum hypothesis, if it had not been the limited experiment conditions, I would have done this experiment right away. If that had been the case, my cognitive world would have collapsed completely, and the Kingdom of Electromagnetism would have been destroyed thoroughly, together with half of Allyn. Fortunately, because of the mental preparation and the feedback of the experiments in the past years, I'm still alive."

The collapse of a legendary archmage's half-solidified cognitive world could be powerful enough to affect the main material world.

Therefore, Brook was not exaggerating. If the Kingdom of Electromagnetism had gone down, half of Allyn would have indeed been buried with its falling. What was needed to say here was that Allyn was a city with the protection of the most powerful Mythals in this world, and if this were to happen in other cities like Rentato or Aalto, the entire city together with the surrounding towns and manors would have been completely devoured by the explosion of the electromagnetic storm.

"Bloody Evans!" Barek flared. Although he knew that this was not Lucien's fault, he could not accept this emotionally.

Brook waved his hands; his face had turned from dull-red to pale. "If he was insisting on an absurd belief, I would definitely fight him until the last second. However, the experiment result has proved his hypothesis, which means I am the one who's wrong, and I am the one who's too obsessed with my own incorrect belief. In this case, shall I hate this world for not existing as how I wish?"

Although his cognitive world had broken and solidified, Brook still maintained his manner.

Brook was completely different from Fernando, whose feelings and emotions were always intense, but there were two things that they shared in common: the reverence towards the unknown, and the passion for arcana.

"But..." Barek still could not accept the reality. His brows knitted together bitterly, as if he had been the one who had lost all the hope for making any progress in just a few hours.

Brook walked to the window in the living room with his hands folded behind. "This isn't necessarily a bad thing, Barek. For me, there is indeed desperation, but there's also hope. In this great setback, there is also chance."

"...?" Barek did not get it.

Brook lifted his right arm and opened his hand. "We don't know if the God of Truth really exists, but except for the Him, there are only four who have managed to reach the level of Alterna from the legendary level in history — the Lord of Hell, the Will of Abyss, the mysterious existence in the World of Souls, and the Pope. The first three were said to be born with this power, just like the God of Silver Moon."

"But Sir, didn't the previous Popes also reached this level?" Barek asked.

Brook coughed a bit, and then answered, "to me, the Pope is only a symbol, a symbol of 'the Speaker of the God of Truth on this world', not a specific existence. The pope uses the power of the God of Truth to reach the next level. Therefore, the name behind the title is meaningless. All the previous Popes and the current one should be counted as one."

"It's true." Barek nodded.

Brook looked at his half-destroyed kingdom and said in the same gentle voice, "... From the legendary level to demigod is a journey beyond arduous. In the past thousands of years, only the Popes succeeded relying on the power of the God of Truth. The many great geniuses like the Sun King and my teacher all failed to progress any further. Although they are setting out to seek the falling pieces of Alterna and the mysterious existence in the World of Souls, I don't see much hope in finding anything that really helps."

"Therefore," Brook paused a bit and drew the conclusion, "stopping here at this level isn't something urgent and serious."

Barek released a sigh of relief. He knew that his teacher was right. Although Mr. Brook's cognitive world had broke and solidified, he was still an archmage at the climax of the legendary level, whose power was only inferior to that of the three demigods who never really showed up. And even if his cognitive world was intact, he could not advance further.

"There is desperation, for sure, but this could also be a chance..." Brook's voice lowered, "In this experiment, I saw the great flaw of the wave theory of light. When I figure out why there is this duality in the electromagnetic waves, perhaps I can rebuild my cognitive world and even make a further breakthrough."

Hearing his teacher's words and seeing that his teacher was still the same ambitious and positive facing the horrible setback, Barek recalled the great respect he held when he first became Brook's student. It had been years, and the respect was always there. Brook just mentioned the Sun King and Mr. Douglas as examples of great geniuses, but in Barek's mind and in many Congress arcanists' minds, Brook was also a genius who was no less powerful and intelligent than the two.

Brook deconstructed the ancient magic system and built the vast kingdom of electromagnetism. He obtained the title of grand arcanist before reaching fifty and then became a legendary when he was eighty. No one would ever doubt his giftedness.

"Sir, are you going to publish the experiment result?" Barek asked.

Brook nodded. "Yes."

"But..." Barek was afraid of a mass head-explosion incident.

Brook sighed. "I am the founder of the wave theory of light, and also one of those who completed it. That's why my cognitive world still broke and solidified even after three years of preparation. The other arcanists will not suffer this bad like me after these three years. In the worst scenario, their cognitive world will be just severely damaged."

"There are those who are extremely stubborn..." Barek still hesitated.

Brook's voice became cold. "It's been three years. If now their heads are still going to explode, giving them another three or even thirty years will not change the result. Stubbornness has merged into their cells and blood. But the development of arcana and magic will not wait for them to change their mind."

"If Lucien Evans wants to become a grand arcanist..." Brook continued rather seriously, "... he has to march forward stepping on the exploded heads, scattered brains, and river-like blood. These will finally become his ladder for ascending. Sometimes, this is even crueller than a true war."

Brook was totally qualified for making the statement. He was the one who caused the previous mass head-explosion years ago.

"I'll go and organize the data then. The introduction part will be left for you, Sir," said Barek. He felt a chill creeping over his body.

Brook nodded lightly. "Go ahead. I'll take a rest and do the next experiment." Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click for visiting.

"What experiment?" Barek was confused.

Brook laughed a little as if he was mocking himself. "Since the light quantum hypothesis matches the result of the experiment, now we can treat light as the complex of particles. A particle should not only carry energy, but also momentum. I am going to bombard different matters using the newly discovered X-ray to see if the momentums are changing.

"I never expected that I was going to be busy with proving the particle theory..."

.....

In Lauren's magic tower.

Manuel and the rest of the students were waiting anxiously. Suddenly, the strident alarm went on.

"Accident in the lab. Call master, call master..."

"No response, no response, inspection activated..."

"No toxin released, no cursing, no dangerous creatures... Lab door has opened..."

The cold and indifferent alchemical life's voice filled the hall.

Manuel and Diana exchanged a look between each other and in the next second, they were already on their way rushing to the lab. Entering the lab, they saw the scene that they would never forget in the rest of their life:

The body on the ground was wearing that grey magic robe which they could not be more familiar with. However, the head was missing. The entire space — the walls, the operation desks, the piles of paper, and the energy shields on the magic circles — was covered with mixed red and white bloody stains as well as tiny bone pieces. The smell of blood overwhelmed them.

On the chest of the boy, there was the ninth-circle and the nine-star badge, as well as the Ice & Snow Medal and the Silver Moon Medal.

Chapter 453: The Strike

"Sir..." Diana's voice was weak and remote, as if she was trapped in an endless nightmare.

Manuel's yellowish-brown eyes were filled with agony and terror, as this was totally out of his expectation. After three years of foreshadowing, the worst scenario he thought of was that Lauren's cognitive world became broken and solidified. As a ninth-circle archmage, Lauren could transfer to a lich or extend his life in some other ways after he reached his life limit of around three hundred years old, and there was still a slight chance that he could reconstruct his cognitive world in the future... However, what was in front of him now was the death image of this ninth-circle archmage.

"No! It can't be like this!" Christal burst out a bitter cry, his grey hair now looking completely messy, his wrinkled face distorted and hideous. "... He's still alive! Mr. Lauren used Life Harbor, right?"

As a ninth-circle archmage, Lauren was capable of taking precautions against unexpected deaths. Although Life Harbor did not work as well as a lich's phylactery, it was enough for handling most situations.

Diana buried her face in her hands and murmured with great sorrow, "Life Harbor won't work... He's gone. Even a lich's phylactery is useless against the complete destruction of the cognitive world..."

Currently, powerful sorcerers could divide their soul and life force into pieces and save them in a phylactery or hide them with spells. As long as the pieces were kept intact, they would never die completely. However, the cognitive world was something even more elusive than the soul. It took root in a sorcerer's consciousness and could not be attacked by magic or divine power. Therefore, the cognitive world could not be divided either. Once a sorcerer's cognitive world collapsed, a true death ensued.

A legendary sorcerer's demiplane was, in fact, a projection of the meditation world in the true world reflecting his or her cognitive world, and the change in their cognitive worlds would be reflected in the demiplanes. However, it was not vice versa. A demiplane destroyed by an enemy would not do any damage to a legendary sorcerer's cognitive world.

Also, if one built a subversive theory in an illusion spell to make his or her enemies' cognitive world collapse and their heads exploded, this would not kill them in reality. It would, at most, cause them to feel very dizzy and confused for a while. Currently, the only person who could kill by projecting the cognitive world collapse in an illusion spell to the reality was the King of Nightmare.

There was only one situation that a sorcerer could come back to life after cognitive world collapse — the cognitive world was not fully destroyed. When a sorcerer was more or less mentally prepared or had been unconsciously influenced by the subversive findings, the situation of their cognitive world would then fall between being solidified and destroyed. In this case, the sorcerer would have the chance to transfer their souls to somewhere else before their head exploded, and the blow would be neutralized by the explosion of the head. Yet to those who did not have a phylactery or other ways for revival, this meant the total loss of their cognitive world.

"Who did this to him?! Lucien Evans?" Christal yelled madly. "It must be Lucien Evans! He killed Mr. Lauren to stop the experiment!"

He dashed to the operation desk, stepping on the floor of brain juices and blood.

Manuel and Diana were in such a great shock and sorrow that they did not realize what was about to happen to Christal. They blankly watched Christal pick up and read the experiment notebook, blankly watched him stare at the magic circle with his eyes wide open.

"It is fake! It must be!" Christal had gone crazy. He turned on the magic circle and started verifying the last set of data.

Fake... Manuel was lost. After a while, he suddenly realized what was going on. Casting a spell, Manuel tried to stop Christal.

"Stop it!" He cried.

Before his voice faded in the air, warm drops of blood and brain tissues fell on his face. The smell of blood went all the way up his nostrils.

"Ahhhh!!!" Diana the fifth-circle sorcerer screamed like a helpless little girl.

Christal's headless body fell to the ground with a loud thump.

"Another..." Manuel could not respond to the scene. He wondered if he needed to consult a psychologist.

The fifth popular programme of the channel Truth of the World was called Chicken Soup for the Soul, which was designed for caring about sorcerers' mental health, while, without a doubt, Allyn's Past Week was the no. 1.

Manuel forced himself to calm down. He could guess and had accepted the result. Walking to the operation desk, he picked up the notebook soaked in blood and brain tissues.

Manuel cleaned it up with magic while trying his best not to vomit. Then he carefully read the record and released a long sigh.

"So... the hypothesis is correct, isn't it?" After she finally recovered partially, Diana asked in great sorrow.

Manuel nodded, having no idea how to respond to the result. "Yes, it has basically proved the light quantum hypothesis."

He should feel encouraged by the result, as all his effort of gradually shifting his belief in the past three years had paid off and he could possibly reach the eighth circle within five years. However, the two headless bodies on the ground covered with blood and brain were dragging down his heart.

"So this will be Mr. Lauren's last paper... Shall we publish it for him?" Overwhelmed, Diana was not thinking in a logical manner anymore. Somehow, she asked this question.

Manuel nodded. "We will. But we'll say that our teacher's experiment result has proved the hypothesis and he also accepted it. His death was an unfortunate accident. We must protect his reputation. After all, His Excellency Mr. Brook is also doing the same experiment, so we can't hide it from people..." "What about Mr. Brook? Will he be alright?" Diana asked, terrified.

She didn't even ask how many arcanists would actually believe that Lauren died in an accident.

Manuel suddenly felt very insecure again. "We must go back to Allyn immediately and send him the experiment report. Hope that he hasn't started the experiment. If Mr. Brook also... this will become a disaster..."

"So shall we... for our teacher... Lucien Evans..." Diana said ambiguously.

Manuel knew what Diana was trying to indicate. He put on a bitter smile and shook his head. "If Christal was still alive, he would definitely seek for revenge. After all, he was the one receiving the most attention from our teacher. I do hate Lucien Evans for what happened, but honestly speaking, I don't think this is his fault. He neither designed nor carried out the experiment. Perhaps in the future I would oppose his theories or proposals because of what happened today, but there is no reason for me to take direct revenge on him."

What was more important was that Manuel had already changed his side and warned his teacher.

Diana nodded. She shared the same thought with Manuel, but also had her own concern:

Lucien Evans was currently a level-six arcanist and sixth-circle sorcerer. It was said that he had almost nine thousand arcana credits due to the introduction of Influence Factor, thus he was going to reach level seven in less than two years. Also, those who were standing behind Lucien Evans were at least senior-rank sorcerers, including his condisciples Thompson and Chloe, as well as the Lord of Storm! There was no way that a level-four arcanist and fifth-circle sorcerer like her could seek revenge.

...

Having no idea that Lauren had fallen, Lucien was enjoying black tea as well as the crispy spring morning.

Sensing that someone was approaching, Lucien slowly turned around and saw Sprint push open the lab door and walk in.

"Morning, Sprint. That's early." Lucien smiled.

Sprint was startled, for as a second-circle sorcerer, he did not sense his teacher's presence at all. Was it because Mr. Evans had progressed further again?

"I have been coming early recently... Got some work to do in the lab," answered Sprint honestly. Lucien was currently the only person he felt a bit afraid of, since he had not met the Lord of Storm yet.

Lucien nodded slightly, and walked away from the window with the teacup in his hand. "Jerome's achievement motivated you, didn't it? Good. It's good to apply your pride to things like these."

Sprint did not want to admit, instead, he looked around and saw the pile of parchment. "Sir, are you turning in papers again?"

"Just one. I'll wait for a few more days," said Lucien peacefully.

"Why? The next issue of Arcana is about to come out," asked Sprint. He believed that the paper was about something big, since he saw how hard his teacher had worked in the past days.

Lucien shook his head and smiled. "A few more days."

Before Sprint could say anything, the gate of the lab opened again. The students Annick, Heidi, Katrina, Layria, and Chely filed in, and were all surprised when seeing their teacher and Sprint.

Lucien nodded in satisfaction. As a teacher, he was happy to see his students working hard.

It had been three years. Chely had become a real sorcerer last year, and the rest of the students had reached the second circle. Among them, Annick was the leading one. He had come close to middle-rank. Keeping up with the most advanced arcana theories had benefited them a lot.

...

On the Solar Islands, the arcanists including Blake were gathered in the hall to listen to Truth of the World. They always enjoyed discussing with each other while listening.

Today should be the releasing day of the latest issue of Arcana and the other journals. The programme of the channel, Watching Magic, which was broadcast at nine in the morning, was going to briefly introduce the important papers on the journals.

This programme did not mean much to sorcerers in Allyn and Rentato. However, for them who lived remotely from the big cities, they really appreciated this first-hand update.

The sorcerers on the Solar Islands were particularly big fans of the programme. On the islands, soon after the last issue of Arcana and the other journals arrived, the next issue was already available in Allyn. The programme helped them pick out the most important papers, thus their time was greatly saved.

"Welcome to Watching Magic. I'm your old friend, Eagle."

The gentle and rich male voice came out from the radio. "Now with me are the latest issue of the ten journals. I'll start with this month's Arcana, the one that everyone has been waiting for so long so badly. I know that, including me, we have all been waiting for His Excellency Mr. Brook's and Mr. Lauren's experiment results. Will this month's Arcana tell us the answer?"

Blake silently clenched his fists.

The other arcanists were also very nervous and excited. Today might be the day of overthrowing the light quantum hypothesis and defending the wave theory of light.

"Alright... I do see two papers here — one from Mr. Brook and the other from Mr. Lauren. Let's take a look at Mr. Brook's paper first."

The short silence became burning to the arcanists present.

A few seconds later, Eagle finally started reading, but his tone was a bit hesitant. "... I did the experiment to fight against the light quantum hypothesis. However, the result and the experiment image perfectly matched the features of the light quanta. I have to admit that my effort for denying the hypothesis turned out to be, at this stage, the evidence supporting it."

Blake abruptly lifted his head out of the astonishment. His head buzzed. Since he was listening to the radio, instead of reading the paper on his own, and also, most importantly, his meditation world had changed gradually in the past several years, his soul only suffered some slight damage. Two trails of blood came out from his nose.

However, as soon as he looked up, sticky blood and tissues splashed onto his face, covering his eyes and mouth. The smell of blood went all the way up to his brain, and all he could see had been covered with this thick red and white.

"... Sonia's head exploded...!"

He heard other arcanists' dazed and terrified voice.

Something fell down to the ground.

Head? It took Blake a second to comprehend the situation, and then his stomach started churning. Hurriedly turned aside, he puked badly.

Somehow, when Blake was puking, he also felt a bit lucky — Fortunately, there was only one whose head exploded after hearing the result.

Chapter 454: Gloating

Chapter 454: Gloating

In the magic tower of the Congress' headquarter in Allyn.

The always young and vigorous Rachel had put on a dark magic robe, which revealed her heavy mood. She had been waiting for the final result of the experiments conducted by His Excellency Mr. Brook and Mr. Lauren, wondering what the results would be and if they could deny Lucien's light quantum hypothesis.

Affected by her best friend Samantha, Rachel's cognitive world had changed a lot in the past three years. She was no longer a solid supporter of the wave theory of light, instead, she was now even leaning towards Lucien Evans' hypothesis. However, all the knowledge that she had acquired since she was an apprentice, together with the classic double-slit interference image as well as the Brook bright spot, all reminded her that light displayed the nature of the wave.

Maybe just like Lucien said, they should go up to a higher level to examine the stalemate between the wave and the particle theory. Rachel thought to herself before stepping on the stairs. Taking back her right foot, she quickly turned around and headed for the exchange office. Although in her teacher's office, she would get to read the latest issue of Arcana half an hour later, Rachel could not wait any longer.

Her pace was slightly faster than usual. When she came close to the exchange office, Rachel saw it was crowded with people. She was not surprised — Everyone was waiting for the experiment result of the wave and particle war. Normally, there wasn't such a big crowd waiting for Arcana, as most arcanists below senior-rank could not understand all the articles on it.

Rachel forced her way into the crowd, trying to reach one of the desks in the corner surrounded by slightly less people. What made her feel strange was that the crowd was rather quiet. Strangely quiet.

“What happened?” Rachel wondered. Driven by curiosity, Rachel cast a couple of spells on herself and pushed herself to the exchange desk surrounded by most people.

“Ah!... ” The short scream stopped abruptly.

Rachel saw an incomplete body, head exploded... red blood, white brain tissues, and the latest issue of Arcana lying open on the floor.

Many arcanists in the crowd had killed someone in the past, however, the scene was still too much for them. After all, in the recent hundred years, head-exploding was just a remote story told by seniors. Only some middle-rank and senior-rank sorcerers from the Will of Elements and the Hand of Paleness had witnessed it once. On the contrary, pastors or cardinals turning into a holy light torch or fireworks could be seen every once in a while.

Those low-rank sorcerers and apprentices who hadn't been sent out on missions before were even more frightened. Murmuring the terrifying name and the title, Headcrusher, their faces had turned pale as if their heads were tightly grasped in the claws of a devil lord.

Rachel wondered if more arcanists would come to her and her teacher for illusionary therapy for curing mental trauma in the future; After all, Chicken Soup for the Soul was popular among arcanists... She had no idea why the thought came to her at this depressing moment.

The scene was not the major cause of the stressful and terrifying atmosphere, instead, it was because of the journal lying open on the floor. On the page shown, there were several lines of bold letters,

“... I did the experiment for fighting against the light quantum hypothesis. However, the result and the experiment image perfected matched the features of the light quanta. So I have to admit that my effort for denying the hypothesis turned out to be, at this stage, the evidence supporting it...”

“— Edwyn Brook, grand arcanist, level four in the legendary class ‘the Emperor of Control.’”

Rachel removed her eyesight from the page and turned to look up at the ceiling. She did not know what to say — Since she became a student of the magic school, the wave theory was one of the most fundamental beliefs introduced by her teachers. In her mind, the wave theory of light was like a giant tower, standing straight up on the solid ground just like the other theoretical systems put forward by His Excellency Mr. Douglas and Mr. Brook.

She felt that the world had become strange to her.

The rare sentimental feeling seized Rachel’s heart. Silently, she retreated herself from the crowd and then went to the Arcana Review Board. Knocking at the door of her teacher’s office, Rachel felt that she was like a child seeking her mother’s comfort.

“Come in.” Isabella’s voice came from behind the door.

Hearing her teacher’s voice, Rachel suddenly woke up from her dreamlike wandering and found herself in the wrong place. She was supposed to go to the Brain and Hormone Research Center beside the Atom Institution to wait for her teacher. Also, Ms. Isabella wasn’t supposed to be in her office this early.

Carefully pushing open the door, Rachel saw that her teacher’s magic robe had turned into a long black dress. On Isabella’s chest, there was a small white flower.

“Who is it...?” Rachel asked carefully.

“Lauren, Christal...” Isabella said the names sorrowfully. She had known those stubborn mages for quite some years.

“Mr. Lauren...?” Rachel recalled the look of the tall and thin elder man. But what left her with the deepest impression about him was the row of badges in front of his chest, indicating the great honor that belonged him.

Isabella nodded, her eyes glistening. “Yes, an archmage has fallen. An archmage who once won the highest honor in the school of Electromagnetism, Light-darkness, and Thermodynamics has fallen. He was eliminated by the development of arcana and magic...”

“...” Rachel suddenly understood the cruelty of the world.

In front of her student, Isabella forced a smile on her face to cheer her up. “Don’t be afraid. Don’t get lost. This is not something abnormal. When I was young, every once in a while, some particle theory supporters’ head would explode. This is why there are now so few arcanists supporting the particle theory right now. You should feel lucky, Rachel, so should I, for we had the past three years to get prepared. The committee members who reviewed the papers of Mr. Brook and Mr. Lauren thus survived. They just need a few months to have their soul recover from the trauma.”

“I understand.” When she was in school, Rachel read about this piece of history. During that period of time, His Excellency Mr. Brook’s outstanding talent was glowing and he managed to overthrow the particle theory of light. Stepping on blood and exploded heads, he finally ascended to the throne of grand arcanist and became the second top legendary in the congress. It was said that a close friend of Mr. Douglas, who was a member of the Highest Council and also a legendary archmage at that time, fell together with his demiplane.

But reading history from books and seeing it with her own eyes were two completely different stories. Rachel’s heart was still palpitating from the horrible scene.

Seeing that her student’s face still looked pale, Isabella walked to Rachel and gently stroked her hair, like a mom comforting her daughter. “An era of progress is coming. In the past several decades when Mr. Brook brought the huge revolution to the Congress, we saw new leaders entering the stage — The two grand arcanists, Hellen and Vicente, as well as the other four legendary sorcerers. The power of the Congress of Magic almost doubled. Now we have more archmages and senior-rank mages than ever before. When I was young, the Congress only had about twenty archmages, but now we have sixty-two... sixty-one.”

“This is our chance,” said Isabella, “keep it in mind. We shall never become blindly obsessed with our belief nor lose our faith. We must believe in facts.”

...

In the Radiance Church in Holm.

“Lauren, Lightning of Destruction, ranking no. 76 on the Cleansing List.” Vaharall read the list with a big smile on his face, “Christal, Bloody Thunder, no. 269 on the Cleansing List... Oh, I wish that I could give Mr. Lucien Evans, our Professor, a Night Angel badge, in order to honor his great contribution to eliminating the vicious sorcerers!”

After spending a long time in Holm, Vaharall had learned the standard Holm Crown prize awarding speech and turned it into a joke.

Stone, the divine knight, also laughed hard. “An archmage, three senior-rank sorcerers, twenty-seven middle-rank sorcerers... not to mention those whose cognitive worlds have gone broken and solidified! If Lucien Evans is willing to become a night watcher, he would definitely be in top five because of these numbers!”

There were only three legends in the Inquisition, and one of them was an ancient sorcerer who had converted, therefore, he was also in the ranking of the night watchers. The ancient sorcerer once killed a legendary ranking in the top 30 on the Cleansing List, and thus became the top night watcher. Although there were many senior-ranks in the team, no more than ten had reached the power of the ninth circle, even few had ever cleansed a level-nine arcanist and ninth-circle sorcerer like Lauren.

Philibell could not hold back his smile as well. This was the most wonderful news to him in the past ten years. To them, it did not matter at all whether light was wave or particle. There were pastors devoured by the holy light before when Brook proved that light was a type of electromagnetic wave, but it was because of the fact that the finding had deprived the divinity of light. As for the light quantum hypothesis, they were totally fine with it.

Rubbing his thick white beard, Philibell grinned.

“What a pity that Evans failed to explode Brook’s head, or the Pope would have to give him the title of Saint. You two remember the time when some were saying that we should directly call Brook a Saint? Compared with Brook, Lucien Evans is still a bit behind, isn’t he?”

Hearing the comment, Vaharall and Stone burst out loud laughter, gloating over their enemy’s loss.

“It is said that Brook was also badly hurt by this. I wonder how does his cognitive world look like right now. If his cognitive world has gone broken and solidified, I have to say that this is the perfect arrangement of the God of Truth. So many years ago, he took away countless pastors’ faithful hearts and destroyed many sorcerers’ cognitive worlds. What goes around comes around,” said Philibell piously. He deeply believed in the existence of the God of Truth, more faithfully now than ever before.

“Only Truth lives forever.” Vaharall and Stone drew a cross in front of their chest together.

Then the three exchanged a look with each other and smiled again.

Philibell said humorously, “shall we pray for ‘Saint’ Lucien Evans? Let’s pray for his safety so he can carry on his glorious mission serving the Lord?”

...

“New... Al-che-my?” Fernando stressed each syllable of the title of Lucien’s new paper. His scarlet eyes stared at the calm and composed Lucien alertly.

Chapter 455: Creation and Destruction

Today, Lucien felt totally relaxed standing in front of Fernando.

"Sir, this paper is about the microworld. Using a new particle found inside the atom and two recently discovered elements, I further improved your atom structure model and applied it to describing alchemical reactions and explaining ionization and valence. As this study looks into the secret behind the transformation of matters, perhaps it can fulfill the shared dream of the generations of alchemists. So I named this new theoretical system 'New Alchemy.'"

"A new particle found inside an atom and two new elements?" The look on Fernando eased a bit. He asked casually as he started reading the paper.

After the belief that atom was indivisible had been discarded, the exploration of the inner structure of the atom had stepped into a brand new realm. Fernando felt a bit more relaxed since the paper in his hands was certainly not going to destroy any sorcerer's cognitive world, as no one was using the brand new theories to construct his or her meditation environment.

When Lucien first appeared in his office with the new paper, Fernando had to admit that he was quite worried. The aftermath of the experimental verification of the light quantum hypothesis was not over yet, and Allyn could not bear to see more sorcerers' head explode.

Personally speaking, Fernando, also found the bloody scene quite thrilling to some degree. However, it would definitely scare away the younger generation from joining the Congress to pursue their magic dream. That would be bad, as, despite the improvement of the theory system, reduction in the subsequent generation's population would impact the Congress' strength.

"I was inspired by your experiment, Sir, the one using helium atomic beams to bombard a thin foil of metal. So I turned to bombard gases and knocked out hydrogen nucleus from nitrogen.

The nucleus carries one unit of positive charge, so I believe that a new particle has been found. Then, the discovery of the positive ray confirmed my belief. As for the two new elements, I found their traces when analyzing the radioactive substance, based on the experiment that you temporarily put aside."

Seeing the look on Fernando's face softened, Lucien knew what Fernando was thinking. He could not help but slightly shake his head, as the realm they were stepping into now was going to be even more subversive and incredible than ever before. The knowledge they were going to obtain would overturn most sorcerers' macro-cognition and ontology.

Fernando had finished reading the part on the discovery of the proton. He commented. "If it wasn't because of your light quantum hypothesis, Hathaway and I would continue the study of the radioactive substance, and perhaps we would have already discovered the elements..."

Again, he perfectly saved his praise to his student.

Fernando kept reading and quickly browsed the data of the two newly-discovered elements. He started frowning again. "Your research data is saying that the two elements come from the decay of the previous element. This is one step into the Gods' zone. No wonder you call it New Alchemy."

"In fact, combining this with the finding of the proton, a theoretical system explaining the transformation of matter can probably be built," said Lucien with the same calm look on his face.

Fernando suddenly looked up at Lucien, his scarlet eyes filled with fine lightning. His great power enveloped Lucien.

"You know what you're talking about?"

Lucien was being careful with his words, using 'probably' to soften his tone. However, Fernando had directly caught the point — His student just claimed that a theoretical system had been built!

If he could call it a system, it would not only consist of one or two hypotheses!

"I do," replied Lucien.

Fernando kept on asking. "Do you understand that you are heading into the forbidden zone, trying to take over the Gods' power of creating the universe for human beings?"

"I do," answered Lucien determinedly.

Fernando asked one more time, "Then do you understand what this means?"

"I do. It will change the time. And it means the title of grand arcanist." Lucien answered while looking directly into Fernando's eyes. "... But the system is still on the theoretical level. Currently, the magic circles and alchemical techniques are not qualified for carrying out specific experiments. It will take a long time to verify the system."

Fernando closed his eyes for a while as if he was taking a break. Then he picked up Lucien's paper and continued to read. He did not make any further comment again until he saw Lucien's prediction of the existence of the neutron.

"Reasonable..." The Lord of Storm slightly nodded. "... So this is the reason behind the differences between the elements. The periodicity can also be explained. With the theoretical guidance and the method of particle bombardment, it will be just a matter of time for the neutron to be found."

"So Sir, you do believe that particle bombardment can be a regular technique, right?" Asked Lucien expectedly.

Fernando was a bit amused and cast a glance at his student. "You have believed it for quite a long time, haven't you. Aren't you adding these kinds of magic circles to your magic tower? Adding these magic circles is very time-consuming."

"Sir, you've been there?" Lucien was a bit surprised. He did not expect that his teacher would pay a visit to his magic tower under construction.

"Two silver hollow metal semi-rings engraved with magic circles. And a feeling hard to describe..." Fernando would not admit that he was secretly paying close attention to his student, and he roughly described the underground part of Lucien's magic tower. "... I roughly know what you are trying to do."

"A cyclotron. It accelerates charged particles outwards from the center along a spiral path, so cyclotron beams can be used to better bombard other atoms..." Lucien briefly introduced his concept. "Theoretically speaking, the acceleration is limitless. But due to many factors, there is indeed a range. But the result will already be much better than before."

The many factors that Lucien ambiguously mentioned were in fact relativistic effects.

"Limitless... bombardment... I feel that you're destroying the world..." Fernando repeated the keywords and rubbed his brows. "... But this isn't bad. I think I'll get one as well."

Fernando was also a fanatic when it came to doing experiments.

"When I reach the legendary level and own my demiplane, I want to have a Large Collider!" In front of his teacher, Lucien did not need to hide his passion and dream.

There was a smile on Fernando's face for a second, and then he went back on reading the paper. Based on the atom model and the theory of decay, the following sections of the paper were very logical, thus they were totally within Fernando's expectation. Finally, when he saw the part in which Lucien introduced the quantum theory into the understanding of electron orbits, he pressed his lips against each other into a line and then said, "before the light quantum hypothesis was proved, I would scold you for this. But now even light's quantization has been proven, the quantization of electron orbit seems acceptable."

Lucien grinned. This was the chance that he had been waiting for.

"But it is still hard to believe that electrons are also doing space jumps and skipping the areas in between... Is it because they have special properties?" Fernando was using his own understanding to explain the transition of electrons.

In Lucien's expectation, Fernando would give him a good lesson after reading this part on the quantum jump, since the discontinuous transition indeed seemed to be absurd. However, he forgot that space jump worked in this world, which made the concept more acceptable by sorcerers.

So Lucien answered in a low voice. "Currently there's no idea why it works like this. Though it is a logical conclusion following quantization."

Fernando did not make any further comments on the following predictions made by Lucien. He kept reading until he finished the last part on explaining alchemical reactions using atomic electron transition and describing ionization and valence. He put down the paper and said to Lucien rather seriously,

"There are still contradictions between your new alchemy system and the classic electromagnetism theory. Perhaps further improvements are needed. But I currently do agree with you on the structure of the atomic nucleus and the transformation of matters, and on the extranuclear electrons and alchemical reactions."

"Ever since human beings acquired magic, the history of alchemy also started..." Fernando took a pause. "... But you are the first one pointing out what alchemy is!"

Fernando rarely spoke so highly of Lucien, and this praise made Lucien's face flush.

However, Lucien had to say that the Congress's progress in the school of Alchemy was rather imbalanced. The arcanists were reaching the level of matter transformation, yet on the other hand, the research on the structure and the synthesis of organics was still in its infancy.

"Because of your theory, the school of Alchemy is now included in the school of Element. If Hathaway could accept, assimilate, and further improve your theory, she will become a top legendary in a few years." Fernando said a bit emotionally.

Lucien cared more about his own teacher. "Then what about you, Sir?"

"Me? I am shifting between too many interests, so my promotion has always been relatively slow. The atomic structure and matter transformation do not have much to do with my legendary class, unless they are related to studies on energy blast or high temperature. If they do, I can go up further and become a top legendary." Fernando treated this topic as one of his jokes, as he knew it well the result of focusing on too many fields and always being distracted.

Lucien nodded, but made no comment.

Fernando stared deeply into Lucien's eyes and said, "when this theoretical system is fully developed, you should be able to obtain the magic pattern for creating your own legendary class through the interaction between your cognitive world and the real world. Because of the nature of your theoretical system, when you become a top legendary or a demigod, you should be able to directly manipulate the particles and energy and turn them into various matters. Your title can be 'the Creator'."

"It's such a provocative title to the Church." Lucien smiled. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click for visiting.

If he could manipulate the particles and energy, Lucien thought to himself, he would be able to make use of the power of fusion reactions. Then his title should not be 'the Creator', instead, he should be called 'the Lord of Destruction'.

Creation and destruction were two sides of the same coin in the sense of the particle world.

Fernando found Lucien's response funny. "So your New Alchemy system isn't something provocative to the Church?"

Before Lucien could say anything, Fernando grabbed the paper on the desk and said to him, "Let's go and find Douglas. We'll have a plan to give the Church a good strike. They've been enjoying themselves for too long recently."

Chapter 456: The Mad Dog

In Douglas's magic tower in his demiplane.

The latest issue of Arcana beside him, Artil burst out loud laughter. "It's been proven! I knew it! What a pity that I wasn't there in Brook's lab and missed the chance to see the look on his face! He must be beyond desperate! I'd be laughing in my sleep now if his cognitive world had exploded just like that idiot Lauren!"

Joy. Wild joy. Artil could not hold it back.

Fed up with Artil's crazy spirit, Norman coughed a bit and secretly thought to himself that Artil indeed deserved the title of the Mad Dog — that was how the other arcanists called Artil.

Norman's face was a bit pale from the injury in his soul. Using Douglas' lab, he just verified the conclusion published in the journal.

To find the mysterious dimension, the legends in the congress had gone all out. Very frequently, they had to leave Allyn for the exploration. Therefore, although Douglas was also paying lots of attention to the verification of the light quantum hypothesis, his progress in improving the magic circles was slower than that of Lauren. However, after the design of the experiment was published in Arcana, it only took him half an hour to finish the improvement.

Luciana was in a very good mood as well. After the suppression of all these years had been released, she did share the same wild joy with Artil. However, she was definitely much more restrained. "Lucien Evans is indeed the most promising one of the younger generation to become the next grand arcanist. His hypothesis derives from the perspective which was ignored by all our particle theory supporters. I'm starting to appreciate the light quantum theory now. Maybe the form of the world is actually discontinuous..."

"If it is discontinuous, then what about calculus?!" scolded Artil. The fact that he had paid Lucien the fifty-thousand arcana points did not mean that he had fully accepted the hypothesis. In his eyes, Lucien's hypothesis was just another variation of the particle theory, and it had nothing to do with if the world was continuous or not.

"There must be something wrong with the hypothesis! It has to be changed! I'd say the same thing even if Lucien Evans was standing right in front of me!" said Artil.

By the way, Lucien had used the fifty-thousand arcana points to pay off his debt with the Lord of Storm.

Luciana was just expressing her happiness, and she used 'maybe' before her ideas. However, it still triggered Artil's anger. Luciana felt offended and her lips moved silently in the shape of the words,

"Mad Dog."

Artil did not care about Norman and Luciana's attitude at all. He picked up a piece of information and read it, then let out a satisfied and vicious laugh. "Lauren, Christal... An archmage, three senior-rank mages, twenty-seven middle-rank sorcerers, and more whose cognitive worlds have gone broken and solidified. Those bloody wave theory supporters finally got what they deserve! When they were showing off their victory years ago, had they ever imagined today's situation? When Brook reached his throne of grand arcanist stepping on blood and brains, had he ever thought of his miserable ending?"

His hatred was even stronger than what Luciana and Norman imagined. Luciana frowned. Although she was also a supporter of the particle theory, she still thought that Artil's hatred was too much — Lauren and the others were all sorcerers of the Congress, one shouldn't act such happy and thrilled to their death.

Norman looked quite pissed. When he was just about to refute Artil's words, the look on his face suddenly changed to respect.

"Sir."

Douglas had walked down the stairs. Slightly frowning, he said to Artil. "Mind your manner, Artil. There are still phenomena, including the classic double-slit interference image, that cannot be explained by the light quantum hypothesis. We have to remain careful and humble all the time. All the sorcerers who died are our companions. We do have disagreements, but we still share the same goal — to strengthen the Congress of Magic."

"Yes, Sir..." Artil held back his joy. "Lucien Evans is the one who made this happen; too bad he couldn't carry out the accurate experiment three years ago. I wonder how he's feeling right now, and what he is working on."

"I heard that Lucien Evans is working on particle bombardment following his teacher, the Lord of Storm," answered Norman. As a member of the Affair Committee in charge of the Magic Engineering Department, he knew that the department was sending senior-rank sorcerers to Lucien's Atom Institution to improve the facilities.

Douglas nodded. "Fernando has taken Lucien here. Artil, if you really want to know, you could directly ask them. Norman, if you don't feel comfortable seeing Lucien, you can go back. Don't force yourself to do it."

Norman was a bit discouraged. "No matter what I think, the experiment result speaks the loudest."

"Great. I was about to thank him and have a conversation with him in person." Luciana, on the other hand, was surprised and delighted.

She was working on improving her own meditation method using the light quantum hypothesis, and she had many questions to ask. Some of the questions she could talk to Douglas, but the rest would be most efficiently solved if she could directly talk to Lucien.

Artil was also excited. "I have to ask him if he still has other experiment clues for completely destroying the wave theory!" Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

— And send most sorcerers in the Congress who were above middle-rank to death?

Casting an angry glance at Artil, Luciana hoped that Artil knew what he was trying to encourage.

After a few minutes, Lucien, who was wearing the black double-breasted suit and his monocle, walked into the small living room following the Lord of Storm.

"Got something new again?" Douglas saw the thick pile of parchment in Fernando's hand.

The paper rose up in the air and flew to Douglas.

"Lucien's 'New Alchemy'. Take a look at it yourself," said Fernando.

Fernando's scarlet eyes looked around. Artil, Norman, and Luciana all took a step back spontaneously from his vigor. With the Lord of Storm present, they dared not to pry into the paper using their spiritual power.

Seeing that Fernando was being unusually serious, Douglas started reading the paper attentively,

As he read further, Douglas's mouth slightly opened and raised his right hand, as if he was about to make some strong comments. But he held himself back and kept reading.

Time went by. And it had been two hours.

Douglas's students just waited there. They dared not to talk or even use Telepathic Bond. Douglas should not be disturbed at this moment — They knew it very well.

Before the fall of the ancient Magic Empire, Douglas had already become an archmage. He was deeply influenced by the Empire's tradition in the relation between students and teachers — although Douglas was indeed kind and patient to his students, his students had to be deferential to him as well.

Douglas finally put down the paper on the walnut table, and then he closed his eyes. In the following half-hour, he was quiet and seemed to be simulating something in his own cognitive world.

Finally, Douglas opened his eyes and said to them rather seriously,

"The Church has always been accusing us of profaning the divinity of God, of attempting to step into the forbidden realm that only belonged to God. However, we are all aware of the fact that we do not deserve such high comments from our enemy. We have just peeled off some holy wrappings on the outside, but are still far away from that realm. But now, it will be different. The theoretical system in Lucien's paper has brought us right to the gate of the forbidden realm, and what is needed for pushing open the gate is the experimental proof. Finally, we won't let the Church down anymore.

"But we can only fully rely on the theoretical system until the experiment's proof is available. Lucien, your theoretical system can only be verified until the neutron is found, until how an element is changed by bombardment is proved, and until all your predictions come true. All the grand arcanists after me have gone through this after their theoretical systems first came out."

The title, grand arcanist, only emerged after Douglas's theoretical system was widely accepted.

When he was talking to Lucien, Douglas seemed to be a bit excited.

Finally, they had approached the truth of the world, the secrets behind magic!

The power of creation had always been the ultimate pursuit among all sorcerers! They were now much closer to the dream than ever before!

If human beings could do the same thing as Gods could, then what was the meaning of having Gods?

"What? Grand arcanist? The forbidden realm of God?" Asked Artil hurriedly.

After looking at Fernando and saw him slightly nodding, Douglas allowed the finding in the paper to be revealed to the students present. After all, the paper was going to be submitted very soon.

"Lucien's new theoretical system, New Alchemy, will be able to give us insight into the secret of matters and hand us the power of creating. It's going to be a theoretical system capable of changing the era," said Fernando.

"... What?" Norman could not believe what he just heard.

Luciana's spirit had been lifted again after the long wait. She looked at her teacher and the paper on the table and then turned to look at Lucien. She wondered if another grand arcanist was about to appear — a twenty-something-years-old grand arcanist.

Seeing the elegant, well-mannered young man standing in front of him, she could not imagine a man like this just claimed that he had mastered the secret of creating the universe.

She suddenly understood how the pastors in the Church felt. There was no way that they could accept the fact that there was no difference between God and human beings.

Artil shook his head fiercely. "This is impossible! Nobody can step into God's realm! Impossible!" He was even more agitated than when he attacked the wave theory supporters.

As if he had gone mad, Artil suddenly made a rush for the paper beside Douglas and picked it up.

Fernando was just about to stop him, but saw Douglas slightly frowning and shaking his head, so he decided to remain silent and watch.

Lucien felt that he had grasped something.

"Proton... Neutron... Electron... Nonsense! How dare you make such a claim without any experiment support?" Artil turned to Lucien and asked furiously with a completely distorted look on his face.

Lucien answered calmly. "If you don't believe in the existence of proton, I can go to the lab and prove it to you on the spot. As for the prediction of the neutron, it's based on atomic weight, proton mass, and electronic mass. It makes sense logically."

"Then let's go to the lab!" Artil grabbed the paper and started heading for the lab, and he saw Lucien followed him behind at a leisurely pace.

Nodded in confidence, Lucien said, "no problem. I'll show you two experiments. Also, we should be able to locate the trace of the new element in the radioactive substance now."

He was referring to the fifth-circle spell for collecting small amount of elements put forward by Hathaway.

Norman and Luciana had no idea what was going on. Why was Artil acting so weird? Why would he hate Lucien so much for this? Was it because that he hate someone who could receive the title of grand arcanist at so young an age, someone just like Brook?

"It must be a fake experiment... It must be..."

As Artil saw Lucien's attitude and knew that the design of the paper was reliable and the data was persuasive, the look on his face was replaced by perplexity. "How's this possible? This is... God's realm..."

Lucien then saw a beam of bright light burst out from Artil's body and devoured him.

Before the power of the light could spread out, Douglas's magic shield had stopped it.

The scene of the light spots slowly falling down was as beautiful as a dream. Watching it, Lucien knew that his sense had been correct.

Artil was not mad. He was not really a 'Mad Dog'.

"No wonder he was continuously challenging the wave theory..."

"If he had believed in the particle theory that bad, his head would have exploded years ago..."

Chapter 457: The Heart of Faith

"Such a good student, Douglas."

When the small firework died out, Fernando said a bit sarcastically.

Douglas seemed to have aged in seconds. With the bitter smile on his face, he said, "ever since Brook became a grand arcanist based on the electromagnetism theory and the wave theory, I noticed that Artil started behaving strangely. He was prone to exaggerate things, and often said that the reason why there were currently unexplorable and unexplainable questions was that we had not found the Origin. I first thought that it was because Brook's achievement was too much for him to take. But then I started feeling suspicious... and I did find some clues later..."

He released a gentle sigh and continued. "... Then he seemed to become aware of it. He came to me and confessed that he was trying to take advantage of the Church to get rid of Brook instead of actually believing in the God of Truth, and that the more the Church had trusted him, the more useful it would be for the Congress. Artil has been my student for more than a hundred years; I watched him grow up from a thirteen- or fourteen-year-old kid. I thought I knew him well, so I didn't invade his mind. I chose to trust him at the time being and tested him with other methods...

"Artil behaved well when we launched the artificial planet and when the electron was discovered. Also, he had always been strongly against the wave theory in the past years, so I lowered my alert... I didn't expect this..."

Norman and Luciana finally realized that Artil was a spy of the Church. It was the holy light that killed him, not head explosion! But Artil cast magic, not divine spells!

"Unless a demiplane was formed based on his cognitive world, there was no way for us to track if his part of his cognitive world demonstrates divine creation," said Fernando rather seriously. While the sorcerers' power grew when they got closer to the truth of the world, the clergy's power came from their faith. Once their faith became unstable, they would lose all their power or even be devoured by the holy light. Therefore, the Congress was unable to send any higher-rank spies into the Church.

Lucien nodded thoughtfully. After integrating the Light of Faith into his cognitive world, although Artil was not able to cast divine spells, he more or less believed in the existence and power of the God of Truth. Therefore, when his faith was shaken, the holy light burst out when his cognitive world collapsed and devoured him before his head exploded, which was a sharp contrast to the old mage from before, who believed in the God of Truth but whose head exploded. Lucien guessed that this depended on which side played a more dominant role in the cognitive world.

In this case, it seemed that the power of Sard, and the power of the North Church's pope and the Saints, as well as that of the heretics of the Saint Truth that Lucien once met, did still come from their faith.

It seemed that as long as they still had faith in the God of Truth, no matter how their understanding of the doctrine and cognition changed, they were still able to use divine spells without being devoured by the holy light.

But Sard and the heretics didn't seem to be that devoted to the God of Truth either... Lucien rubbed his chin in confusion.

"In fact, I also suspected him... but I put the thought aside seeing that he was fine after Evans's Miracle Experiment," Norman recalled. "... He had two friends in the Affair Committee; they could influence many things indirectly."

A veteran senior-rank sorcerer like Artil, although bad-tempered, still had quite a few friends.

"I'll have Vicente investigate them," said Douglas briefly.

Meanwhile, Lucien started analyzing the constitution of Artil's cognitive world. "He did not see Miracle Experiment with his own eyes, and he had been mentally prepared by convincing himself that the experiment could not completely deny Creationism, but simply offered another possibility. Also, there was no following theory coming up to further support the experiment. However, New Alchemy is based on a complete and reasonable theoretical system. Once the neutron is discovered, following the system, creating spells that could overtake the throne of creation will become possible and practical. It's too much for him."

"So, in his cognitive world, the God of Truth should be the origin of the universe and the initial creator." Fernando drew the conclusion and then turned to Douglas. "I was about to ask you how we can use New Alchemy to give a good strike to the Church, but here we got a spy first."

"If we wait until when the neutron is found and when the new spells for permanently changing matters are created to publish New Alchemy, at least one or two saint cardinals will fall. But now because of Artil's death, the Church will soon find this out. When they are mentally prepared, we'll miss the chance." Douglas regained his usual calmness, but the loving smile on his face had disappeared.

There were horrible storms in Fernando's red eyes. "You investigated him before, right? So you should know how he reached out to the Church. Seize this opportunity, and give the Church a good lesson."

"To make it a harsh lesson, just the New Alchemy without experiments as proof might not be enough. I'll have Atlant join us here to come up with a plan and create the most powerful atmosphere for mental hint." Douglas slightly nodded and gestured Norman and Luciana to remain his office for a while.

...

In the headquarter of the Will of Elements, the royal magic tower of Holm.

Raventi just received a thick pile of paper and a thin piece of secret message.

"New Alchemy? Lucien Evans?" Raventi slightly frowned when seeing such a brief and general title.

But he knew that Lucien was always being very cautious and precise, so there must be a reason why he chose the title. He put the question aside and started reading the paper.

The school of Element and Alchemy were always closely interrelated with each other. Therefore, the Holm Crown prize was also the highest award shared by the two schools. The four arcana review members from the Will of Elements were also authorities in the field of Alchemy.

As soon as he started reading, Raventi sunk into Lucien's paper deeper and deeper. His brows twitched and his hands were slightly trembling as if he was truly an old man.

After a long time, he seemed to be a bit out of control and roared in a low voice to himself. "So, this is the deep-hiding secret behind matters!?"

His sight became blurry. In the vagueness, there seemed to be a white-haired old man who was so thin that pretty much only bones were left lying on a bed in the magic robe of element. His soul was severely damaged by the failure of the lich-transforming rite and was near collapsing, however, his voice was full of great passion and solemnity.

"Raventi, do you know what it means – the word 'Alchemy'?"

"It means our dream – to master the secret of matters!"

"Take my place, carry the dream on!"

Raventi closed his eyes and murmured, "Sir, can you see this? New Alchemy!"

Lost in this atmosphere, Raventi took a long time to calm down. Then he picked up the secret message.

"Artil is a spy from the Church? He's devoured by holy light after reading New Alchemy?" Raventi's brows knitted together.

He finished reading the message and called the student waiting outside in.

"Go and check who is close to Artil." Raventi gave the order.

"Why?" His student confused.

Raventi repeated the message to his student and asked solemnly, "understand?"

"Yes." His student was just about to turn around, but he suddenly thought of something and asked, "Sir, shall we keep the message a secret?"

"The message can be revealed. Accessing the message doesn't require a high level of authority." Raventi recalled the notes behind the message.

When the student left, Raventi headed for the lab. He had to verify Lucien's experiment first before writing the review.

Mr. Raventi had always been a cautious and conscientious arcanist.

...

In a demiplane, another member from the school of Alchemy whose name was Prado waited beside the desk full of respect.

It seemed that the black-haired, black-eyed man who always had a cunning smile on his face had fallen asleep. Sitting behind the desk, he did not open his eyes even when a doll puppet that had the appearance of a blonde little girl walked in to bring him tea.

After a long time, Klaus sighed. "Finally... I see this alive with my own eyes."

Looking at the delicate expressionless doll, and then turning to look at the bright blue sky outside of the window, he let out a burst of low laughter.

"Such a wonderful world."

"New Alchemy. How far could it go?"

...

In the Radiance Church in Holm.

Philibell had just finished his daily prayers when he saw the cardinal directly rushing in.

"Message! Archangel level!" Cried the cardinal before Philibell could scold him for being so reckless.

Archangel level? Philibell was rather surprised. He wondered if Douglas had reached an even higher level, or if the sorcerers had made any new major discoveries that lead them into the realm of God.

Philibell had lots of questions in his mind. Knowing the importance of the message, he took over the thick pile of parchment and asked the cardinal to invite Stone here.

"Archmage level... from Artil, as expected... important material attached, contains curses..."

Philibell checked the file carefully and noticed that indeed there was cursing power emitting from a small pouch tied to the file. Thus, he trusted the message even more.

"Philibell, what is it?" asked Vaharall. He was right in the church, so it was easy for him to come quickly after receiving the message via the divine circle.

Seeing that there were two legends here as his witnesses, Philibell opened the file and started reading the thick pile of paper.

Seeing the complicated magic spells and arcane symbols, Vaharall looked away and waited for Philibell's summary. Meanwhile, it seemed a bit weird to him to have the entire paper sent to the Church. In most cases, an important piece of paper should be summarized first before being sent. How could the entire file all belong to the archangel level?

As he read further, Philibell's body started trembling out of anger, and his eyes were written with fury. Skipping some parts, he directly jumped to the most important section.

"... In the radioactive substance, I have found the trace of the new element, which perfectly matches what I expected: In the process of radioactive decay, energy and matter are released from helium atomic nucleus and thus new elements are formed..."

There was a line of words here: "See attached material. Important."

Philibell quickly opened the black pouch and saw a piece of ore marked with magic symbols. It was red, but with the emission of the faint rays in three colors – black, white, and green – part of the ore stone turned blue, and then dark radiant green.

The tiny traces of the new element within was amplified by magic, while the magic waves had been hidden by the cursing power.

This was a real piece of ore stone from nature, except that its changing process was presented by the magic tags.

"This is an element turning into another through decay..." Philibell could not help reading further, as if he had been possessed,

"... Since human beings acquired magic, the dream of turning elements into gold has always been there. This is not merely our pursuit of wealth, but the longing for the truth of the world, as we always wish to master the secret of matter transmutation!"

"... However, for thousands of years in the past, there was not a single alchemical reaction which had successfully transmuted a substance fundamentally without relying on a permanent magic circle... In front of the gate of the forbidden zone belonging only to gods, we human beings could not march further..."

Recalling the atom structure put forward by Lucien Evans and how he described the decaying process, Philibell felt that his brain was seized by panic. The answer had emerged in his mind...

"... But now, after discovering the inner structure of the atom, by studying the nature of decay, we can find the path for fundamentally changing matters and substances and creating new elements! Following my theory, although the product might not be worth the cost, we can finally take over the power once exclusively owned by god! Now we see the deepest secrets hiding behind substances, and we are on the way to achieve the shared dream of generations of sorcerers!"

Philibell's head buzzed as if someone just hammered his head. Driven by great fury and hatred, the everlasting peace in his mind was gone.

"How dare these filthy sorcerers to pretend to the throne of creation! How dare you, Lucien Evans!" Roared Philibell.

This was no longer a groundless accusation, but solid evidence. In the upcoming future, Lucien Evans would step into the forbidden realm once only controlled by God!

Before he could say more, several cardinals rushed in, with messages in their hands.

"Your Excellency, Artil has been devoured by the holy light because of New Alchemy!"

"Your Excellency! Confirmed! Artil's faith was shaken; holy light outburst!"

They had no idea that Artil was a spy before this, but now they had all realized what was going on.

The messages arrived just in time. Philibell got a bit confused and helpless – He thought that the finding still needed to wait until the discovery of neutron to be proved.

His eyesight fell on the bottom line of the message. The words had turned scarlet under the rays. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

"Artil has been devoured by holy light. What about you?"

The red ore stone in his left hand was still emitting rays; it was still turning into a blue new element.

Philibell heard his heart thumping. Voice and sound faded away from him. He simply could not look away from the red decaying stone, and he even used divine power to verify it.

It turned out that the decaying process was indeed real, the same with the existence of the new element. Lucien Evans's description was correct. If the process could be controlled or even reversed, the changing of matter could no more be a secret which once only belonged to God.

Fear and panic possessed him. Philibell could not help murmuring to himself.

"The Lord is still almighty! The Lord is still the origin of the universe. But... but if an ordinary human being can do the same thing as God can do, then..."

Vaharall's eyes suddenly opened big. He sensed the danger a second before it arrived.

Outside the Radiance Church, people walking by were shocked to a powerful, majestic light pillar soar into the air and everything within the range vaped. Then, quickly, the divine circles outside of the church were activated and counteracted the power of the light pillar.

Standing far away from the church, after seeing how the central part of the building was ruined and the clergies who screamed bitterly in the holy light, Douglas sighed. "It has been hundreds of years; we never did any damage to the building. But today we almost completely tore it down."

"But it looks like Philibell is not as devoted as he claimed." With his eyes closed, Atlant the Eye of Curse said to Douglas, Fernando, and Lucien.

In the air, Vaharall looked down at the church which had been severely damaged and the clergies who did not manage to escape, he felt the anger burning his guts, but at the same time, he also felt lucky that he could not understand the paper.

"Philibell, are you alright?" Varahall asked Philibell, who was kneeling on the ground in the center of the huge hole, as if he was making a confession.

"My faith was shaken..." said Philibell bitterly; his grand cardinal robe had been torn into pieces. "... Not only can I never reach the next level, but my power has even receded by one level."

Chapter 458: The Angry Pope

Finishing the experiment together with his teacher, Prado relaxed down as he looked and saw the dreamlike sunset glow. He felt more satisfied than ever, as he had clearly identified the next step he was going to take in the research — find neutron to support Lucien Evans' matter transmutation theory.

He used to think that he would never reach the legendary realm and become an “Excellency” like his teacher, but now the New Alchemy had brought him hope!

With a big smile on his face mixed with excitement and joy, Prado picked up the quill-pen.

“Please first allow me, as an alchemist, to extend my heartfelt gratitude to Lucien Evans, the author of the paper. He has made generations of alchemists' dream come true!

“Starting from fact, Mr. Lucien Evans has made a comprehensive but detailed description of the inner structure of the atom and its properties. He then built a theoretical system that could thoroughly explain alchemical reactions, ionization, valence, periodicity of elements, and spectra lines patterns of elements. This theoretical system also elaborates the nature of elements. Furthermore, based on the new element found in the radioactive substance, Mr. Lucien Evans has reasonably explained how matters transmute and predicted several methods of transforming matter.

“If Mr. Lucien Evans' theoretical system is proved, it will become the greatest research achievement since that of Her Excellency Hathaway. His theoretical system is powerful enough to change the era!

“As an alchemist, I'd say that this theoretical theory will become the code for the school of Element and Alchemy. The glory of this achievement is greater than ever.

“However, since the final establishment of the theoretical system still requires solid experiment support, so far I cannot directly send all these compliments to Mr. Evans, nor the title of grand arcanist.

“Based on what we have so far, I can say that this theoretical system explaining the school of Element and Alchemy is groundbreaking, innovative, extremely important, universally applicable, and is greatly worth discussing. Five-thousand arcana credits and one-hundred-thousand arcana points are suggested to be given as a reward.”

When he put down the quill-pen, Prado was still in the excitement.

He looked out at the dimming night sky, and he knew that tomorrow when the sun rises, it would be a glorious bright day.

.....

Thanks to the divine circle God’s Guard designed for defense against the grand arcanists, the periphery of the Radiance Church was left intact.

However, as Stone the Four-winged Knight rushed here and saw the shocking scene, the look on his face became extremely distorted with great hatred and sorrow — All the cardinals and bishops in the central part of the Church, who either lived here or were on duty, were all dead.

Stone’s vision became blurred, as if the blood of the clergy had covered his eyes. The loss was too much for him to bear.

To stand against the Congress of Magic which growing stronger day by day, the parish of Holm was the center of the surrounding four districts Colette, Brianne, Calais, and the coastal area of the northland. Thus a great number of cardinals were gathered here, most of them in the Radiance Church.

“So far, it is estimated that at least three level-nine red robe cardinals, fifteen red robes of lower ranks, and almost a hundred cardinals were martyred...” Vaharall’s coarse and miserable voice seemed to be directly blown out from hell. Yet he could not let the sorrow and angry completely seize his mind right now, as he still had to turn on the divine circles to prepare against the possible upcoming attack from the Congress of Magic.

“Lucien Evans!” Recalling that he had just gloated over Lucien’s kill record, Stone could no longer hold back his anger..

Great shame!

He had known from Vaharall that it was Lucien Evans who caused this. Such a scale of loss was even rare during the War of Dawn and the war against the North heresies. Although the South Church claimed that the number of their middle-ranks and senior-ranks was equal to that of the Congress and the North Church added together, due to the vastness of their realm, they were still in trouble regathering enough pastors and cardinals in a short period of time.

However, what pained him the most was the degradation of Philibell’s power! This was their greatest loss!

“Also, Douglas, Fernando, Atlant...” Philibell knew the legendary sorcerers very well. Lucien Evans was not alone.

Douglas was Artil’s teacher, and Fernando was Lucien’s. And the way they did this was of the typical style of Atlant.

Philibell seemed to have aged within seconds. “I’ve sent the message to His Holiness the Pope. War is inevitable. Lucien Evans must die.”

Lucien Evans must die now. It would be too late when he became a grand arcanist and legendary sorcerer.

Given New Alchemy enough time, the future of Lucien Evans would be out of their control!

“We’ll wait for His Holiness’s command.” Stone tried his best to restrain his fury.

Philibell added despiritedly. “I’m not able to lead the Holm parish anymore. I’ve applied to His Holiness to send a more powerful grand cardinal here.”

“Philibell...” Vaharall knew how this felt.

The sky dimmed. The night fell much earlier than expected.

.....

Using the magic circle improved by the Will of Elements, the rigorous Raventi did two separate experiments to confirm the existence of proton, while the discovery of the new element was much easier.

Picking up the quill-pen, Raventi recalled the time he first saw Lucien, who was wearing a black double-breasted suit and standing quietly among the low-rank sorcerers. Except that he was better-looking and more well-mannered than his peers, there was nothing else that made him different from the others. Raventi had never imagined that this young man would have made such amazing progress within just a few years. Now, he was very promising to become the eighth grand arcanist in the Congress, when he was only around thirty.

His Excellency, Lucien Evans, the Creator.

“The scarlet moon... The tide of the time...” Raventi murmured to himself silently.

Then he started writing the review comment. To him, a level-nine arcanist and a ninth-circle sorcerer, New Alchemy showed him the hope of reaching the legendary level!

“Although the Introduction of the quantum theory into the atom structure model still requires more experiments as verification, it is, without doubt, a paper to which all sorcerers in the school Element and Alchemy have to bow. It is the Code of Element and Alchemy.

“As long as the neutron can be found, and that the artificially created matter can permanently exist outside of the permanency magic circle, Lucien Evans’s New Alchemy will be able to shift the direction of elemental and alchemical magic development and change the time. Perhaps the theoretical system is still not perfect, but so far it is definitely reasonable and logical.

“Lucien Evans has combined the many alchemical reactions together and offer them a shared explanation derived from his theoretical system.

“So far my review comment has to be made based on the current experimental results. Therefore, I’d say that this is a groundbreaking, extremely important, and universally applicable theory worth broad discussing. Six-thousand arcana credits and one-hundred-thousand arcana points are suggested to be given to Lucien Evans as a reward.

“This is an epic step into the exclusive realm of gods of us sorcerers. Now, we are only one step away from accessing the throne of creation.”

The darkness of the night outside the window was thick and dense.

.....

In the Bright Hall, Holy City Lance.

The members of the Grand Cardinal group were silently waiting for the arrival of the pope.

Suddenly, the space was filled up with tyrannical, divine, and bright power. The superior power made them lower their heads.

“Lucien Evans stole the Lord’s power with his New Alchemy. Severe punishment he deserves! And the Congress of Magic!” the Pope, Benedict II, strode out of the divine circle holding his scepter high. There was a distinct rage in his voice.

The members had never seen the pope this furious. They quickly exchanged a look between each other.

Stealing the power of the Lord and profaning the glory of divinity, these charges were indeed very bad, but Lucien Evans was not the first sorcerer who did those. Douglas, Brook, and the rest of the grand arcanists... they all more or less deserved similar charges, but the Pope had treated their issues calmly. What was the difference this time?

Was it because this theoretical system could really change matters freely that it even made the Pope uneasy?

His white hair neatly combed backward, Benedict II gave the top command. "I declare war against the Congress of Magic. The five parishes — Holm, Colette, Brianne, and the Northland along the coast — will be leading. Support will be given. And the Parish of Holm will be in charge.

"Philibell is injured. Someone must take the role in the Radiance Church in Rentato. A Saint."

After a short period of silence, Sard stood out and said, "Your Holiness. I wish to take the role of the Grand Cardinal of Holm and lead the five parishes."

Although he looked just like an ordinary old man, Sard had reached the third rank of Saint Cardinal two years ago and had been given the title, Saint.

"Your devotion makes you glow, and the Blessing will always be with you. When the war begins, we shall all join," the Pope nodded.

Then the Pope started drawing the plan for the upcoming war, with Sard giving advice.

No one dared to say a word against the decision of the furious Pope. The plan was drawn fluently.

Then the Pope said to them, "the top thirty night watchers shall all see eliminating Lucien Evans as their top priority once they are available. Lucien Evans now ranks no. 19 on the Cleansing List.

"I have one thing to clear up," said the Pope all of a sudden, "Lucien Evans was once a Seraph beside the Lord, thus he owned the incomparable talent in music and wisdom. But he was lured and betrayed the Lord. He stole the power of creating from the Lord and fell to the ground.

"He is the Primordial Demon, and also a Fallen Angel!"

The grand cardinals and the leaders of the Inquisitions all understood the Pope's words immediately. The Pope was saying so for solidifying the followers' belief — Human beings could never be as powerful as God; Lucien Evans was able to do so because he was a thief who stole the Lord's power.

Ranking no. 19 on the Cleansing List, the name Lucien Evans, the Fallen Angel, was even above many legendaries!

The Pope raised the scepter high and was about to declare the start of the war. However, at this time, Benedict II suddenly looked up at the sky and then, it felt that the entire world trembled a bit.

Standing among the stars in the sky, seeing the blurry scenes of the foreign dimension in front of his eyes, Oliver grinned to Hathaway.

Chapter 459: The Start of the Chaos

In the Bright Hall, the Holy City Lance.

The entire world trembled a bit. All the cardinals present felt it. In the clear blue sky, there was a blurry image of a brand new world, so strange and so familiar at the same time.

It was the dimension that they had been seeking for in the past three years, where Alterna and the mysterious existence fell.

"Someone found it," Squinting his eyes, another Saint, Anasta, broke the solid silence in the Bright Hall. "This world seems to be quite special; its revelation made too big a stir, so now we can also precisely locate it... it's another fair competition."

All of them turned to look at the Pope, waiting for his further decision. Should they stick to the war plan, or switch their focus to the newly-found dimension, to finding the injured Alterna and the mysterious existence?

Except for the two Grand Cardinals, who looked rather calm and indifferent, the rest of them all looked a bit excited. For them, the choice would definitely be the latter!

Was Lucien Evans important? Of course. This was not the first time that Lucien Evans brought disaster to the Church, and they all knew it well that Lucien Evans was very likely to become the next grand arcanist and legendary mage in his thirties or forties. If they simply left Lucien Evans alone, he would quickly grow into a huge threat to the Church.

However, compared to the secrets hiding behind Alterna and the mysterious existence, Lucien's importance paled. If they could catch Alterna and the mysterious existence and find out their secrets, the gain would be immeasurable for the Church, for the Pope, and for everyone!

All the previous popes wished to be immortal like Alterna, just like the saying —"eternal is the Silver Moon, eternal is the Moon God."

However, because their power came from the God of Truth, they could not prolong their years using magic and potions, thus five-hundred years was their limit. Also, after becoming the pope, their bodies aged even faster from bearing the power of God, even though they were already Saints before ascending to the throne.

The Grand Cardinal group's members could easily notice that the popes never lived long, but they did not know the reasons behind. The most reasonable guess was that a human being's body and soul ascending to demigod level would have to bear unrepairable damages.

Therefore, knowing the secrets of the real demigods could for sure prolong the Pope's life span.

As for the grand cardinals, knowing even the smallest piece of secret would greatly benefit them. They would see much bigger hope in ascending or even becoming demigods, Saints, or Angels on the Ground to enjoy immortality.

With such power, the entire Church would be invincible!

Under the burning gazes, the Pope released a sigh and said calmly, "eliminating Lucien Evans, the Fallen Angel, was what we were planning on. However, now the Lord has decided to send us to an even more dangerous and challenging task. This is our honor and pleasure. Sard, you will still lead the parish of Holm, as well as the entire five parishes to stand against the Congress of Magic. Before this ends, no spare support can be sent to you. This is a tough situation."

"Your command is the will of the Lord. Only truth lives forever," answered Sard without any personal emotions. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

However, in other grand cardinals' eyes, he was of extremely bad luck.

Being the leader of the five major parishes and ranking only below the Pope in the Church was once the ultimate pursuit among all the powerful characters in the Church. However, the Congress of Magic had become much more powerful than ever, and thus the role had now become a very risky one. What was more important was that Sard was going to miss the chance heading for the dimension to look for Alterna and the mysterious existence. But since Sard did not say anything, they were also glad to have fewer competitors.

"Anasta and Maria, you two shall come with me." Benedict II commanded calmly.

Maria was another Saint, and just like Anasta, he was fully trusted by Benedict II.

Different from the constitution of the North Church, in the South Church, the Pope had unparalleled authority and power. No one dared to stand out and speak against the Pope. What surprised them even more was that the Pope was going to join in the exploration of the dimension! Ever since the division of the Church, His Holiness had never stepped out of the Holy City.

The Pope has put an even heavier emphasis on this than they expected.

"Arzaro, Varantine, Bellia..." The Pope picked another five members from the Grand Cardinal group, who were either saint cardinals or legendary knights. "... should also come along with me."

This arrangement had made the most from what the Church had right now. The Church had so many enemies that the Pope had to be very cautious all the time in case they would launch a strike when the Church was unprepared, although the Pope believed that their enemies would also choose to focus on chasing after the newly-found dimension.

Also, this time the Pope would join in person, and he is confident in himself.

After the arrangement, the Pope said to them, "get the senior-ranks, top two hundred night watchers, radiant knights and above to prepare themselves. We know nothing about the dimension yet. Maybe it's as broad as the Star Tomb, then we'll need stronger support.

"As for the punishment that Lucien Evans deserves, two or three top night watchers should still bear the mission in mind."

The Pope still insisted on killing Lucien as soon as possible even now.

"As command, Your Holiness," answered the members in chorus, as they drew a cross in front of their chests,

"Only Truth lives forever!"

In the boundless starry sky, Oliver shrugged at ease and said, "there's something wrong with this dimension. The stir we made was too loud to avoid the attention. The North and the South Church may already be on their way now. I'll get in there first. You go back and tell the president all the information we collected. Let him make the plan and gather everyone else."

"I see." Hathaway did not waste her words. Turning around, she did an elegant Space Jump using her demiplane — Element Paradise. A few hours earlier, she received Fernando's secret message and was informed about Lucien's New Alchemy. Therefore, she resisted the temptation of exploring deeper into this dimension, and instead, applied to guard Allyn in the next five-year period, in order to assimilate and further improve the theoretical system.

After Hathaway left, Oliver released a sigh,

"Here starts the chaos."

...

On the Night Highland, in a busy city.

The buildings in this city carried the style of ancient times. Some were heavy solid stone huts from of the Age of Steam, while some were green treehouses left from the time when elves were still ruling this territory. However, most houses and buildings in the city had pointy tips and looked grayish, which was typical of the ancient Magic Empire. This city was a place where most races in this world gathered together, including human beings of different ethnicities, werewolves, beautiful elves, pale vampires, scaly Kuo-toans, and so on.

All of a sudden, the space and the living creatures cracked like a mirror. The image of the two human beings having a heated conversation in the corner broke into small pieces, together with the buildings and the entire city.

On the empty land, a black castle emerged. In the castle, the lid of a huge coffin opened fiercely, and a man in his thirties wearing a black evening suit and a cloak that was black on the outside and red in the inside flew out. His eyes were scarlet, creepy but enchanting.

"Finally..."

In the next second, Dracula had vanished.

On the Night Highland, the several vampire princes all responded in the same way. They had all set out, leaving their territories behind exposed to possible attacks — There was nothing more important than the Primordial Ancestor.

In San Ivansburg, in Antiffler, in the Dark Mountain Range... Countless legends looked up at the sky simultaneously and immediately set off for that dimension, with or without companies. No one could resist the temptation, not even the arrogant Rudolf II or the mysterious Pope of the North.

...

"We are heading for the dimension — Douglas, I, Vicente, Hellen, Atlant, Hull-Chulia, Chelsea, Davy... Eleven legends in total to support Oliver," said Fernando who just directly showed up in the Atom Institution. "You stay in Allyn. Don't fool around. If you have to, use your Transformation Mask."

If Lucien had not made such a mess and thus became the most hateful one in the eyes of the Church, Fernando would bring him and his other students together with him, so they could gain experience by exploring the dimension under his protection. However, now the dimension would soon be turned into the battlefield among the legendaries. Lucien should not take such a risk.

In case the Church would launch a sudden attack, the Congress also saved six legendaries to help Hathaway safeguard Allyn, including Brook, who was still recovering from the damage in his cognitive world.

Although Lucien was, of course, very curious and he did long for the power hiding in that dimension, he had not lost his reason to greed. Joining the battlefield of the legendaries as a sixth-circle sorcerer would be directly courting death. He had better just stay here and hope that the Congress could bring back some pieces, so he apply to research on them in the future as a grand arcanist. With the credits he just earned from the light quantum hypothesis and New Alchemy, Lucien was now already a level-seven arcanist. Expecting more citation credits coming up, plus the Influence Factor, Lucien believed that he could become reach level eight in a few years.

"Yes, Sir. I'll be cautious," said Lucien like a deferential, good student.

Meanwhile, his brain was spinning fast — Seizing the chance, he could bring out the dwarves from the Night Highland once his magic tower was ready.

This was the best chance ever!

Chapter 460: Lucien's Magic Tower

A few days later.

The tall silver-gray tower reached all the way up into the cloud, featuring its elegant curves and lines. Compared to the many other magic towers owned by the senior-ranks, which more or less looked gloomy, Lucien's magic tower was a good match to the starry sky and had some kind of unique taste in it.

"Hmm... A musician's fantastic magic tower," commented Rock, who was still quite whimsical even though he was already a third circle sorcerer now after the several years.

As an expert in Astrology, Lucien had to observe the stars, so a tall magic tower made sense. However, it seemed that the color and the shape of this magic tower were almost too unique and eye-catching to match Lucien's even-temperedness. However, considering the fact that Lucien was also a musician, the guests present all accepted the design.

Louise fancied the design of the magic tower quite a lot. It suited her taste much better than the traditional, gloomy-looking towers and castles. She smiled and said to Lucien, "Mr. Evans, you also have a very good taste in architecture. I'd appreciate it a lot if you can offer me some opinions for my villa's reconstruction in the future."

Although Lucien had told her multiple times that she could just call him by his name, Louise was still being the same respectful. After becoming the host Nightingale of the radio programme, Louise made quite a lot as a second-circle sorcerer. Therefore, she bought herself a garden villa in Allyn where property price was rising day by day.

"Did you name it, Evans?" Asked Samantha casually with the same indifferent look on her face.

Normally speaking, a sorcerer would not bother naming their magic tower. A name was usually saved for the demiplane. But Lucien was not only a sorcerer, but also a artist.

Lucien grinned as he stepped on the stairs. "I call it Babel."

"Babel...?" Lazar and the students repeated the syllables confusedly. They had never heard the word before.

K was about to ask, but stopped himself when he saw the mysterious smile on Lucien's face, knowing that this was probably Lucien's little secret.

"Welcome back, my Lord. Welcome, distinguished guests. I'm Pinocchio. The brave, loyal, and honest Pinocchio." The silvery voice of the alchemical life rang.

Lucien pointed at the gradually opening silver-gray metal gate and said, "this is Pinocchio, the tower guard."

The guests greeted the tower guard although they had no idea what did such a name mean. Through the gate, they entered the hall, in which there was a metal sculpture of a huge wheel in the center.

"The Wheel of History. That's what the sculpture is called." Introduced Lucien.

Rock first burst out laughing. "Ambitious, Lucien, ambitious! But I'm sure the last thing you lack is ambition. A future grand arcanist who put forward New Alchemy will never lack ambition. No matter it is the Church in the South or North, they'll be completely crashed by the wheel of history!"

"Despite bendings and windings, history keeps progressing," said Lucien in a good mood.

The magic tower would be his first real home in this world. Here, with the magic tower, Lucien would be able to protect himself against the attack of a ninth-circle.

Samantha nodded lightly. "Your mind is sober. New Alchemy did not lead you to arrogance."

Although the special supplement New Alchemy of this month's Arcana had not yet been published, most sorcerers present had enough background and had thus already read this era-changing paper.

After reading the paper, the younger generation, including Samantha, Rachel, Larry, and Ulysses, held deep admiration for Lucien, but also felt a bit depressed. Before New Alchemy came out, Lucien was a leading rival of his peers, and chasing him up was a shared goal among the younger arcanists. The goal was almost unrealizable, but it was there. However, now they had realized that Lucien was no longer one of them. Lucien should be in the team of the legends, standing beside those including Douglas, Brook, Hathaway, and Klaus. They were too far behind to catch up.

This caused the feeling of helplessness among them.

"Underestimating your enemies is underestimating your own life." Lucien looked at Samantha and said with a smile, "I'm not as talented as you all think. Like I said before, the study of the atom is such a brand new field in which even the smallest finding can lead to the discovery of a much bigger secret. In this field, there is so far no authority and no difference between us. When conditions are ready, we can all find something amazing. I just took a step ahead, and it does not mean that no one can catch me up. Being young and open-minded is the most valuable thing."

Samantha looked into Lucien's serene eyes and knew that he meant it, instead of just being humble out of courtesy. She put on a sincere smile and said, "What a pity... I'm good at the school of Element."

The rest of the guests, including Larry, K, and Lazar, nodded thoughtfully. They knew what Lucien just said was true.

Lucien pointed up at the sky and said, "the macroworld is as important."

"Sir, can we take a visit to your lab?" Before Samantha could respond, Heidi asked curiously.

Lucien nodded and then led them to the elevator and then to the underground level. On their way, they walked past the spare energy room, the binding rooms, the underground magic garden, and arrived at the vast lab.

Most of the magic circles and alchemical facilities in this spacious lab were easily recognized by the sorcerers present. However, they had no clue what the two metal halves placed in the high-magnetic, vacuum magic circle in the middle of the lab were.

The two silver halves engraved with magic patterns somehow resembled the style of the magic tower.

"This is a cyclotron for accelerating charged particles. If any of you want one, my design plan is available in the Exchange Zone." Lucien briefly introduced how the machine worked to them, which was a smart and secret way of luring his friends.

Although the Congress did help Lucien out to some degree with this far-beyond-budget magic tower by selling the materials to Lucien at much lower prices, Lucien still had used up all of his savings in the past three years to improve his magic tower to an even higher standard to prepare for the future upgrades, so he was now in great need of extra arcana points.

Lucien was impressed by his own pace of progressing. Although he had made quite a fortune from the projects and papers, he was still far from being rich compared to those senior-rank sorcerers who had lived over a hundred years and thus had enough time for accumulating wealth. Lucien found his budget beyond tight, especially that he was seeking for the best materials for everything.

"What's this then?" Asked Larry, pointing at the sealed box connected to the transmitting part on the top, on which there were many thermodynamic magic circles.

"It is a cloud chamber, for assisting alchemical experiments," answered Lucien.

"Cloud chamber? For what?" K asked.

"When it is turned on," Lucien smiled and explained, "it is filled with supersaturated vapor. When an energetic charged particle passes, it will be ionized, leaving a mist-like trail of ionized gas particles looking in the form of droplets. So we can observe and record the trace of a particle better."

"I can't believe I never thought of it!" exclaimed Ulysses, who specialized in the school of Thermodynamics. The observation of particles in the microworld had always been a big problem in their study. While lots of sorcerers were still working on improving amplification facilities, Lucien had solved the problem using vapor.

Louise and Heidi said simultaneously, "san we take a look?"

Lucien nodded and turned the cyclotron on.

In the box, elegant mist-like trails suddenly appeared against the dark background. The beauty of the curves was stunning.

The lab, for a while, became silent.

.....

After taking the tour in the lab, Lucien led the guests to the banquet hall. When the senior-ranks including Raventi, Gaston, and Isabella arrived, the banquet began.

In the cheerful atmosphere, Lucien presented eight pieces of piano bagatelle, and he also played the violin, impressing all the guests present.

When the performance part ended, the guests started talking to each other casually. Seeing the scene, Lucien suddenly felt a bit lonely. He knew that he was missing his friends and family in Aalto. Lucien found a chance and snuck out of the hall and came to the balcony. Then he cast Electromagnetism Messaging.

"Hey, good evening, Lucien. Congratulations on your magic tower." Natasha's cheerful voice soon came.

Lucien also grinned. "Good afternoon, I'm celebrating."

"What a pity I can't be there. But still, congratulations, the Fallen Angel." Natasha joked, "His Holiness is creative when creating these titles."

Lucien replied seriously, "I'm only studying the particles in the microworld for the sake of arcana. But I think the experiment results show that the God of Truth has already handed human beings and nature the power of creation as a gift after the world was first created, and now the God of Truth only serves as spiritual guidance."

For the sweet future, Lucien had been working on gradually shifting Natasha's religious belief.

"So you're saying... God is in our hearts, and the Church has been lying to us?" Natasha didn't seem to be bothered. As long as Lucien was not indicating anything profane, she was fine with it.

Lucien answered decisively, "of course. Ms. Meredith was also a good person, right?"

Natasha giggled. "Alright, this isn't my point. The thing is that when the Church started calling you the Fallen Angel, I began picturing you in an angel costume, you know, like the one in an opera. It'd be even better if you are equipped with a pair of wings."

"I remember the costume for angels is usually genderless..." Lucien knew what Natasha was thinking.

Natasha burst out laughing, but with a hint of guiltiness. "Yeah... yeah... By the way, why the signal wasn't as good when I called Granny Hathaway?"

"The communication satellites still need further improvements. Mr. Douglas has been working on this in recent years," answered Lucien.

As a result, the plan of having satellite constellations was falling behind.

Natasha said thoughtfully, "but the quality of our conversation is... You know what's wrong, right?"

Lucien chuckled but said nothing.

Natasha knew when to stop asking questions. Then she released a gentle sigh. "The mysterious dimension has been found, and my mentor has set off to follow the Pope in there. Every time when I think of the battlefield there, my blood runs fast and I feel beyond thrilled. But I know I am not ready yet. However, His Holiness has also asked all the radiant knights and above to get prepared as the reserve force. If there's something wierd with the dimension, we will join in.

"If the day comes, I'll lead the nobles in Violet into the dimension."

Facing such a situation, the royal house must send a representative to be the leader. It would be either the Duke or Natasha, otherwise, the others would not obey heartily.

"I'd like to go, too." Lucien said implicitly. The words he omitted were "with you".

Natasha laughed, "Come on. None of the legendary sorcerers would pick on me, but you're different. The entire Church wants you to die. You're such a troublemaker!"

Their conversation did not last long, as Lucien could not just leave his guests alone. After knowing from Natasha how John and his family were doing, he had to end the call.

Turning around, Lucien saw Samantha looking at him from a distance with a plate on her hand. On the plate was steamed fish, a dish improved by Lucien that was favored by all the guests.

"I didn't hear anything, but I can tell it from your face. Besides magic and arcana, some space in your heart is still saved for that lady." Samantha sighed out of disappointment and then turned around without hesitation.

In the Congress of Magic, there were much more sorcerers who were single. Although they did pursue marriage just like common people, longevity made many of them lose their beloved ones. Also, some were deprived of desires, mostly the liches, so they chose to become single again. Rarely were there couples who both had the power to live very long.

Among them, the grand arcanists had the lowest rate of marriage — Douglas, Fernando, Hathaway, and Hellen were all single; Vicente Miranda's wife had passed away a long time ago, and rumors said that until today, his biggest dream was to truly bring his wife back to life. Brook's wife fell in the assassination of the Church; Oliver was the only one among them who had a sweet family.

.....

In the underground caves of the Night Highland.

Augustus the Elder was praying to the God of Steam attentively.

It had been a few years, and the Night Highland was getting more and more dangerous. The dwarves were still waiting for the guidance from their god.

Chapter 461: The Exodus from the Night Highland

Chapter 461: The Exodus from the Night Highland

“The Almighty God of Steam, the Lord of Life and Death. Your devout servant, Augustus, prays to you.”

“... Under your lead, we have spread out your grace across the land of Vlad, into all the middle-rank vampires’ castles. Now, we have twenty-three thousand seven hundred and eighty-six dwarf brothers and sisters praying in your name and following your words...”

“... Two thousand six hundred and nine brothers and sisters of us have devoted their lives to the fight against vampires and blood servants. The attention of the senior-rank vampires has been attracted. Our actions are getting increasingly dangerous...”

“I beg your guidance. I beg your mercy on all devout dwarves. I beg for help to break the chains and for new lives away from the Night Highland...”

“Steam Above.”

The holy statue in front of Augustus looked very strange. In the shape of a round, tower-like cone, it was engraved with countless unique patterns — The dwarves made the statue based on the beyond destructive weapon they saw in Atlantis.

In Lucien’s eyes, they were praying to a nuclear bomb.

Prostrate on the ground, Augustus was praying with all his heart. It had been three years, and the God of Steam never gave them any guidance again. But his belief was still solid. Augustus regarded this as their trial.

This did not mean that he was not worried. Several years ago, before their troop expanded, because Madam Tess had died and Count Vlad had fallen asleep, the Dwarf Rebellion grew fast with ease. They had the knowledge and had won the control of some mines and forges, thus their weapons and armors had been greatly improved — High-pressure steam rifles, vampire-killing bullets, mythril-mixed chain mails which were effective against the claws of vampires. And they were finally able to fight back.

However, as they started having more followers, and when they had reached the territory of the middle-rank vampires nearby, the situation suddenly became intense. It would cost the lives of over a hundred dwarves to hurt and back off a middle-rank vampire. Even the explosive bullets they invented later whose power did not differentiate vampires from dwarves did not work very well.

According to Harold and Aquinas, their only hope was to remake the huge warship from the ancient Steam Civilization, which could probably be very efficient for killing middle-rank vampires.

“But based on what we have — the knowledge and the techniques — there’s no chance for us to build such a thing...” said Aquinas, the leader of the Dwarf Rebellion, a bit desperately over the meeting.

Augustus, the leader, said with even greater worry, “now we’re only fighting against the middle-ranks. If the senior-ranks wake up, if Count Vlad wakes up... even the warship will become useless, unless...”

Augustus did not finish his words, but his listeners all understood. What Augustus was indicating was the ultimate weapon they saw in Atlantis, the one whose power was enough to temporarily create a new Sun and destroy the entire Night Highland.

Thinking of this, Augustus’s prayers became even more sincere. Their God was testing them, Augustus believed.

“You dominate everything, Life and Death. You’re the King of the kings, the God above all gods.”

Finishing his prayers, Augustus was about to stand up when suddenly heard a remote, powerful voice in his brain,

“The future has arrived. Take your staff, and guide your people to the new life.”

His eyes suddenly opened wide. Out of the ecstasy, Augustus trembled when he hurriedly mumbled the words. “In your name. As you command.”

He saw bright light blooming before his eyes, lighting up the entire underground cave. The light was an illusion resulted from his ecstasy.

After calming down a bit, Augustus asked very humbly, “Almighty God of Steam, how shall I guide them out of Night Highland?”

Although the tales passed on for generations said that the ancestors of the dwarves were from another place, Augustus had no idea how to leave the Night Highland.

“Do as I say. Do not ask why.”

“We shall sing forth the honor of your name. May we get out of the pain and sufferings under your blessing and glory,” said Augustus, his head lowering deeply.

Then he walked out of the altar and opened the gate in extremely high spirit. Full of confidence, he exclaimed in front of the dwarves, “Command to you all! And all dwarves devoted to the God of Steam. We shall gather in three days! The Almighty, the God of Steam, has given us words — WE SHALL LEAVE THE NIGHT HIGHLAND!”

After a short silence, under the lead of the young dwarf lady Myrna, all of them present cried out loud.

“Steam Above!”

Joyful tears ran across their faces.

...

Three days later.

In the huge underground cave located within the territory of Count Vlad, close to twenty-one thousand dwarves were gathering here.

Some of them were carrying high-pressure steam backpacks and holding big steam rifles, guarding the entrance of the underground caves connecting to each other, while some wore only ragged cloth bags and their bodies were covered with wounds left by whipping. However, they had one thing in common — Their eyes were shining with bright hope.

“It’s the time. I’m very encouraged by the fact that we have all of us here. Your devotion deserves the blessing.” Augustus walked across the crowd, wearing the dwarf robe and holding a missile-shaped staff. “and I, Augustus, the Speaker of God on the ground, will lead you forward.

“On our way out, we shall have no fear and no hesitation, no matter what is waiting for us in the front. Because, we are blessed!”

“Steam Above!” the dwarves cried out loud together.

Joining the teams they belonged to, the dwarves followed the instruction in the book, Military Training, which was left to them by the God of Steam, and walked in the underground caves quietly.

They all understood it. Staying here on the Night Highland only meant death and shame. The landing of the God of Steam gave them the only belief in the boundless darkness. Death, or fight. They chose to fight, although they were afraid.

Going through the caves, the path elevated, and countless tombstones appeared beside.

“Here sleep our heroes, who died for our freedom. Some of them were warriors, and some were just common men and women who died protecting us. At this moment which decides the living or death of us dwarves, every one of us is a hero!” Augustus said aloud in great respect, while leading the troop to salute the dead.

The two thousand six hundred and nine tombstones watched them march forward, and the atmosphere became rather solemn. Suddenly, a sharp scream penetrated the silence from behind — Two to three senior vampires, leading seven to eight lower-rank vampires, chased up them in the air!

Sanelson was a level-five vampire knight who had killed hundreds of dwarves.

Did anyone betray them?

Was it because the vampires had caught some dwarves on the way?

Panic and despair spread out. The dwarves knew how powerful those vampires were. The vampires were already close to senior-rank. In such a crowded place, many of them would die, without a doubt.

Harold stopped his steps, looking at his brothers and sisters helplessly screaming and running in panic. He made his decision within a second. He spat on the ground and commanded,

“Warriors from Mechanic Knight, stand out! We die for the God of Steam! It’s time for us to devote everything for our brothers and sisters!”

Damn it! They would rather die standing than die for nothing!

At this moment, he conquered his fear of death.

Holding the huge rifles in their hands, the warriors were also afraid. Despite that, some still stood out with great determination. They shot at their best, but only hit a lower-rank vampire, who roared in pain and rolled back and forth on the floor.

When Harold had no idea what to do, Augustus’s voice arrived,

“On our way out, we shall have no fear and no hesitation, no matter what is waiting for us in the front. Because we are blessed!”

“Hold your weapon, keep moving! We are blessed!”

It was the command!

Harold did not understand. If they kept fighting, there might still be hope, while they all would die if they followed the command. However, Augustus's severe eyes could not be disobeyed.

"All, keep moving!" Harold had to obey.

The dwarves did as asked, marching forward slowly in great fear.

To their great surprise, all of a sudden, the surrounding tombstones started shaking fiercely. The dead dwarves climbed out: Some had turned into bones, and some were half rotten.

At first, they thought that it was the vampires who were manipulating the bodies. However, the over two-thousand tombstones all started writhing, and the over two-thousand bodies stood up one by one, as the world of death had befallen.

Silently, the bodies rushed to the vampires in great numbers. And then —

Bang! Bang! They exploded.

Were they still protecting their people after death?

Were they still clinging to the hope of freedom?

The dwarves recalled that another name of the God of Steam was — the Lord of Life and Death.

Tears in his eyes, Harold looked at the dead dwarves exploding together with the vampires, and his fists tightened — He must complete the dream left by those heroes; They must free themselves!

For over ten thousand years, this was the solid belief shared by dwarves!

Harold lifted his arm and cried, "Steam Above! Keep moving!"

Through the cemetery, the dwarves left the underground cave, and they saw a giant rock in front of them.

Following the instruction of the God of Steam, Augustus opened the gate of the underground palace. He walked in leading the troop and saw a mysterious gate in the middle of the hall, on which bright starlight glimmered.

“Behind the gate is the new world. The world of redemption.” Augustus pointed at the gate. “If you have made up your mind, go through it.”

At this moment, no one would hesitate anymore. Under Harold’s organization, the dwarves walked through the gate and disappeared. The space shook because of the teleport. However, none of the vampire princes were here on the Night Highland as they were all rushing towards the dimension for the Primordial Ancestor. As for the senior-rank vampires, they were not as sensitive. The only senior-rank vampire living nearby was Count Vlad who was still trying to get out of the trap in great fury.

When only members of the Mechanic Knight was left, Sanelson and the rest of the vampires finally got rid of the dead dwarves and arrived.

“What should we do?” the warriors exchanged a look with each other. Some of them were ready to cover the rest to make sure most of them could leave.

Harold put his hand on his chest and said, “don’t be afraid. Don’t stop.”

As soon as he finished the words, a silver shiny coin appeared above the gate, rolling upward.

As the coin rolled, distorted magnetic field and silver electric currents appeared in its surrounding. They twisted and wound around the coin, forming a giant, thick snake of electric currents.

Sanelson’s scarlet eyes opened wide out of great fear as he watched the lightning filled the hall.

The horrible power devoured the vampires swiftly. There was no chance for them to run away.

Chapter 462: The Morning Star

Bricks of stone fell like rain drops. When the lightning disappeared and he regained his sight, Harold finally realized that the vampires were all gone and the hall itself was also on the edge of falling apart.

"It was just a... silver coin..." murmured one of the dwarves.

Harold quickly calmed down and scolded. "The coin was possessed of the power of God! The Almighty God of Steam is not only the God of Machinery, but also the Lord of Life and Death, the King of Lightnings, the Lord of Punishment!"

"Why a silver coin then?" asked another dwarf.

Harold wasn't good at explaining this kind of stuff. He squeezed the words out with great effort. "That shows the Almighty God of Steam is also the God of Wealth, the King of the kings, the God above all gods!"

Everything could be explained by the almightiness of God.

The dwarves nodded under the convincing words. All of them, including Harold, put their hands on their chests and bowed deep in front of the gate,

"Steam Above!"

They then walked in the gate in pairs. Within half an hour, they had all left the underground hall.

As soon as they left, the power supressing the space instantly disappeared, and the space started shaking fiercely. Pieces of starlight fell from above, and soon the entire gate disappeared together with the collapse of the underground palace.

.....

After quite a few days, Sanelson's "father", a vampire duke, arrived at the ruins following the blood connection between Sanelson and him. He came to figure out why Sanelson had gone missing for days.

A space joint! The vampire duke was shocked.

Staring at the collapsed underground palace, he now cared no more about what happened to Sanelson. In great anger, he turned around and was ready to teach Vlad a good lesson — Even if he had fallen asleep to recover, Vlad still must be responsible for this.

An unreported space joint in his territory! The Church might find it and launch an attack at any time!

Another few days later, a deafening noise burst out in the direction of Count Vlad's castle. The vampire count's anger surged right into the air,

"I will kill that bastard who trapped me!"

However, Vlad had no idea who did this to him and had no clue to trace him, not even with Horoscope.

.....

Lighting up the torch, Augustus saw an abandoned city; there were thick chimneys, metal pipes, bolts, springs, and gears everywhere. The civilization of Steam was right in front of them. He immediately understood. Tears gushed out. He cried in great excitement and sorrow. "This is our homeland, where our ancestors worked and lived!"

Augustus knelt down onto the ground and kissed the cold land overgrown with weeds. "We're back! We're finally back!"

The dwarves all followed him, kneeling and kissing their land of origin. Bitterly they cried, shedding tears for what they had lost.

After Harold and the rest of the dwarves came and the gate disappeared, Augustus took a deep breath and said to the over twenty thousand of dwarves, "this isn't our final destination. We shall go back to the ground, and start our new life! There shall be no more slavery, no more painful deaths, no more suffering!"

His eyes were shining with hope and determination. "Grab your torches and follow me! Don't hesitate. Don't be afraid. This is the revelation of the God of Steam!"

"Steam Above!" Answered aloud the dwarves together.

The torches were lifted. Following the command of the instructors, the dwarves marched forward in order, in units of families and villages, through the abandoned city of steam. The Mechanic Knight was divided into four, safeguarding in four directions.

The city was huge. Enveloping the light of the torches was the endless darkness. In the darkness, the only light came from the dim green shine emitted by noctilucent moss, but it wasn't a comfort for the dwarves at all. They were afraid of the darkness, and the green light seemed to be the blood-thirsty eyes of countless monsters.

What was in there? They didn't know.

Silence seized them, only the sound of their own steps could be heard. The journey seemed to be getting longer and longer, as if they could never leave this place.

When the dwarves started getting lost and panicking, Augustus's voice came again.

"Don't hesitate. Don't be afraid. Follow me!"

"Yes!" Answered the dwarves together, although not too confident.

Augustus raised the staff high,

"The God of Steam is with us! No difficulty, no danger, no suffering can conquer us!"

Hearing the name of the God of Steam, the dwarves became braver. Saying God's name silently in their mind, they were equipped with the courage for scattering the darkness. Gradually, they walked faster and faster.

Bang, bang! The rifles shot together, throwing the monsters leaping from the darkness to the ground in blood and flesh.

They had the power of steam, thus, they were invincible!

"The Almighty God of Steam, the Lord of Life and Death, the King of Lightnings, the Lord of Punishment, the God of Wealth..."

"You're the God above all gods, the King of the Kings..."

The dwarves sang forth the names together. Their voice joined into this force driving away the creatures hiding in the darkness.

Finally, this huge troop walked out of the city through the tunnel and came to the caves connected like spider webs.

"This is the last test. Only true followers can walk out from the maze. Don't hesitate. Don't be afraid. Follow me!"

"Yes!" This time, their voice was much louder and full of confidence.

All the forks looked identical, and the dwarves were very afraid of getting lost. However, their leader Augustus had closed his eyes, walking following his heart.

Seeing what their leader was doing, the fire of hope lit up in the dwarves' hearts again.

They should have faith in the Almighty God of Steam, have faith in His chosen exarch. Here, eyes and ears should not be used to seek the path, but hearts and faith!

They dwarves walked on, panicking no more, confused no more.

After a long time, they saw a dim light in front of them and a broad forest in the far end.

They did it!

They were on the ground now!

Suddenly, Myrna pointed at the sky and said, "look!"

The far end of the sky was partially lit up, where a bright star was hanging. The star was quiet but twinkling, directing the path eternally.

"Morning star...?"

"Is dawn coming?"

Those dwarves were born on the Night Highland and they had never seen daylight. They had only heard about morning stars from the stories passing on through generations and knew that it represented the arrival of light.

"You're the Lord of Life and Death, the bright Morning Star. You connect night and day. You bring us new life!" said Augustus devoutly.

The morning star was replaced by the orange light in the east, and then, a fireball slowly rose above the horizon.

The dwarves had never seen anything like this. Now, they started to actually feel the arrival of their new life!

Augustus raised his arm and cheered aloud. "Our new life has commenced. We'll strive for the prosperity of Atlantis! The Atlantis on the ground!"

"Strive for the prosperity of Atlantis!" The more than twenty thousand dwarves responded at the same time, their loud voice disturbed the flocks of birds hiding in the forest.

At this time, a melody full of passion arrived from faraway.

The dwarves turned their head and, to their great surprise, they saw a fat man wearing a long black windbreak and a beret walking towards them, followed by a group of human. The melody came from the small box engraved with strange black patterns in his hand.

Before the dwarves reacted, Augustus told them, "he's the guide. I received the words of the God of Steam. He'll be leading us to our brand new life."

The dwarves were no more afraid. Belief had given them the power for conquering fear. They quietly stared at the fat man and his companies, who studied them like how they looked at buckets of ale and how the vampires look at blood.

"I am Arthur Adol, the one who will lead you to your new life, a life much, much happier than the previous one you had on the Night Highland." Arthur grinned broadly at the dwarves.

In his eyes, the troop of dwarves was the symbol of a large amount of money. With so many skilled dwarves, the mass production of the alchemical products could be realized.

Following Arthur, the dwarves walked all the way down to the station. On the platform, when they saw the long magic steam train, they burst out into tears again. They were convinced again that this place was their homeland, the paradise of steam.

The dwarves stared at the magic steam train out of great curiosity, wishing that they tear it down and check every part of it, until they got on the train.

"Why is the guide sent by the God of Steam a banker?" Myrna just learned the word 'bank'.

Harold said proudly, "I said it. The Almighty God of Steam is also the God of Wealth. It makes sense."

Then he said longingly, "I saw the small silver coin turn into a powerful bomb with powerful electric currents... I wonder if the Civilization of Steam picked the wrong side for studying huge warships and cannons. Maybe... maybe we should invent new cannons using the power of electricity..."

"Here you are, the new book from the Lord." Smiling, Augustus handed a book to Harold.

Harold picked it up and saw the name: Basic Electrical Engineering.

Later, Arthur walked to the last carriage of the train and sat down in front of a young man wearing a double-breasted suit. He said to the young man like an old friend but also respectfully, "Evans, I can't believe you can find this many skilled dwarves!"

Lucien Evans was probably the next grand arcanist. Arthur had to show respect.

Holding the teacup in his hand, Lucien said, "treat them well. Give them enough salary and freedom. After all, they left that place because of me. When they have acquired basic electrical engineering skills and knowledge, they'll be able to train more workers."

Because the vampire princes and the most powerful vampires on the Night Highland had left for the mysterious dimension, searching for the Primordial Ancestor, Lucien's rescue plan carried out rather smoothly. He achieved the guidance using the power for awakening the dead of the Immortal Throne magic robe and a new electromagnetic spell, Lucien's Electromagnetic Gun - Although this spell was not that powerful yet, when Lucien reached a higher level, its power would also grow.

"You have my words. I'll treat them well," said Arthur without hesitation. He did not ask a single word about the so-called God of Steam.

The magic steam train was approaching Rentato. In the early morning, the lights in Rentato were still on, as brilliant and bright as constellations in a sweet dream.

The dwarves were so surprised that they could not close their mouths. It was as if they had come back to Atlantis.

.....

"Evans, since most sorcerers in the school of Electromagnetics and Light-darkness — Sorry, I have to say this — dislike you quite much, for your safety, we are giving the public another excuse for holding this banquet rather than telling people that it is your award-winning party. I hope you understand," said Joaquin, the president of the Moonsong League, a level-nine arcanist ND ninth-circle archmage, while smiling.

Since Brook just confirmed the change in momentum several days ago, which verified Lucien's light quantum hypothesis, no matter how reluctant Moonsong League was, they had to accept it.

Following Joaquin, Lucien grinned. "We can save the trouble. You could just give me the prize. I'm worried that my presence might be too much of a surprise to the guests."

"No, this is the tradition. We got to have a decent banquet when awarding you the medal." The president shook his head seriously.

Otherwise, the public would look down upon Moonsong League, accusing them of being too narrow-minded to properly recognize Lucien's great contribution.

Chapter 463: Lucien, the Devil King

The hall of the Allyn branch of Moonsong League was covered in a layer of cool and soft moonlight.

"Jurisian, what's the banquet for?" A short young man looked around in confusion, "Why are those elementalists here today?"

It looked like he was only in his seventeen or eighteen, but his voice was rather mature.

The man he was talking to had black hair and dark brown eyes. With a gentle smile on his featured face, the man said, "no idea. The president informed me to come, so here I am. I'm not gonna stay here for long though, a banquet like this is always boring."

Jurisian was wearing the five-star arcana badge and the five-circle magic badge. Thanks to the introduction of the Influence Factor, he had reached the next arcana level in these years. Also, because of his constant practice in fighting skills, his magic level had also advanced. Now, he was heading for the senior-rank.

"Jurisian, I'd rather it had been you who put forward the light quantum hypothesis." Another sorcerer from the school of Electromagnetics joined their conversation and moaned to Jurisian. "Why you stopped digging in after discovering the photoelectric effect?"

Jurisian swirled the golden liquor in his glass. The smile on his face remained unchanged. "How do you know I never dug into it, Pono, Feya? But putting forward the hypothesis not only relies on conducting multiple experiments, but more importantly, an open mind and brilliant imagination unconstricted by the past theories. I never paid enough attention to the paper written by Lucien on energy's discontinuity, so how could I get the key premise for raising the hypothesis?"

Pono was the short man who was talking to Jurisian earlier. He was more talented in magic than in arcana and was one of the sorcerers in Moonsong League who were most likely to reach the senior-rank.

Hearing Lucien's name, Pono said in resentment, "every time I think of that person, I want to destroy the place with lightning balls! My teacher's cognitive world was broken and solidified because of his hypothesis, and my friend... his blood was all over my face..."

"If I see him outside of Allyn, I'll put him in trouble!" Pono claimed.

"Put him in trouble? How?" Feya asked sharply, "as a fifth-circle sorcerer? Will all those awards, he could counter a seventh-circle sorcerer, not to mention New Alchemy. Lucien Evans is the future grand arcanist. Stop dreaming."

She did not want to be this sharp. Her sarcasm came from the feeling of helplessness, for the sorcerer Polo just mentioned whose head exploded was also her friend.

"I know," said Pono remorsefully, "but if I don't think in this way, I'd go nuts. At least, when I see Lucien Evans, I do have the courage to spit in his face."

"That's very impressive. I think I do, too." The corner of Feya's eyes went red.

Jurisian was still wearing the same indistinguishable smile on his face, listening to their conversation quietly. The conversations of the other sorcerers could also be heard.

"If I see Lucien Evans in person, I'll go and ask him directly how to explain the diffraction and interference of light using his hypothesis."

"There will be one day when his head will explode because of a similarly bold hypothesis based on the wave theory!"

"I don't care if he is a grand arcanist in the school of Element and Alchemy or not. Lucien Evans will never understand Light-darkness using his particles. The light quantum hypothesis is very likely simply a part of a correct wave theory. It's not the end yet! We still have the classic theory in electromagnetism and the experiment image!"

Jurisian slightly rose his eyebrow. In his eyes, those high-rank sorcerers were like some little puppies whining after losing a game.

In such a situation, most sorcerers present were actually talking about Lucien. This was enough to show how much they hated Lucien Evans and his hypothesis. At the same time, on the other side of the hall, the elementalists and alchemists were also having a heated discussion over New Alchemy, although it was no longer a new topic among them. In their eyes, Lucien was going to be the future grand arcanist, the legendary, the new leader of the entire Congress.

Suddenly, Pono's eyes opened big. He pointed at the stage in the front of the hall,

"There!"

Jurisian looked over and saw that Joaquin walked on the stage together with a cultured young man.

"Ladies and gentlemen," said Joaquin, "this is Mr. Lucien Evans."

Lucien Evans? Pono recalled the horrible scene of his friend's death as soon as he saw the young man on the stage. Until today, he could still smell the blood and feel the squishy brain tissues on his face. The sight of the headless body collapsing to the ground came back to him.

He had this great fury burning inside his heart, but fear seemed to be more. He could not utter the feeling, as if staring at this young man one more second would blow his head up.

The fine glass dropped onto the floor from Pono's hand with a crispy sound. The scarlet liquid stained the carpet, just like the uncleaned floor from then.

More glasses dropped. Staring at the color of the wine, Feya couldn't hold back her nausea anymore. The scene reminded her of that day, the day of blood.

Unable to control their anger, many sorcerers directly squeezed the glass in their hand into pieces. Wine splattered over them,

Their faces became distorted because of the hatred but also fear.

As the sound of glass breaking died away, silence dominated the entire space. Even the sound of breathing had disappeared.

"Ladies and..." Lucien took a step forward and bowed politely.

Lucien did not even finish his starting words. As he took a step forward, the guests backed away subconsciously. Some were shaking their heads as if they were trying to get Lucien's words out of their brains, or their heads would also explode. Among them, there were a few senior-rank sorcerers from Moonsong League who Lucien also knew, yet they were the same afraid as if Lucien would utter some extremely subversive theories at any time.

Silence resumed.

Lucien wondered if his name had joined one of the spooky campfire stories or nasty stories to scare young kids. Luckily, there was no kid here.

Joaquin was a bit pissed with how these sorcerers from Moonsong League responded to Lucien's arrival — They had lost their decency!

Joaquin coughed a bit, and the solidified atmosphere started to break, yet no one dared to challenge Lucien in the face, although many of them were bragging about this minutes ago. They were afraid of Lucien; this fear was a result of many broken skulls, fresh blood, and brains.

"We're gathering here today for awarding Mr. Lucien Evans with the no. 21 Silver Moon Medal, to recognize his great contribution to the school of Light-darkness and the school of Electromagnetism, for raising the Light Quantum Hypothesis," Joaquin said a bit sorrowfully — The award was first established in memory of the birth of the wave theory and the classic electromagnetic theory, but now, the award would go to the hypothesis which overthrew them.

Jurisian examined Lucien calmly. It had been three years since the hypothesis first came out and he had already accepted it. As a young and less conservative arcanist of the new generation, he was not saddened by the fact. However, Joaquin's words seemed a bit sarcastic to him — Lucien Evans's great contribution? Contributing headless bodies and broken cognitive worlds?

The guests present finally realized the reason for being here today. It seems that without doubt, His Excellency Mr. Brook had found the evidence to prove the hypothesis.

"I always believed that It's rather stupid to be obsessed with the question 'particles or waves'." Lucien, the devil king in the audience's eyes, started speaking again in the aggressive air of confidence before taking over the Medal. "Is it really hard to accept the truth, to admit that the experiment results indeed show duality? We should see this from a broader and higher perspective. The micro-world goes beyond our imagination, thus we need to recourse to only the experiment results and math equations."

No one dared to utter a word, however, it did not mean that they agreed with Lucien.

Duality? Both particles and waves? How could that happen?

Lucien glanced at the expression of the audience and didn't go any further. It was better to just give them some hints. Smiling, he continued. "This's my first time winning the Silver Moon Medal, and I am totally confident that this is not the last time. In this brand new realm, honor is only saved for those who are open-minded and unbiased."

Then, Lucien took over the medal and wore it on his left chest, next to his Ice & Snow Medal.

He had won the highest honor of five different fields. Including Lucien Evans, only two accomplished this achievement in the Congress. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

"The Silver Moon Medal, Light Quantum, level-seven perfect-rank magic item.

"Electric currents can paralyze the body and destroy the soul. The sorcerer wearing this medal could gain greater power in paralyzing his or her enemy when striking the target with lightning. Meanwhile, the power of the spells in the school of Electromagnetism and Light-darkness can be empowered to the seventh-circle.

"Great magnetic force will form a halo and encircle things within, which works perfectly when the targets are metal golems or knights wearing non-magnetic-proof armor — Seventh-circle Electromagnetic spell, Magnetic Halo. Cast three times a day.

"The giant lightning shall destroy everything — Seventh-circle Electromagnetic spell, Thunder Rage. Cast three times a day.

"Thanks to Lucien Evans for putting forward the Light Quantum Hypothesis, allowing us to see light from another perspective.

"We have figured out what lightning is, but not yet what light is.

"From Edwyn Brook"

...

Rentato, Hexagram Station.

The black-haired man who was always chewing something in his mouth walked casually on the platform. He looked ordinary, like a random passing-by traveler.

Night watcher rank no. 13, level-eight radiant knight — "Flesh Manipulation" Ramiro.

Chapter 464: New World

At the parcel collection point of Hexagram Station, Rentato.

A fine-featured lass smiled politely. "Hello, how may I be of service?"

"I have a luggage bag that needs to be stored here until my return from Allyn," Ramiro replied with a minty, relaxed smile.

The minty smell came from a specialty from the Kingdom of Brianne known as "Mint Fragrance", which was a kind of tobacco, though it was not to be smoked but rather chewed on after a secret drying process and provided a mind-refreshing cigarette-like intoxicating effect.

The lass asked with a smile, "how many days would that be? Are you a sorcerer?" Despite being an average female in Rentato, she managed to find a leisure job with decent pay all thanks to "Arcana Voice", which made her got rid of her bias against sorcerers and dared to apply for the job. She successfully stood out from the few applicants and secured the job. As a result, she became very fond of sorcerers.

"I'm just an ordinary sorcerer. Let's make it three days. Nah, can I pay for seven days upfront and make adjustments later?" Ramiro asked calmly. It didn't look like he was pressed for time in any way.

The lass replied, "no problem, please pass me the baggage for inspection."

After listening to "Arcana Voice" and working at Hexagram Station, she realized that sorcerers weren't as wealthy as she had imagined. There were many who, in the pursuit of power and arcana research, were left with barely enough to live by.

Like any normal traveler, Ramiro handed over the black luggage bag in his hand.

The female worker did not cut any corners. Abiding by the training protocols, she placed the luggage inside a magic circle within a piece of large alchemy equipment. Then she pressed the switch and turned it on.

The company "Gift from Elements" had developed this simplified alchemical item for exactly this kind of purpose. They could be powered by electricity, thus allowing ordinary people to use them. As a result, it had been widely implemented at locations including the Magic Steam Train Company, Nekso Palace, the villas and orchards of nobles, music halls, opera theatres, and the town hall.

The inspection had confirmed that there weren't any cursed or dangerous items in the luggage. It was only after this confirmation that the lass opened the luggage to screen the items with her naked eyes. She found that the majority of the items were normal clothes, with a small portion being tobacco from Brianne. There was also a light-dark colored piece of meat wrapped in gray cloth.

"Specialty steak?" she asked out of curiosity.

Ramiro's mouth twitched. "Ya"

"A silver a day, for a total of seven." The lass closed the luggage and attached an identification tag on it. She then took it to the warehouse behind and placed it on the corresponding shelf.

After she returned, Ramiro took out seven shiny silver pieces. He let the pieces fall through his fingers one after another onto the counter while listening to the crisp sounds with slanted eyes.

"This is your receipt, please keep it with you for the final tally." The female worker respectfully passed Ramiro a receipt that had been stamped with a special magical ink paste. Only official magicians — who wouldn't do it for such a little money — could forge the ink paste.

Ramiro picked up the receipt. Still chewing on the tobacco, he nodded. "Thank you."

Then, with hands tucked into the pockets of his tuxedo, he headed off towards the Magic Steam Train station. When he came near to a silvery-black trash bin, he pulled out his right hand and threw a carbonated piece of paper into the bin.

The black paper fell slowly, breaking into a countless number of butterflies at the slightest touch of wind. Not a trace remained.

Afterward, Ramiro went inside a restroom. He surveyed the surroundings carefully while wearing a carefree expression. After confirming that there was no one else around, he faced the mirror and pinched his face. His entire body suddenly wriggled erratically like a slime.

Seconds later, he had transformed into a beautiful young lady with a voluptuous figure. His tuxedo has also transformed into a lilac-tiered dress. The collar and cuffs had transformed into ruffles.

Looking into the enchanting deep blue eyes in the mirror, Ramiro smiled at "her". "Long time no see, Avelina. Sometimes I find that being a girl is much more interesting than being a man."

Naturally, "Avelina" didn't respond.

After tidying up her clothes and donning a broad-brim hat with a beautiful long ribbon which she had seemingly conjured from thin air, Ramiro left the restroom elegantly and boarded the magic steam train that had just arrived.

"Avelina, so you've returned from Brianne?" A young man stood up from his seat in joyous surprise.

Ramiro smiled sweetly. "Yes, the magic development in Allyn is faster than I had anticipated. If I were to remain in Brianne, I would not be able to keep up with the times. So I'm back."

"That's marvelous. Where is your boyfriend Lavrov?" The young man eagerly invited "Avelina" to sit down.

Ramiro's expression turned sorrowful. "We've broken up."

"What?" The young man fought to suppress his happiness. Feigning sadness, he consoled her. "Cheer up, the best is yet to come."

Ramiro watched "with grief" as the platform faded from view. Listening to the sound of the train horn and the clickety-clack of the wheels against the track, Ramiro thought angrily.

"Who on earth was that?"

Avelina had not spoken of this man after she had been controlled...

The "silent melancholy" that she exuded intoxicated the young man, rendering him speechless. Time passed swiftly. The magic steam train gradually ascended towards Allyn.

When they passed through the mythal of Allyn, Ramiro narrowed his eyes. He could feel the power of the mythal brushing past his body.

As expected, though Allyn appeared to be as open a city like any other ordinary city, the security checks that were hidden from view were extraordinarily stringent. Luckily, his "Flesh Manipulation" ability allowed him to be passed off as the real 'Avelina'.

The magic steam train stopped at the station. Ramiro saw the brilliant starlight released by the Congress' Headquarter Magic Tower from a distance, with an intensity rivaling that of the red sun in the sky.

"What's happening?" Ramiro had recognized what it was, but he asked regardless.

The young man examined carefully and replied, "it seems to be the Portal to Alternate Realm. Could it be that the grand arcanists have returned from their investigation of the mysterious realm?"

"We'll find out if we take a closer look," Ramiro replied smiling.

This appeared to be an opportunity, yet it seemed to be too much of a coincidence.

However, Ramiro was not about to abandon such an opportunity. As the night watcher ranked number 13th, his powers and abilities overwhelmed many strong level-nines. Decisiveness and willingness to take the initiative are what enabled him to become who he was — Those who were accustomed to plotting and scheming would never anticipate him to barge in like this.

"Merely two point seven seconds..." Ramiro whispered to himself. This was the amount of time that he had before the mythal would react, given that Allyn Mythal was not on its full power yet. He wasn't exactly confident that he could kill Lucien Evans in such a small time window either and could only play it by ear.

.....

On the 32nd floor in the Headquarter Magic Tower of the Congress, within the grand hall stood an illusory door that was five-meters tall and three-meters wide.

The door was built on a complex magic circle that was made up of countless gems and rare materials. Rays of brilliant starlight shone outwards from the top, and many sorcerers had gathered around it.

"Sir, why are so many senior-rank sorcerers and archmages assembled?" Lucien had received no notice beforehand and arrived only after he detected the anomaly.

Fernando, who wore his scarlet magic robe as always, said solemnly, "the races of this world are normal, but its environment is special. Every corner is filled with a strange sensation, one that suppresses our spiritual power greatly. Even Douglas' senses can only extend to a radius of 300 meters. This world is separated into countless little pieces by many spatial barriers that are incompletely solidified. Normal people are hardly affected by it, to them, the world is still whole. However, for us legendary sorcerers, it means that flight is almost impossible, for it's too easy to collide into one of such barriers."

"Under such circumstances, it would be very difficult to locate Alterna and the mysterious existence, as they can automatically shield themselves from many magical prophecies ineffective..." Lucien had a rough idea of why so many senior-rank sorcerers and archmages have gathered here. Strength lay in numbers in times like this.

Fernando nodded in agreement and continued. 'We had a fight with the Church. The Pope was involved, and it caused us to fall leeward. However, the numbers that they could spare to send after us were not enough to surround and kill us. Then, after discovering the peculiarities of this alternate space, we reached a tacit agreement to stop the fighting. The highest priority now was to explore the new world and find Alterna's whereabouts. Fighting directly would give advantage to other parties.'

"A new world ..." Lucien wondered if it meant that Natasha would lead the Duchy of Violet's radiant knights to there as well.

Fernando noticed that Lucien wasn't paying attention. He smiled and said, "according to preliminary calculations, this alternate space is half as big as the main world, so it can be considered as a new world. If anyone can claim ownership of it, they would gain vast amounts of resources."

"So that's how it is, then why weren't the middle-rank sorcerers also summoned? The number of senior-rank magicians and archmages are quite small in comparison," asked Lucien puzzledly.

Fernando shook his head. "That's because a special kind of powerful beings exists in this world. Their abilities are beyond that of high-rank sorcerers. Sending middle-rank sorcerers in would only result in a large scale of loss."

"A special kind of powerful beings?" Lucien had never heard Fernando speak of powerful beings in such a way.

Fernando's expression turned solemn. "False gods, those that came into existence in the early phases of the War of Dawn. They are a variety of monsters with powerful abilities. However, due to some strange reasons, they could bestow powers to their followers, much like demons and devils. Their minds are in a state of crazed stubbornness. Currently, one has been captured and is being researched on."

"Captured one..." Lucien suddenly had the impression that the False Gods were pitiful animals being hunted.

Fernando noticed that the senior-rank magicians and archmages were just about to finish entering the Portal to the Alternate Realm. He threw a stare at Lucien and warned. "Abandon any ideas that you might have. Just stay in Allyn and improve your magic. Until your power matches your Cleansing List ranking, you better not wander around. Don't think about participating in this mysterious space matter either."

But the power matching Lucien's Cleansing List ranking should be that of a legendary... Lucien rubbed his chin in frustration.

Fernando didn't speak another word, gesturing Thompson to enter the Portal to the Alternate Realm with him together.

With his entrance, the batch of reinforcements finished their transfer. Around the portal, only several friends and apprentices remained — This expedition was much more dangerous than the previous ones; It could very well be their last farewell. Amidst the crowd, Ramiro watched the starlight dissipate and began calculating. The Portal to the Alternate Realm would soon regress back to its semi-charged state.

With the Portal to the Alternate Realm's scattering energy, the Allyn Magic Tower and its surrounding mythal's reaction time was seven seconds.

To avoid alerting Lucien, he only cast a fleeting glance at Lucien at the start and ignored him afterward.

"Seven seconds..."

The opportunity was prime. Let's take action now!

Chapter 465: Behind the Scenes

Chapter 465: Behind the Scenes

Seven seconds.

Ramiro's face was filled with excitement and happiness. Her starry eyes sparkling, she walked quickly towards Lucien. Her expression, gaze, and gestures were screaming to others the fact that she adored Lucien. Meeting her idol at the first opportunity in Allyn, she could suppress her urge no longer.

It was normal that Lucien, whether as a musician or an arcanist, received such adoration from the younger generation of sorcerers. The other surrounding sorcerers only muttered about how it was such a waste of a beauty — According to street gossip, Lucien was a crazy researcher who practiced strict abstinence, just like President Douglas. The swarm of beauties surrounding them was left absolutely untouched. If it had been Oliver, it would have been the complete opposite result.

“Really...” The young magician who had brought in “Avelina” watched enviously. If he had even a fraction of Lucien's talents, Avelina would have fallen for him long ago.

Six seconds, Five seconds.

The ecstatic fan closed in on her idol. With slightly parted lips, she seemed to be considering how to start a conversation.

Lucien had also noticed that a young, beautiful young lady was heading towards him. He extended a hand and signaled her to stop. After receiving knowledge that his rank on the Cleansing List had risen to number 19, Lucien had kept a distance with everyone except his acquaintances.

It was caution that allowed him to still be alive. If she had anything to say, she could speak from where she stood. Only at this distance could his Contact Spell be activated undisturbed.

It seemed that Ramiro didn't understand Lucien's gesture and continued forward.

"Her" eyes were mystified; "her" cheeks were rosy. Most men would be harboring naughty thoughts by now.

Just a little bit closer, just a bit closer!

Four seconds.

Suddenly he saw Lucien raised his right hand, gripping the Sun Staff inlaid with a huge sunstone.

"What the fk, he's this cold even towards such a beautiful admirer? Not even the slightest shred of hesitation?" Grumbled Ramiro to himself in his mind. There was no doubt that if she took even a step further, Lucien would actually activate the magic.

The spell Thanos' Maze could not only trap enemies but also restore composure in excited "fans". Lucien had no trouble selecting the magic spell to use.

If the one charging at him was an enemy, the element of surprise would have been lost after being trapped in Thanos' Maze. Within the walls of the Allyn Magic tower, it would leave the enemy entirely at his mercy. Even if Prince Dracula was here in person, there was no guarantee that he could leave alive. Grand arcanist in charge, along with the top-class mythal, the legendary-rank magic tower, and quick support from other top legends — Now that God's Arrival was unavailable, even the pope would be wary of such a combination.

If it really was an over-eager fan, she would be left unharmed after Thanos' Maze expired — the shattered confidence in her intelligence ignored. A simple apology would resolve the matter easily.

A brief urge to swear flashed across Ramiro's mind. After estimating the distance, he suddenly bolted across the space between them like a phantom.

Had he been just a bit closer, Ramiro could guarantee to land a magical blow on Lucien before the latter could react. That would drain his Contact Spell and set the stage for the assassination. However, now that the situation was already like this, and that it was very impossible that there would be another opportunity as good as this, he had to ignore the distance.

To a level-eight radiant knight, this distance was practically nothing. Also, Ramiro believed that his magic resistance could cancel out most of Lucien's magic — at this range, there was only enough time for one spell!

“So it's indeed an assassin.” With a mere thought of Lucien, the Sunstone on the Sun Staff shone brightly. If they were not immune to maze type spells, even legends could fall prey to Thanos' Maze. Though of course, considering the legends' magic resistance, it would depend on who was more blessed by Lady Luck — the chance of successfully trapping one is about once in twenty to thirty attempts.

Ramiro's gaze tightened, his acute instincts warned him of great danger. Thus, he abandoned the initial idea of relying on his magic resistance against Lucien's magic. He narrowed his eyes, and another idea hatched.

Three seconds

Boom, a huge explosion sound spread from within Ramiro's body. A horrifying shockwave rushed towards Lucien.

A rainbow of bright, clear protective shields lit up one after another. The surrounding sorcerers had unconsciously used their most adept protective magic.

Simultaneously, they watched in horror as the beautiful young lady exploded into countless pieces in the blink of an eye. Finger, arm, feet, heart, intestines, and brain rained down all across the floor.

What had happened? As most high-rank sorcerers and archmages had just left through the Portal to the Alternate Realm, none present knew how to cast ninth-circle spells. Even if they could react in time, they could not pause the time.

With Ramiro's self explosion, Thanos' Maze suddenly lost its target and stopped. Lucien couldn't tend to anything else other than quickly altering the spell model within his soul. Suddenly a faint rippling light surrounded him as if he suddenly sank to the bottom of a lake, surrounded by water.

As soon as the intense shockwave came into contact with the "water waves", semi-transparent whirlpools sprouted one after another, dissipating the force.

Sixth-circle magic, "Energy Absorption Field."

"Self-explosion?"

Before Lucien could take a breather, he suddenly saw the body parts on the floor come to life and catapult towards him with a spring. The scene was strangely terrifying.

Other than the Portal to Alternate Realm behind him, the body parts blocked every path of escape.

Two seconds.

Since they were not energy, the body parts passed through the absorption field with ease. Lucien was about to be hit.

If they were not energy, they must be matter!

Lucien was suddenly surrounded by huge whirlpools. Red, yellow, gold, silver... countless light spots gathered and spun. All body parts that attempted to pass through the whirlpools were decomposed into basic elements of charred coal, of gas, of iron scraps. All had returned to their original state.

Element Whirlpool!

Blood on the ground congregated and twisted into a humanoid shape. After his two failed attacks, Ramiro understood that his mission was going to end with failure. Now only one second remained before Allyn Magic tower and the grand arcanist on guard would react.

His gaze steeled. The blood began to boil, and suddenly, erupted with rays blinding as the Sun. The terrifying explosion headed for the Energy Absorbing Force Field like a tsunami.

This was the true self-explosion of a level-eight radiant knight. A power that could erase a mountain top was heading straight for Lucien.

From the beginning, Ramiro had not planned any time for escape, for it was unnecessary!

That's right, one who would self-explode into nothing would have no need to escape.

At the same time, the body parts within the Energy Absorbing Force Field no longer tried to pass through the whirlpools but exploded.

Attacking from both sides of the force field was the true power of a level-eight radiant knight's self explosion. Energy Absorption Field was torn into pieces, like a piece of paper in a storm.

Even if this couldn't kill Lucien, Lucien will not end well!

Energy Absorption Field shattered. Element Whirlpool shattered. But Lucien has yet to recover from the cooldown between castings.

In this time of crisis, Contact Spell was activated.

Short Range Blink and Energy Harm Protection were activated in an instant, and Lucien vanished.

However, Short Range Blink was not teleportation. The huge and terrifying surrounding energy could tear Lucien into mincemeat within the briefest of moments. There was only one direction left to go: behind.

After the blink, Lucien should have appeared across the hall, where he would only be affected by residues of the shockwave. However, unfortunately, behind him was the Portal to the Alternate Realm. So he blinked into the Portal, right before it regressed completely to the semi-activated state.

Starlight rippled like water. The shockwave immediately impacted on the door afterward, inducing violent vibrations. Many tiny cracks to appear on the Portal.

One second.

Allyn Magic Tower was activated, and the elegant, pretty Hathaway appeared above the Portal to the Alternate Realm. She pointed a finger, and the terrifying explosion disappeared immediately, as though they had never appeared in the first place.

Not a drop of blood nor a shred of flesh could be found on the floor of the hall. The power of the self-explosion had erased all traces. Only the cracks on the Portal remained as evidence of what had just happened.

Expressionlessly, Hathaway waved and activated the Portal to the Alternate Realm. Then, she stepped in to confirm the safety of Lucien.

However, the Congress of Magic at the other side of the Portal did not see Lucien arrive. It seemed that the explosion had interfered with the teleportation, and as a result, Lucien had been transported to an unknown location.

The only thing that could be sure that Lucien was indeed in this new world, for the main space joint did not change.

.....

The Hexagram Station, Rentato.

At the warehouse that stored the deposited luggage, a black suitcase suddenly started shaking. It opened with a bang, and a pale hand stretched out from it, a hand that appeared to have been severed.

The hand was enveloped by a piece of gray cloth. Slowly, limbs, body, the other hand and legs, as well as an ordinary-looking head grew from it.

The black-haired young man coughed violently, sounding rather creepy and scary in the silent warehouse.

“Lucien must have been forced into the New World. Now let’s see who he’ll run into first, legendary sorcerers from the Congress of Magic or our Grand Cardinals,” Ramiro murmured weakly to himself.

This kind of full-on self-explosion came at a great cost to himself as well. His power would drop one-level lower in the short term. Even with treatment of the Holy Water and divine spells, it would still take him at least a month to recover.

Putting on clothes taken from the suitcase, Ramiro shook his head. This operation was too reckless and dangerous after all. He was almost caught by Hathaway.

Even someone who was used to immediate action like him still found this operation too bold in hindsight.

After he finished dressing, he took the suitcase and left the warehouse, heading towards the Radiance Church.

After he left, an ominous wind suddenly blew inside the silent warehouse. A creepy, creaky, barely audible voice said, “obtain Maskelyne’s Protective Charm... I’d like to see if he would have some interesting interactions with the mysterious existence...”

.....

Ramiro received his orders promptly upon returning to the Radiance Church.

“By the Pope’s decree: The upper third of high-rank clergies, the top 200 night watchers, half of the radiant or higher-level knights of each country are to enter the New World.”

Chapter 466: Secret Praying Congress

Thick dark clouds blocked out the sky. The streets were enveloped in darkness by dusk. Many were hurrying home. Regardless of the time or era, save for a few individuals, being drenched in rain was not considered a pleasant experience. It was especially the case in parts where medical treatments were absent or lacking, for catching a cold could often spell death.

The passersby were all wearing linen clothes of a similar gray color, absent in variation of color or styles. Only the occasional patrol soldiers stood out from the crowd. The bronze breast and shin plates together with the iron-black swords and spears equipped them with an air of toughness.

With his entire body wrapped in a linen robe, Lucien tailed behind a middle-aged man whose pace altered frequently. The man weaved between alleyways and main roads, just like every other ordinary passerby.

The sky grew darker, and winds began howling. A storm would come at any moment. The patrolling soldiers had no choice but to speed up their march towards the camp within the city walls.

Stopping in front of a stone two-story building, the middle-aged man surveyed his surroundings cautiously. Only after confirming that no one was paying attention in his direction did he knock gently on the walnut wood door with a peculiar rhythm: first twice on the center of the door, followed by thrice on the left near where the door would pivot, and finished with once on the lock. Each part produced a different sound.

After a ten-second silence, a hole suddenly appeared on the door, and a light-brown eye peered from it.

The middle-aged man took a step back, making sure that the gray rose on the corner of his shirt was clearly visible to the eye.

The image was so unobvious that unless one had known about it beforehand, he would never be able to spot it.

Lucien also adjusted his posture such that his "gray rose" stood out.

The brown eye blinked and vanished behind the door. Then, the walnut door opened slowly, and a midget-like hunchbacked man said in a low voice, "Respected initiators, 'Crown' is waiting for you."

The middle-aged man took the lead and entered the room swiftly, his gaze signaling Lucien to follow.

Lucien was not as agile and alert as the middle-aged man. He pushed the doors open with a smile and entered the room leisurely as if it was a normal visit to an ordinary friend.

The middle-aged man nodded his head ever so slightly after witnessing Lucien's performance.

After the night watcher assassin forced Lucien into the Portal, the teleportation was disrupted due to the self-explosion attack on the gate, and Lucien was thrown into this baffling city "Politown". Furthermore, as Lucien had separated from the protection of the Portal during the final stage of the teleportation, he was affected seriously by space turbulence. Not only was his body severely hurt, but his spirit was now also very weak. He was only at the level of ordinary knights and middle-rank sorcerers. His equipment had also taken damage during the space storm, and required repair before they could be used again.

However, Lucien was rather lucky: He had neither run into any high-ranking godhood personnel and the Grand Cardinal of the Church nor into false gods or monsters. Instead, He had been taken in by a kind-hearted old man named Norton. After two months of recovery, his magic power and knight standard had recovered.

The only problem remained was that the magic items that he had equipped at the time required special materials to repair. Of course, the legendary Sun's Corona and the ninth-level Sun Staff were protected by their tier-corresponding magic and were undamaged.

Frost Freeze, Pale Justice, Transformation Mask, and the other items in the storage bag were also undamaged. Even Norton only saw the transformed ordinary-human appearance of Lucien.

In the past two months, Lucien had not run into any sorcerer or the Saint Truth personnel, neither had he managed to obtain any relevant information. It appeared that they were far from the city, far enough that even rumors about the incident were nonexistent. If he had not felt the strange, omnipresent sensation suppressing spiritual power that Fernando mentioned about, Lucien would suspect that he had entered a different alternate dimension.

According to the old man Norton, Lucien came to know that Politown was situated at the shores of ocean Erdo, and was the heart of the Erdo peninsula's politics and economy.

In the beginning, the indigenous Barril people ruled over this land. They built the Barril empire and worshipped the "the Lord of Fire and Destruction" Avando. However, a hundred years ago, the massive Angornorma Empire attacked from across the sea and conquered the land. Avando was also defeated and exiled by "The Lord of War" Antanas, who was worshipped by the Empire.

Seeking to crumble the foundation of faith of the Barril people, Angornorma's Servants of God spread the word that Avando had been killed.

The Erdo Governor-Generals appointed by the Angornorma Empire had always ruled with cruelty and treated the Barrils as slaves. As such, the island was rife with war. Rebels who claimed that they were blessed by Avando and those who started worshipping other gods waged war frequently. However, due to the strength of the Angornorma empire, coupled with their horrifying "God", the uprisings were quelled time and again.

This should have mattered little to Lucien as he was, with great caution not to reveal himself, preparing to gather information about the surrounding geography and kingdoms in hope of finding traces about the Congress of Magic. After all, sufficient preparation would guarantee a safe journey — The strange sensation that suppressed spiritual power suppressed Electromagnetism Message as well, and Lucien estimated that effective communication could only be established within a range of ten kilometers.

Thus, Lucien would not dare to venture out without precise information. Who knows if he would run straight into the Saint Truth personnel or lands ruled by the vampires. The Transformation Mask could fool your average Joe, but definitely not the Grand Cardinal personnel, not to mention the pope and Prince Dracula.

However, Norton, who was in the last phase of his life, seemed to have felt that Lucien performance in the past two months had steamrolled the youngsters and children that he had taken in. He was also convinced that Lucien was undoubtedly a faithful Barril by Lucien's mastery over the Barril tongue — The Angornorma empire had gone to great lengths to popularize their tongue, so unless taught since a young age and coupled with a longing for Barril's independence, no young man would be able to speak the Barril tongue with such fluency. As such, he decided to pass on his secret identity to Lucien before his death.

The identity was that of a high ranking member of the "Secret Praying Congress", the seventh apostle of the incarnation of the "Lord of Fire and Destruction".

Lucien was well aware that his mastery of the Barril tongue was entirely the credit of the magic spell Mastery of Languages. However, considering that information would be much easier to come by in an organization, he agreed. Due to the constant rebellions, Politown was under close surveillance of both the "Erdo Governor-General" and the "Lord of War Temple". Under such conditions, trying to fool with others' memories was unlikely to work well. Therefore, infiltrating into Angornorma's high ranking officers to find information could only be attempted once, as he would be at risk of being exposed if the matter drags on for more than a day. Honestly, if it hadn't been for Norton's protection, Lucien would have faced many identity checks already. As for the Erdo Governor-General, rumors had it that he was a hybrid child of god and human, and was capable of using the "Strength of God" like the chief priest of the God of War Temple. It was equivalent to having two ordinary two level-nine red robes stationed there.

There were no crazy sorcerers nor bloodline knights in this world. However, the false gods often indulged in promiscuity and produced many offspring. These offspring were also equipped with qualities similar to that of bloodline knights.

Ordinary humans could only promote by becoming Servants of God and rise along the ranks of the priests. The army was only capable of dealing with ordinary folk and was helpless in the face of the divine-blood "heroes". Luckily, the divine-blooded were few in numbers, and the army was still useful in suppressing uprisings if things don't get too out of hand.

Following the fifth apostle "Anheuse", they passed through the great hall and arrived behind the building. As Anheuse opened a secret passage that revealed a staircase leading up, Lucien looked on detachedly as he pondered if he should find a chance and research on this incarnation of "The Lord of Fire and Destruction". It was the first time that he encountered the incarnation of a False God, and it would be a prime opportunity to obtain first-hand information. This was also one of the main reasons why he decided to join this "Secret Praying Congress".

The staircase looked like it would lead them straight to the ceiling. However, Anheuse stopped abruptly when they were halfway up and opened yet another hidden door. The staircase that appeared this time led downwards.

The two proceeded in silence for a substantial amount of time before finally arriving in front of a bronze door. The door was covered in all kinds of strange flame patterns.

His hand placed on one of the flame patterns, Anheuse's entire body radiated a red light. Then he pushed open the bronze door forcefully.

Beyond the door was a hall filled with a row of lit braziers. It was rather bare save for the stone pillars and a round table at its center.

There were 13 chairs around the table, one of which was gold and embedded with rubies. No one had occupied it yet. At both sides of the gold chair were 6 silver chairs, which were also decorated with similar flame patterns.

Five out of the twelve silver chairs had been occupied. An ashen-haired old man with a full beard looked at Lucien and said, "According to Norton's recommendation before he passed away, the great God of Flame and Destruction had prophesized that you, Leviathan, would be the seventh apostle."

Leviathan was Lucien's alias.

"However, you have not yet demonstrated any power nor made any sacrifice for the god. In the coming year, we will examine you. Only after passing the tests will you be granted the 'Seed of Spirit' and receive extraordinary power."

"Understood." Lucien was immediately curious about this "Seed of Spirit". Could this be the key to deciphering the secrets of the divine spells? Should he capture the apostles or the "Lord of Fire and Destruction" for research?

After the old man finished his piece, he glanced at Lucien. "Have a seat. We will carry out the Flame Baptism for you in a while. As for now, we have more urgent matters to tend to."

"What matters?" Anheuse had thought that they had gathered for the sole purpose of carrying out the Flame Baptism for the seventh apostle.

"It's about our path in the future, about how to let the god recover completely". The old man, who was the first apostle Jacob, said in a low voice.

Chapter 467: The Gues

Chapter 467: The Guest

Anheuse stole a glance at Lucien. He was uncomfortable with the idea of discussing matters of such importance in the presence of Leviathan, who had only just become the Secret Praying Congress' seventh apostle. For all they know, he could be a spy sent by the evil god Antanas, looking for the whereabouts of the God of Flame and Destruction. They should have waited for him to pass the one year trial period and made sure that nothing was amiss about him before allowing him to participate in the discussion of core matters.

Members of the Secret Praying Congress were extremely cautious in Politown, for those who weren't were all already died, some even brought serious loss to the Secret Praying Congress.

"Why are we suddenly discussing this? I remember that the previous plan 'Missionary' had only recently been confirmed?" Anheuse looked at Jacob solemnly.

Jacob pressed the gray rose pattern on the corner of his shirt and replied in a low voice, "this is the direct order of 'Crown'. We shall wait for him in silence."

"Crown" was the Secret Praying Congress' leader, the Lord of Fire and Destruction's divine son, and the one claiming to be His incarnation. The father and son shared a body. As for apostles like Lucien, they were known as "initiators", those spreading the wisdom of religious discipline.

Anheuse's expressions finally relaxed, and he sat down on a chair on which the flame patterns formed the word "five" in Barril tongue. Some apostles looked at Lucien with caution, while others did so with scrutiny or indifference. Lucien mirrored Anheuse's actions and found himself the silver chair with the pattern "seven". He appeared as if he had been at his own home.

"Leviathan, Norton has spread the word that you have great strength, on par with the worst of the divine-blooded. Is that true?"

A mess of white beard covered Jacob's face, making his expressions hard to read.

The other apostles stared at the dark red round table, as though they had not heard Jacob's question, nor were they waiting for Lucien's answer. Though strength of this degree was rare among humans, it was not unprecedented. Being on par with the worst divine-blooded also referred solely to raw strength. As soon as the divine-blooded used the "Supernatural Power" of their bloodline, they cast miraculous spells and control nature itself. A human with super strength would then fare no better than a normal human, and death would follow swiftly.

Black hair and black eyes, Lucien's appearance was that of an ordinary Barril man. He replied with a smile, "I have not fought with any divine-blooded yet and thus can't say how I fare against them. However, it is enough to deal with common monsters."

Lucien had claimed that his injury was the result of an encounter with a terrifying monster in the wild and that he had escaped only due to his natural strength. Norton, who was only capable of using spell-like abilities, was amazed by the knight's strength. This could be one of the reasons why he recommended Lucien to become the seventh apostle.

Jacob's back straightened, but there was no change in his gaze nor his tone of voice. "Then your future Seed of Spirit might lean towards that direction. Strength to crumble city walls, skin tough enough to withstand sword and spear, as well as immense speed. Just like that of the fiend Antanas before he killed his father."

According to Angornorma's legends, The Lord of War Antanas was the son of the Lord of Sky. He was a demigod of boundless strength; Even the sharpest blade could leave only scratches on him. Despite slaying the nine great monsters terrorizing the empire, he was blamed by the Lord of Sky. As such, he rebelled and killed his father, and rose to the main god of the Angonormanian pantheon.

"However, you need to use your strength to serve the great Lord of Fire and Destruction before you can attain such power," said Jacob before Lucien could respond. Jacob had said similar pieces to all new members of the Secret Praying Congress, those who had yet to receive the Seed of Spirit.

Suddenly, the secret hall was filled with the air of heat and destruction, as though a fire had befallen.

Jacob rose from his seat. He placed his hand over his chest and lowered his head. “Welcome, Crown.”

The other apostles followed suit. Lucien did likewise while judging the power of the “Crown” at the same time. If “Crown” had released his aura without restraint to intimidate the initiators, then his strength was about level seven. However, his aura was extremely strange — It was not a suppression of spiritual power, or willpower domination, or even divine pressure. In fact, it felt like a mix of the three. Nothing about it was outstanding.

False God, incarnation, son of god... Lucien secretly thought that things are getting more and more interesting by the minute

For Lucien, the main goal of joining the Secret Praying Congress was to gather information and to avoid danger. Research had only been a secondary motive. However, the things that he had been exposed to kept tugging at his arcanist instincts. He found himself wanting to actively participate in the matters of the Secret Praying Congress.

Meanwhile, Lucien calculated in his mind: If “Crown” really is the sole incarnation of the Lord of Fire and Destruction, then the false god’s level should be at eight. For the Lord of War to allow him to escape, it appears that the Lord of War is not yet of the legendary level. Probably at the peak of level nine.

In the early phases of the War of Dawn, the sorcerers that survived the massacre of the Saint Truth Church did not know much about the false gods. But with the rise of Thanatos Vicente Miranda, the congress later obtained much information on the false gods from the South Church

Despite having limited knowledge about the false gods due to his limited access, Lucien knew enough to know that false gods were capable of using their power to create incarnations. The incarnations will peak at a power one level lower than that of the original, and their numbers were limited at two. If more incarnations were to be created, their power level would need to be lowered.

Since the Secret Praying Congress had claimed that they were the main group worshipping Lord of Fire and Destruction, Lucien deduced that this incarnation of Avando was of the strongest type.

A young beautiful raven-haired man appeared from the shadows of the stone hall. He donned a pure white robe, and an olive garland sat on his head. The phantom flame covering his exposed skin gave his muscles a sense of beauty and strength.

Judging from the appearance, Lucien deduced that this incarnation was skilled at physical combat and equipped with some level of knowledge about magic. His skill set should be similar to a knight. Or rather, similar to a powerful demon from Hell.

“Crown” Ell looked at the seven apostles present and sat on the gold chair. He then lowered his right hand, signaling the apostles to sit.

“Our kingdom has been taken over by fiend, and our children hurt by the heretics. The number of those who stand with use is dwindling by the minute. Yet we still cling onto our bloodline and our Father. Hence our successors, devout young men, have continued to arrive. Leviathan, we hope that you can guard the gate of the Divine Mountain and spread the name of our god to fellow Barril men.”

Ell had acknowledged Lucien as the seventh apostle. After all, Erdo was under the strict control of Angonorma, and talents were hard to come by.

After Lucien saluted and thanked him, Ell said to the seven apostles, “I have gathered you to discuss the future. You should have noticed that the rebellions have dwindled, as are Barril men who place their faith in God the Father. Let me hear what you have to say about this.”

“They had forgotten about the majesty of the gods, and no longer fear fire and destruction. We must make them remember the fear that had been etched in their soul, make them remember the Fire Cleansing that will come. Only then will they fight for the great Avando.” Anheuse said sternly.

After seeing that the other apostles all agreed to Anheuse’s opinion, Lucien shook his head lightly. It appeared that this Secret Praying Congress was still rather primitive, relying solely on fear to spread their religion rather than combining with redemption and hope. It was not suited to the current times. If they continue with this method, their followers would only grow fewer until they are eventually eliminated by the Angonorma.

Ell’s eyes seemed to dance with fire. He said in a low voice, “it is our duty to spread the majesty of God the Father. However, I believe that it’s time we changed the method by which we do so.”

Lucien and the other apostles looked towards Ell. While others were confused, Lucien wondered if Ell was considering new ways of popularizing their religion.

Ell said passionately, “as of now, His children and ministers are suffering under the rule of the heretics. Fear would no longer bring us to their heart. What they need is salvation, a way out from the sufferings. We need to tell them they don’t need to fear death, where eternal peace and happiness awaited them in the Divine Mountain of God; Tell them that their sacrifice will help to build a Divine Kingdom free of war, killing, fear, and hatred for their offspring; Tell them only such Divine Kingdoms would escape the wrath of the Fire Cleansing.

“Of course, those who betrayed God the Father must be punished. After just judgment, they would be exiled to the kingdom of the dead to endure unimaginable suffering.

“God the Father will not only watch over the Barril. He is empathetic, benevolent, and willing to accept any race that is willing to place their faith in him.”

Lucien was stunned by Ell’s words. These were concepts of mature religion. It evolved from that of a god reigning over a race or region towards a more abstract and encompassing god. Could it be revelations from the previous failure?

“But the great Lord of Fire’s domain does not include salvation, peace, or judgment,” Jacob asked, puzzled. For the Barrils and Angonormians, different gods were in charge of different things, and there was no single omnipotent god.

The fire in Ell’s eyes lit up. “God the Father’s godhood was compromised as he had parted his power to other gods when he created them. However, the other gods had betrayed him in this war and caused his defeat. He thus decided to wage war on them and reclaim his godhood. If he manages to return to his initial state before he created everything, he would be able to defeat the fiend Antanas.”

Not only did he explain why the God of Fire and Destruction who created the world in the legends was defeated, but he also gave them a direction — to unite the forces within the pantheon.

“Right, the gods who betrayed the God of Fire also divided Barril. Respected ‘Crown’, who shall be our first target?” Anheuse was very much in agreement with Ell’s idea, possibly due to anger towards followers of other gods.

Ell replied coldly, “Asin, the God of Moon”.

The God of Moon... Lucien suddenly felt something was amiss.

Ell suddenly stood up. “God the Father has made this decision merit of a philosopher from the east.”

He turned and said, “Mr. Francis, please advise the details as to how we should proceed.”

Francis? Lucien frowned slightly. Another man with black hair and eyes appeared from where Ell did earlier. He had a slender frame and his face was soft. He carried a sword on his back and wore a loose white robe similar to Ell’s.

Chapter 468: The Mysterious "Philosopher"

"A philosopher from the eastern kingdoms?" The first apostle Jacob looked at Francis, confused.

Jacob wasn't questioning this philosopher's abilities or background — He had passed Avando's test and won "Crown" Ell's trust. Jacob had raised the question hoping to learn more to make a better judgment about Francis' proposal. After all, he was the Secret Praying Congress' main leader.

The other apostles shared similar concerns. Even Lucien bore a similar expression.

The situation of this world is rather special. False gods, including those that have Moon as part of their domain, are plenty. When the authentic God of the Silver Moon, Alterna, fell to this world, She would be attracted to those whose godhood is similar to hers. It was possible that she would try to reclaim her powers from them. After all, She was also the Primordial Ancestor of the Vampires and was able to harness blood and godhood.

The Congress of Magic's understanding of divine powers was extremely underdeveloped and Lucien's descriptions were largely borrowed from the Church. He had only a vague idea of what terms like "domain" and "godhood" referred to, but was unclear to what they were exactly.

With this in mind, Lucien thought to himself that if there are no better methods of finding the Alterna, one effective way to locate Her would be to control and monitor the false gods whose duties were related to the moon.

As for Francis, Lucien wondered which church was he from. He could be from the North Church, the South Church, or the Church of the false gods in the Northwest of the Dark Mountain Range. He could also be from the Congress of Magic or the Dark Congress... The only thing to be sure of was that he's definitely not a Druid or an elf.

Ell's words about a mature religious concept did not make identifying Francis' identity any easier, for Lucien was able to spew similar sentiments himself. If Francis was from one of the Churches, then helping the false gods revolutionize their religion seemed to conflict his own faith. However, for members of the Church's upper echelon and the high-ranking night watchers, it wouldn't be too big a deal to slightly bend one's faith for matters important as finding the God of Silver Moon.

Thinking about this, Lucien grew cautious and alert. Most of his magical items were damaged, and he would be disadvantaged in a long, drawn-out fight. It was also unknown whether Francis had any allies nearby.

Ell pointed at Francis and smiled. 'Mr. Francis had come from an oasis in the eastern desert. He has done extensive research on philosophy, divinity, and occultism. One night, he witnessed a star glow curiously bright for a short while before swiftly returning to normal. It symbolized the rising of God the Father, and Mr. Francis thus came to Erdo to pay religious homage and establish communications.

This quack... Lucien swore under his breath. His suspicion about Francis was growing by the minute. The astrological phenomenon that he had described was one indicating the fall of an "old god" for a new one to take its place. It had nothing to do with the rise of Avando.

Was he simply making things up or had he said it deliberately to taunt Avando and Ell who clearly knew nothing about Astrology?

Francis sat down on one of the silver chairs. Still wearing that faint smile, he looked at the apostles and said, "the great God of Fire and Destruction is no longer worshiped by Barrils, not only because the way of preaching was problematic but also was He indeed defeated by Antanas. The Barrils who had feared Avando realized that the God of Fire and Destruction was weaker than they had imagined."

"That's because the other gods betrayed Him!" The second apostle said loudly. He was unwilling to accept that the God of Fire Avando who was able to destroy the world was defeated.

Francis laid back into his chair leisurely. "Regardless, He was defeated. For the gods, defeat is even worse than death. As such, I suggest that we forget about Avando's image of the past, and embrace a new method of preaching. We can say that from the flames of destruction, Ell the Savior was born. The previous failure of Avando was only a test for His followers. Those who failed to pass the test must repent devoutly, for only then will they receive redemption from Ell and harvest on the fertile lands after the fire.

"It will be a new god — Ell, the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. He will then gradually embody traits of Avando and assume the domain of Fire and Destruction. Then the followers will understand that Ell is Avando and vice versa. The two of them will be able to become a truly powerful god when They become one.

"Anything that happens after can also be explained as simply another test of god."

The six apostles around the round table fell silent. Francis' plan made sense. However, writing anything off as the test of the gods sounded rather blasphemous.

On the other hand, Lucien noticed that Francis delivered his words with no sarcasm but rather with an air of fanaticism, which made his words very convincing.

Lucien was more and more convinced that Francis was a "visitor" from the main material world. He wondered if Francis was really that great of an actor, or was he seeking the God of the Silver Moon for other motives.

The apostles remained in silence. Francis stood up, placed his hand on his chest, and saluted Ell.

"We mortals are incapable of truly understanding the minds of god. If anything goes wrong, it must mean that we have failed to understand enough and neglected His test.

"God has been around since the dawn of time and will continue to exist forever. God does not require our worship. However, we need to worship god for redemption.

"God represents truth, virtue, redemption, and every other positive value. He is the only true god in charge of everything!"

Ell's expression became slightly excited upon hearing those words. The flames in his eyes danced even fiercer. Francis' altered religious doctrine elevated his "divine throne" dramatically such that he was now distinct from the false gods that walked among mortals, which made it easier for followers to worship him wholeheartedly.

"Isn't this the latest edition of the Church's explanation of divinity?" Lucien silently cringed.

The Saint Truth needed to be on top of the advancements in arcana, as did arcanists require knowledge on divinity. Both sides knew well of the power of knowing their enemy.

This made it even harder for Lucien to determine Francis' identity. Ironically, the chances that Francis is a member of the Saint Truth is the smallest. Even the pope would be accused of blasphemy had he applied the Saint Truth's religious doctrine on false gods, unless he had ulterior motives.

"Great God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, please accept our faith and pardon our sins. Save us from this tainted world." Jacob, the most experienced preacher was the first to recognize what they should do. He immediately started worshiping Ell and accepted the new "God of Fire and Destruction" on behalf of the other apostles. Ell nodded contently. "My godhood has been passed onto me by God the Father, but it is still weak. We must wage war on the other False Gods who have similar domains to strengthen it. The God of Moon Asin bears the duty of immortality, fertility, and peace. It is intrinsically tied to Resurrection, Fertility, and Redemption. He shall be our first target."

Ell no longer viewed Asin as a god.

"Asin had betrayed the great Avando in the war against the fiend Antanas. She is currently spreading her religion at the Solna river valley. Other gods who also betrayed Avando are competing with her for the limited resource of faith. Fearing the great Avando's revenge, their divine realms are ever more elusive. Our chances of winning, even with the great Avando at our side, are slim if we were to fight them in their own realm." Anheuse frequently preached in the outside world and was very familiar with the state of the world.

Their blatant thirst for faith resource made Lucien ponder over the origin of divine powers. Lucien wondered if the source of divinity is indeed the power of faith, then does it mean that mental power exists or does it mean that mental power is a special form of spiritual power with a special frequency.

Francis smiled. "God of Moon Asin's guard would be lowered if he faces Ell under the title of the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. On my way here, I learned that there will be a divinity debate taking place in the Solana river valley, where the temples could attract followers by boasting about the capabilities of the one's god. Those who fail would be exiled from the river valley. The priest of the fiend Antanas would be there too. He seeks to 'convert' the false gods there to true members of the Angonormanian pantheon.

"We shall participate under the name of a new religion. During the debate, try to agitate Asin and lead him to the ambush."

Ell nodded. "Let's do what Mr. Francis says. When the time comes, Francis, Jacob, and I will kill Asin easily outside of his realm."

"Mr. Francis too?" Jacob asked in surprise.

He was the leader of the apostle and received the most powerful "Seed of Spirit" from Avando, which was equivalent to the total of the other apostles. His strength was about level six, equivalent. What made Francis worthy to fight alongside him?

Francis smiled. "I was once blessed by the great true god. I managed to run into the death of a Hydra who had strength on par with false gods. After bathing in its blood and devouring its heart, I too have obtained strength akin to that of the divine-blooded."

Bloodline knight? Despite the lie, Lucien understood what Francis was trying to get across and thought that if this was the case, he could not be a member of the Congress of Magic.

There were no bloodline knights in the Congress of Magic.

Jacob was taken aback and ceased his questioning to Francis. He turned to the other apostles. "Leviathan, it's time for you to serve. Since you have yet to come into contact with other religions, you can represent the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. Anheuse shall aid you..."

"I will accompany you there too. It would be otherwise hard to win the debate and agitate Asin for someone untrained like you." Francis added.

Chapter 469: The “Theology Debate”

Solna River flowed quietly, nurturing one-third of the creatures living on the Erdo Peninsula. Many river valleys formed alongside. In the valley named after the river, Solna Valley, there were a few city-states. Thanks to the plentiful water resource and rich land, Solna Valley became a very prosperous place second only to Politown. In front of the newly-built temple for the Lord of War in the city of Husum, there was a spacious square, on which a stage had been built up. People wearing flax robes crowded around it voluntarily, supporting the different god they worshipped. The soldiers of the Angonorma Empire stood by lazily in their bronze armors, showing no care to the small conflicts between the followers, as if they wished that those heretics could just kill each other, which would save much trouble.

On the stage sat the eight chief priests, who were representatives of the remaining eight gods of Barril — the God of Moon, the God of Thunder and Lightning, the God of Storm, the Mother God of Earth, the Lord of Underworld, the God of Sun and Justice, the God of Wisdom, and the Goddess of Love and Breed. They waited for the start of the debate on the silver chairs. Should they fail to win victory in this debate and turn their god into one of the three deities, their god would be driven out of the valley by the Lord of War. Over time, the expelled gods would gradually lose their followers and eventually die or become an avatar of the Angonormanian pantheon due to assimilation.

Although they all knew it well that selecting the three deities was just the Lord of War's strategy for dividing and better ruling them and that, in the end, all of them would be assimilated into Angonormanian pantheon, no one dared to speak against of it as this was the consequence of their own choice. Also, to them, there was still hope if they become one of the three deities — Once they survived, they could gather a great number of new followers in Solna Valley. Maybe, in the future, they would have a chance to in turn replace their counterpart in the Angonormanian pantheon.

Sitting on the golden chair highest above, the chief priest representing the Lord of War was a brown-haired beautiful lady. The slit of her white Angonorma-style dress reached all the way up to her waist, revealing her curves and long, graceful legs.

She was high priestess Nena, the second chief priest in the Temple of War in Politown.

"Salute to the great Lord of War, the master of all conflicts and destruction." The sixteen leading priests of the eight gods bowed together, in the same way as they once bowed to the Lord Avando.

After performing the war dance herself to please the Lord of War, Nena was about to start the debate.

At this time, two black-haired men in white robes came in front of the stage and said to the guards aloud, "let us in! The God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption sent us here for the debate."

"I never heard of this title. It must belong to a false god. Guards, expel them!" Nob, the priest of the God of Moon scolded.

The power of the God of Moon, Asin, was ranked in the middle among the eight remaining Gods. Thus, facing the competitors coming out of nowhere, the old priest was definitely not happy.

As the follower, Francis hurriedly eyed Lucien to deliver the prepared speech.

Fearlessly, Lucien looked right into Nob's eyes and said, "this isn't your decision to make. Only the almighty Lord of War can decide if we could join or not. How dare you speak before the chief priest of the Lord of War?"

Francis was a bit surprised. What Lucien just said was not the version they previously agreed on. However, it worked better. It seemed that this guy named Leviathan was quite good at improvisation.

Overwhelmed by surprise and fear, the chief priest of the God of Moon suddenly became speechless.

Lucien turned to Nena and said sincerely, "dear Lady Nena, the Lord of War told us that all gods preaching in the valley are qualified for attending the debate. Did I understand it wrong?"

"No," Nena answered coldly and briefly.

Lucien smiled. "Our Lord, the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption also has followers in this valley. Please allow us to join in."

"You must prove it." Nena did not refuse, as adding one more god to the debate would not hinder the Lord of Wars arrangement, but could instead intensify the conflict and provide an advantage for the future assimilation.

Lucien raised his right hand. Anheuse, who was hiding in the corner, started applauding. Hearing that, all of the secret previous followers of the Lord of Fire and Destruction began clapping their hands and loudly praising Ell, the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption.

Nob and the other chief priests exchanged a look. They didn't expect the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, whose name and titles they had never heard of, had already gained such influence.

It never occurred to them that the so-called God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption was in fact Avando, the previous Lord of Fire and Destruction. It had never happened before that a god would change his godhood, for godhood reflected a god's power and the possible spell collections possessed. Therefore, even though the name of the god was changed, their godhood would remain the same. Also, the change of the name mostly happened when a god had assimilated another god and wanted to create another incarnation in order to absorb the pre-existing faith.

However, Revival, Fertility, and Redemption seemed to drastically differ from Fire and Destruction. Thus, it was hard to realize that Ell was actually Avando's new identity.

Under the hostile gaze of the other priests, Lucien walked on the stage with Francis and sat down on the added silver chair.

Nena said to them, "today's debate is to tell the true gods from the fake. Only the true gods deserve people's faith. The Lord of War said that the universe came from the number three. Therefore, there will be three final winners."

That being said, no matter how the debate went, the Lord of War was always the dominator, since even the winner was decided under the Lord of War's oracle.

"My Lord is the sun. His radiance nurtures everything on the land and drives away the darkness, like the fire. He is the light, the power of punishment. The power of light brings us brightness and justice. Therefore, my Lord is the one who made the rules that restrain gods and human beings. Undoubtedly, my Lord's power thus exceeds that of the other seven gods." The chief priest of the God of Sun and Justice spoke before everyone else, describing his god's power to attract followers.

The uneducated followers nodded. They did not know much, but they could see the sun hanging up in the sky almost every day. It brought them warm, which contrasts greatly with the darkness, so it should be very important. Thus, it seemed that the God of Sun and Justice should be very powerful as well, and it would do them much good if they worship him.

Seeing that, the priest of the Lord of Underworld took a step forward and said, "when there is life, there's death. No intelligent creature can escape from death. Life is short, but death is eternal. The almighty Lord of Underworld is the one you'll go to after death, the ultimate god that you'll belong to in the end. It is true for everyone. He is unquestionably more important than all the other gods."

Everyone was afraid of death. Imagining the darkness, coldness, and pain that one would suffer after death, many of the listeners were persuaded — maybe worshiping the Lord of Underworld is a better choice than worshiping the God of Sun and Justice. He appeared to be very powerful and important from the descriptions.

"The earth carries everything, including the underworld. Earth carries life, as well as death. Anyone who offends the Mother shall suffer from starvation, earthquake, and landslide." The priest of the Mother God of Earth threatened the crowd.

Now the afterworld sounded too illusionary and far from the listeners. Compared to the long sleep after death, they knew much better how it felt having an empty stomach, not to mention the horrible power of an earthquake. They no longer dared to deviate from the Mother God of Earth.

"My Lord controls lightning — Lightning powerful enough to punish gods, not to mention the mundane. Anyone who disobeys shall be struck by lightning and thunder." The priest of the God of Thunder and Lightning followed.

The priest of the God of Storm would not miss the chance either. "If any of you betray the God of Storm, He would send forty-nine days of storm. Ocean will gush into the cities and towns. Land will be overwhelmed with flood. No creature will survive."

Gradually, most of the priests started to threaten the listeners, controlling them with fear as they always did. However, the priest of the God of Wisdom and the priest of the God of Love and Breed could not use the same strategy. They quitted the debate rather helplessly.

They never had much hope to begin with. Their words about love and wisdom were too pale.

Facing such a chaotic debate where the braggest one was the strongest, Francis felt quite uncomfortable. He sent a secret message to Lucien by controlling the wind in the air. "When it's your turn, try your very best to exaggerate the power of great Ell. You know, using the cycle theory — create, control, destroy, and resurrect."

"The silver moon witnessed the birth of this world. The moon is immortal, and has the power to drive away darkness but also absorb the power from darkness. It brings peacefulness to our mind," said Nob with fine sweat beads on his forehead. Compared to the other gods, Asin the God of Moon had no advantage when it came to threatening others. The god who was best at this was the God of Fire and Destruction.

Finally, after one round, it was Lucien's turn. All the priests turned to look at him, waiting to listen to his words speaking for the so-called God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption.

Sitting straight on the silver chair, Lucien said slowly, "seasons come and go; the sun rises and sets. In this world, when there's birth, there's death. But there's also resurrection after death. And my Lord is the God of Resurrection."

The priest of the God of Sun froze. He knew the meaning of the words — The representative of the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption was saying that the sun was solely a phenomenon, while resurrection was the underlying essence.

"Death isn't the final end; different souls belong to different ends. According to what a person did when he was alive, a fair judgment is given. Those who are kind will jump out of the cycle of life and death and enter the paradise of my Lord, and thus enjoy eternal happiness. Those who are neutral will come to this world again as infants and keep going through the joy and pain of life. While, the vicious and the contemptible will be punished in the underworld, enduring endless suffering...

"However, the followers of my Lord, anyone who's willing to make a heartfelt confession, will be saved by the Lord, and become the one's enjoying the forever happiness as I just mentioned."

The listeners had never heard of anything like this before. They'd rather believe in this young priest's words than the horrible images described by the rest of the priests, because they could now see hope in their tough life, the hope for starting all over again and being saved!

Francis was very impressed by Leviathan's talent, for Leviathan was able to construct a rather comprehensive theoretical theology system based on his simple cycle theory. He didn't expect to find someone this talented in such a primitive otherworld.

The face of the priest representing the Lord of Underworld darkened. Such a theory had instantly degraded his Lord.

Seeing this, Nob made his decision. If he lost this debate, he'd lose everything anyway, so why not use the heretic myth to turn the tide.

"Your gods are all in charge of some specific functions in operating this world, but my Lord is the one who created this world as well as all of the creatures. My lord is the God of Brightness and Creation. In the primordial darkness, my lord brought brightness to the forever silence; he shaped the earth and the lives!" Nob cited one version of the creation myth, completely ignoring Nena's expression.

The rest of the priests were all taken back — Now that the God of Moon claimed to be the god who created the world, how could their god overpower Him? They thought hard, trying to find similar myths of their god to use.

At this time, the priest of the God of Thunder and Lightning burst out laughing. "Alright, the God of Moon created this world and the lives, but my Lord is capable of ruining all of these. When everything sinks back into darkness, only my lord's followers will be saved."

He partially borrowed the theory of redemption from Lucien.

The priest of the God of Sun and Justice was unwilling to fall behind. "My lord is the god maintaining the functioning of the world and delaying the day of destruction..."

"My lord is the pristine darkness and peacefulness." Sneered the priest of the Lord of Underworld.

"This isn't a theology debate... They're simply bragging." Francis rubbed his forehead and complained to Lucien in a low voice. "I'm not good at this at all. It's up to you now."

Seeing that the other priests were gaining support, Lucien did not feel any pressure at all. "Our world is just a small world. The creation, development, and destruction of such a small world are of nothing special. Three thousand of small worlds like this are needed to form a middle world, and three thousand of middle worlds are needed to form a big world. However, there are countless big worlds as many as the grains of sand at the bottom of the Solna river.

"However, the boundless world that contains the countless big worlds is created by my Lord.

"My Lord said, 'Let there be the boundless world', and there was the boundless world.

"My Lord said, 'Let there be light', and there was light.

"When my Lord said, 'Let all be destroyed', and then everything annihilates."

When it came to bragging, Lucien feared nobody.

Chapter 470: The Best Braggart Ever

Chapter 470: The Best Braggart Ever

All the priests and the followers were now very confused. They felt that the information was too much for their brain to handle. Things like the small world, the middle world, the big world, and the boundless world had never ever occurred to them. However, although they did not quite understand, they had to admit that the words from this young priest's mouth sounded very powerful and profound. Ell, the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, had become a level higher than the rest of the gods.

Anheuse, who was hiding in a corner, was also very confused.

“Are we talking about the same great Ell...?” He murmured.

Francis was a bit amused. He had to hold himself back from bursting out laughing. Indeed, this young man was quite gifted in terms of telling stories. Even if this young man could not become a real disciple in the future, becoming a bard and telling stories would also make him an epic figure.

Nob felt a bit dizzy from the blood rushing all the way upward into his brain. He felt that his imagination was being ground into bits. He could not believe that there was someone better at bragging than himself, but it was the truth.

Nob could not copy Lucien anymore. Although following Lucien's words, the bragging can never come to an end as Nob could say that there were also small boundless worlds, middle boundless worlds, and big boundless worlds. But it would be too obvious that he was stealing Lucien's theory in front of the listeners, which would make him lose the debate even faster, for it would give the crowd the impression that the God of Moon could only repeat the words of others and was lying all through the debate.

Similar thoughts flashed through the mind of the rest of the priests. Frowning, they tried their very best to find a new perspective to defeat Leviathan's view of the world. However, the religions they belonged to were still in the primitive level, even the simplest philosophy had not yet developed. With the priest's imagination limited by themselves and their era, there was nothing available to them to be used as a weapon.

As for the Mother God of Earth, the God of Wisdom, the God of Storm, and the God of Love, since they had already lost the debate in the previous round, they were now taking pleasure in watching the other priests' respond — If they were going to be expelled from the valley, they should all be expelled together.

Lucien took his time and continued. "My Lord creates the boundless world, maintains it, and then destroys it. But again, from the destroyed, a new boundless world is created by Him. My Lord is the Lord who creates, maintains, and destroys. He is the cycle; He is the resurrection."

... The rest of the priests were speechless.

"My Lord has also created an eternal fairyland outside of this endless cycle of life and death. This place is the ultimate joyous land for our most loyal brothers and sisters. My Lord calls it..." Lucien paused a bit, "... calls it the Pure Land."

Lucien was about to borrow the name 'Mountain Paradise', but he did not want Francis to feel suspicious.

The audience burst into an uproar. They did not expect that the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, with such great power and might, would still lend his hand to them! But the descriptions given by Lucien all linked together well, and they started to believe that the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption could really help them get out of such a vicious cycle and leave this world full of pain and corruption.

He was indeed the God of Redemption!

While Nob's face turned pale and could find no way to refute, Nena's eyes slightly narrowed, as if she was also thinking.

Suddenly, Nob sprang up from the silver chair and took a big step forward. He questioned aloud,

“Leviathan, let me ask you. How was it before the world was first created by your so-called God of Redemption! How did the boundless world look like in the very beginning? What did the Pure Land look like in the very beginning?”

Lucien did not expect that Nob could put forward such a critical question and was stunned for a second. However, he quickly realized what was going on: Nena’s lips were moving very slightly.

This might escape from other priests’ eyes. But Lucien was also a knight, so he could spot it easily.

It seemed that the priest of the Lord of War could not hold back anymore.

“There was nothing; there was chaos. There was the original point of space and time.” Lucien decided to give Nob a chance on purpose. A perfect performance might lead to Francis’ suspicion.

Nob burst out laughing. “Then let me ask you: Where does ‘nothing’ come from? Where does ‘chaos’ come from? And what is it outside of ‘nothing’ and ‘chaos’?”

Nob’s answer was ready — It was the almighty God of Moon.

The followers also became confused. They wanted to know the answers; they wanted to know if a greater being existed before and outside of the “nothing”.

Francis’ eyes lit up, as he finally found the chance to fight back. After exchanging a look with Lucien, he stood up and said, “outside of ‘nothing’ is the ‘indescribable’, namely, my Lord!”

“Indescribable? What is it?” Nob and the other priests laughed at this response.

Francis said seriously, “the so-called ‘nothing’, ‘chaos’, and ‘the original point of space and time’ are all based on human understanding and are still within the human imagination. But the existence of my Lord exceeds any definition, meaning, concepts, logic, material, spirit, and language. It is indescribable; it is undescrivable.”

Francis’ words were even more incomprehensible than that of Leviathan. All the priests, including Nena, could not find a clue at all.

Francis smiled, “I come from the country in the desert to the East. In my country, a famous wise man whose name is Lucien Evans once put it in this way...”

Lucien Evans, the wise man... Lucien almost burst out laughing himself, but he managed to force it back.

However, the priests and the listeners only caught the fact that Francis came from the East. They wondered if the power of Ell had spread across the East.

“He said that our observation of any objects in this world is based on our body and soul. Therefore, the information we obtained would never be comprehensive. For example, when we see light, we think light does not have a specific color. But if we see light through a bubble or a crystal, we know that light is in fact colorful. Therefore, our understanding is the mundane understanding. And our understanding can never describe the real almighty being, which is my Lord.

“Therefore, the existence of my Lord exceeds any definition, meaning, concept, logic, material, spirit, and language. Even the idea of ‘nothing’ is far from being capable of defining the Lord. In other words, any mundane attempt trying to define the existence of God is a kind of profanity.”

Francis’ words refreshed all the priests’ understanding of god. In the past, their understanding of god was too shallow to step out of the ordinary person’s mindset. But... their god, who made their presence and power felt from time to time, seemed to fail the standard of divinity.

Lucien also stood up and smiled. “My Lord has an existence, and also has not. My Lord is the nothing; he is also the everything. My lord shall not be defined by any means, no property, no difference, no shape, no space, no limit, no concept... My Lord is supreme by nature. My lord does not need faith or worshipping.

“But we human need faith. We need to be saved. Therefore, our perception of the true lord became the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption in a lower level of concept. He is the avatar of the true lord, an avatar that we can worship.

“We only need to worship the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. We make heartfelt confessions, and then we can be saved. We can never understand or describe the true lord, and the true lord does not need our understanding or description. We can never affect the true lord, neither will the true lord try to affect the world.”

Francis nodded in agreement. Leviathan’s explanation was indeed very impressive, which showed that he was obviously a genius in theology. However, this explanation was still too complicated to be used in preaching.

However, Francis found this young man to be a bit suspicious and wondered if there was something wrong with him.

Lucien smiled to himself when he explained. An existence that would never be affected and would never affect anything, an existence that any discussion on which was meaningless — according to the Occam’s Razor theory, such an existence didn’t even need to exist. If the existence of god was really like this, Lucien could safely conclude that god was dead.

Anything that had an influence on this world must more or less left some traces, must could be explored and explained.

The confused crowd caught the main point in Lucien’s words — No matter what, they had to follow the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. This God was very powerful!

Nena, the priest of the Lord of War, could not find any way to object. She felt a chill went up her spines, her right fist clenching tight. As a follower of the Lord of War, she was not good at smart articulation, however, she had got power to eliminate the enemies.

Lucien felt that the way Francis looked at him had changed, so he quickly switched the style of his talking. “Don’t even try to pry into the real lord, or you’ll be infected by this unknown power and be twisted into nameless monsters in forever pain.”

The listeners, including the priests, subconsciously stopped what they were thinking immediately. It sounded so horrible!

However, after a second thought, they believed that a real powerful god should be just like this.

Francis slightly shook his head. This young man and the belief he represented still could not get rid of the use of intimidation commonly seen in primitive religions. He was still confined by his surrounding environment, such a waste of his talent...

From afar, Ell was looking at the debate stage attentively. The clusters of fire in his eyes flickered peacefully, carrying the power to purify.

He murmured to himself,

“Is that... me?”

“Am I that powerful?”

Chapter 471: "Who Am I"

On the debate stage in front of the Temple of War, the other priests had all fallen into silence after hearing Lucien's speech.

Lucien looked around in his plain white robe and then said to Nena peacefully, "respected Lady Nena, shall the results of the debate be announced now? It seems that no one else wants to continue anymore."

Nena was a bit startled by Lucien's question. She took a cold glance at Lucien and turned to the priests, "do you all agree?"

Nob was about to oppose, but he could not find a single reason. The only words coming up in his mind were those just said by Lucien.

His brain had stopped working. Without the guidance of the brain, his mouth had given out the words, "A... Agree..."

Depressed, the priests of the God of Love and the God of Wisdom who had lost in the first round also agreed.

After a short hesitation, the other priests agreed as well — There would be three winners today, so they still got a chance.

Nena lowered her eyes and hid her emotions. Then she said in cold voice, "according to the words of the supreme Lord of War, the winners from today's debate will be three. Their Church will be awarded the right to stay in the valley of Solna and preach. They are..."

Unconsciously, she had applied the word, supreme, to the Lord of War.

Everyone all held their breath and waited for the final result nervously, including the listeners, as if one single breath could blow the good result away.

"... The God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption," said Nena, announcing the not-at-all surprising result.

Seeing how calm Leviathan and Francis were, the listeners present started to more or less believe in the existence of God Ell.

The manner of a priest could well represent how much confidence he or she had in the god, as well as how powerful the god was.

"The God of Moon,"

Out of great excitement and joy, Nob kneeled down to the ground and kissed the floor while praying and praising his god.

"... and the Lord of Underworld."

Volcan, the priest of the Lord of Underworld, cheered aloud, praising the Lord of Underworld and thanking the Lord of War.

The rest of the priests, however, all looked very pale now.

"Before tomorrow's sunset, the rest of you must leave the valley. The followers must change their belief, otherwise, they shall be exiled as well!" Nena's words were cold and cruel.

"...!" The priests and listeners looked at Nena in great shock and anger. Although they knew that they had to leave, they did not expect the fact that they could not even keep their own followers.

Solna Valley was a rich piece of land. Anyone willing to work hard should be able to feed themselves. Once leaving the valley, what was waiting for them in the wild was definitely not pleasant. Therefore, the priests understood that they were doomed to lose most of their followers now.

However, as priests, they did not have a second choice. They had to stick to their belief, or they would be devoured by the Seed of Spirit within themselves.

The many furious gazes did not bother Nena at all. She slowly lifted her right hand, and the soldiers instantly lifted their black-iron weapons. The swords formed a sharp and dense black-iron forest that reflected cold light.

The scene reminded the rest of the priests that Nena was almost as powerful as their god. Thinking about Politown, they lowered their heads and left the stage.

Here started the wandering.

Nena paid no further attention to the scattering priests. She said to Lucien, Nob, and Volcan, "your preaching must obey the law established by the Temple of War, or you will be exiled too."

Then she simply turned around and left. There were no celebration nor encouragement.

Watching Nena walking away, Francis sent a secret message to Lucien and said casually, "it looks like the Dear Lady has already got the intention to kill us, or, I should say, the Lord of War has got the intention to kill us. Otherwise, we wouldn't have been treated this way. Maybe our description of the almighty Ell made them feel insecure..."

The topic was rather serious, but Francis didn't sound like he was taking it seriously.

Lucien was still playing his role well. With a slight amount of shock that suited his current identity, Lucien asked, "What shall we do then?"

"We'll discuss later. The situation may change." Francis directed Lucien to meet Ell, Jacob, and Anheuse in the hotel.

Lucien nodded seriously. He wondered if Francis was waiting for the rest of the priests to react.

They walked off the stage, and the followers immediately surrounded them. Their eyes were written with great hope for redemption.

They were all followers of the Lord of Fire, and Destruction. Hearing Lucien's words, they preferred the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption to the horrible Avando, as what they longed for was the hope of ascending to the Pure Land, instead of being driven by the fear of the bloodthirsty Avando.

Francis smiled but did not say anything. He was waiting to observe Lucien's response and he didn't even try to hide his intention.

Lucien spoke in a soothing tone, "the almighty Ell always shows mercy. My Lord would never abandon this world full of pain. Instead, my Lord is willing to serve as a bridge, connecting the two worlds to save you all from the endless cycle of pain. Supreme as my Lord, as long as you pray and confess devoutly and act out of kindness, your wish will be heard by Him.

"This is also where the supremacy of my Lord lies: You believe, and then the Lord will be in your heart. I am not superior to any of you, instead, I merely heard the Lord's instruction earlier than you. I will be your mentor, guiding you to see the almighty Ell in your own heart and then to be saved. I am not a priest, but an initiator."

Lucien had his principle: He was never willing to make a fortune out of these followers. Although it was already not the first time that he used divinity to achieve his purpose, he never intended to turn himself into the biggest beneficiary.

If it had not been that Francis and Anheuse were right here, Lucien would like to share with them how he understood superego, ego, and the inner self.

Then Lucien wondered if he was addressing too much about the inner peacefulness. Perhaps, he was on his way shaping something like Buddhism.

Hearing Lucien's words, the followers almost burst into tears. Never had they heard something like this before from a priest — in most cases, they were frightened and threatened.

Francis was a bit amused. In his eyes, Leviathan was such an innocent young man who just joined the Secret Praying Congress but still had his own set of belief. Yet it made sense to Francis, as such a young man who made the previous speech should have his own understanding of divinity.

"Dear initiator, how should we pray? How can we see the almighty Lord Ell in our mind?" Asked one of the followers.

Lucien put on a soft smile, "Anheuse, our another initiator, will tell you the prayer later. Before you pay, you have to learn how to put aside all your emotions first, including your joy, pain, and worries."Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

The specific prayer had to be modified after today's debate.

"Put aside..." repeated the followers thoughtfully.

"It's simple. You take a deep breath and then exhale... That's right, to release the emotions out..." Lucien showed them.

Lucien could not stay here for too long. Therefore, after leaving the followers to Anheuse, he went back to the hotel with Francis by oxcart.

"To save them, we have to save their mind first." nodded Francis in the oxcart on their way back. He smiled and said, "I thought the debate was a chance for discussing divinity and humanity, universals and primary substance, a priori and transcendent, but it turned out to be for bragging. You did very well."

"Mr. Francis, you taught me a lot," said Lucien, "but since the Lord of War is involved, we cannot target at the God of Moon anymore."

Francis shook his head. "This's also a chance. You'll see."

When the oxcart almost arrived at the hotel, a paper wad was darted fiercely through the curtain. As fast as an arrow, it was just an inch away from Lucien's face.

At this time, Francis raised his right hand and caught the paper wad rather easily.

Lucien slightly squinted — Francis was at least a senior-rank.

Someone on the street made a soft exclamation of surprise and then disappeared in the crowd.

As if Francis was exactly waiting for the paper wad, he did not even check it before opening it. After reading the message, he grinned.

"Here it comes."

Lucien took the paper over and saw the message on it:

"Nena, The chief priest of the Lord of War, has given order to the God of Moon and the Lord of Underworld, asking them to attack you tonight in order to force the almighty Ell to reveal His presence, so they can kill the almighty Ell. The one among us six which makes the most contribution tonight will earn the place left. However, I am much more willing to work with the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, as the Lord of War is such an unpredictable dictator. If the almighty Ell agrees, we'll meet each other in the middle of the river outside of the city before dawn."

At the bottom, there was a symbol of the sun.

"Cooperation? Or a trap?" Lucien asked, pretending to be both excited and confused.

Francis shrugged. "How should I know? Alright, let's get in the room first."

Lucien walked in the room and saw Ell standing beside the window covered in a white robe. His imposing manner was as great as that of mountain chains. Ell was somehow different now.

Ell turned around when Lucien was still a bit confused. There was no fire in his eyes anymore, instead, his eyes now looked as deep and black as death. Ell put on an easy smile. "Until today when I heard the debate, I finally realized that that Ell in the past wasn't the real Ell. Now, I finally have woken up from the chaos and obscurity."

Lucien and Francis were shocked.

Chapter 472: Speculation and Experiment

Chapter 472: Speculation and Experiment

Lucien was speechless. He was just bragging.

That the other priests including Nena believed in his words was not surprising, for they had no idea what the truth was; however, Lucien could not believe that Ell himself had also been persuaded by the lecture.

In Lucien's understanding, his lecture should be like a joke to Ell.

He tried hard to accept Ell's change, telling himself that Ell was one of the false gods who were stubborn and crazy according to the Congress' record and that the proper treatment for these false gods should be electrotherapy. However, Lucien still could not understand what happened to Ell.

Lucien wondered if Ell had even actually become more powerful.

It was not scientific, no, not arcanic to Lucien at all. Fortunately, he was more or less mentally prepared for any unusual changes within the divine realm. Calming himself down, he started observing Ell's reaction and taking down detailed notes in his spiritual library.

Lucien secretly looked aside at Francis and saw Francis also looking back at him with a confused smile. Obviously, Francis was also surprised, just like Lucien. Yet in the next second, Francis seemed to have already accepted it and was now keeping his eyes on Ell attentively with a slight hint of fanaticism.

Lucien could more or less understand what Francis was thinking. If Francis was really an expert in theology and philosophy like he said, changes of a god could certainly trigger his interest. And this was perhaps why Francis had chosen to present Ell using part of the theory of the God of Truth.

However, in this way, Lucien became even more confused about where Francis came from. Most of those who were both powerful and profound in theology came from the Church, but so far, Francis had been behaving like a sheer blasphemer.

Retreating his sight, Lucien asked in surprise, “great God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, I don’t quite understand...”

Ell said calmly wearing the same smile, “to put it simply, I have found my true self. I have seen the undescrivable existence in excess of the universe and its projection in both the spiritual and the material world. Whether the Lord of Fire and Destruction or the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, they share the same origin. Based on what human beings see, know, and believe, the projection takes multiple forms, but there is only one ‘self’. I have found the true self, so now I am able to completely control the two forms — Avando and Ell — the two integrated forms.”

“My Lord, are you alright?” Francis asked out of concern. The corner of his mouth secretly twitched a bit.

“I feel fine. I feel better than ever,” said Ell in great confidence.

Lucien felt that Ell might need some medical treatment. In his eyes, the current Ell seemed to have created a third personality to govern the previous two.

Seeing that Leviathan and Francis still looked very concerned, Ell released a sigh inside — No matter how smart humans were, their intelligence was still far from matching the mightiness of gods, so Ell decided to show his strength to them.

Ell darkened the room, turning the space into the dimension of the dead. A dense black mist rose, and spectres were hiding within. The rotten brought rich nutrition to the soil. The several plants on the ground in the room grew wildly, while the atmosphere became tranquil and peaceful.

Resurrection, fertility, redemption... Ell was no longer an avatar of the God of Flame, instead, He had now become the true God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, whose power had reached level eight, equivalent to that of a radiant knight. But Ell was still in a poor state, so the power He could use right now should be around level seven.

Ell's godhood had changed. Was it because of Ell's own awakening? Or was it because the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption had started accumulating more devout followers?

Lucien carefully took down the notes, recording everything that he saw while making some comments beside,

"If it's the former, then this world is even crazier than I thought, as the change resembles that of one's cognitive world but seems to be more preposterous, and it means that there's still a long way to go for arcana; if it's the latter, then a theoretical system can be formed about this world with some of the untested hypotheses available, however, the key part is still missing. Be careful with further exploration. Arrogance leads to head explosion."

"If the former assumption is true, then this world might run under the Strong Anthropic Principle."

"If the latter is true, an assumption can be made here: Every human being has spiritual power, but some are stronger, while some are relatively weak. Those whose spiritual power exceeds the average level can use meditation to control and utilize spiritual power and thus become sorcerers; As for those who are not gifted in terms of spiritual power and cannot afford or find the power-trigger potion, they follow the uniform instruction and guidance from the Church and pray, so that when they pray, their spiritual power will be attuned to the same frequency and even gather together."

"If a god already has a separate entity, then this special spiritual power or better call it the power of faith, will gather together to the god. Different wishes create different godhoods, and different godhoods use the different special spiritual power to master the corresponding spell-like abilities and enhance their own power."

"This might be a proper explanation for why the Church needed followers. But if the God of Truth did exist, powerful as He is, why would the Congress of Magic still be allowed to survive? Why did the God of Truth allow the Church to be split into two? Why did cognitive worlds exist? Why didn't the God of Steam come into being despite the fact that there were so many dwarves as followers? Why didn't the God of Truth have a specific godhood domain?"

"... According to the most shared belief in the Congress, spiritual power is a special kind of electromagnetic wave, in other words, it's a kind of invisible light. Then why are souls able to emit special electromagnetic waves?"

"... The school of Necromancy and Electromagnetism have a rough explanation — This is due to the combination of some special electromagnetic fields and some elements..."

When he wrote this sentence, Lucien paused as a strange idea suddenly occurred to him—

One day, the God of Truth might have an exclusive radio channel.

"Welcome, this is FM xxx.x, the God of Truth..."

That was very, very weird.

Although Lucien had written a lot in his spiritual library, only a few seconds in the real world. The air surrounding Ell had changed again. Twirling fierce flames filled the space; the power of destruction withered the newly-grown plants.

"Flame and destruction, level eight, radiant knight level, but still in a weak state..."

More words appeared on the notebook in Lucien's spiritual library.

"Although it seemed that Ell's power did not actually increase, he had integrated with Avando..."

This had something to do with the mind, so Lucien believed that the change came from Ell's sudden enlightenment. Lucien secretly thought that it was like curing a disabled person caused by psychogenic reasons.

As an arcanist, Lucien felt the enthusiastic desire to research rose in his heart. He longed for knowing more in-depth about the false god standing right in front of him. He had no idea whether capturing a false god, bringing it back to Allyn and cutting it up for research would yield any results. But he was certain that observing one closely in such an invisible way, giving stimulations, and recording changes were very effective.

To study wild animals, researchers should go into the wild. It was the same with studying false gods.

At this time, Lucien heard Francis' gentle sigh. Francis smiled and praised, "my most sincere congratulations, my Lord! Your true self has been found, and my Lord, you're now the one and only almighty true god!"

"The one and only true god?" Ell asked confusedly.

"You're the projection of the true almighty, my Lord. Any other so-called gods are false ones in front of you. You're the one and only true god, as your power spread across the world. Some false gods stole your power when you were lost, but now it is time to get them back and reclaim the supreme throne." Francis praised passionately.

Lucien was also a bit lost. The one and only? Was Francis talking about the God of Truth?

Ell slightly frowned, "Are you saying that I should kill all of them and take away their divinity? Then no ally will be left." He seemed to still have some sanity remaining

"It is not necessary, my Lord. The one and only almighty only needs servants. He shall grant part of his power to His servants, my Lord, and let them work and think for Him. But the servants will never be gods, neither do they possess godhoods. The gods who obey your commands can be given this chance, but they will be just half-divine creatures. You don't have to kill them, my Lord." said Francis.

"Intermediaries between God and humanity... What shall I call them?" Ell understood Francis' words and asked full of interest.

Francis put on a flattering smile. "Angels. And there are different ranks of angels, so they have the chance to promote.”

The look on Lucien’s expression remained unchanged, but his heart suddenly skipped a beat when he heard Francis’s proposal. Francis was trying to make another God of Truth! Who was this man named Francis? Was he studying the secrets of the God of Truth? Or did he have other purposes?

“Good.” Ell burst into hearty laughter. “I am the one and only true god!”

While Ell laughed, Francis rubbed his brows gently with a mysterious smile on his face. Lucien looked away and confirmed his plan that he must carry on his secret experiment with Ell, to observe, stimulate, and record.

The laughter stopped, and calmness returned to Ell’s eyes. “The priest of the God of Wisdom, the God of Love, and the Mother God of Earth sent messages. They have confirmed that the God of Moon and the Lord of Underworld will come and attack you tonight in order to lure me out, so they can find a chance to kill me.”

“My supreme divinity has not yet recovered. We’ll lose facing the God of Moon and the Lord of Underworld. Also, it is unknown yet if this is a trap.” Ell could never forget how he was betrayed last time.

“In the debate, my true identity has been revealed, and now the Lord of War is afraid of me. If we still stick to the previous plan, it is going to be very dangerous. Shall we leave for now to wait for future chances? What do you think, Francis, Leviathan?” Ell asked.

“No!” Francis and Lucien burst out at the same time.

Chapter 473: The Cooperation

"Why?"

It was Anheuse who asked the question.

Anheuse had come back in disguise after finishing up guiding the believers. He was very concerned about the current situation, and the decision could lead to a major consequence. Although the almighty Ell's true power had awakened, the enemy they were now facing was also much stronger than the God of Moon Asin.

Facing the enemy consisting of the Lord of War and the rest seven gods as well as their strongest priests, Anheuse did not believe it at all that Ell had a chance to win.

Therefore, although both Lucien and Francis were quite good at giving speeches, and Anheuse indeed felt quite encouraged, Anheuse would prefer to rely on his own judgment when facing this major decision, rather than blindly hoping for the great existence beyond definitions and imagination to bestow power on Lord Ell.

Hearing Lucien and Ell deny at the same time, Ell did not appear to be surprised at all.

"Say your reason." He said slowly and firmly.

Lucien felt that whether it was because Ell's psychosis became more serious or not, at least He now seemed more like a God. Ell was now calmer and more patient. Although they could not be optimistic at all facing the current situation, Ell's current attitude was definitely more convincing than acting furious and worried.

Lucien took a look at Francis and saw he was just smiling. Obviously, Francis was waiting for him to reply.

Being very cautious, Francis was still testing Lucien.

Weighing the words, Lucien said carefully, "because... because it is a chance, a very good chance."

"Chance? You mean the chance of being killed and entering the underworld?" Anheuse was quite pissed, thinking of the fact that their enemy was now at least eight times stronger than the previous.

He was pissed also because, in order to win the debate, Leviathan and Francis revealed the almighty Ell's true identity, and thus incurred the anger and fear of the Lord of War. Anheuse suspected that it was the almighty Ell who purposefully told Francis and Leviathan his true identity to ensure that the plan could be carried out smoothly. Thus, Anheuse was even feeling a bit jealous — He had been serving the Lord of Fire and Destruction for more than twenty years, yet the Lord trusted the two youngsters who just joined the Secret Praying Convention more than him.

Lucien asked seriously, "why does the Lord of War's priest want Asin and the Lord of Underworld to strike tonight? Why does the Lord of War want all of the churches to get involved?"

Ell nodded, as if He had completely understood what Lucien was trying to imply. He then turned to Francis and gestured him to elaborate.

"Because the Lord of War is afraid, afraid of the almightiness of our Lord, afraid of falling under the magnificent radiance of our Lord. The Lord of War wants to be very cautious. Before he could ascertain the current strength of Lord Ell, he does not dare to strike directly. If our Lord has awakened completely, such a dangerous move could lead to his death."

Francis made lots of praises, but the core message was simple — He and Lucien boasted so far off that the Lord of War was shocked. He became concerned about the power of the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption and therefore decided to send the rest of the eight Gods and the priests to carry out this mission. If something was indeed off, the Lord of War could easily find an excuse and tell the followers that it was just a private conflict.

In the theology debate, Francis and Lucien described the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption as a lawful good god full of mercy and kindness. As long as there was no evidence that the God of War was directly involved in the assassination, the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption would have to show generosity and tolerance.

Meanwhile, according to the information they had, Lucien and Francis believed that the gods of the Angonormanian or Barril pantheon did not believe that there was an omniscient and omnipotent existence above, so many gods died of plotted murder and deception.

"I see..." Anheuse started getting some clues.

During the debate, Nena was acted rather calm, or at least relatively calm, during the debate. She had probably already got the plan at that time.

Ell slightly nodded, the corner of his mouth formed a imperceptible smile that disappeared in a second.

"But, our enemy is still very powerful. The eight gods, and their priests," said Anheuse in great concern. "They are too strong for us now. We'd better leave. Our Lord the almighty Ell has awakened and he will become stronger in the time to go. We can wait in patience, instead of taking the risk for literally nothing."

Lucien was a bit speechless. He wondered if he'd also start having mental problems if he continued to get around with them,

He coughed and said, "according to Mr. Francis's description, our Lord can only gradually grow stronger by taking away others' godhood. If we run away this time, the Lord of War and the rest of the false gods will find it out that we're still weak. They'll abandon any hesitations and keep trying their best to kill us outside of the valley. Then the situation will be even worse."

Before Anheuse could speak, Lucien continued. "Think about it. Except for the God of Moon and the Lord of Underworld, will the rest of the gods really work together? Only one out of the six can win our position to preach in the river valley. This seems to be a very slight chance, so will they try other plans? Say, kill the God of Moon 'by mistake', or set up a trap, or... work with us?"

"They surely will," said Anheuse with no doubt.

Ell remained rather calm, "This is indeed our opportunity if we know the right thing to do. But Leviathan, Francis, how do we know who really wants to work with us, and who schemes to betray?"

Francis grinned. "Why need we?"

Even Ell was a bit surprised this time.

"The situation is too complex, and the gods' attitude changes all the time. It's impossible for us to tell who really wants to be our ally. We can trust nobody," said Francis.

Anheuse looked at Francis in confusion.

Lucien took over and continued. "I agree. Since their attitude is changing all the time, we should not waste our time telling who are our allies. Instead, we should focus on turning everyone into our allies!

"The Lord of War is afraid of your power, my Lord, so are the rest of the gods. They are waiting to see if you are that powerful as we said. As long as we are confident enough and show them the power, I believe that they will prefer expelling the Lord of War and sharing the valley with us to fighting for the single position left.

"Yes, the message might be a trap, but it also hints their hope. If we can show it to them, we can turn the trap into our opportunity to fight back; but if we retreat, we'll lose the hope and turn the opportunity into a trap!"

Francis added just in time. "Of course, very likely they'll wait and watch on the side until the situation settles, but that is exactly what we need - Kill Asin, the God of Moon, and take our time to leave!"

"Then what? They'll know that we're using them, and the Lord of War will find it out, too." Anheuse understood Lucien and Francis' idea, yet he was still quite concerned.

Francis asked, "why are we here in Solna Valley?"

"To kill Asin, the God of Moon, and take away His godhood," answered Anheuse.

"Did the Lord of War show mercy to us before? The Lord of War was already seeking for a chance to destroy Avando a long time ago." Lucien smiled.

Anheuse nodded, "That's true. Fortunately, I am very good at disguising, or I would have been killed by his priests already."

"Did we see any help from the rest of the gods?" Francis and Lucien in turns took turns to ask their questions. Their target was not Anheuse, but the mysterious Ell.

"No, not at all. They were helping the Lord of War," said Anheuse bitterly.

"So, we're going to achieve our target, and the consequence will not be worse than before. Why not?" asked Francis.

"The most important thing now is to have our Lord's power recovered. Without power, even allies will turn into enemies." Lucien concluded.

Anheuse remained silent for a while and finally said, "I've got no more question."

When the almighty Ell took in the godhood and the power of the God of Moon, the rest of the gods would choose to be their allies themselves.

Ell smiled, "A very reasonable analysis. But what shall we do to demonstrate our strength, to make the timid be afraid, to make the plotters stand aside,?"

Francis proposed,

"Using the excuse that he profaned your glory during the debate, we will challenge the chief priest of the God of Moon to a duel. When we kill Asin's chief priest right in front of the temple, Asin will definitely take actions, or He would be abandoned by the followers. In this case, when the rest of the plotters see that we are able to kill the God of Moon's priest even without your presence, they'll choose to be cautious onlookers, instead of directly being involved in this fight.

"If we can make a good plan and seize the best chance, we'll have enough time to kill Asin and escape when He is unprepared and the others have chosen to step aside."

His proposal was based on the premise that the divine circles of the Temple of War were still relatively undeveloped so that they could not cover the entire city like the circles in the main material world. Also, they were very close to the Solna River.

"Nob is the chief priest of the God of Moon, and his power should rival that of Jacob. Even if I give Leviathan the Seed of Spirit right now, he'll not be able to adjust to the power and kill Nob," said Ell, who had walked to the window with his hands behind. "Francis, you do it."

Unlike Ell, Jacob did not have special power or speed matching that of a radiant knight. In case of any secret tracking, he was hiding somewhere else in the city.

"I'll show my loyalty, my Lord," said Francis.

Ell nodded. "I am impressed with what you have done for me, Leviathan. When I take in Asin's power, I'll give you the Seed of Spirit. But not now. At the moment I have to keep my power intact against our enemies. This is a bracelet made of Mision stone from Solna River. It enables you to breathe and swim like fish in the water. When the fight starts, go under the water immediately and leave. Wait for us at the promised place."

Taking over the green bracelet, Lucien felt the slight amount of divine air it possessed.

.....

In the afternoon, a great stir broke out among the people in the city of Husum - Years after, another fight between two priests was finally going to take place.

A young, black-haired man mixing in the crowd was listening to the discussion attentively.

Slightly frowning, he wondered who was hiding behind this fight and what the purpose truly was.

He was the night watcher ranking no. 13 —"Body Controller" Ramiro. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Chapter 474: Blood Power

Solna River had become much fiercer after the rainy season. Roaring and rolling, the river currents marched forward.

In front of the temple that stood up high beside the river, Nob was waiting for Francis with a fine laurel wood staff in his hand and this very gloomy look on his face. He had never expected that the priest of the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption would challenge him to a duel. He wished it so bad that the duel could come one day later. After tonight, he would bear no more risk fighting against an enemy he knew pretty much nothing about, because all of them from that side would be dead by tomorrow.

Soon after the debate held in the morning ended, Nob received a secret command from Nena — The Lord of War needed the God of Moon and the Lord of Underworld to kill Leviathan and Francis tonight, in order to lure Ell out.

Therefore, he had spent the entire noon as well as afternoon sending secret messages to the God of Moon hiding in the nearby forest, and they had together worked out an almost perfect plan, including how to coordinate the priests to launch a sudden strike, how to rope in the other churches using the name of the Lord of War, and how to infuriate the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption by torturing and killing Leviathan and Francis in the most brutal manner.

However, when they were still celebrating their perfect plan and the near victory, a formal challenge letter was sent to Nob.

Nob was confused, but even more, intimidated.

And what horrified him the most was the look on the face of the God of Moon. Nob saw fear on the almighty God of Moon's face as well, fear towards the boldness of the priests of god Ell and the one behind them. In the past, no one had ever heard about Ell the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption; no one knew how strong he was, and they could only draw guesses based on the description beyond imagination given during the debate.

Nob tried his very best to postpone the duel to the second day, but he failed. In a theocratic society, it was impossible to turn down a duel challenged in the name of profanity, as it was directly associated with the fame and reputation of one's Lord. Nob had no choice.

"... It's okay. Very possibly, they are just liars." Nob murmured to himself as he watched the crowd gather.

In the Solna Valley, before the Lord of War came into power, fights between chief priests were quite common. Therefore, people in the city of Husum were already very experienced. They would like to see the fight but were also aware that they had to stay far away from the site, say, the other side of Solna river. After all, the fights between priests weren't as plain as those between commoners, as the sound and light could be heard and seen from far away.

"I'll say that Nob will return to the embrace of moonlight today. The God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption is so powerful, and, of course, so is his chief priest," said a young man aloud beside the river. He was a new follower of the Lord of Underworld, but now he was on the edge of switching belief.

"It's hard to say. A debate isn't a fight." Refuted a devoted follower of the God of Moon.

Standing behind, Ramiro folded his arms and listened to the discussion quietly. He was quite confused as before he had never heard of the title "the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption", although he had done quite a bit of research prior to arriving in Erdo. Since the target was the God of Moon, Ramiro wondered if this new god was a role played by Alterna, or that it was a guise of the other forces.

Ramiro had turned himself into an ordinary Barril man. Standing in the crowd, he was like a drop of water in the vast ocean.

At this time, two young men wearing a simple white robe stepped onto the stairs in front of the God of Moon's temple. And the crowd instantly quieted down.

Carrying a heavy sword, Lucien stopped when he was about ten meters away from Nob. Standing on the closer side to the river, he said seriously, "today, we fight for the glory of our Lord, and we shall fight until the last breath. Are you ready?"

Until the last breath... Anger rose beside fear in Nob's heart. He asked, "Leviathan, is it you, or Francis?"

"I am the blessed one of the great God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. I'm my Lord's spokesperson and initiator. You, the priest of a false god, are far from being qualified to fight with me. Francis, send him to the underworld, and a just trial of my Lord awaits him!" Lucien tried his best to infuriate Nob.

"False god?! I'll let you see who is the false one!" Nob, who had become infuriated, yelled furiously. He could feel the anger of his Lord in the temple behind him.

"After I kill Francis, I'll challenge you! You can't say no!"

Lucien smiled. "I have to remind you, priest Nob. A dead man cannot challenge anyone."

"You'll see!" Nob took a deep breath and tried to calm down at the moment. He had to focus on the fight against Francis, instead of losing his mind because of Leviathan's evil words.

Francis drew the heavy sword from his back with both his hands and took a step forward. Gazing at Nob, he said, "on behalf of my Lord, I shall sentence you!"

"On behalf of the God of Moon, I will punish you!" roared Nob. Hearing this sentence, Lucien almost failed to hold back his laugh.

The priest from the Temple of War announced. "Let the fight begin!"

Holding the heavy sword, Francis thrust at Nob like a fierce blow. The heavy sword swept fiercely, its power could even cut off the wind.

A silver-white moon lit up in Nob's eyes, and layers of illusions covered him, like the shadows cast by moonlight in the night.

The heavy sword hit the shadows and disappeared briefly as if it was lost in a haze.

Seizing the chance, Nob quickly pointed his laurel staff at Francis. The temperature within the range dropped significantly and a dense patch sharp icicles formed. The icicles formed a ball that trapped Francis within.

Nob was quite relieved seeing that Francis relied on the strength of his body to fight, instead of using magic. The icicles might not be able to hurt him badly, but they were totally capable of restraining him.

Facing the hideous spear-like icicles, a smile appeared at the corners of Francis' lips. He swept the heavy sword horizontally and, with a deafening roar, slashed it downwards. Surrounding him, all of sudden, eight replicas of him emerged. With the same smile, and the same heavy sword, Francis and his replicas hacked downwards together in the joint power.

But the nine heavy words had different colors — one was covered with electric currents, one with green acid, one with flame, one looked rusted and rotten, one looked colorful, one looked freezing cold... The swords were not just shadows but carried real power.

The icicles reached Francis and a thick layer of ice expanded across. However, under Francis's fierce strikes, the layer of ice instantly broke into pieces, yet there was not even a single shallow wound on Francis' body. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

The nine swords slashed at Nob, who did not have enough time to cast the next spell nor was fast enough to dodge.

Nob's body broke into pieces like glass in the mixed colors of light.

From the shadow nearby, Nob appeared again. However, he looked rather embarrassed. All kinds of demi-divine spells reached Francis, however, Francis was not affected by them at all. Together with his eight replicas, he came right in front of Nob, and his sword was ready to taste Nob's blood.

Lightning, acid, flame, withering, toxin, ice, death, mental... Highly resistant to magic and divine power... Lucien was watching from aside analyzed Francis's blood power attentively. Without a doubt, it was the blood power called Hydra. Although Francis was only showing his power up to level seven, Lucien believed that he was at least a level-eight Hydra-blood knight. Therefore, Lucien was certain that Francis was neither a nobleman nor a knight from the Northland or the Dark Mountain Range. He was very likely a night watcher from the South or North Church, or from another secret religious organization.

There were a number of level-eight radiant knights in this world, but definitely not a lot. There was no way that a level-eight knight would pop out of nowhere. The Congress of Magic had information about most of the level-eight knights, except for those who were night watchers and those from other religious groups. Lucien carefully recalled the list, but could not relate anyone to Francis.

However, on the other side of the river, the look on Ramiro's face had changed.

It was him?

"Impressive... Such a powerful Divine-blooded..." Those priests who were hiding in the crowd could not help murmuring to themselves. They had believed that the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption was not a false god.

At this time, the Solna River suddenly surged. Waves over ten-meter high, driven by the gravity of the moon, were thrown at Francis with great momentum.

Asin, the God of Moon, finally took action!

Lucien did not hesitate. He started running very fast, but still within the controlled speed to hide his real power. After a few seconds, he had come to the cliff where was not affected by the waves. Then,

Lucien jumped directly into the Solna River.

Francis' body leaned backward, and the eight shadows followed, like a hydra roaring at the sky. The lighting, flame, acid merged together and formed into huge black waves. The two different colored waves crashed right into each other.

The blood power of Hydra was also good at controlling water!

At this time, a slim glitter of moonlight lit up. Behind Francis, an old man with a white beard holding a bent blade appeared and was about to attack Francis. Covering in moonlight, the old man was Asin in the human look!

As soon as Asin's blade reached out, His movement paused. A long, black sword carrying a great dark power of destruction came from above and slashed at His back!

Avando's supporter? Asin was both shocked and furious. Then Asin recognized that it was Avando's chief priest Jacob.

However, all the defense spells that Asin cast beforehand were for resisting the power in the field of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. The spells would not do much help facing the black sword!

Lucien had no idea what was going on above the water. Before he jumped into the water, he heard Ell's cold and detached voice.

"I sentence you to death!"

The river water embraced Lucien. The bracelet worn on his right wrist brought fresh air into his lungs. Instead of swimming along the currents, Lucien went countercurrent like a fish.

The cold light spots drifted away from Asin's body as the power of moonlight was collected by Francis. When Ell was about to kill Asin with the next hack, a long black iron arrow suddenly pierced through Ell's chest with horrible power and momentum!

"You false god!"

A terrifying roar came from the Temple of War.

It was the Lord of War! Somehow the Lord of War not in the Angornorma Empire but was in the Solna Valley, and he had joined the fight!

What attracted the Lord of War here?

Chapter 475: The Connection

Since this dimension was filled with half-solid space blocks, the speed of flying was greatly restricted. Also, since the world was relatively undeveloped, long-distance teleportation circles did not even exist. Thus, Francis and Lucien both excluded the possibility that the Lord of War would arrive and get involved in this fight when they were making the plan. After all, they thought that the Lord of War was still in the Angonorma Empire, which was quite far away from Erdo. It would take a legendary at least two days to arrive here from the empire. As for a false god like the Lord of War, it would at least take seven to eight days.

Also, no false gods would like to leave their own domain for too long. When Avando escaped after defeated by Antanas, instead of following up the victory, Antanas only asked the priests and the divine-blooded heroes to chase after Avando and himself went back to Angonorma Empire immediately. Unless facing a super serious issue, a false god would never show his full presence.

Neither did France nor Lucien expect this. The real Lord of War had used the level nine legendary power, and thus, the arrow pierced through Ell's chest.

Thoughts quickly flashed through Francis' mind:

The Lord of War must have left Angonorma Empire a week ago to arrive here now. Therefore, the impetus must not be the debate, but something else. Was the Lord of War here to eliminate all the false gods including the God of Moon? Was this debate a mere conspiracy?

But if this was the case, the Lord of War would not have to come here in full presence. An avatar of Him, plus a few chief priests and the divine-blooded heroes, would be more than enough to suppress the weaker churches. The reason should be more than this...

Only a handful of false gods in this world, such as the three Goddesses of Fate on the ice plain in the north, possess the gift of prophecy, the Lord of War was for sure not one of them. There was very unlikely that the Lord of War came was because He sensed some kind of danger, as Ell was not a threat to the Lord of War at that moment at all — Moreover, the almighty power of Ell only existed in their bragging. Even if Ell's power would grow rapidly in the future, no prophecy spells could foresee such a remote fact at the current time.

On the rushing Solna River, the shadow of the cliffs suddenly aggregated and fiercely rose up in the air. Ell took form in the shadow but was now even weaker. Obviously, the penetration from the arrow was bad. If it had not been that he now possessed power in the domain of redemption and evaded the fatal strike by blurring life and death, He would have been completely dead by now.

Ell did not have time to rejoice over His survival — the arrow had torn down his disguise, and the Lord of Underworld and the rest of the gods had known the truth. They were now no more afraid of or concerned about Ell's power — Ell was weak.

However, the biggest threat still came from the arrow. The iron arrow was free from the limitations of space and could arrive without any trace within a blink of the eye.

The Lord of War howled again, and the horrible power gathered one more time. The false gods hiding around were ready to take action. Francis flashed past the air above the Temple of War and turned himself into a dense black cloud, blocking the sky completely.

In the dark cloud, a snake as huge as a mountain lifted its nine heads, revealing the cold, sharp fangs.

Then the hydra dived fiercely and became nine flashing black blades, the black mist winding around carrying this great power of destruction.

All the powers of the rest eight heads joined in the one in the center. The ultimate power of devastation was formed!

Therefore, a radiant knight with the bloodline of Hydra often owned a title closely related to destruction and death, for example, the Eye of Hell.

Boom! Solna River had gone crazy. Huge waves dashed all the way up towards the sky. Those people standing on the ground could no longer keep their balance and stand on their feet anymore.

However, the Temple of War had been wrapped by the dark cloud. No one knew for sure what was going on in there, but there must be a very bad fight.

"It's you, the Haze of Destruction..." Rocking back and forth just like those ordinary people, Ramiro was actually estimating Francis' true power.

If it was Ramiro himself fighting against the Lord of War, he should be able to last over thirty seconds. If he was willing to pay for the cost, he would have a big chance of managing to escape. After all, although the Lord of War was of level nine, when it came to the real fight, His power could only rival a gold knight due to the lack of experience in real fights.

"The power of this blessed is even a bit greater than that of Avando..."

"Why was Ell so weak? Was his power still recovering?"

"Was Ell hiding his true strength?"

The rest of the gods hesitated again; they feared that Ell was indeed a powerful god in a weak state. If this was the case, Ell could still temporarily regain horrible power, and they did not want to be the one to face it.

Suddenly, the part of Solna River beside Ell became pale and full of the air of death. The Lord of Underworld, who was covered in a black robe, rose up from the water, surrounded and guarded by countless specters.

The Lord of Underworld had become the servant of the Lord of War and was allowed to preach in the valley, therefore, He had to take actions right now to prove His loyalty. Besides, the fact that the Lord of War came here in full presence gave the Lord of Underworld confidence. Thus, unlike the other six false gods, He made a prompt decision to attack Ell.

People screamed. The rotten specters around the Lord of Underworld were too intimidating.

Two red needle-like spots of light flickered on the Lord of Underworld's face, locating the still-weak El. Dragging the heavy sickle, the Lord of Underworld came directly for Ell.

Beg for mercy! Accept my sentence!

The Lord of Underworld could not be more confident facing Ell, who was just severely injured. Hatred generated from the debate in the morning rose in his heart.

Ell could feel the freezing cold air of death. Having only partially recovered from the arrow, Ell had to utilize all of His remnant power to use His most powerful spell.

"I command you, to die!" Ell spat out two ancient Baburian words in a tone of great authority. Ell learned this divine-like spell Command after obtaining the domain redemption. The power of the Command was always one level lower in both requirements of usage and power than the corresponding magic spells of the same level.

However, there was no way that the Lord of Underworld would just be killed by a single Command. The Lord of Underworld was not a fool.

The rest of the false gods were ready to join the fight as well. Obviously, Ell's spell had failed to kill the Lord of Underworld, so Ell was not as powerful at all as his followers described.

Ell could feel the power of death from the Lord of Underworld and saw the two red light spots flickering excitedly in the two hollow eye sockets.

To be honest, Ell had tried the very best. The only thing He could do right now was continuing to cast Command. But he also knew that, due to the discrepancy between their power, His command would be of no use at all.

To Ell's great surprised, the flickering light spots suddenly disappeared. Silently, the Lord of Underworld disappeared in the air.

What was going on?

The fake gods hiding around were all more than shocked, including Ell.

The spell of Command did not have this kind of power — the power that could just dissolve the Lord of Underworld in the air, leaving no trace at all!

Confinement Spell! The looked on Ramiro's face suddenly changed as he recognized the spell. There must be an archmage hiding nearby!

This mysterious archmage hid the magic waves when Ell was casting the Command, thus neither false gods nor Francis noticed it. But Ramiro was standing right beside the river and he was quite profound in terms of knowing magic, so he still managed to notice the tiny difference. He knew that it was the ninth-circle magic spell Confinement.

The whole thing was getting increasingly complicated. Ramiro believed that he could use some extra support now.

Shocked but exhilarated, Ell burst out laughter. "I am the true god of this world. This is my true power! My power is even much stronger than I can imagine!"

The rest of the fake gods were greatly intimidated. They were glad that they did not rush to take any action. What happened to the Lord of Underworld was their lesson. It seemed that Ell's mysterious power could never be drained!

Obviously, Ell believed that it was His own power that killed the Lord of Underworld. Ell's understanding was that when in face of the great danger, his almighty power somehow managed to gain some connection to the supreme version of himself above, and therefore, His long-lost power resumed.

But anyway, no matter to what extent Ell believed in this explanation, He must be confident enough to make others believe in him!

Hearing Ell's laughter, the power coming from the Temple of War stagnated for a second. Seizing the chance, the nine black snakeheads joined together into a flash of sword light and fiercely chopped at the temple.

The ground trembled. Deep cracks appeared, from which black smog came out and devoured the temple.

"Leave!" Francis was still in the form of the black smog. Grabbing Ell and Jacob, who were still during the middle of the fight against the Lord of War, Francis fled away towards the horizon. A while later, after the black smog entangling the temple suddenly dissipated, an extremely angry roaring came out.

"You all must die!"

.....

Putting aside Sun Staff, Lucien activated Transformation Mask and turned himself into a small fish. He swam downwards at a very fast speed.

Having a false god as an experiment subject was not something that happened very often. Lucien did not want to give up halfway.

After a while, Lucien suddenly stopped — He felt that he was being watched!

The feeling flashed past very fast. Lucien carefully checked around but found nothing. Instead, he felt a strong air of death. The fish nearby were both alive and dead — they were all rotten, but somehow still swimming.

No wonder the Lord of Underworld just emerged from the water; It seemed that His realm was hiding deep at the bottom of Solna River. As soon as Lucien figured this out, he swam out of the city of Husum following the currents, since staying here for too long would be very dangerous.

Chapter 476: The Seed of Spiri

In the far west, a bright star appeared in the dusk sky, indicating the arrival of the night. The mountains along the valley started looking darker and darker.

When Lucien arrived at the secret cave as agreed, Ell, Francis, and Jacob had already been waiting there. Even with winding a long distance to get rid of the tailing false gods and priests, they still managed to arrive earlier than Lucien.

"Why so late, Leviathan?" Asked Jacob in low voice, who was at the same time casting spells to make sure that no one was following Lucien.

Ell and Francis also had the same question, as this cave was not far away from the city of Husum, and Leviathan had left the city much earlier than they did.

Lucien explained, well-prepared. "I jumped into the river but got into a bit of trouble because of the tides and waves summoned by the God of Moon. It took me some time to swim away from the currents."

"I see." Jacob nodded, feeling more relieved when he ensured that no one had followed Lucien here.

Ell looked a bit pale but was still smiling in a good spirit. "Although Asin's still alive, his godhood has been taken away, and the rest of the false gods are now all intimidated by my power. You all did very well, and you deserve good rewards."

"Our great pleasure," answered Jacob hurriedly.

At this time, Francis took out a small laurel box which revealed a slight air of divinity. The laurel box made the entire cave smell pleasant.

The box was given to Francis and Jacob by Ell, for collecting the godhood of the God of Moon. Without this box, the mundane could never see or touch the divine power, not to mention collecting it.

"Great God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption, this is the godhood of Asin, the God of Moon," said Francis.

To Lucien's surprise, Francis handed the box containing the God's Glory to Ell just like this.

Ell was, by contrast, more in a rush. Ell eagerly opened the box right in front of Jacob, Francis, and Lucien. As soon as the box opened, rays of cool light burst out. They felt like water when touching the skin.

Without hiding his curiosity, Lucien gazed at the glory attentively.

In the wood box, the tiny fragments that looked like the silver moon seemed quite unreal, as if they were very, very far away from Lucien. Meanwhile, there were obscure images changing in the fragments, mysterious and divine.

The moonlight fragments floated in the wood box as if they were dead, occasionally contracting and expanding slightly.

... Lucien felt this scene to be rather familiar. He searched his memories, trying to recall where he once saw them.

"Guard me, you three," said Ell in a low voice. He was in great eagerness, as He had been waiting for this moment for too long. Before Leviathan arrived, Ell was worried that there probably would be enemies following behind, so He did not consume the fragments. But now, the moment of taking in the godhood of the God of Moon and resuming power had finally arrived!

"As your command," said the three followers.

Both Francis and Lucien were staring at every single movement of Ell with the same enthusiastic look on their faces.

Ell's right hand was now covered in a layer of light that possessed the soothing power of both eternity and peace. With the light, Ell reached His right hand into the wood box and grabbed the floating silver moon pieces.

The tiny pieces started aggregating under Ell's power. Gradually, they formed a small silver light ball, just like a small moon.

The light ball throbbed like a beating out, giving out an aura of indifference and divinity, just like the eternal moon watching indifferently from the night sky.

Lucien's mouth opened slightly out of great shock. He finally recalled the familiar scene!

In the reflection of the Sphinx Mausoleum in the World of Souls, there was a light ball stained by rust and blood floating above the Sphinx coffin...

In the inner part of Sun's King's underground palace, there was that white light ball floating above the palm of Thanos' statue...

Memories flashed by like the frames of a movie — clear, and shocking. Although the details of each scene were different, the aura of the power felt exactly the same!

Something struck Lucien, as if he had got a grip on part of the secret of gods and ancient demons. However, soon his mind was filled with more questions — The existence of Alterna, the silver moon, could date back to the time way before all living creatures came into being, and the birth of the powers in ancient hell and abyss was also prior to that of the most creatures. Then where did they come from? Why was there a great difference between the form of existence of the ancient seven demons and the gods including the false ones?

Was he thinking in the wrong way?

Obviously, the World of Souls still hid more secrets than Lucien thought. Meanwhile, Lucien wondered whether it was Sun's Corona or the laurel box that enabled him to see the godhood of the God of Moon.

The silver-white light ball slowly merged into the light covering Ell's right hand. The light joined.

Ell's face was distorted, as if the entire process was very painful.

Then the light suddenly expanded and embraced Ell within like a cocoon, throbbing like a heart.

After quite a while, the cold, divine light burst out from within the cocoon and quickly went into Ell's body. Now, the light was a part of Ell.

Ell opened his eyes and his pupils were now much deeper, like the starry sky, and the way Ell talked and behaved had also changed to the softer and gentler side.

"My three domains — resurrection, fertility, and redemption — have all been enhanced. My power has resumed. And now I have two new domains, specters and moonlight."

Now they should figure out a new title for Ell, with so many godhoods.

"Revival and the specters are all in the realm of Death; flame and fertility belonged to the realm of Life; Redemption and moonlight come from the power of spirit and material; while Destruction covers them all. Therefore, my lord, you are the dominator of both material and spirit, the lord of life and death. You do not have to bother constantly changing your title, you're the Supreme Lord, the Saviour. As for assimilating Asin's godhood, all you need is an avatar named Asin, my Lord."

Obviously, Francis was still pushing Ell towards the side of being 'the one and the almighty', which the God of Truth exactly featured.

Lucien watched carefully, hoping that what he saw might be able to solve some of the questions in his mind.

"Good, this is the title that matches me," said Ell. There was light in his eyes. No matter he believed in it or not in the past, from now on, this would be the only target as his motivation.

"I'll take away the godhood of those fake gods, one by one," Ell claimed.

Obviously, taking in Asin's godhood had brought Ell a completely new experience, and Ell had become obsessed with it.

Ell turned to Francis and Lucien, "Both of you have proved yourself. I'll give both of you the Seed of Spirit to make you stronger and live longer."

Ell reached out his right hand, and a white light ball fell on his palm. Compared to God's Glory, this light ball seemed to be more approachable, but still carried great divinity. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

This was the Seed of Spirit. Transformed by a god, the Seed of Spirit would be turned into God's Glory, visible to bare eyes. Lucien guessed that this was the origin of priests' power.

Although Lucien had had a rough idea of what the Seed of Spirit was, he was now even more confused. According to Ell, giving out the Seed of Spirit would reduce the power of a false god, then the number of the seeds give out must be severely restricted. However, there were thousands of pastors, priests, cardinals, grand cardinals in the Saint Truth, and all of them could exert divine power. What happened to the God of Truth? It seemed that the power of the God of Truth had way exceeded that of Alterna, making segmenting deity something more than normal and common that would not hurt the God of Truth at all. What was the difference between the God of Truth and the rest of the false gods?

"Francis, you have shown your power in the fight. It was you who helped me defeat the God of Moon. You're the one who made the biggest contribution and effort. Although this seed can only give you a chief priest's power, you can use divine power from now on. With the seed, you communicate with it using devoutness, and you'll be able to have it as part of you."

Ell was already rather good-looking. After taking in Asin's godhood, Ell's features now looked more feminine. As Ell was talking, the smile on His face was faint and a bit mysterious.

If Francis was planning on something else, he would not dare to take in the seed. If his faith fell, he would be devoured by the Seed of Spirit, both his spirit and body.

Lucien estimated that the seed would give Francis the divine-like power around level six. He carefully watched Francis, waiting to see how Francis would react.

"My devoutness is no inferior to that of anyone." Francis smiled and took over the seed. Holding it on his palm, Francis started praying to Ell.

Soon, the Seed of Spirit began trembling and buzzing, and then it dissolved into Francis's palm. Divine air covered Francis.

Lucien was so surprised that his mouth slightly opened.

Just like this?! There was no way that Francis was a devoted follower of Ell. Why Francis was not concerned at all?

Was it because Francis had his own solution?

In Lucien's mind, the secrets Francis had were no less than his.

"Leviathan, you are smart and brave. Your contribution should also be recognized. This is your seed, which will give you the power of a common divine-blooded hero." Ell was quite content seeing Francis's loyalty. He made another seed for Lucien. However, it was much less powerful.

It made sense because basically what Lucien did was just talking and talking. By contrast, Francis was the one who fought and fought very well.

Francis smiled, as he had become the onlooker. Ell, Francis, and Jacob watched Lucien take over the Seed of Spirit.

Lucien knew what happened to the ancient sorcerers who tried to borrow the power of divinity. He was well aware of the fact that the seed would bring stormy chaos to his cognitive world, and Ell, Francis, and Jacob would know.

The seed was too dangerous to Lucien. He could not just simply take it in like Francis.

"You are new in the convention, and you do not have Francis' power. It might be hard to absorb since it's your first time. You can try multiple times," said Ell, in a tone both encouraging and urging, while Francis and Jacob were staring at Lucien and grinning.

Lucien looked down and held the seed with his both hands up to his chest. The seed touched the center of his chest.

Chapter 477: Lucien's Saint Badge

In Lucien's half-substantialized cognitive world, the bright Host Star of Destiny abruptly started orbiting. The black hole behind that seemed able to devour everything rotated to the front, bending the surrounding light. Even time seemed to slow down. Any prying into this space using basic senses became unreliable, as sight and light had deviated from its trajectory.

Praying, Lucien appeared to be rather serious and devoted. Suddenly, the Seed of Spirit began trembling like a hound that saw its bleeding prey. In the next second, the seed had dissolved into Lucien's chest and burst out pure and cold light, enveloping Lucien within.

Ell was surprised to see that the power of the moon suited Leviathan so perfectly. The slight deviation in Lucien's cognitive world made Ell believe that there was nothing suspicious about what just happened, but only the proof that Leviathan was quite gifted and trustworthy. Ell nodded approvingly and retreated his sight.

Jacob was also a bit surprised and shifted his gaze as well. Their reaction made the speculative mysterious smile disappear on Francis' face. Once again, nothing here seemed to attract Francis' interest.

The light of the silver moon gradually dissipated. Lucien now looked even calmer and introverted. He took a swing with his fist, and, not surprisingly at all, it left moonlight shadows in the air. "Your body took in the Seed of Spirit very well. The power of the moon suits you. The result is the best." What Ell wanted to say was that the result even exceeded his expectations. However, it suddenly occurred to him that as the Supreme, he could not admit his uncertainty about the specific power the seed carried, so he changed his words.

Jacob chimed in. "You have really become the seventh apostle now, Leviathan. It seemed that your power has reached that of a competitive divine-blooded!"

"This is the blessing from my Lord," said Lucien calmly. The seed seemingly brought calmness to him, so he was not in any wild joy at all.

Ell nodded. Next, Ell turned to instill power Jacob's Seed of Spirit, enhancing it to the limit of level six. Then Ell released a sigh and said, "It's a pity that I totally destroyed the Lord of Underworld, or I would've been able to find His realm and assimilate the godhood of death."

Ell looked rather confident, for He had managed to persuade Himself that it was His own power that killed the Lord of Underworld.

Lucien almost burst into laughter but held it back. Weighing his words, he said, "Great Lord, when I was in the water, the currents pushed me to an area which I believe is the Lord of Underworld's realm... Maybe there is treasure left..."

Confinement Spell could seal the target in a space created by distortion. Unless the target was at least three levels stronger than the caster, there was no way the target could get out. The target would either be confined in the space forever or get lost in the space maze and finally be destroyed by the space storm.

The only chance to get out for the target was to send out a message asking for help. As long as the location was known or could be located through prophecy, the ninth-circle magic spell Freedom could be used to crack Confinement.

Therefore, when Lucien helped Ell by activating Sun Staff's Confinement, he was well aware of the fact that it was the true self of the Lord of Underworld that was confined, not the avatars. The Lord of Underworld's avatars would at most become weaker due to the reduced connection.

"His realm is at the bottom of Solna River? Wasn't it in the Death Vally where the river originates?" Asked Ell in surprise. "Did the Lord of Underworld move for fear of the possible revenge from me? Such a pity, the Death Valley is the perfect place for the godhood of death and underworld... Or was there some kind of agreement between the Lord of Underworld and the Lord of War that made the Lord of War move there at ease? Maybe it has something to do with the arrival of the Lord of War in the city of Husum and the debate..."

Ell did not doubt that Leviathan, the "devoted" follower, would lie on this matter.

Having no clues for the answers to these questions, Ell said, "Although Antanas could never expect that we would go back to the city of Husum, there's still no need for us to go back. The Lord of Underworld is dead, and the treasure is always there. When we find the realm of the rest of the fake gods after we kill them one by one, treasures are guaranteed."

In the past, Avando had been obsessed with treasure and beauty. But now, Ell, after awakening the ambition and vision, was now able to control the desire. There was nothing more important than ascending the supreme throne again.

Ell smiled and then threw Lucien the laurel box that had started to rot. "If you like treasure, I'll give you some, as your reward."

Lucien took the box and saw a layer of fine silver powder lying at the bottom, which seemed to be the remainders after Ell consumed the light ball that was the godhood of Asin.

It was powder of the Stone of Moon God! Lucien was very surprised, as it was even more precious than top-quality Moonlight Stone or Death Stone. More importantly, the powder could be used to repair Lucien's Ice & Snow Medal and Immortal Throne robe!

Lucien was about to use other materials to fix the medal and the robe, but now he had found this much better alternative.

The smile on Francis' face became rigid for a second — He also wanted the powder.

Jacob said cautiously after hearing Ell's ambition, "we have to be careful. The false gods might join the Lord of War and use themselves as baits. We can wait for a while until the Lord of War's patience wore off, and then we can deal with them one by one."

"I know." Ell nodded and said, "Leviathan is smart and motivated, Francis is powerful and profound, and Jacob is cautious and well-organized. You three are my best servants."

After Francis, Lucien, and Jacob expressed their loyalty one more time, Ell continued, "Francis once talked to me about the ranks of angels, and I am satisfied with it. You three are the most powerful angels following me. Francis, you have the power of destruction, so you are the Angel of Death, and also the Angel of Justice.

"And you, Jacob, you are my first follower and you have ever been preaching my words. You are the Angel of Enlightenment, and also the Angel of Redemption. You, Leviathan, you are the new and youngest apostle, full of energy. So you are my Angel of Glory, the Morning Star, the Son of Dawn."

Lucien was a bit speechless. He wondered why the title "the Fallen Morning Star" followed him to this alternate realm.

"I will go back to my realm to enhance my godhood and stabilize my domain. Jacob, go back to Politown and get ready for preaching. Also, send some followers to watch over the false gods and to take down records in order to assist Francis for future plans. Leviathan, you go to the place we previously agreed on to wait for Anheuse and then go back to Politown with him. On your way back, start preaching but do it secretly." Ell gave orders to them one by one, leaving Lucien to wait for Anheuse because it was known that Leviathan could not fly.

"As your command, my Lord," answered the three in chorus.

After Ell, Jacob, and Francis all left, Lucien finally released a sigh of relief. They, Francis in particular, were giving him great pressure.

After waiting for another while to make sure that they were not somehow coming back, Lucien touched his chest and took out a patterned badge covered in a layer of moonlight.

Before joining the Secret Praying Congress, Lucien was told about the Seed of Spirit. The existence of it was constantly being mentioned afterward. Cautious as Lucien, he must have been prepared.

After reading through the materials, based on the features of the false gods and their power, referring to the design of Sun's Corona, Lucien made a semi-finished badge using the materials he had.

Although at that time he did not have the full grip of the structure that he learned from Sun's Corona, Lucien was still quite confident that it could absorb the power of the Seed of Spirit and turn into a complete divine item.

After knowing how God's Glory and the Seed of Spirit worked, Lucien was totally confident that his plan would work. Therefore, he took his time watching how Francis took in the power of the seed.

Then, as the Secretive, Lucien successfully deceived Ell and Francis, who never thought of thoroughly investigating Leviathan. Relying on the resonance from Sun's Corona, Lucien absorbed the Seed of Spirit using this badge and turned it into a level-three divine item.

The badge could improve the wearer's recovery ability, agility, speed, and strength to level three. If the wearer's Blood Power originated from the silver moon, then the level would be increased to four. But, since the badge did not improve the wearer's reaction speed, a real level four grand knight would still be more competitive.

Lucien left the message within the item and named it,

"Ell's Saint Badge, level-three senior-rank divine item."

...

"Perhaps, this badge is the truly devoted follower.

"From Lucien Evans."

Hanging the badge under his robe, Lucien started fixing the two magic items using the powder. Then he would be meeting Anheuse.

.....

At the bottom of Solna River, among the currents, there was dim light emerging. The voice of the Lord of Underworld came,

"I'm finally free! I will kill you, Ell! I'll put your soul deep into the underworld and lash it for ten thousand years!"

Somehow the Lord of Underworld had freed Himself from Confinement and returned to this dimension.

After the dizziness from teleportation disappeared, the two red light spots in the Lord of Underworld's sockets suddenly froze,

The Lord of Underworld saw no one around, but he thought that it was his avatar finding the Lord of War for help that freed him.

As soon as this thought appeared, a sword entangled with flame emerged out of nowhere, carrying an overwhelming power of destruction.

A deep crack appeared the body of the Lord of Underworld. The two red light spots disappeared easily, like candlelight that was blown out.

.....

"My sincere appreciation and gratefulness, my Lord. I did not expect this at all... It was all my fault." After losing the power for maintaining the human look, Asin now had gone back to his real look — an old centaur. As Asin spoke, his white beard swayed fiercely. He was obviously very upset.

The Lord of War, whose appearance was a middle-aged man wearing an eye patch, nodded. "The enemy is too cunning, and the rest of the gods are too timid. You are the first one serving me in loyalty, and I will treat you well.

"This godhood is from a false god I killed last month. It suits you, so take it."

A light ball was sent to Asin from the Lord of War's hand.

It was a great surprise to Asin, as he never expected that the Lord of War would make such a generous reward.

"My Lord, this is... godhood of the Morning Star?" Asin stammered.

"The Star of Morning, the Star of Dusk, the Incarnation of Love and Beauty, the Secret Death and Resurrection. After you take in the godhood, you will become Ell's main target," Antanas said rather openly. The four duties coming from the godhood would be a great tempt to Ell, as nothing else other than the godhood of the Lord of Underworld and this one worked better for Ell to boost his power.

The Lord of War was using Asin as a bait, obviously. After a second of hesitation, Asin still took in the light ball. There was no other option.

As Asin absorbed the godhood gradually, His body started to change. Features of the centaur and the beard disappeared, the shape of human body resumed, but now Asin had turned into a gorgeous beauty with fine skin and blond hair.

"Good. From now on, you're the God of Love and Beauty, the Star of Morning and Dusk," said Antanas, satisfied, as he reached out his right hand and touched Asin's face.

After Asin left, the hall became quiet again, and cold wind blew in. Antanas just stood there in silence for a long time.

Chapter 478: Face to Face, But Not Able to Recognize

In city Husum of the Solna River Valley, there were soldiers everywhere searching for preachers and believers of the God of Revival, Fertility, and Redemption. The searching messed the entire city, and the mess extended all day long into the deep night.

However, the search yielded nothing. Most of the followers of Ell were the previous followers of the God of Flame and Destruction, who were experts in hiding in the crowd. Unless the clergies of the Lord of War and the other gods could match in number with that of the Saint Truth Church so that they could examine the people one by one on the street using divine spells, it was impossible that they could find a clue tracking the secret preachers.

As for those new followers of Ell who converted after attending the debate and seeing how Ell killed the Lord of Underworld within a second, they were of no value for the searching, as these new followers knew nothing about the initiators and priests.

"Send out these letters and do as said in the letters. This is the prepayment. When my friend sees the mark and finds you, you'll get the rest," said Ramiro who had changed his look again to a merchant.

The traveling merchant nodded hurriedly and took over the gold coins and the letters. The pay was too generous to make him say no!

He wished to hit the road right away! He was so lucky to run into such a wealthy man!

In fear of the mysterious ninth-circle archmage and the Lord of War, Ramiro decided to reach the three top night watchers who had arrived in Erdo with him, the five senior-rank priests, two gold knights, and six radiant knights investigating the meteorite incident that happened three years ago in the north to ask for help. Something going on here was definitely not right!

Because of the certain restriction in this dimension, the Church only managed to set up a few teleportation circles in the fully-controlled countries. In remote areas, they still had to rely on the most primordial methods to communicate.

Ramiro also decided that currently there was no necessity to report this to the grand cardinals and Varantine, the leader of the ascetics, who were investigating different things across the dimension. They were already short of hands, and aside from the unconfirmed existence of the mysterious archmage, there was nothing worthy of attention here

Three years ago, many places in this dimension witnessed meteor showers, making it impossible to know where Alterna and the mysterious existence from the World of Souls exactly ended up falling. Ramiro had to find a chance to approach the false god who took away the godhood of the God of Moon. Somehow, all the dimensions where human beings were living shared a similar length of day and night and the length of a year like the main material world. In the dimensions not suitable for humans to live, it was the opposite case.

When Ramiro turned around and was about to leave, he heard the nearby people talking,

"I heard that the Lord of Underworld had been killed by the almighty Lord of Redemption. Keep it as a secret: The statue of the Lord of Underworld in the temple cracked right from the middle, and most of the priests of the Lord of Underworld had lost their power."

"Really? I remembered that the almighty God of Redemption only said two words at that time!" Said another man. Ordinary folk like him could not understand ancient Baburian.

"So what the priests said on the debate is true. When the searching comes to an end, I'll..." The man who was talking did not finish his words, as he could not fully trust the people he was talking to.

"Don't say that too early. If Ell is that powerful, Ell would have killed Asin a long time ago. But now Asin had resumed his power and became the God of Love and Beauty, the Star of Morning and Dusk. Now, Asin's priests are receiving the new power," said another man, who was the follower of Bero, the God of Sun and Justice.

Ramiro was very surprised to know that so many things had happened. The Lord of Underworld had died! Who did it?

According to the Church, the temper of those false gods changed greatly as they took in different godhoods, and some of them ended up being driven by their desire and losing the ability of thinking. When Ramiro was thinking to himself, he noticed something unusual — When those people were talking, one of them was obviously absent-minded and kept looking around.

There was definitely something wrong with this guy. Ramiro believed that this man was not the follower of the Lord of Underworld, because the man was not interested in the conversation at all.

Ramiro decided to follow this short, young man. As an experienced night watcher, Ramiro was very sensitive to anything worthy of investigation.

In an ordinary mud hut.

Reis, the short young man, sneaked into the hut after carefully checking around. Anheuse was waiting in the hut.

Reis said to Anheuse, "my dear Initiator, the almighty Lord of Redemption and the rest of the initiators have left the city. The number of guards at the city gate has been reduced. I was also told that..."

Anheuse was left in the city to deal with the remaining issues after their original plan failed. Due to the strict search, Anheuse had been waiting for the chance leaving this city for quite a while.

Hearing Reis' information, Anheuse drew a cross in front of his chest and said, "my Lord's almighty power is profound. The Lord of Underworld tried to betray the true lord, severe punishment then ensues. You can leave now. When everything settles down, I'll preach to you about the blessedness granted by the Lord."

"We only follow the Lord of Redemption." Reis also drew a cross in front of his chest and left in respect.

Watching Reis go, Anheuse locked the door and was about to put the makeup on to disguise himself. At this time, someone gently patted him on the shoulder, and he heard a low laugh just beside his ears.

"I'd like to hear about the blessedness granted by the almighty Lord of Redemption as well."

.....

The silver moon hung high in the night sky. It was late and silent, and Lucien was waiting for Anheuse beside the river in the darkness.

After quite a while, Lucien finally saw Anheuse came stealthily.

"Are you here, Leviathan?" Asked Anheuse in low voice.

After he made sure that it was truly Anheuse, Lucien walked out from the darkness. "It's late. You got in any trouble?"

"A bit..." answered Anheuse briefly. "Leviathan, I suppose you've earned the Seed of Spirit from the Lord, right?"

Lucien was a bit surprised to hear this question. The timing seemed to be quite bad. But he still answered, "yes, the almighty Ell gave both Francis and me the Seed of Spirit. Jacob was awarded, too. When you return to Politown, you'll receive your award as well."

"I see... is it powerful? How does it work?" Anheuse asked eagerly and looked a bit jealous.

Lucien understood how Anheuse felt, so he smiled. "It's just for improving my strength, speed, agility, and the ability to recover. Plus my inherent strength, I can now fight against a divine-blooded hero."

"Good," Anheuse's voice revealed a slight of his joy, as if he was glad to know that there was nothing special about Leviathan's Seed of Spirit. "Alright, we should go now."

Deep inside, Anheuse was indeed happy. Because he was, in fact, Ramiro the Body Controller. Ramiro had killed Anheuse after absorbing his conscious memories and body cells.

Ramiro felt so blessed for being this lucky. Finding Anheuse meant that he could now find Francis and figure out why they wanted the godhood of the God of Moon. When Ramiro found that he could not cast all of Anheuse's divine spells and was concerned that this might be his major flaw, the apostle he found named Leviathan was not able to tell this at all, since the Seed of Spirit Leviathan received was just for improving his physical strength. What's more, Ramiro could easily turn himself into Leviathan, and then he would be perfectly safe.

Ramiro was rather pleased with himself. He believed that this was because of his many years of loyalty to his Lord.

Glancing around, Ramiro was about to take action.

Lucien suddenly realized that there was something wrong with Anheuse's words! Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

If Anheuse was feeling jealous of the award that a new apostle received, and was concerned that the power of a new apostle might exceed his, why did he not ask about Francis?

Anheuse was a loyal follower of Ell. Then why did Anheuse not mention anything about Ell?

His eyes narrowing slightly, Lucien pretended that everything was fine, while he was ready to take action at any time. He wondered if Anheuse had probably been possessed by a false god.

Ramiro had made sure that no one was around. A creepy smile appeared on his face, and the inner part of his body started wriggling.

In Ramiro's eyes, Leviathan was like a vulnerable lamb that had no power to defend himself.

They were now out of the city of Husum. Ramiro could take his time absorbing Leviathan's memories and investigate him.

The smile on Ramiro's face became bigger. He was going to show this innocent lamb his horrible power.

At this time, suddenly, a person arrived and landed on the ground, stopping Ramiro before he could take action.

"Francis?" Lucien was now even more alert.

Francis grinned. "I'm interested in the treasure left by the Lord of Underworld. Leviathan, take me there."

Although Ell was deeply convinced that the Lord of Underworld was killed by his own power, Francis believed that, based on what he saw, it was Confinement or a maze spell. He suspected that an archmage had also arrived in the city of Husum and the archmage's target was the Lord of Underworld.

.....

In the realm of the God of Sun and Justice, Bero was pacing back and forth in the hall in annoyance. Although the Lord of War had withdrawn the order of expelling Them temporarily, if They failed to kill Ell within a year, more severe punishment would be waiting for them.

Considering this over and over again, Bero thought of the mysterious lady who visited the temple a few days ago claiming that she was selling secret knowledge.

Bero hoped that her secret knowledge could help Him become more powerful, so that not only Ell, but also Antanas... Bero had made up His mind.

After a long time, a gorgeous blond lady as beautiful and pure as an elf entered the realm, led by Bero's chief priest.

"Ms. Sophia, what secret knowledge do you have?" Asked Bero straightforwardly.

Sophia's jade-green eyes were clear and her smile was innocent and sweet. She took out a few books from her pouch and said, "it depends on what you want, revered God of Sun.

"I have the Book of Honesty, the Book of Order, the Book of Kindness and so on, as well as the ultimate one, the Book of Virtue."

Chapter 479: A Good Place

Chapter 479: A Good Place

The moonlight spread gently on the river bank, making everything look a bit fuzzy like it was in a dream.

Hearing Francis' words, Ramiro was quite surprised. He then purposefully put on a greedy look and asked, "the treasure of the Lord of Underworld? Can I go with you?"

In the city of Husum, when Ramiro first heard that the Lord of Underworld had been killed, he was more than shocked. The ninth-circle spell Confinement was not Command Death, it should not be able to kill a fake god!

Once, there was a demon count who had been confined for over a thousand years but was still alive. He was set free by the hard effort of his numerous followers when the power of Confinement started fading. Therefore, Ramiro seriously suspected that the ninth-circle archmage had just confined the Lord of Underworld and would release this false god at some point after he made enough preparations to kill Him swiftly.

Ramiro would like to further investigate this, but he knew neither where the Lord of Underworld was being confined nor where the Lord of Underworld's realm was. So he had temporarily put this aside and turned to investigate the godhood of the God of Moon instead.

Knowing that it was Leviathan who found the realm of the Lord of Underworld, Ramiro was very eager to go there and try to see what actually happened to the Lord of Underworld to make Him the pray of a ninth-circle archmage.

Because of the death of the Lord of Underworld, Ramiro had ruled out his last bit of suspicion towards Leviathan. Ramiro saw it with his eyes that Leviathan jumped into the water, and that was possibly where the Confinement was cast.

Obviously, there was no time for Leviathan to go back and forth between the several agreed places without attracting Francis' attention as both of the places were relatively far away from the city of Husum, unless Leviathan had the legendary level power.

However, if that was the case, there would be no necessity at all for Leviathan to hide around. Instead, he could just directly sweep over Erdo.

"A false god's treasure must be very abundant, and I don't mind you taking a portion, Anheuse," said Francis with a smile. His main purpose of going there was also to figure out what happened to the Lord of Underworld. "You can help us, so we can finish our searching as soon as possible before the Lord of War notices."

With the same smile on his face, Francis asked Leviathan casually, "Leviathan, don't you want to go? I thought you were longing to go."

"If it was me alone, I wouldn't go for sure. Who knows what horrible things are hiding in the Lord of Underworld's realm. But now since you two are in, I'll definitely not miss it!" Lucien pretended that he was zealous. He had his own purpose for going to the domain — to investigate the mysterious sight he felt when he swam past it and the reason why the Lord of Underworld suddenly chose to move to the bottom of Solna River. Maybe he would also be able to find some good materials for fixing his magic items.

Ramiro frowned. "Then we must hurry. The realm would slowly collapse and disperse after the death of the Lord of Underworld."

After they enter the realm, Ramiro could find a better chance to kill Leviathan behind Francis' back to steal Leviathan's identity. And then he could put all the blame onto the unpredictability and strangeness of the realm.

"Show us the way, Leviathan," said Francis leisurely. In his knowledge, the Lord of Underworld was just confined, and his incarnations still existed, therefore, the domain was not going to disperse.

Lucien had the same opinion as Francis, but neither of them expressed it out. After all, Ell and his devoted followers were deeply convinced that the Lord of Underworld was killed by Ell.

Wearing the stone bracelet, Lucien took the initiative and jumped into the river, followed by Francis. Ramiro used his blood power to cast a divine-like spell on himself to breathe underwater and followed behind quietly.

Swimming against the currents for quite a while, after passing the old watergate, the three of them had approached the realm of the Lord of Underworld. For a second, Lucien sensed the weird feeling of being looked at again.

“It’s here,” said Francis, nodding when he saw the schools of half-rotten fish. Relying on his acute sense of the power of death, he started leading Lucien and Ramiro to swim down towards the bottom of the river.

Past the clusters of strange-looking, pale water reed, Francis purposefully hit a common-looking stone. Then, the stone quickly distorted and turned into a heavy, black gate that emitted a strong scent of death.

The stone gate was very dilapidated. The black paint was falling in tiny pieces, and the inner material was rotting.

“The Lord of Underworld died?!” Francis casual smile froze on his face — Wasn’t it Confinement?!

Both Lucien and Ramiro looked at Francis in confusion. “What do you mean? The Lord of Underworld died days ago.”

There was a hidden mocking in Ramiro’s tone.

Although the look on Lucien’s face was the same as that of Ramiro, Lucien was actually clenching his fists really tight, so tight that his nails almost sank in the skin. Lucien was, in fact, as shocked as Francis, if not more.

Lucien was the one who cast Confinement. No one knew about the situation better than him. However, now the Lord of Underworld had really died, but Lucien had no clue about this at all.

“Still... Seeing it with my own eyes feels different.” Francis had resumed his usual calmness and casualness. He was not afraid of any suspect from either Anheuse or Leviathan, as, after all, he had taken in the Seed of Spirit, and he was the most powerful one among them.

Ramiro turned to look at the black stone gate and started looking for ways to open it. Later, if there was an opportunity, he could also kill Francis, which would be a good extra credit to him.

“According to the doctrine and the legends, in the Lord of Underworld’s realm, there are seven stone gates outside of His palace. Every gate should be opened with an oblation, or one would be trapped between two gates until one’s soul dissolves.” Francis introduced briefly. “But now the domain is collapsing, and the underworld guards have fallen into sleep, we can use anything to open it.”

Francis picked up a pebble and insert it into the big keyhole in the stone gate.

Within Francis’s expectation, light burst out from the black gate and the gate silently opened for them. Behind the gate, there was bitter and painful groans and moans, and the wind came was freezing cold.

Francis did not hesitate and took the initiative to walk in. Lucien followed him in full alert. However, it wasn’t until a minute later when Ramiro finally came in.

Standing in the overwhelming darkness, Ramiro hurriedly explained. “I’ve cast a couple of spells, in case the power of death is too strong.”

Ramiro was extremely cautious about stepping into the domain of the Lord of Underworld. No one knew that if the ninth-circle archmage was here or not.

Francis did not say anything. He turned to walk to the next gate dimly lit up by luminous moss.

Suddenly, distorted pale faces emerged in the darkness, men and women, young and old. Floating in the air, they aimed directly towards Francis, Lucien, and Ramiro full of hatred and viciousness.

Dark haze rose from Francis's body and filled in the space. The pale faces immediately disappeared silently as soon as the haze reached them.

"The place is fading, and the specters are out of restrictions now." Francis reminded them.

He took out a silver coin and opened the next gate.

Then, the three of them run into all kinds of low-rank specters as well as mummies. With Francis, a radiant knight, walking in the front, the specters imposed no big threat to them at all. From time to time, Francis would miss a few, but level-four knight Leviathan and level-four priest Anheuse were able to handle them.

When the sixth stone gate opened, what was behind the gate was no longer pure darkness, but dim bright fog.

In the fog, many figures were moaning and writhing on the ground; many were starving to death, too weak to cry out; many were crying in fear, but were sent to the altar by the indifferent and cold crowd; some were being torn apart into pieces by beasts; some were killed by the fights between gods and priests; some were drowned to death because of the flood summoned by gods; some were dying on battlefields during wars; some were being slaved, being killed by beasts to please the nobles...

In the fog was real hell depicting the pain that ordinary people were suffering from in this world.

"Let's go. We pray in piety, so we won't be influenced." Ramiro inherited part of Anheuse's memory and knew what to do now.

Walking in the haze, Lucien could hear sounds of sharp screaming in agony. The thin, pale arms trying to grab him in desperation were like spreading tree branches. However, the sound and the scene did not cause a stir in Lucien's mind. The arms directly went through Lucien's body as if they were just shadows.

When they got out of the haze, two stone gates emerged in the front. Both of them were dispersing.

"Two ?" Francis asked Ramiro.

Ramiro shook his head, "No idea. But we'd better hurry. Let's take different paths here. You're the most powerful one among us, Francis, so you take one yourself. Leviathan and I will take the other."

Like a wolf stalking a lamb, Ramiro knew that his opportunity was coming.

"Alright. Let's split and hurry up, or we wouldn't be able to search all the places." Francis agreed and went into the gate on the right.

Ramiro turned to look at Leviathan with a smile on his face. "Let's go."

"Sure." Lucien smiled back.

Behind the left gate was a corridor alined with stone pillars. The winding corridor extended into the far side. It was empty and silent, the perfect place for killing.

Seeing that Leviathan had lowered his alert, Ramiro was ready to take action after passing around the corner, when they were far from Francis.

After several minutes of walking, they turned right along the corridor. There were rooms along both sides, but still nothing around.

This was such a good place for Ramiro.

A ferocious smile appeared on Ramiro's face as he examined Lucien from behind.

Chapter 480: Twists and Turns

All the previous events had eliminated Ramiro's suspicion towards Leviathan and made him believe that Leviathan only had the equal to that of a level-four knight. Yet although now in Ramiro's eyes Leviathan was of no threat to him at all, he was still being very cautious. He was, after all, a high-ranking night watcher that had secretly assassinated and directly slain many powerful heresies. Except for the mysterious smile on his face, his behavior revealed none of his inner thoughts, for he needed to make sure that Leviathan would not be alerted so that he could kill Leviathan within one single strike.

Ramiro's guts and organs started melting into a pile of muddy flesh. Soon, Leviathan would be completely wrapped by the flesh, digested, and absorbed. To reduce the possible risk, Ramiro had decided to devour Leviathan directly without wasting time on interrogating him.

"Leviathan" did not sense the danger at all.

His ankle bending slightly, Ramiro was about to jump onto Leviathan. However, at this very moment, Francis' cheerful voice came from behind.

"Here you are!"

Damn it, it was the second time! Ramiro stopped himself in the last second, stumbling. Ramiro followed the momentum and turned around, his pace a bit pale. "What, Francis? You scared me there!"

Lucien was also a bit startled. "Anything wrong with that side?"

Francis grinned. "Behind the gate is the Bridge of Soul. Both the Styx and the Bridge have dispersed severely and were in a terrifying state of voidness. I can't pass."

"Then we really have to hurry up. The same thing might happen to this side as well," said Lucien as he signalled the two to hurry.

Francis nodded and again walked in the front. Ramiro followed them, feeling quite frustrated. He wondered if his blessing had come to the end. It seemed that his luck had started to leave.

He prayed in his mind, hoping the proper chance that he could absorb Leviathan would come.

In front of the corridor, darkness resumed again. A grayish-white river where countless bodies and bones were floating appeared, winding to the unknown far end.

"Is this the Styx?" Lucien examined it curiously.

Ramiro nodded, "Yes. Every drop of the Styx came from a bitter and sorrowful soul. Even the gods would become crazy after touching it, the Lord of Underworld is the only exception."

There was a canoe beside the riverbank, but the canoe-man had disappeared because of the collapse of the entire realm.

"How was the realm formed? Consciousness and matter, which comes the first?" Asked Francis in the tone of a philosopher. The person he was asking was, of course, the experienced initiator Anheuse.

The first question was also a question shared by Lucien. He first thought that a realm was something like a sorcerer's demiplane, but the collapse of a legendary sorcerer's demiplane was not caused by the sorcerer's death, but rather the destruction of the cognitive world.

Ramiro answered with a cold smile. "The power of faith gathered, and gods form godhoods from the power. The remnant power formed the realm depending on the god and the godhood. The power of a god can be greatly improved when the god is in His own domain. When a god falls, if his godhood had nowhere to go, or if the other god who takes away the godhood is unwilling to maintain the realm, the space will gradually collapse. The escaped power of faith will follow the guidance of godhood and come to it."

The godhood with nowhere to go to would dissipate gradually.

"No wonder you are the initiator, Anheuse." Francis smiled and stepped onto the canoe.

Ramiro thought to himself that the real Anheuse would have never articulated the idea as clear as he did.

When Leviathan and Anheuse were both on board, the canoe set off. On the surface of Styx, the canoe moved silently as if it was on a mirror.

When they reached the other side and got off the boat, they saw the magnificent palace enveloped in a haze right in front of them. There were huge stone columns supporting the giant domes. Everything consisting of the palace looked very real, not like those things they saw earlier, which looked illusory.

"This is the place where the Lord of Underworld lived. Five thousand ordinary men were sent here and labored to death as sacrifices. It's quite something that the Lord of Underworld even moved such a huge palace from the Death Valley to this place," said Ramiro.

Both Lucien and Francis had heard of this before, as it was recorded in the doctrine of the Lord of Underworld.

In such a primitive religion, fear was always the most commonly used method for ruling followers, and thus sacrifice was among the most frequently mentioned words. Some false gods, especially those who were greatly influenced by their godhoods, were obsessed with the blood rituals and live sacrifices, including the previous Lord of Fire and Destruction, Avando. However, after becoming the Lord of Redemption, Ell had greatly calmed down and had never shown this tendency again.

"This palace is huge. Let's go separate," suggested Ramiro again.

Francis agreed. They still had to save time for getting out. As for what they would find in the palace, Francis would be able to check them secretly later using his powers.

Lucien also agreed as he was seeking for Adamantine, Mythril, Orichalcum, Ice Iron, Soul Stone, and Meteoric Iron to refine the alloy unique to the Will of Elements for fixing his Holm prize rings. Of course, those materials for fixing his medal, staff, belt, and gloves were also his targets.

Pushing open the palace gate, Francis walked straight to the front, Lucien turned left, and Ramiro entered the left side of the palace.

A while later, Ramiro secretly came back to the main hall. He cast an alert look at the direction chosen by Francis. After making sure that there was no sign of Francis coming back, Ramiro's sullen face disappeared in the darkness.

Silently moving in the darkness like a shadow, Ramiro was approaching his target.

A radiant knight's velocity was amazing. Pass the corridor and the rooms, Ramiro soon saw Leviathan, who was searching every corner of this place cautiously with the sword in his hands.

At the end of the corridor, there was a black metal gate with a white skull and a river of blood drawn on it. The death power on it was almost gone after the falling of the Lord of Underworld.

What Lucien was holding was just a common steel sword, given by Ell as an award when Lucien left Politown.

Staring at the gate, Lucien grabbed the sword tight with both of his hands and hacked at the white skull in the middle. Then Lucien dropped the sword, letting the sword taking away the rest of the death power on the gate.

When the steel sword dropped on the floor, it sounded like a rotten piece of wood.

Lucien pushed open the gate, and finally saw the treasure left by the Lord of Underworld: Most of it was gold, silver, and gems, dazzling under the candlelight. In the middle, there were different pieces of metal, exotic items, and divine weapons.

Lucien saw Mythrill and Soul Stone at first glance. Meanwhile, he became more alert and spread out his spiritual power, for he had no idea whether or not there were still any guards around. Also, it was possible that Francis and Anheuse would kill him to take away all the treasures, especially Anheuse, who seemed to be a bit strange.

Standing behind in the darkness, Ramiro thought that Leviathan must have been shocked seeing such abundant wealth. It was a great opportunity for him!

The opportunity that he had been waiting for so long!

Ramiro sprinted out from the darkness!

However, the minute when he jumped out, Ramiro sensed a stranger coming from the other side of the corridor.

Damn! Ramiro almost went nuts. It was just such bad luck!

However, he had no better options. Ramiro rushed into the treasury and sent a secret, silent message to Lucien,

"Hide! Someone's coming!"

Lucien had sensed Ramiro's presence when Ramiro was about to jump on him, as well as the stranger. Following Ramiro, Lucien went into the treasury and hid in the corner where nothing could reflect him.

Half a minute later, an elegant and fine-curved figure secretly sneaked in. Lucien saw the reflection on a piece of metal: It was a gorgeous, goddess-like beauty. Each of her movements was full of bewitching charm, but somehow Lucien felt the lady quite familiar.

He was a bit confused, as he did not remember seeing this lady before.

The gorgeous lady walked to the other side of the treasury. Then light like the first rays of the morning sun poured out from her body, and a secret gate was exposed.

However, there was nothing behind the secret gate.

"It's gone? Didn't He obtain a powerful thing from where Solna River originated..." Murmured the beauty to herself in a low, sexy voice.

Both Lucien and Ramiro recognized her at the same time and felt the godhood possessed by the lady. She was Asin, the God of Moon! How come He became female? It seemed that Asin had got some new godhood related to beauty and morning glory.

Since Asin was about level seven, and both Lucien and Ramiro had to avoid showing their true power to each other, they chose not to jump out. They watched Asin casually take away a couple of divine items and entering into another secret tunnel. It seemed that she could come back at any time for the rest of the treasure.

After a while, Ramiro walked out and smiled. "I was following Asin."

Of course, Lucien did not believe him at all.

Seeing the serious look on Leviathan's face, Ramiro grinned. "You don't believe me? It's okay. No one is gonna interrupt me now."

Thank God. After three interrupted attempts, he could finally eat Leviathan in!

Ramiro's body started wriggling like there were no bones in it.

Lucien instantly recognized who he was. He forcedly gave up the plan of using Confinement and Maze, because Ramiro could get out at any time by self-explosion.

Like a pile of muddy flesh, Ramiro jumped towards Lucien, leaving Lucien nowhere to retreat.

Suddenly, Ramiro's mind paused a bit as he saw a flash of green light in Leviathan's eyes. Then he felt that his level of magic resistance had been greatly reduced.

Resistance Reduction?

Ramiro saw dim light on Leviathan's robe forming a deadly grey ray shooting directly toward him.

Without any preparation, Ramiro was shot by the very fast ray. He felt that his body was full of this negative energy and his power had been greatly reduced by at least one level.

Weakening Ray? He was the ninth-circle archmage?

Damn it!

Ramiro had fallen into great depression and desperation. For a second, he even started doubting the God of Truth.

Why did his Lord not warn him of the great danger, and why had the blessing abandoned him?

However, he soon found an explanation:

He had been interrupted for three times. The God of Truth had warned him for three times. It was his arrogance that blinded his eyes!

Chapter 481: The Strange Encounter

Lucien Evans! He was Lucien Evans!

Although Ramiro's power had been reduced to level seven, he still recognized who this young man was as Lucien did not even try to conceal his magic waves. Ramiro had a much deeper understanding of what kind of danger he was now facing.

After twelve seconds, his power would probably be further reduced by one level. If that was the case, Ramiro would have no chance at all fighting against Lucien Evans who had numerous powerful magic items. Ramiro knew that Lucien Evans had a powerful magic staff inlaid with Sun Stone that could cast Confinement. If Lucien Evans got the chance to curse his soul or intervene with his destiny, it would be the end of Ramiro!

What was worse to Ramiro was that it was not his first time fighting with Lucien Evans, and Lucien Evans had for sure seen how he exploded but still survived. Now that his biggest secret weapon had been revealed to Lucien, Lucien would definitely take precautions against it.

Lucien Evans cast two magic spells successively. Seeing this, Ramiro believed that Lucien Evans was in the middle of the buffering time for the next round of casting.

This was the best opportunity for him to turn the tables. The longer he waited, the more dangerous it would be!

He had to make a decision, right now.

Lots of uncontrolled thoughts flashed through Ramiro's mind. But within a second, Ramiro, an experienced fighter, made the best decision based on the current situation — to explode himself!

Although it had been his second time exploding himself in the recent two to three months, although he had not recovered from the last self-explosion, although this might leave his body damaged for a long time and prevent him from reaching the next level, Ramiro still made the decision! Hesitation would be the most powerful weapon he gave to his own enemy! If he died, his body would be damaged forever and he would never be able to reach the next level.

Bang! The deafening explosion turned the gold, silver, and gems nearby into ashes. The horrible power of the shock waves made a violent dash towards Lucien!

Ramiro did not expect that this would kill Lucien Evans.

But this would definitely interrupt and break off Lucien's next spell in preparation!

Ramiro's will seemed to fuse with this great explosion.

Lucien's buffering time for casting was a two to three times shorter than most sixth-circle sorcerers, as he had adopted the Wave-Particle Dualism meditation method, which was closer to the truth of the world. Also, more importantly, one of the first two spells he just threw at Ramiro was only fourth circle and the other was from the Immortal Throne robe. Therefore, it only took Lucien about a second to recover.

Ramiro expected that Lucien Evans would turn to cast a defense spell to protect himself against the explosion. It would win him a very short period of time for transferring his soul.

When overwhelming blast waves rushed from all the directions, self-defense was always the first choice.

Lucien recovered earlier than Ramiro expected and he was indeed about to activate Energy Absorption Field.

However, at this time, Lucien recalled what he had been warning himself repeatedly,

"If I can't kill or confine Ramiro, he will tell the Church who I am. If that happens, I'll definitely have no more chance to observe how a god is produced this closely, and I'll be in great trouble if a Grand Cardinal decides to target at me."

"I cannot let Ramiro get out of my control. I have to kill him or confine him!"

The consequences of letting Ramiro escape flashed through Lucien's mind. Therefore, instead of protecting himself, Lucien seized the chance to activate one of his magic items.

A crystal-clear ray shot out from Lucien's left chest and right into the dusty blast waves in freezing temperature.

Meanwhile, the horrible explosion hit Lucien, and he disappeared right on spot.

The next second when Lucien appeared again, he was already standing beside the entrance of the secret tunnel, with a layer of energy shield covering him.

Since Lucien first activated the magic item, the timing of opening the shield was slightly delayed. Lucien's face turned pale, and there was blood dripping from the corner of his mouth. He had to thank the protection from the Immortal Throne robe he was wearing, and also, the Short Distance Teleportation that removed him from the first and most powerful round of blast, or now he would have been severely injured again just like the time when he was thrown into this realm.

When the dust was settling down, Lucien took out a tube of Water Song and drank it all. His face now looked less pale.

Because of the freezing effect of Silent Coffin, the power of the blast didn't last long. It faded away completely after several seconds. On the ground was a layer of dust that was once gold, silver, and gems. Many divine items and materials were also destroyed during the explosion.

As Lucien examined his surroundings cautiously, he saw a crystal lying at the spot where Ramiro exploded. In the crystal, there was a strange shadow.

Lucien picked up the crystal using Mage Hand. He was sure that this was part of the Silent Coffin which had not yet completely melted.

When Lucien took a closer look at the shadow inside the crystal, he saw the pale face of Ramiro. The look on the face was rigid and hollow as if the face had been frozen in there for over thousands of years.

It seemed that both Ramiro's body and soul were very special. Before when Lucien cast the spell, Silent Coffin, neither one's body nor soul could survive in the end under the dissolving power. Lucien sealed this crystal piece using magic and then took out his Morning Light crystal ball. Through the crystal ball, Lucien tried to see if he could find any connections to the face frozen in the crystal and thus locate any separate flesh that Ramiro might use for his resurrection.

Lucien once saw Ramiro explode with his own eyes, and then he saw Ramiro alive right in front of him. There was no doubt that Ramiro had his own way to come back to life. Lucien guessed that it was because of Ramiro's creepy self-division and reproduction power.

Lucien did not know whether directly wiping off Ramiro's remaining soul would thoroughly eliminate him or not, therefore, he decided to find what was left by Ramiro first.

Ramiro's resurrection did not rely on any magic rites, so there must be some restrictions on space or time. Thus, Lucien believed that Ramiro's way of resurrection should be different from a lich's phylactery or Felipe's improved Life Hiding spell, which could allow its owner to resurrect regardless of the place and time death occurred.

Of course, if Ramiro's blood power was indeed powerful enough to exceed the restrictions of time and space, or if Ramiro's remaining body part was hidden in the Holy City Lance, then Lucien would have no other choices but to run for his life after leaving the realm of the Lord of Underworld.

In the crystal ball, there were two light spots, connected by a faintly discernible line.

It seemed like Ramiro's body part for resurrection was just by the entrance of the realm. No wonder it took Ramiro a while before entering here — He was setting up the things needed for resurrection. Lucien was quite surprised. Putting aside the crystal, Lucien hurried up to collect the remaining materials and divine items.

From the line shown in the crystal ball, Lucien knew that the resurrection had not started yet, because he had frozen Ramiro's soul.

Lucien collected more Adamantine, Mythril, Soul Stone, and Blood Steel than he thought. Although the Meteoric Iron left was not a lot, it was enough for Lucien. Also, Lucien found a precious flower called Annocheer for fixing his Health Belt. Now, all he needed was some Ice Iron.

Suddenly, the entire palace started shaking so hard that Lucien almost fell to the ground. Black miasma poured in, dissolving everything.

What did Francis do?

The domain had started breaking down!

The situation suddenly became very dangerous. Lucien hurriedly turned to his Host Star of Destiny to find a way out using prophecy.

The stars changed the order, and the light of the crystal ball pointed to the secret tunnel Asin went into.

Lucien was a bit surprised to see that the secret tunnel was not for digging into the realm but rather the way to exist. But now there was no time for him to think about other plans. Casting Speed on himself, he dashed into the tunnel.

Along the tunnel, there were specters trapped inside the walls. The distorted faces extended their pale arms, trying to grab Lucien, but Lucien was too fast for them. The specters left behind were soon devoured by the collapse. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

At the end of the tunnel, there was a hall, where a headless death knight rushed out directly at Lucien. The realm was collapsing, and the death knight had gone mad.

Lucien pointed at the knight with his right hand, and a jade-green ray shot out.

The death knight was too insane to dodge, and the green ray hit the death knight right in front of his chest. Instantly, its body dissolved into the tiny green light spots and disappeared.

The sixth-circle spell, Dissociation!

It seemed that the guards here had also been greatly weakened as the realm collapsed. Lucien wondered how Asin left this place. But since Asin even knew the existence of the secret chamber, He must have been well-prepared.

At the bottom of the palace, there was a huge black gate. The gate was so tightly closed as if nothing could open it.

Chasing behind Lucien was the overwhelming black miasma like waves, quietly devouring everything in its way.

Lucien started chanting silently. The invisible magic waves reached the gate and distorted it.

The part of the gate which had affected became translucent like it was a piece of black glass.

Lucien ran up to it and hit the glass with his right shoulder, and the gate collapsed like real glass!

The black pieces fell onto the ground, and Lucien used all of his strength and jumped out.

The sixth-circle spell, Dulag's Glass!

Lucien then felt the coldness of river water.

He looked back and saw that the realm of the Lord of Underworld had disappeared completely. He somehow had this feeling and took out the crystal containing Ramiro's soul and saw that the piece of flesh inside was wriggling, and the soul was swelling, as if it was going to explode.

Lucien was quite shocked and became quite anxious.

Not knowing what was going on, Lucien cast a spell named Sea Cloak and swam towards the place he located indicated in the crystal ball.

He could leave no chance to Ramiro!

The place was not far away, but before Lucien arrived, the crystal piece had melted, together with the soul and the flesh.

Coming to a huge rock in the river, Lucien approached the bank in great caution, knowing that Ramiro might have come back to life again.

Pushing the water plants aside, the look on Lucien's blanked out. He did not see Ramiro here. Instead, there was a young girl. Her blond hair was tied into a ponytail on the right and hung down onto her shoulder. Beside her was a long sword on black fire, and she was holding a strange-shaped tree branch, on which there was a dark piece of meat.

She was roasting the meat on the black fire of the sword.

"What are you doing here?" A strange feeling of intimacy made Lucien ask this question.

The young girl turned around. Her scarlet eyes looked at Lucien seriously as if Lucien just asked a question that was too obvious.

"I'm making beef jerky."

Chapter 482: Hiding

Chapter 482: Hiding

“... Beef jerky...” Lucien’s expression uncontrollably twisted a bit. If his prophecy did not go wrong, that dark piece of meat was exactly a part of Ramiro’s body which he prepared in advance for his resurrection. However, it had now been roasted by this young girl.

Yet somehow, Lucien did not feel disgusted, only amused.

Lucien felt that Ramiro was still lucky to some degree. In the middle of the wilderness, his flesh could have been taken away by a jackal. Comparatively speaking, being made into a piece of beef jerky did not seem as bad.

The scarlet-eyed girl picked up the tree branch and munched on the meat. It did not take her long before swallowing it down. Then she patted on her belly, looking still a bit not fully satisfied.

“I’m starving...”

Lucien was about to prevent the girl from eating random things she found in the wilderness like this, but seeing the young girl’s good appetite, he did not know what to say.

Blond hair, scarlet eyes, genderless beauty, and the fact that she could easily digest the flesh of a radiant knight... Lucien believed that he knew who this young girl was.

“Alterna?” He asked cautiously.

If the young girl was indeed Alterna, it would explain why Lucien felt the strange sense of intimacy and why he felt that someone was watching him before.

The blond girl stood up, using the long sword wrapped with the black fire as her walking stick. She stared at Lucien as if she had known him for a quite long time and complained seriously.

“I’m starving.”

“What do you need? Blood? A radiant knight’s flesh?” Lucien wondered if Alterna was still during the period of recovery after the fall.

Hearing Lucien’s question, the young girl frowned slightly and recalled the taste of the ‘beef jerky’ she made. Then she shook her head. “Don’t like it.”

Lucien was again speechless, although he was facing probably the most powerful existence in this world. He asked in patience, “then what do you want? What can make you recover?”

The blond-haired girl looked both indifferent and serious. “I want the cheese you confined.”

Her red eyes lit up in eagerness.

Cheese? When did he confine cheese? Lucien was confused. But soon he realized what happened. “Did you kill the Lord of Underworld?”

Lucien had so far only used Confinement once in this world, and that was for restraining the Lord of Underworld.

The girl nodded elegantly. “Yes. I want cheese like that.”

“So you need godhoods? Any kind of godhood? Or only those related to the Silver Moon, Death, and Resurrection? How much power do you still have? How long can it still sustain?” Lucien had basically made sure that the young girl was Alterna, the Silver Moon, and he hurriedly threw all the questions out.

Alterna snuffled a bit, and her body became a bit transparent. “Only the cheese like that.”

Then her body started looking more translucent and wavy. Her red eyes were half-closed.

“I need some sleep. Watch out for the Single-eyed.”

Then she turned into a sharp flash of silver moonlight and sneaked into Lucien's left hand before Lucien even realized it.

Lucien felt the will of Alterna — profound, boundless, and almighty. For a second, Alterna's will overwhelmed Lucien, and his mind blanked out. When everything in his mind settled down and he came back to his full consciousness, Lucien saw that there was a mark of the silver moon on the back his left hand. But soon the moon mark also dimmed and melted into his skin, vanishing finally as if nothing ever happened.

Lucien took a deep breath as he was shocked by how a demigod existed in this world. Alterna was now living in his own blood and flesh! This could never be achieved by any existing substances. However, if the form of a demigod was only soul, will, or spiritual imprint, why did the young girl, Alterna, look so real and how could she digest flesh?

Focalizing his spiritual power, Lucien carefully checked his left hand. After a while, he finally sensed the almighty will with the horrible power settling in his left hand.

Lucien tried to wake Alterna to know more, but there was no response at all.

Therefore, Lucien had to make his own guesses:

It seemed that Alterna was very weak right now. The fall had severely damaged Alterna and She would not be able to recover in a short period of time. Sleeping was Alterna's current method for sustainment.

It should have been a while since Alterna started watching the Lord of Underworld, or Alterna would not have been able to know the new divine realm of the Lord of Underworld. Perhaps, Alterna was the "thing" mentioned by Asin that was found and brought back by the Lord of Underworld. However, the fact that Alterna did not immediately consume "the tasty cheese" indicated that Alterna was either too weak to kill the Lord of Underworld or that She had been waiting for the chance to kill Him with one quick strike so that the attention of the other false gods wouldn't be attracted.

The latter seemed more reasonable as it should be Alterna who unlocked Confinement and killed the Lord of Underworld in the end. Therefore, Lucien guesses that after taking in the godhood of Death, and by falling into sleep for a while, Alterna could more or less accumulate some fighting power. However, if Alterna wanted a faster recovery or even to resume the power of the demigod, She would need abundant similar godhoods. Then, if Alterna could find the mysterious existence from the World of Souls and take in Its power, She should be able to recover in the shortest period of time.

Lucien knew that as long as the silver moon was still hanging up in the sky, the God of Silver Moon would always be able to return from “Nothingness”. However, it would take too long, even too long for the eternal God of Silver Moon.

But who was the Single-eyed? Lucien frowned, thinking over Alterna’s last words.

Suddenly, Lucien looked up at the direction where the Temple of War sat.

Lucien remembered that the statue of Antanas, the Lord of War, was a middle-aged, single-eyed man.

Was Alterna talking about the Lord of War? Had the Lord of Underworld told the Lord of War the situation of Alterna? It made sense, but... but there was no need for Alterna to warn Lucien about this. Lucien himself would never go and find Antanas to bring great trouble to himself. If Ell wanted to kill Antanas, he would always send Francis and Jacob first to the front.

Also, vampires were always proud and even arrogant. As their Primordial Ancestor, Alterna should be the same. Even if Alterna was now severely injured and might take caution in Her actions, Lucien did not believe that Alterna would admit it to him.

Unless there was a bigger story hiding underneath... The look on Lucien’s face was very serious, and he believed that he had got the rough answer.

Shaking his head, Lucien calmed himself down. He stared at his left hand and wondered if from now on he should call this hand “the Left Hand of God”.

At this time, the look on Lucien’s face suddenly changed. He immediately activated the mask and turned himself into a fish hiding among the water plants.

From the almost fully-collapsed realm, a cluster of black haze flew out.

It was Francis.

Francis’s face looked very pale. It looked like he was severely injured. However, he also looked very excited. Maybe it was because he had found something important in the palace.

Looking back at the ruins and checking around carefully, Francis shook his head and sighed. “Such a pity that the talented Leviathan died in there.”

Obviously, Francis thought that both Leviathan and Anheuse had died in the collapsion.

Lucien was not planning on reuniting with Francis at all. After the fight against Ramiro and running into Alterna, Lucien had decided to give up the identity of Leviathan and put himself into the crowd, so he could hide better. The plan on watching how a god evolved had to be abandoned from now on.

Now that night watcher Ramiro had gone missing, and Ell had taken in the godhood of the God of Moon, the Church would very likely send more powerful priests here, probably even including a Grand Cardinal. Then, if Lucien was still one the apostles of Ell, he would definitely be closely investigated. What was worse was that, if Prince Dracula had also arrived here, there might be a connection between him and Alterna within a certain distance. That would put Lucien under great risk!

Therefore, Lucien decided to take the opportunity and hide in the crowd to be safe.

However, simply hiding would not work for Lucien for too long.

The more hungry Alterna became, the more likely problems would occur. Also, the cities and villages were still too small for Lucien to hide safely under the investigation from a legendary like Dracula. Lucien knew that his following step of the plan would be turning the current situation into a big stir when the timing was proper, big enough to catch the Congress's attention. Once he could come into contact with the Congress of Magic again, he would be safe.

Even if the Congress would not be able to locate Lucien over such a great distance, once there were lots of night watchers and radiant knights chasing after him, Lucien would be able to catch one and get the information of which areas were under the control of the Congress through harsh investigation.

Facing the current circumstance and the underlying risks, Lucien temporarily gave up without hesitation his observation of how Ell grew into a true god.

After confirming that Francis had indeed left, Lucien turned him into a common man and sneaked into the city of Husum. With the help of magic, he became a legal resident of the city.

.....

"Did you hear that? A few days ago, there were black, grey, and white waves gushing out in Solna River. In the waves, there were monsters that don't die! Rotten monsters!" Said a white-haired old man mysteriously to a few strangers in the early evening.

"Really?" Asked the strangers. Their life was quite dull in most cases, and thus they were especially interested in this kind of news and legends.

The old man said with great certainty, "I was told by someone else, but it was the priest of the God of Love the Beauty who saw it with his own eyes! Also, there was the true silver moon at the bottom of the river, not a reflection!"

"Which part of the river?" Asked a tough man who laboured on the docks.

The old man looked around and lowered his voice. “The part beside the Temple of War...”

The short man gasped. “Was it the Lord of Redemption? After taking away the godhood of the God of Moon, he’s coming back for the Lord of War?!”

The old man said alertly, “maybe.”

A while later, the old man found an excuse and hurriedly left to avoid attracting too much attention.

In the dark corner, the old man turned into an ordinary-looking man. It was Lucien, who had been hiding in the city of Husum.

Chapter 483: Who Is Behind

Lucien, who now looked just like an ordinary man, walked along Solna River to the slum, where many secret altars were located.

Those false gods including the God of Storm and the Mother God of the Earth were unwilling to give up this rich and prosperous source of believers just like this, thus they had left their secret preachers here. Lucien had been looking for them, in an attempt to find out how these false gods were doing, and thus he could infer how much Ell and Francis had progressed.

Lucien had been spreading out the story, half true and half fake, for over half a month. From today, Lucien was going to stop and leave the rumors to ferment on their own. The merchants and traders would carry the words to the rest of the places in this world. Those who were paying attention would notice.

Lucien planned to wait patiently from now on, waiting for a chance to get out of this dangerous situation.

Lucien felt the moist evening wind on his face coming from Solna River. At nightfall, the air had become cooler.

Suddenly, his left hand twitched uncontrollably. Lucien's head buzzed, and he felt coldness climbing up from his lower back.

Lucien was very concerned. This had not been the first time. And it was getting more and more frequent these days.

Lucien had thought that it was because Alterna was about to wake up after the half month's sleep or was hungry, and he was about to try to find a relevant godhood to feed Alterna. Yet after the repeated twitches today, he realized that the threatening coldness came from himself!

Lucien wondered if Alterna was trying to remind him something. Maybe Alterna had found something wrong with his body after sneaking into his left hand. Was it because there was something imbalanced between his body and soul?

No matter what, Lucien knew that the problem was from himself. He was very concerned, as he was well aware that there were countless cursing spells in the main material world!

He had to figure this out tonight.

Lucien put aside all his concerns and walked into the slum wearing his linen robe. This time, he disguised himself as a secret follower of the Mother God of earth.

"For your prayers?" Said a pauper walking past him in a low voice. The pauper cast a look at Lucien and showed him the direction.

Lucien whispered. "Yes, I'm looking for Priest Angrist."

Following the way the pauper showed, Lucien walked down the shabby street and ran into a few more followers, who further directed him to an ordinary-looking mud hut.

Lucien touched his face, the face that did not belong to him. It felt nice to have a face that was recognized by the other followers — The first time when he came here, he had to use a series of mind spells to make his way.

Pushing open the door of the mud hut, Lucien saw a skinny old man who was kneeling on the floor and kissing the ground.

"Priest Angrist, sorry for my interrupting," said Lucien politely.

Angrist's wrinkled face was written with a big smile, "don't mind it. I am very glad to hear that two false gods have fallen." Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Since the churches were now preaching secretly, the number of potential followers had been greatly reduced. As a result, the conflict between the six churches had become harsh and direct, and the relationship between local priests deteriorated quickly.

"What? Two false gods have fallen?" Lucien was truly shocked.

Angrist stood up. "When I was praying earlier this morning, the Mother God sent me the message, but I thought I misinterpreted it. Yet half an hour ago, it was finally confirmed that the statue of the God of Storm and the God of Love had cracked, and their priests had also lost the revered power."

"The Lord of Redemption did it?" Lucien was surprised to see how fast Ell and Francis were taking actions.

Angrist nodded, grinning. "Yes."

Seeing Angrist's attitude, Lucien suddenly realized that some of the six false gods had betrayed Their alliance. At least, the Mother God of Earth sure had paid allegiance to Ell. The falling of the two false gods was the proof of the Mother God of Earth's loyalty to Ell, or Ell and Francis would not have made such huge progress already.

"May the Mother bless us," said Lucien.

Angrist drew a cross in front of his chest. "Now we should address Her as 'the Angle of Earth.'"

Angrist's behavior amused Lucien.

Angrist was not planning to hide the news from the followers. In such tough days, they needed good news to be exhilarated.

Lucien had expected this. He bowed again, smiling sincerely.

After leaving the slum, Lucien changed his look again in the woods beside the river. In the darkness, he returned to the same slum again from another direction. This time, his target was the secret group of Ell's followers, and his goal was to confirm what he had just been told.

As the previous initiator, Lucien knew the several liaisons in the city of Husum. Lucien got most of his information from them after his faked death.

When he was very close to the slum, Lucien heard someone pacing back and forth in the corner. Lucien turned his sight slightly and saw through the shadow a young man wearing a long linen robe.

No, it was a woman. Lucien's eyes slightly squinted. The woman in disguise triggered Lucien's interest.

Lucien had been secretly looking for suspicious outsiders recently, hoping to find a night watcher to get the information he needed. Obviously, the woman was the very target that Lucien would pay special attention to.

Lucien kept walking. He did not stop until he had entered the slum and found a dark corner where no one was present. Lucien then calmed down and cast True Seeing, then he changed his look again and walked out of the slum, pretending that he was in a hurry.

When he returned to the corner where the woman stood, Lucien pretended that he was just taking a casual glance, but his pupils were now deep and dark.

True Seeing was a powerful sixth-circle Astrology spell that allowed its caster to see through illusions, invisibilities, transformations, darkness, obscurity, reflections, secret doors, and a few special dimensions, and its validity depended on the caster's power. The woman's rank was much lower than that of Lucien, so her disguise was easily seen through by Lucien. She turned out to be one of Lucien's acquaintances.

She was Sophia.

Lucien instantly recognized that the woman who looked as innocent and gorgeous as a fairy was Princess Sophia of the Holy Heilz Empire. As soon as Lucien saw her, he recalled her horribly powerful father, Rudolf II, the legendary who undoubtedly had partially touched the secret of the seven ancient demons and primitive gods. It gave Lucien a headache

Thus, when Lucien first recognized Sophia, he immediately gave up the idea of capturing her and interrogating her on the information about the Congress of Magic's whereabouts. He had learned his lesson last time in the underground palace: It was possible that the mysterious Rudolf II had projected himself on his daughter.

Lucien slightly shook his head and sped up to leave.

Having no idea that she just got lucky, Sophia was still pacing in the corner. Feeling disgusted, she did not want to step into the smelly slum at all.

It was not long before Lucien ran into his second acquaintance after he left the slum. When the man walked out of the woods, Lucien recognized him immediately.

It was Francis!

And Francis walked to the corner where Sophia was at.

Lucien wondered since when Francis and Sophia had hooked up with each other. Lucien's wondering slowed down his pace, and Francis instantly looked over. Lucien had to restrain his thoughts and keep walking, pretending he was simply passing by. At this time, another man wearing a long linen robe walked out of the slum. He seemed to be gloomy and tyrannical.

Francis kept staring at Lucien's back until Lucien had walked out far away. Then, he finally looked back and nodded to the man and Sophia.

"Good, both of you're on time. Let's go to another place."

.....

After walking for a while, Lucien turned himself into a tiny river fly and flew back to the corner. However, Francis, Sophia, and the man were all gone, and there was no clue left.

Lucien sighed and canceled his plan on visiting Ell's follower today. He then returned to the place where he lived in the civilian zone.

Closing the windows and turning on the alert magic circles, Lucien ruled out all his thoughts on Francis and Sophia, focusing on only himself. He had to find out where this feeling of freezing coldness came from, or he would be very concerned day and night!

Since the feeling of coldness was very likely to have something to do with the power of evilness and death. Lucien decided to give it a try.

His body was instantly covered with a layer of silver moonlight, and his muscles bulked moderately, forming nice curves. The aura around him became oppressive and tense.

Sixth-circle spell, Baler's Transformation!

The spell was produced by the sorcerers in the ancient Magic Empire reflecting on their multiple failed attempts on blood powers combination. Baler's Transformation could transform a sorcerer into a knight of the same level in a period of time, and the power of the knight depended on the caster's own bloodline. Right now, no matter in terms of his strength, agility, velocity, or his willpower and the ability of dematerialization into moonlight, Lucien was now a real level-six radiant knight.

He took Pale Justice out from his magic pouch, took a few deep breathes, and slowly lifted the sword. But this time, his target was himself.

The ordinary-looking sword contained dreadful power. Before it reached Lucien's forehead, Lucien's heart was already beating very fast, and there was a power within his body that was urging him to stop immediately.

At this time, a feeling of coldness and repression came up from Lucien's left hand and refreshed his mind, strengthening Lucien's willpower so that he was no longer affected by the deep fear. With great determination, Lucien put the blade against his own forehead and cut in inch by inch.

A sharp pain came from Lucien's forehead, but he did not stop.

Suddenly, Pale Justice lit up in a metallic color. The power coming from the sword was more than warm and determined. Lucien heard a bitter scream, and his body and soul suddenly became relaxed.

Lucien instantly stopped cutting in. He could clearly feel the sharp, cold blade on his forehead.

Meanwhile, behind Lucien, a distorted pale human face vaped in the air, screaming in agony.

Someone left this in Lucien's body!

No wonder Ramiro could track Lucien all the way here!

This was by no means a coincidence!

Although Lucien was always very gentle and reserved, he looked quite angry now. Blood dribbled down from his forehead, making him look rather hideous.

The person who did this did not modify Lucien's memory. Maybe the person was afraid of seeing Lucien's many weird and absurd thoughts.

After all, what "the Headcrusher" was thinking was very likely to explode other people's heads at any time.

Chapter 484: Change in the Night.

Chapter 484: Change in the Night.

The Congress' research in the field of space and time was lacking and had not yet formed a complete theory. Thus, it was impossible for the arcanists of the Congress of Magic to determine where Lucien would be teleported to after the disruption caused by Ramiro would. On top of that, Lucien himself is the Secretive. Due to its special abilities as well as this world's disturbance to long-distance magic and prophecy, Fernando and Hathaway had yet to find him.

Lucien concluded that this surveillance specter had fused with his body and soul before he had entered the Portal to Alternate Realm.

Otherwise, how was the man behind the scenes able to find him before Fernando and the Prophet, and let the wraith possess him before he recovered?

As another expert arcanist in the field of Necromancy, Lucien knew that since this specter could be "executed" by the Pale Justice, then his mentor Fernando must have been able to sense it when they met. Therefore, the wraith must have possessed him sometime after Fernando stepped into the Portal to Alternate Realm and before Lucien was forced into it.

It seemed that the most possible explanation would be that the man behind the scenes did something to Ramiro's body so that when he self-exploded, the specter seized the opportunity and possessed Lucien. The explosion would also help to erase any trace, and since that Lucien had been forced into the Portal to Alternate Realm, even if Hathaway suspected anything, no trace was left to be found.

The man behind the scenes was aware of the exact time that the Portal would remain open. He was also able to let Ramiro carry out the assassination without knowing that he had been possessed. And finally, he is apt at this method of surveillance. Lucien wondered what Thanatos, the Demigod-lich or the Eye of Curse would want to know from him — Fabricating memory or strong hinting could both make Ramiro do things without realizing that they weren't his own decisions.

Pieces of memory flashed in Lucien's mind. He was trying to check if he had missed anything.

Suddenly, it dawned on Lucien:

“When I was passing through the underground ruins of the dwarfs, there was a senior-rank specter from the World of Souls that ambushed me. I had assumed that it was because Rhine's plan had been discovered.”

“When Adol was captured by Thanatos and sent to Allyn, he did not have any memories about the fact that Maskelyne and Mr. Rhine were trapped in the World of Souls. I had assumed that Adol did not hold a rank high enough to know about the deeper secrets. Thinking back now, I'm sure I had misjudged the situation then. ”

“From the deep memories of that senior-rank specter one could see that, while it loathed Adol, it could only curse him to be cleansed by the Saint Truth. It must be that its rank is lower than that of Adol. Could have been his assistant or subordinate. If even he knew about the plans of Mr Rhine, then Adol must have known about it too.”

“If Adol really didn't know anything, then why did the senior-rank specter ambush me? To avenge its master Felipe, whom he described with the word ‘dumb?’”

“The two events form a paradox. The best explanation would be that Adol did know a lot. He knew that Maskelyne and Rhine were trapped in the World of Souls. He also knew how they were related to me, which is what caused him to target me. However, he no longer knew about these things after he was sent to Allyn. Someone must have erased his memory. ”

“Considering all these, His Excellency the Eye of Curse is not likely to be the man behind the scenes. As for Thanatos, even if he was not the one committing the act, he at least allowed it to happen. Is he planning to use my connection with Alterna or the mysterious existence of the World of Souls to find Them in advance?"

"No wonder Ramiro came to investigate at Erdo. No wonder he could find Anheuse so quickly. No wonder that he attempted to attack me time and again. That's just way too many coincidences."

Lucien took a deep breath and tried to remain calm. The idea that someone of legendary rank was keeping an eye over him made him feel very uneasy.

Admittedly, other grand arcanists could also be the suspect. If the specter had possessed him before Fernando had passed through the Portal and Fernando did not detect it, then Lucien's deductions would crumble. Hathaway who was guarding the Portal also had enough time and ability to tamper with such things. However, comparatively speaking, these two were very unlikely to have been the culprit.

Given Hathaway's character, her rather average Necromancy, and the bright future ahead of her brought about by "New Alchemy", given the times Lucien spent together with Fernando and the fact that Fernando's character has remained constant for several centuries, Lucien chose to believe them.

Now that Alterna of the Silver Moon has appeared, but neither Thanatos nor the Demigod-lich had acted. Lucien wondered if this meant that their main target was the mysterious existence in the World of Souls?

But Lucien quickly denied this thought. When he first passed through the realm of the Lord of Underworld, Alterna had already noticed him but didn't come out to meet him. Instead, She had entrusted Herself to his care, sleeping inside his hand as She is now. It probably wasn't because She was worried that Lucien would get in the way of her killing the Lord of Underworld though. Now that thinking about it, Alterna could have noticed that someone was spying on Lucien. The collapse of the underworld realm rendered the surveillance temporarily ineffective, and Alterna then suppressed the specter before showing up in Her true form. Otherwise, She would have hidden with that "beef jerky" and Lucien would have never been able to find her.”

Lucien felt a chill down his spine once this thought occurred to him. It wasn't because the specter still lived, but out of genuine fear. He had recklessly slain the specter. The legendary that sent it must have noticed.

Lucien immediately jumped straight out of the window. He could only hope that the legendary is hiding in a faraway place in fear of alerting the silver moon and the World of Souls.

Lucien found himself in a gloomy forest. However, with his radiant knight transformation, he passed through it in a jiffy. He then jumped into a river and transformed into a fish, and swam with the currents for a while.

After a while, Lucien came up to the shore and used magic to erase his traces. Then he jumped back into the river and headed towards the place where the divine temples congregated. Lucien had made his decision — If the legendary sorcerer was able to track his movements, then Lucien would lead him into the Single-eyed that Alterna mentioned. It was a desperate attempt at survival.

After he had reached the divine temple area, Lucien deliberately slowed down. He focused on sensing the surroundings, focusing on any changes to his left hand. If he had been able to escape the legendary arcanist tracing behind, then there was no need for him to provoke the Lord of War Antanas, as Lucien was confident that his special abilities of the Secretive coupled with the Silver Moon's self-cloaking would be able to let him escape this conspiracy.

He continued swimming like that for a while. Suddenly, Lucien sensed intense shaking in the water, as though there was an earthquake nearby.

Poking his head out from the water reeds, Lucien found that the mountain ranges on the outskirts of the city were enveloped by thunder. The air of death blocked out the moon, and the towering mountain peak collapsed.

Lucien surmised that senior-ranks were fighting there.

Could it be that Ell and the rest are trying to kill the God of Thunder and Lightning?

Immediately afterward, Lucien heard an angry roar. A black arrow flew out from the Temple of War.

As the distance between was too great, Lucien was unable to sense if the “Arrow of Antanas” hit its mark. However, the air of death did seem to tarnish a lot.

Then, a cloud of smoke rose from the Temple of War. Accompanied by the smell of conquest and the sound of the horn, Antanas bolted towards the outskirts of the city. Within a few seconds, he vanished into the air of death.

At the same time, from the Divine Temple of “the Star of Dawn and Dusk”, a bright star rose and chased after the Lord of War.

However, when it tried to pass the Solna river, a terrifying black haze suddenly enveloped it.

The brilliant star flashed once more before falling from the sky, crashing into the riverbed and revealing a mature and sexy figure.

Asin asked in terror, “Francis?”

Before he could finish, A bright, clear silver moon rose from the woods and lunged itself at Him.

By a fraction of hair, Asin managed to avoid the main impact. He jumped into mid-air, and His face was even paler. The scimitar in His hand had been snapped.

“Ell?”

With his exclamation, countless starlights appeared around Ell, who was barely tangible. The starlights twisted into the shape of a cage, attempting to trap Ell inside.

A concentrated air of death oozed from Ell, dissipating the starlight cage. Ell said calmly, “Francis, help me tie him down. I will use the Command to take over his godhood. My incarnation, the Angle of Thunder and Lightning, the Angle of Earth, and the Angle of Wisdom cannot delay Antanas for long. After I absorb his godhood, I will be able to go toe to toe with Antanas.”

Lucien who was still hidden in the water deeply approved the incoming battle, for it would help him cover his tracks, and he would then wait for an opportunity to escape. Meanwhile, he secretly wondered if it was Sophia who had planned all this for the false gods to take Ell’s side.

As soon as Ell finished his sentence, a deep, rich sound asked, “Really?”

“Antanas?” Ell was shocked to see the towering, single-eyed man step out from the Temple of War. He carried a terrifying war hammer and gazed down at Ell with the steadiness of a mountain. Behind him was another well-built young man, the Sun God Bero.

Surprisingly, it was the true divinity of Antanas. He had sent out only his incarnation. What’s more, he had not even taken the opportunity to ambush Ell.

Antanas smiled cunningly. “Don’t pretend to be surprised. I know that Bero is lying to me. Your target is not Asin, but me. Come at me together, let me see what gave you your confidence!”

“What?” Bero took a few steps back in shock. His shield raised unconsciously.

He was indeed in cahoots with Ell. Pretending to be a double agent, he divulged to the Lord of War that Ell and his lot are plotting against the God of Love and Beauty, Asin. Bero told Antanas to use a special method to mix up his incarnation and his true divinity and hide within the Temple of War while waiting for the opportunity to give Ell and his lot a fatal blow.

The real plan, on the other hand, targeted straight for Antanas. As long as Bero could take advantage of the time when Antanas attacked Ell and let his guard down, He could land a fatal blow. Then, they would team up against Antanas. However, Antanas seemed to know the real plan.

Who had betrayed them? Why was Antanas so calm?

Francis calmed down. “The plan was simply there to make things easier. Since you have seen through our ploy, we would face you in honest battle.”

In the surrounding darkness, three silhouettes appeared. They were that of a gloomy man, an elder in white robes, and a breathtaking beauty who was wearing purple armor and equipped with sword and shield.

“Natasha?” Lucien, who was still underwater, almost cried out in surprise.

Chapter 485: Pulled In

The dark purple Violet Guardian, the pure black battle dress, the small and exquisite yet dark and thick holy shield, the silver-white longsword etched with simple patterns, and her chiseled features coupled with resolute deep silver-purple eyes... At that moment, Natasha was totally different from her friendly hospitable self. Instead, she was emanating a foreboding air.

Suppressing his surprise, he wondered with mixed feelings of joy and worry why he and Natasha could run into each other at a place like this, and where were the Violet Duchy gold knights and radiant knights under Natasha's command. Under normal circumstances, the South Church would never let the order of knights to be jumbled up. The nobles were only faithful to their own masters. The senior-rank personnel could make arrangements for them, but they're by no means obligated to abide by them.

Natasha must have entered this alternate dimension as the leader of the Violet Duchy's gold knights and radiant knights, so why was she unprotected? Why did she leave her troops?

No, Lucien quickly corrected himself — there was still someone protecting her. Lucien noticed that behind Natasha was a silhouette that almost melded into her shadows. It was "Blue Tide" Camil in a black dress.

Ramiro did not see Francis as his ally, which means that he was most likely from the North Church. Why was Natasha collaborating with him? The elder in white robes was definitely a senior-rank priest, and the gloomy man seemed to the night watcher ranking nineteenth, level-eight radiant knight, the "Fire of Purification" Dannel. They would never side with Francis.

Lucien was puzzled. Natasha's brother had died in the war against the Northern heretics, which in turn caused her mother to pass away early. She would never ally with people of the North Church.

Many night watchers kept their bloodline, history, and real name under wraps. However, those with a high ranking were rather famous, and their code name and real name were known by most large organizations. As a result, Lucien had been able to find the identity of his attacker in the spirit library after Ramiro's self explosion. It mattered little whether Ramiro was his real name. That wealth of information provided by the spirit library also allowed Lucien to deduce from the aura and demeanor of the gloomy man that he was the Fire of Purification.

Two royal knights of the South Church, a senior-rank night watcher, a senior-rank from the South Church, and a radiant knight who seemed to belong to the North Church's Executioners — this combination seemed quite strange to Lucien. Maybe it was Sophia who brought this band of people together to form this temporary alliance? Lucien remembered Sophia who had remained out of sight so far. There was for sure something fishy about her father Rudolf II. She herself was not a devout follower either. Coupled with her nobility, she was a prime candidate to become a strategist.

The battlefield was quiet for a short while. Francis and his lot were scared and confused by the strange behavior of the Lord of War, while Antanas looked at them with a mocking smile. He surveyed the surroundings before taunting. "Just the lot of you? Come at me together!"

He raised the huge war hammer, and the surroundings were instantly transformed into a gory battlefield. Knights on horseback and on foot swarmed out from behind Him. They looked fanatic, battle-ready, and terrifying. In a mere second, he had assembled a banner of knights of at least grand knight status.

Everyone killed by Antanas and his subordinates who had died in battle would enter His semi-illusory frontier of war and participate in endless crusade until even their souls perish.

The key difference between the gold knights and radiant knights was that of the semi-illusory willpower frontier, which could span for several hundred meters. Antanas was undoubtedly developing his powers in the direction of knights.

"Kill!" Antanas roared.

"Kill!" His cry was echoed by the countless knights behind him. Their cries converged into a deafening cry, their lust for battle was so imposing that even senior-ranks took a step back involuntarily.

I am the Lord of War, I am the Leader of Armies!

Antanas and his men charged towards Natasha. As a divine-blooded who honed his skills on the battlefield, he could easily sense that she was the weakest among the enemy

Flags waving, spears raised, and divine spells flew. Francis, Danniell, the senior-rank priest, and Camil all felt their willpower robbed, causing them to react a split-second slower than usual.

Natasha was instead visibly excited. She did not avoid the brunt of the charge, rather, she jumped directly at the war hammer head-on with her shield raised high.

Bang! A small but horrifying crack appeared at the point where the black shield collided with the war hammer. The space around them seemed to congeal and solidify. With the point of impact as the center, shockwaves radiated relentlessly outward, and divine powers and spears from outside the sphere could not penetrate the solidified space.

Natasha's features were tense. She looked so lonely, yet so determined.

"Doesn't she know to dodge! Daring to fight a level-nine gold knight front-on when she's a mere level seven! Even if she had the replica of the level-nine Shield of Truth, she shouldn't be this reckless!" Lucien cursed silently. A part of him wanted to drag Natasha back from the battlefield.

Although she had risen to level seven last year, the difference in power between her and Antanas was still immense. Further, there were plenty of level eight radiant knights around to protect her! She should really take a lesson from Sophia, who was not even showing herself in a situation like this after receiving Rudolf II's teachings.

A tome of heavy divine aura appeared in front of the white-robed elder. The pages turned rapidly while divine light flashed. A huge column of light connecting sky and earth then struck at Antanas.

A layer of what looked like rust and blood appeared on Antanas' body, shielding him from the Sunstrike. However, the knights who were charging with him were evaporated.

He attempted to strike at the elder, but Natasha would never let an opportunity like this to slip away. Her silver-purple eyes were cold, and she struck with her longsword. An otherworldly crack that looked like it could sever anything appeared in front of the swing.

Antanas's gaze tightened and forcibly changed his direction, evading the strike. Then, he struck a flurry of blows at Natasha with the warhammer. In the surrounding frontier of war, the spirit knights materialized once more.

At the same time, the darkness in the sky turned into the sea, crashing down on Antanas.

Simultaneously, silent white flames rose from the ground and lunged at Antanas.

The pages of the Cannon in front of the elder were flipping rapidly, and lights kept flashing. They were continuously buffing Natasha with divine power, blessing, war tide, and the like.

Their only chance of winning was if she could bind Antanas with her replica.

After Camil and Fire of Purification joined the battle, Natasha found some room to breathe. She shook her shield and readjusted her form. It looked like the relentless barrage of attacks by Antanas had turned her body numb with pain.

Francis looked at Bero, and communicated to him via a divine spell akin to Soul Connection. "If you can help them bind Antanas, I will then assist my lord to kill Asin. After my lord absorbs the "Hidden Death and Resurrection" godhood from Asin, he would rise to the level of Antanas and the situation would be under our control". "No Problem."

When the Lord of War appeared, the God of Love and Beauty Asin's face was filled with heartfelt joy. Upon seeing that Antanas was tied down by his enemies, her expression changed a couple of times. Taking advantage of the fact that Asin was still trapped by the starlight cage, she tried to flee.

"It would do Antanas the most good for me to not be captured!" She thought to herself.

"Come back here!" Francis, who had been keeping an eye on her, transformed into a Hydra, and a thick black mist enveloped the surroundings.

Starlight shone but immediately dimmed. Knowing that it would be difficult to break out directly and not wanting to fight with Francis, Asin suddenly plunged down and tried to escape via the Solna river.

"I command you, freeze!" Ell had managed to escape from the starlight cage and used the Command that he had newly acquired after absorbing the God of Storm.

Starlight radiated from Asin's body, and her eyes turned lifeless for a while. The controlled plunge suddenly lost direction, and she fell into the river.

"Chance!" Ell and Francis both rushed towards the Solna River.

Lucien looked at the scene resignedly. Asin had landed right in front of him!

Just as Lucien tried to transform and escape in an effort to remain hidden, his left hand raised involuntarily.

Lucien seemed to have heard something similar to "Cheese!"

This isn't the time to be thinking about food! Lucien cried silently. However, his left hand betrayed him and his transformation failed. His left hand pulled him towards Asin.

Asin had barely recovered from the freezing spell before she saw a handsome man with black eyes appear from the river. His aura was so great and powerful, it caused even the false god to tremble. It was a feeling of meeting one's natural predator.

Driven by fear, Asin unleashed a torrent of divine powers. However, the hand that was reaching towards her was unaffected by the attacks. It penetrated the protection sphere and landed on her neck.

All divine powers disintegrated upon contact with Lucien's left hand!

Ell and Francis halted halfway in their rush when they saw the flashes of divine power in the river. Asin seemed to have unleashed her potential, and a scary one at that. They slowed down, guarding themselves against a possible final attack as well as making sure that she doesn't escape via other routes.

The flashes finally died down, and they were greeted with an unbelievable scene. The beautiful and sexy Asin was held at her neck by a handsome young man, and her godhood was being slowly extracted from her.

"Who is he?" Ell and Francis were gob-smacked. Who on earth was this powerful man?

Lucien's eyes met with theirs. He shook his head resignedly and greeted them casually.

"Good Evening."

Can he say that he'd been handed the wrong script?

Chapter 486: Take Actions

Chapter 486: Take Actions

“Lucien?”

“Lucien Evans?”

Natasha, Camil, the Fire of Purification, and the rest who were sieging Antanas had all noticed what was going on here. Some were surprised and some were confused. But all the mood swings only lasted for less than a second. Facing s false god, they had to be fully devoted to the fight.

Francis, however, did not recognize Lucien immediately. Judging from how the young man grabbed Asin, Francis assumed that he was a mysterious and powerful knight. Therefore, Francis first tried to search among the names of those radiant knights and gold knights in the main material world for a match.

Power flowed into Lucien’s left hand; It was the godhood of death and resurrection. Lucien felt that Alterna was slowly awakening.

However, when the part of the godhood which was related to death and resurrection had been absorbed, and Asin’s remaining godhood of “incarnation of beauty and love” and “star of dusk and dawn” had just started emitting, Lucien sensed that Alterna had terminated the intaking process and pushed Asin away. Alterna did so to avoid the possible conflicts with the cognitive world, and what was more important was that absorbing this part of godhood would possibly result in turning to a female.

Having no idea what just happened, Asin felt that there was such a mess in Her head. When the mysterious, black-haired man grabbed Her throat, Asin thought that it was the end of everything. But why did he let Her go after taking away only part of her godhood?

Alterna was obviously being very picky about her food.

Lucien then sent Natasha a message using Whispering Wind.

At this time, Ell had recovered from the great shock and was extremely angry seeing that his own prey had been taken. With anger and greed, Ell said in his cold and resounding voice,

“I command you, to die!”

The running river water quickly turned pale, the life force of it leaking away. However, the Command spell failed to hurt Lucien at all. It seemed that Lucien’s left hand had this creepy power which turned Ell’s spell completely invalid!

What was going on? Ell took a step back, unable to believe what just happened. Ever since Ell was able to use Command, although sometimes the spell might not be able to directly kill the target, the target would at least be more or less affected. However, this time, it was totally different. It even seemed like Ell had never cast the spell!

In Ell’s eyes, the young man standing in the river was as quiet as a demon hiding in the darkness.

Suddenly, the demon in Ell’s eyes moved. Its muscles bulged as a layer of moonlight covered him. As it fiercely jumped out of the river, the demon’s left hand reached out, targeting directly at Ell Himself!

Lucien was not the kind of person who would only sign and complain when things went wrong. He knew that since he was now exposed, trying to run away would become totally useless when facing Antanas and the possible legendary sorcerer hiding around. He had to seize the chance to feed the relevant godhoods to Alterna and help Her recover, as this was his biggest hope to survive!

This time, Lucien’s action was not driven by the hungry Alterna. Instead, he had taken the initiative and turned himself into a radiant knight to launch against Ell, for Ell’s godhoods of resurrection, eternal life, moonlight, redemption, and destruction were exactly what Lucien wanted!

An almighty and supreme will spread out from Lucien’s left hand. Ell’s mind became slow as if the will was born to be invincible for

Ell. Ell was just standing there, unable to give an effective response.

“Idiot! He’s driven crazy by his own godhood!” Francis was pissed off seeing that Ell just launched such a reckless attack at the mysterious knight in the river. He was hesitant with whether he should help Ell.

But as soon as he saw Lucien jumped out of the river. Francis had made sure that the man was just a level-six radiant knight. It was probably just that he had a special blood power that could refrain godhood and divine-like spells.

Francis grabbed the heavy sword and jumped down, aiming at Lucien.

Instantly, a huge swirl seemed to appear on the ground, pulling all the black miasma in. The miasma joined together and formed a black hydra. With its mixed power of lightning, toxin, acid and so forth, the hydra fiercely charged at Lucien.

Left hand in the front, right hand grabbing Pale Justice, Lucien dodged the huge black hydra which was big enough for blocking the entire sky and then quickly sprang up from the ground. His left fist, swung by his muscular arm, punched in the miasma.

As if something just snapped, when Lucien punched in the miasma, the black miasm quickly dissipated. And the silver moon in the night sky reappeared.

The heavy sword, now covered with cracks, dropped onto the ground. Francis stumbled backward. He could not believe it.

Stamping against the ground, Lucien dashed at Francis as quickly as a flash of moonlight.

With no time for more actions, Francis hurriedly swept the heavy sword for defense.

Lucien instantly lowered his body and avoided the sword, then he punched in Francis’s chest using his left hand.

Seeing this, Francis’s body twitched and clusters of black miasma were released. He was trying to counteract the power.

Bang! The miasma could not stop Lucien's punch! The clusters of black smog suddenly became pieces of flesh!

Francis's rib bones snapped. Blood spurted out of his mouth. It was such a powerful strike that Francis was directly blown away.

Francis's bones had all broken, and his guts were severely damaged as well. Everything he could see was now covered in spots of red. He could not even move a single finger now. Yet compared with the damage on his body, the great shock and fear towards that left hand were even clearer in his mind: The power within this punching was so horrible!

Seeing that what the demon had done to Francis within a few seconds, Ell's mind was also filled with shock and fear. But at least Francis had won Ell a few seconds, so as soon as Ell got rid of the confinement from the almighty will, He turned himself into a flash of moonlight and was about to escape.

Suddenly, an elegant left hand appeared in front of Ell's eyes, on which there was a layer of cold shine. Then the hand clenched into a fist and punched at Ell's face.

"No!!!" Ell was no longer able to maintain his dignity under great fear. His face had become more than twisted because of the desperation, and many divine-like spells were activated. Ell cast some of them, and the rest of them were triggered by the divine items Ell was carrying. There were transparent force fields, flame shields, silent darkness, billowing waves of death, and swirling specters.

However, none of them could stop Lucien's left fist. With the blowing fierce wind, Lucien punched into Ell's face.

Bang! All the spell shields were cracked as if they were no more than a piece of paper.

Ell burst out a ground-shaking, bitter cry. But the cry was suffocated by the blood gushing out from his mouth, nose, and eyes.

The center part of Ell's face had been punched in. Blood splashed everywhere, together with some white tissues.

Lucien grabbed Ell's head as if he was grabbing a half-cracked watermelon. Ell was indeed a false god, as He was still alive after such a strong strike.

However, suddenly, Ell's body became shadowy and he flashed away from Lucien's hand, appearing again about ten meters away on the rock in the darkness. Lying on the rock, Ell was trying his best to maintain his life.

Lucien looked up in great alert, knowing that this was not Ell's own power. Someone saved Ell!

Antanas looked at Lucien with a creepy smile on his face. Ignoring the siege against him, Antanas took off his eyepatch.

Under the patch, there was a light ball whose color was a mixture of black, white, and grey. The colors seemed to be interacting as if they represented countless changes, while at the same time seemed to be silent and still as if they carried the secret of the origin of the world.

The muscles on Antanas's face started rotting away very quickly. The yellowish, festering flesh turned pale. The bones underneath were revealed, with the rotten flesh hanging on.

Around him, the world started to twist. All the colors and sounds faded away. Only eternal silence and the colors of black, white, and grey were left.

In such a world, Natasha, Camil and the rest of them's movement became extremely slowly, like small insects being trapped in a drop of pine resin.

"I was about to let Ell take in Asin to reach level nine, so I can save some trouble. But what a surprise, here you are."

Antanas' voice was as harsh as a piece of iron covered in thick rust.

Chapter 487: Ups and Downs

Lucien's face was grim. He did not say a word but lifted his left hand. His fingers stretched out straight, and his left arm and hand were like a sword.

Suddenly, the environment around him started to twist. The darkness retreated and cold moonlight enveloped him. The silver moon in the sky, however, disappeared.

"You've recovered to some extent after taking in Asin's godhood of death, but it's not enough." Antanas' harsh voice sounded like a sharp claw scratching a piece of rusted iron sheet. He lifted the warhammer covered in the grey flame of soul and fiercely swung it at Lucien.

The hundred-meter distance between them seemed to have vanished, and the hammer instantly came in front of Lucien. The realm of black, white and grey followed the track of the hammer and extended like a paintbrush, yet instead of adding colors, the realm took away the color and sound of all the objects on its way, burying them in everlasting silence.

Lucien watched Antanas coming for him in great calmness. All the motions were colorless and silent. Suddenly, a huge silver moon rose behind him. The moon was so big and bright as if it had descended from the sky. In Lucien's left hand, black flame suddenly burnt up and formed a sword of black fire.

Lucien swung the sword at Antanas using all his strength. His robe fluttered up in the wind, while dazzling light beamed from the silver moon. The moonlight crashed together with the concrete black, white, and grey.

The whole world seemed to become obscure. There was no color, no sound, no time, and no space.

The illusion lasted for less than a second. Natasha and the rest saw a small crack appearing on the color of black, white and grey, and then more cracks followed. As the cracks grew bigger and bigger, colors and sound came in.

All of a sudden, the world of black, white and grey collapsed. The world had recovered to what it was supposed to be. However, Natasha and the rest of them still felt great numbness and could not fully control their own movements.

They, however, had seen the result of the fight.

Antanas was floating in the air. The temple cliff below him was gone. There was a giant deep hole in the ground, and huge swirls of river water gushed into the deep hole of voidness, trying to fill it up.

Pieces of rotten flesh were falling from Antanas' face and body. The bones revealed were covered in the color of rust and blood, which was dyed by the godhood of war. The light ball of black, white and grey now looked much more transparent and rigid.

Obviously, Antanas was badly injured.

However, compared to Lucien Evans, who had been blown away to the other side of the Solna River, Antanas' situation was still much better. When Lucien got struck away, he crushed down countless trees and river rocks before finally hitting on the ground. Lucien was now not able to move at all, and his left hand now looked pale and grey.

"I told you. Not enough!" Antanas' hoarse laugh could drive anyone crazy.

When the mysterious existence from the World of Souls was still recovering, Alterna interrupted it. Therefore, now it was still the Lord of War's side which was dominating. But under the influence of the mysterious existence, Antanas had become even crazier.

Antanas took a step forward. Looking at his enemy lying on the ground and struggling, Antanas's mind was full of joy and pride. "Your power will help me recover. Although I can't kill you now, I can send you to a long, long sleep. Alterna, take your time to come back!"

Antanas lifted the hammer, and the power of black, white and grey became contagious again.

Lucien could hear the death knell ringing for him.

Suddenly, the world of black, white and grey was lit on green flame and instantly collapsed.

Antanas appeared again, surrounded by a grey and white of death and silence, which was very different from his own black, grey, and white. It was the power of decay, and there were bitter souls and spirits howling and swirling.

"Ahh!" The bitter cry came from Asin. In great agony, Asin's life force was taken away by the power in the air. Within several seconds, His face had become extremely pale and His two green eyes had now become two flickering clusters of red flame. The air of death was emitted from his body.

The same thing happened to Ell, whose head was broken like a crushed watermelon, Ell released several painful moans and then stopped bleeding. What was now coming out of his body now was the light yellow corpse fluid. But maybe it was due to his godhood, the speed of life force leaving his body was much slower. He had not yet been turned into a walking dead.

Surrounding the Temple of War, within the radius of two hundred meters, countless Husum trees withered and rotted. The power in the air was absorbing their life force. The rich and moist soil had instantly lost all of its moist and become full of cracks. As soon as the water of the Solna River flowed into this area, it became deadly pale and awfully smelly.

One of the senior-rank priest exclaimed, "Life Ritual? The Demigod-lich?!"

As soon as he finished the words, the divine light surrounding him attracted the attack of the power of death. As if there was some kind of horrible alchemical reaction between the death power and the pure light, a horrible explosion occurred. This at lease level-eight red robe cardinal exploded, and his life force was thrown into midair.

The death power also attacked Danniell, the Fire of Purification. The shield of white flame surrounding him was now much dimmer. He had to lean against his sword to prevent himself from falling down, and his life force was also quickly leaving his body. Natasha was the first to realize what was going on. She ran to Camil and lifted her duplicate of the Shield of Truth in front of them. There were already tiny cracks on the shield.

But even the black shield was losing its color, as if it was losing life force as well. Natasha knew that the shield would become decayed in a minute or two, but she had no other choices.

Bero the God of Sun's eyes lost their focus. While His life force was being taken away, Bero's whole body was slightly twitching.

Lucien struggled to stand up. His left hand now looked completely grey, and he was having a hard time breathing.

Francis, lying on the ground and unable to move, tried hard to turn his neck. Looking at the area which now resembled the Skeleton Land, he felt lucky that the mysterious knight just threw him so away from Antanas that he was not in the cover range of the dreadful power.

Within the range, filthy dark clouds gathered in the sky. A black bolt of lightning lit up, and then it started raining. The horrible rotten smell made the severely injured Ell directly pass out.

The polluted greyish-white raindrops fell onto the ground, and the ground suddenly turned pale. Countless skeletons and bodies buried deep underneath broke out from the soil and slowly stood up. Showering in the rain, their death power became greater and greater.

Anything that the raindrops touched, including Daniel's fire of purification and Natasha's Shield of Truth, started rotting. But fortunately, they were not the main target, therefore, the raindrops falling on them were not heavy. However, the rain poured over Antanas, polluting everything and eating into his realm of black, white and grey.

Antanas lifted the hammer again, but his power had been reduced.

However, as the mysterious existence in the World of Souls, Antanas' hammer could still make the spirits, specters, and walking deads acknowledge allegiance to him.

When Antanas was almost out of the confinement, a cold voice came from the sky,

"Spirit Confinement."

The broken souls and spirits surrounding Antanas twisted into the flashes of soul light and quickly sneaked into Antanas's body. Antanas' whole body swelled bigger and bigger. Grey and white liquid flowed out from the corners of his eyes, and Antanas could only stand there still like a stone statue.

"Life Ritual." The cold voice came, again.

The polluted clouds collapsed onto Antanas. Meanwhile, countless undead rushed towards Antanas and became part of the clouds.

Antanas' life force was fiercely pushed out of his body. Losing the inner support, Antanas' tall and strong body became saggy. The warhammer dropped onto the ground, and Antanas' skull snapped into pieces.

The solidified light ball of black, white and grey went out of his eye socket, fell onto the ground, and broke into a few equally-sized pieces.

The pieces still had the almighty power of eternity and supremacy, but it felt that the pieces had lost the soul and will within it. The black, white and grey slowly spread out from the pieces, dyeing the surrounding objects, but now the process was totally meaningless and purposeless.

An illusionary Mage's Hand appeared in the air, trying to pick up the light ball pieces. However, the hand directly went through them, as if the pieces were not in this dimension.

"Hm?" The voice sounded confused.

A lich in a black cloak appeared in the sky. His head had no flesh at all but just a white skull. In each of his two hollow black eye sockets, a fine, needle-like red light spot was flickering.

It was him. Congus, the Demigod-lich. Lucien released a sigh in his mind.

Congus was not in a rush to collect the broken pieces from the mysterious existence in the World of Souls. Instead, Congus turned to look at Lucien. He would never leave the chance to Alterna to recover. Alterna was his only threat on the spot.

"Life Depri..." Congus said two strange words. They were the most primitive magic words.

Congus was not going to underestimate Alterna by any chance. He directly used a legendary spell to eradicate Lucien and his left hand.

However, before Congus could finish the second word, a flash of bright light hacked at him from behind. The light possessed this very positive power that reminded Lucien of all the good characteristics including order, honesty, kindness, and so on.

The magic defense spells automatically triggered dissolved under the light. But Congus had flashily moved to another spot. As a legendary sorcerer, he was constantly prepared for sudden attacks.

The two needle-like red spots turned to look at the attacker. It was Bero, the God of Sun, who supposedly had lost all his power under Life Ritual.

However, now Bero was standing up straight in the air and spoke in a commanding tone.

"This is just a reminder."

"Who are you?" Asked Congus. He felt the power coming out from Bero rather familiar, but it wasn't Bero's own power, and Congus could not recall who it belonged to.

Bero did not answer the question. Countless white wings spread out behind him. Bero said to Congus in a solemn tone, "anything that dies must fall into the eternal sleep. This is the order of life. You filthy, evil creature, face this sentence!"

Then a scale, the left side white and right side black, appeared in front of Bero. After several swings, it reached its balance. The grey and white and horrible pale clouds then instantly disappeared, but the polluted land and the dying trees still remained the same.

"The Scale of Justice! You're Rudolf II!"

Congus did not have a clue how Rudolf II came here, but nevertheless he quickly cast the legendary spell on Rudolf II.

"Life Deprivation!"

Congus believed that this was just a projection of Rudolf, so he was positive that even though Rudolf had brought the Scale with him, the projection was still not a match to Congus himself.

Silently, Bero's face aged as if time passed by on him very fast. The wings behind him closed, converging into a streak of light.

"Comply with the order, Congus."

"The Light of Order!"

The streak of light rapidly expanded, filling in every corner of the world, carrying the power to dissolve anything that was unnatural in the space.

Meanwhile, Congus opened his mouth big and let out an awful howling — Demigod-lich's Howling!

Natasha's eyes lost focus again, and she had also lost the ability to hear or smell. The Shield of Truth in front of her cracked rapidly.

At this time, under the cold and bright moonlight, Lucien rose up into the air across the river. Wearing his long black coat, Lucien lifted his left hand up high, the flame of destruction twining it.

Francis and Camil thought that Lucien and Alterna had used up all of their power.

However, this was not the case. Before taking in the godhood of the Lord of Underworld, Alterna was already able to launch a full round of attack. Now, after absorbing one more godhood, plus the half-month sleep, how could Alterna lose the ability to fight after only one single strike?

Lucien came to the Temple of War on purpose. To get out of the trouble, he was trying to make the legendary archmage who had been watching him all the time and Antanas fight against each other. Before this fight, Lucien had taken Congus' arrival into his consideration, therefore, he did not use Alterna's full power.

Facing Alterna who had been severely injured, and the mysterious existence from the World of Souls who was still able to fight, Congus would definitely deal with the latter first.

Lucien would let them fight first.

Also, since Lucien happened to see Sophia around, and he knew that the Emperor had touched the secret behind the seven ancient demons, Lucien had also expected that Rudolf II would also get involved in this.

The power of silver moon had quickly repaired Lucien's body. When the huge moon rose again, covering the real silver moon in the sky.

Shocked, Congus and Rudolf II saw Lucien bow slightly. And then Lucien dropped his left hand down, and the moonshine suddenly expanded and filled up their vision.

Was it because Lucien was smarter and more sophisticated than them?

No, it was simply because Lucien knew much more information than Antanas. Lucien knew that there was a legendary hiding around and that Rudolf II was able to arrive at any time. Therefore, he could draw up the best plan.

The information gap was Lucien's advantage!

The silver moon tonight was so bright that Congus and Rudolf II would never ever forget this scene.

Chapter 488: Ups and Downs II

In the endless silver moonlight, a fine black line appeared and grew bigger and bigger.

It was a long sword covered in black flame. The black fire blazed so brightly that it seemed like it could devour anything.

Francis who was at a distance could only feel that the black was drawing in all the light. Even time was slowed down and become solidified in it.

But he soon realized that this was simply his illusion, as he saw the dark green and greyish white colors as well as bright and rigid light coming out from the darkness. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

In the end, the darkness overwhelmed everything again and retreated within a second.

When the silver moon rose up again, under its brilliant rays, Lucien was floating in the air. His Pale Justice had been thrown to the other side of the river and was now stuck in the ground beside Natasha, his left hand was hanging beside his body weakly, and his face was as pale as a piece of paper. This one strike had consumed all of the power that Alterna had accumulated as well as Lucien's blood power after transformation. Now Lucien had gone back to the original shape of his figure.

The Temple of War and the peak where the temple once stood on were both gone. Congus stood still in midair, while Rudolf II had fallen to the ground. His black-and-white scale was gone as well. Maybe the scale was also just a projection.

The night breeze blew lightly. Congus's black magic cloak and robe fluttered and turned into tiny pieces. The white skeleton inside was revealed, and then as if the skeleton was melting, drops of white liquid fell to the ground, taking away the last slight of life force from the ground.

Congus' whole set of skeleton had broken down. When the skull cracked, the two needle-like light spots instantly died out. However, underneath the white skull, a smaller delicate golden skull was revealed. It possessed an extremely horrible power. In the eye sockets of the golden skull, the needle-like red spots lit up again.

"You'll never be able to run away." Congus, who was now only a golden skull, said to Lucien gloomily, the two lines of teeth opening and closing.

Then the golden skull also cracked. Inside the skull, there was an ancient ring. In the next second, the gold skull and ring disappeared together.

Lucien's heart suddenly sank. Congus had a resurrection spot nearby!

Lucien did understand that it was impossible for Alterna to kill Congus and Rudolf II using one strike when Alterna was still recovering. However, since he was now facing the projection of Rudolf II, Lucien was still hoping that Alterna's power could completely destroy this body of Congus so that he could only resurrect in his phylactery in the main material world. This would win him some precious time. However, things did not go as he wished.

But Lucien did not panic. He was the Secretive, and he had reunited with Natasha. Lucien just need carefully hide himself and find the Congress of Magic, then he would not need to worry about Congus anymore. It would at least take Congus half an hour to return. And what was more important was that...

Lucien's sight shifted to the solidified pieces of black, white and grey floating in the air — Once Alterna absorbed the pieces, Congus would definitely try to stay away as far as possible.

When Alterna's power further recovered, Alterna would be able to completely wipe Congus out!

A creepy smile crept onto Sun God Bero's face, and He suddenly collapsed onto the ground into a pile of ash.

Ell, Natasha, Camil, Francis, Danniell, and the rest of them had all either became unconscious or lost all their strength, while Asin had become an undead creature, yet it still kept some consciousness and knew that Lucien was definitely the one it should stay away from.

"I'm starving..." Lucien's left hand reached out and pulled Lucien up. It pressed against one of the pieces in the air, and then the rest of the pieces were also gradually pulled over and blended together.

Suddenly, the sound of wind disappeared in Lucien's ears, and colors disappeared in Lucien's eyes. All he could see was a space filled with black, white and grey. Anything that was over a meter away looked completely blurry. Lucien felt that he was in an isolated space, and even his mind had slowed down.

Francis tried hard to look up at Lucien, who was floating in the air still. He saw that, on Lucien's left hand, the color of silver was fighting against a mixture of black, white and grey. Lucien's eyes had lost focus as if he had lost his soul.

At this time, Danniell the Fire of Purification turned his neck. A mysterious smile rose on his face. Then he slowly stood up and flew towards Lucien with the sword in his hand.

"You know that my projection wouldn't die easily, but you have still turned to take in the essential pieces. Have you become too pretentious?" Danniell spoke, but the voice definitely belonged to Rudolf II!

However, the power from the projection was lower than the legendary level. It seemed that the power of the projection depended on the host.

"Huh, Lucien Evans knew that the projection would not die easily? How did he know?" In the noble district of the city of Husum, Sophia was sitting on the bed, staring at the black and white scale in front of her. She was watching the fight at the Temple of War using the divine item and the connection she had with the projection. However, her father's words confused her.

She would never forget what happened in the underground palace of Sun's King three years ago. She had looked for the mysterious sorcerer for a long time to take her revenge but had not gained a single clue. Later, she gradually put this aside and started focusing on improving herself.

Before leaving the Congress, Lucien had submitted the two magic spells which he used in the underground palace. Because the principles of the two magic spells were quite simple, many sorcerers had also created similar spells based on the principles. As a result, the intelligence section ignored this, and Sophia thus missed the most important clue for tracking the mysterious sorcerer.

However, as a legendary, Rudolf II had instantly recognized Lucien Evans. After all, Lucien was not trying to hide his spiritual power at all.

Rudolf II talked to Lucien first to show that this was not a sneak attack. Then, lifting the long sword named the Fire of Purification, Rudolf II hacked at Lucien against the moonlight.

The sword was quick. The sword reflecting the silver moonlight seemed to possess many virtues, such as honesty, kindness, order.

When the white sword inlaid with the patterns of flame was only an inch away from Lucien's head, an ordinary-looking long sword came horizontally and blocked its way.

The clang of the blades was crispy. The Fire of Purification bounced back, and so did the ordinary-looking sword.

"You're still able to move?" Rudolf II said in astonishment to the beautiful young lady with a determined look standing in front of him.

Although it was not surprising that Natasha was still alive since she was not the main target of Congus's Life Ritual, it was indeed a miracle that she could still fight.

"Because, from the very beginning, Lucien had reminded me that the power of a legendary was coming. so I was prepared." Natasha's silver-purple eyes stared at Rudolf II tightly. "Although two items were destroyed, it was Auntie Camil's power that was consumed. I was not injured much, and even took the chance during Life Ritual and slightly recovered from the previous fight."

Holding Pale Justice in her hand, which was thrown to her side by Lucien on purpose, Natasha stood between Lucien and Rudolf II. Her duplicate of the Shield of Truth and the level-eight Sword of Balance had been destroyed. Pale Justice survived because of its special property against Necromancy power.

"So he knew that Congus would come..." Rudolf II sighed.

Then he lifted the sword and launched a new round of attack as fast as raindrops in a storm hitting the ground. The area around him started to become hotter and hotter as if all the filthy things in the dimension have started burning.

The power of Danniell, the Fire of Purification, had been improved to the level of a gold knight with the projection of Rudolf II.

Natasha, however, was only focusing on defense, and her defense was perfect.

The metal blades were clanging like a string of notes.

Natasha was a level-seven knight, and even with Pale Justice, her power and defense had only reached level eight. However, her fighting skills and supreme blood power had compensated for the gap between the power of Rudolf II's projection and hers. Also, Rudolf II himself was not good at fighting as a knight as he had chose the other path of balance, and he was now not capable of casting many spells because of Alterna's previous strike.

After a minute, the two sides were still fighting, with no one showing any dominant advantages.

"You're indeed very talented among the younger generation." Rudolf II nodded and said, "but if you keep staying in my way, I'll kill you."

Natasha sneered. "Have you ever seen a real knight running away from the battlefield?"

"Then I'll let you die as a decent knight," replied Rudolf II.

The white wings spread out behind Rudolf II again, but this time, the feathers were less abundant and much dimmer.

Luminescent spots flew out of the wings and joined together. A thick book began to take its shape. Rudolf II hacked his sword down, and the book turned itself to a specific page.

The Angel King! The Prothonotary in Mountain Paradise!

Smile disappeared from Natasha's face. With a very serious look on her face, Natasha immediately swung her sword. As if the sky just cracked, a number of illusionary gaps appeared around her. Acting like a shield, the gaps blocked the attack from the Fire of Purification.

Bang! The sound was so loud that Sophia, who was watching far away, could not help covering her ears.

Sophia saw that Natasha's hands were bleeding hard. However, the pair of hands were still holding the sword tight, and the owner of the pair of hands was still standing at where she had been. Sophia was very impressed. She knew that her elder brother had a secret crush on Natasha, and now she had understood the reason.

Then, in great astonishment, Sophia saw that, behind Natasha, Lucien's eyes rolled and then his whole person came back to life!

However, what shocked Sophia the most was the staff inlaid with the big Sun Stone that Lucien was now holding in his hand and pointing at Rudolf II.

"It's him!" Sophia burst out. Her body was slightly trembling. The deep fear was still in her mind.

"That Bastard!"

Lucien felt that he just woke up from a long, long dream after a few years. His soul had reached the seventh circle. However, nothing around him changed. Lucien remembered the situation that he was facing. Therefore, Lucien quickly calmed down and lifted the Sun

Staff to cast Confinement.

A flash of light sparkled. Rudolf II's fierce attack continued. Natasha could barely have the time for taking a breath.

To Lucien's great surprise, Rudolf II was immune to Confinement!

Lucien did once learn that some really powerful legendaries were immune to spells like Confinement and Maze, but he had never met one before. He had not expected to meet one today. But it might be also because what was standing in front of him was just a projection of Rudolf II.

On Lucien's left hand, the silver light suppressed the mixture of black, white and grey, but it would take quite a while for Alterna to fully take in the power. Therefore, without hesitation, Lucien took out a colorless tube and started chanting.

"It's that spell...!" Sophia hurriedly shouted, as if she was trying to remind her father. Her forehead was covered with a fine layer of cold sweat.

Chapter 489: More to Come

Inside the translucent tube was a frozen colorless material that emitted extreme coldness. Even looking at it would make one feel frozen to bones.

As Lucien was casting the spell, the material in the tube started to boil and the tube seemed that it was going to break at any time.

Seeing this, Rudolf II slightly shook his head. He knew what Lucien was going to do, and he also knew the greatest problem with this spell —The chanting time was too long, so long that he could easily break it off.

The pages of the book behind him turned its pages and threw a deceleration spell at Natasha. Meanwhile, Rudolf II flew to the other direction and left the range where Lucien's spiritual power was locked on.

Rudolf II had seen Lucien cast this spell, Snow Goddess' Whip, before. He knew what the advantages and disadvantages were.

As a ninth-circle ice and snow spell which could create a temperature extremely close to the absolute zero, the spell itself was perfect when its caster was an archmage. However, if the caster was not yet level nine, the casting would take at least three to four seconds, which was too long to truly imperial a radiant knight or gold knight in a real fight.

Dragging the sword named Fire of Purification, Rudolf II flashed to midair and prepared for the next round of attack. He knew that he should never leave any gaps for Lucien, otherwise as a senior-rank sorcerer, Lucien would seize the chance to cast a series of helping spells on Natasha. Rudolf II was using Danniell's body, and he knew how much power he could use. When Natasha's power was strengthened by senior-rank spells, she would have a great chance to defeat Danniell, whose power had only just reached the bottom line of a gold knight — This was why a senior-rank sorcerer could be very threatening.

Also, if the fight went on for too long, when Alterna fully absorbed the pieces of Essence, or when Congus returned, there would be no chance left for Rudolf II.

Rudolf II's wings flapped, but at this time he noticed that Lucien's casting had stopped.

He realized that something was wrong when he saw the smile on Lucien's face. There was a silver coin in Lucien's right hand, and his body was covered with long, snake-like electric currents, while the space around him was distorted by the magnetic field.

The colorless material in the tube was the same as before. The tube fell down, shining in the darkness of the night.

It was a lie! Lucien was just pretending to be casting!

Rudolf II was furious, for as the "incarnation of the virtues", he absolutely hated to be deceived.

However, Lucien, at this time, instantly finished casting Lucien's Electromagnetic Gun since this spell was engraved into his soul. In the next blink, Rudolf II was under the heavy bombardment of the thick electric beam. It was so fast that he had no time to avoid it!

Rudolf II's face was grim. His wings folded together as a shield, covering his whole body under layers of white feathers.

Bang! The blast was deafening!

The burnt feathers twirled to the ground, revealing the hole in the middle of the wings. Even Rudolf II's chest was severely battered; his body trembled slightly and he temporarily lost the ability to move.

Yet the power of this sixth-circle spell was still not strong enough and could not cause fatal damage to a gold knight's body.

However, Rudolf II's temporary inability to move was all that Lucien needed. Lucien activated the Ice & Snow Medal he was wearing and a freezing ray instantly darted at Rudolf II's wounded chest.

With the wound as the center, layer of ice immediately froze over Rudolf II's body, as if a man-shaped ice coffin was specially made for him.

Lucien was planning on casting Resistance Reduction first and then Silent Coffin. However, when they were actually fighting, Lucien found that Danniell's armor had already been severely damaged by Congus' Life Ritual and Filthy Rain.

The light of the silver moon lit up the ice coffin. As if the moonlight had a temperature, the ice coffin quickly melted down, together with Danniell's body and the projection in it.

At this moment, Lucien grabbed the tube of solidified helium with Mage's Hand. Throwing it up in the air, he started casting again.

This time, the tube broke into pieces while Lucien was halfway through his chanting. The colorless material turned into a dim ray and bitterly whipped on the half-melted coffin following the gesture of Lucien's right hand.

The ice coffin lit up in blue light. The remanent part of Danniell's body became an ice statue. Then, the statue melted into raindrops and evaporated.

Suddenly, Natasha crossed the than ten-meter distance with a leap and hacked at the vapor fiercely with Pale Justice.

An illusionary face formed in the vapor and split into pieces under the attack.

Without a body, the projection was the same as a specter. The blade of Pale Justice was its invincible opponent.

"What a tough fight..." Lucien murmured.

When the specter disappeared, Sophia started trembling at a long distance away from the battlefield. Again, she realized how deceitful and unpredictable Lucien was. In her eyes, Lucien was a demon taking the form of a human being!

It took Sophia a while to calm down. She felt lucky that this time she was just observing this remotely.

She wiped off the cold sweat on her forehead and sighed. "A grand-arcanist-to-be, a great musician... He's much more talented than a demon.

"No wonder even Natasha would fall for him. Brother, there's no hope for you at all."

...

Putting aside the sword, Natasha carefully examined herself, both body and soul. The power of Rudolf II was so weird that she had to be extremely cautious.

"Don't worry too much. He has been severely injured by the strike from Alterna. The projection has lost the power to possess a body or a soul again," said Lucien to Natasha in a comforting tone. Meanwhile, he also checked himself to make sure that his soul remained intact.

Natasha nodded but still checked again carefully and also asked Camil to do the same. Only after then did she finally smile and said, "it never occurred to me that Alterna is right now in your left hand. Is it affecting your activities somehow?"

Lucien found Natasha's smile rather meaningful. He lifted one eyebrow and asked, "what activities?"

"Like when you need your left hand..." Natasha pretended to be very serious but then burst out laughing. This made Lucien feel warm in his heart. That they could still discuss gentlemen topics together made him feel that everything was still the same between them after several years.

Natasha then suppressed her emotions and looked around, "this isn't a perfect place for joking. We gotta go before the Demigod-lich returns."

"Tell me where the Congress is. I'll go on my own," said Lucien.

Natasha lifted an eyebrow and rubbed her chin.

Seeing this, Lucien hurriedly explained. "My Host Star of Destiny is special, plus that I am with Alterna, so Congus can't find me. If I go with you, it brings danger to both of us."

Natasha nodded and accepted this reason. She said to Lucien decisively, "to get to the controlled area of the Congress of Magic, you should head east, cross the desert, and then cross an ocean. The continent you'll arrive in is the one the Congress of Magic is searching through. This area is supposed to belong to the Church, but they haven't come to the west yet. Take care. Don't trust the rest of the grand arcanists except your teacher and granny Hathaway."

"I'll hit the road right now," said Lucien. "Here, you keep Pale..."

Natasha cut Lucien off, smiling. "I keep Pale Justice with me? I'd love to. But I prefer to have it next time. Pale Justice should be protecting you right now until you are safe. I'm also heading for the same continent. If I can find granny Hathaway and the Lord of Storm before you do, I'll ask them to come and find you."Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Natasha did not conceal her liking for Pale Justice, but she also did not hesitate when she handed it to Lucien.

Lucien nodded. When he reached out his hand to take over Pale Justice, a strange feeling suddenly struck him. The mixed colors of black, white and grey covered his body, and the aura of the World of Souls came out. Meanwhile, the silver-white light on his left hand was trying hard to keep the situation under control.

Natasha raised Pale Justice and swung it at Lucien. With a dim flash, the concrete black, white and grey started to collapse and was again controlled by the silver-white.

"What is it?" Asked Natasha concernedly.

Lucien took a while to feel Alterna's will in his hand, and he sighed. "Alterna's taking in the pieces, but it's a hard process. The situation that just happened may happen again from time to time. But generally, Alterna's still in control, so it's not a big problem."

"How long is this going to take?" Natasha frowned. "If this keeps happening, Demigod-lich will definitely be able to find you. He knows you're heading for the east."

Lucien took a deep breath and said, "about a week."

Although a week was long and dangerous, Lucien somehow had this strange feeling — How Alterna fully absorb the mysterious existence in the World of Souls in only a week? Maybe there was something unusual going on.

"That's... too long. What about this? I'll go with you, and we can hide in the mountains in the north. It's easier to hide from the Demigod-lich in the forests." Natasha suggested seriously. "Aunt Camil will head to the east to seek help from granny Hathaway and the Lord of Storm. I can also use Pale Justice to help you control the conflict between the two powers. Since I'm helping you, I think Alterna should be willing to help me cover up my power and destiny track, right? It's not going to cost a great deal of Alterna's power..."

Lucien remained silent for a few seconds and then felt the power in his left hand. Finally, he said,

"Alterna said yes, but I think you should go to the east and let Camil stay with me."

"This is my business. Camil should not be involved in this. Also, aunty Camil had used up most of her power. Even with the potions, it will take her at least half a day to recover. And Demigod-lich won't wait for half a day to come here." After taking a glance at Camil, Natasha said to Lucien in great determination.

Lucien looked around. He knew that the time they had was rather limited, so he didn't waste his words.

"Alright, let's go."

Natasha nodded. She flew to Camil and talked to her for a while. Obviously, they had an argument. Camil's cold blue eyes stared at Lucien full of anger, but finally, she put aside her weapon and stumbled away.

Natasha and Lucien then used all kinds of methods to remove their traces, and then they headed for the north.

After a while, Francis, who was lying on the ground far away from where they fought, started feeling strength coming back to his body and his broken bones healing. When he finally was able to stand up, Ell's smiling face suddenly appeared in front of him.

Ell's shattered head and face had recovered. He now looked even more gloomy and mysterious than before.

"You have proved yourself again. We shall leave this place temporarily."

Francis was shocked that Ell had recovered this fast. But smart as he was, Francis did not ask but lowered his head and said in the great but pretended respect, "I will only follow you, Your Almightyness."

Ell nodded in satisfaction. He veiled his eyes, blocking the mixture of concrete black, white and grey within.

Then Ell and Francis hurriedly left the city of Husum.

Chapter 490: The Trip

Chapter 490: The Trip

After heading to the north along the river valley for several minutes, Lucien told Natasha that they had to change the direction and head toward the east. Using Advanced Flying, Lucien and Natasha flew as fast as they could in the new direction. Meanwhile, Lucien removed the layer of dim moonlight on Natasha.

“You’re attracting Demigod-lich’s attention so that aunty Camil can leave the city of Husum and go into the desert in the east in safety, right?” asked Natasha. She did not complain at all when Lucien suddenly changed the plan, instead, she accepted Lucien’s decision and realized his plan right away. They had gone through fire and water multiple times together. They knew each other well.

Natasha knew that on the east side of the desert was a secret liaison magic circle set up by the Congress of Magic. The magic circle could send voice messages across the ocean to the areas under the control of the Congress.

Once knowing where Lucien was, Fernando and Hathaway could go back to the main material world first and then open another Portal to Alternate Realm to the northern mountains in Erdo Peninsula. This was the fastest route, although it would still cost them a day to come.

If a radiant knight was familiar with all the semi-solidified space barriers in this dimension, he or she would be able to get to the liaison magic circle in the desert within two days; if not, it would take three to four days. Unfortunately, Camil belongs to the latter.

Flying at a high speed in the sky, they could hear the wind howl as it thrashed the coldness into their bones. Lucien smiled. He nodded and said to Natasha via the telepathic bond between them, “it Demigod-lich can’t find our traces when he returns, he will definitely go after Camil, who is the closest person to us that survived the fight. When he gets aunty Camil, we will lose all our hope of waiting for Hathaway and my teacher's help. What's even worse is that he will for sure use aunty Camil to threaten us. We must eliminate this potential danger."

"That's true. If Demigod-lich can lock on our trace, he will come after us." Natasha agreed. "Thus, as long as aunty Camil can hide properly, she will have enough time to recover."

"In this dimension, even a legendary's spiritual power field only has a radius of three hundred meters. At that time, aunty Camil will have already left the city of Husum. By then, Demigod-lich will have a very difficult time if he still wants to find her. And we all know that following one's track of destiny isn't very accurate." Natasha added. "Within a day, aunty Camil will be able to get in the mountains in the northeast, where His Excellency Varantine is patrolling. Unless he loses his mind and wants to challenge the Church right now by himself, Demigod-lich will have no choice but to give up tracking down aunty Camil."

Natasha, who was flying in the air like a sharp arrow, completely understood Lucien's plan. She told Lucien where Varantine was, in case he would run into Varantine.

To escape by fueling a fight between Varantine and Demigod-lich was not a possible plan, because Varantine could always inform the Church, and then Lucien would have to run away from the entire Church's hunting. The situation would be much, much more dangerous than what they were facing now.

"So we have to keep distracting Demigod-lich for a whole day," said Lucien seriously.

Natasha lifted her left eyebrow, "You are not worried that aunty Camil might tell His Excellency Varantine about you?"

"There's no perfect plan facing such a great danger," said Lucien honestly, "but after seven days, when Alterna finishes absorbing the pieces, I might be able to survive even facing the Pope. And, I trust you."

Natasha lips curved into a smile,

“I told aunty Camil that it would only take Alterna four days to fully absorb the pieces. If she chooses not to sell you out and successfully sends the message to the Congress, the Lord of Storm and granny Hathaway will come find you even earlier than you planned. If she indeed sells you out, when the Pope sends the priests here, it will have been three days later. His Holiness will definitely consider how big is their chance of winning when facing Alterna, who will have recovered to the level of demigod. I don’t think he will take the risk, especially when he’s currently unable to cast God’s Arrival.”

Lucien tilted his head and examined Natasha up to down. He was quite impressed. “I thought you were always very straightforward, no matter when fighting or dealing with things. I didn’t expect it at all that you could also be very sophisticated. But... aunty Camil has been protecting you for so many years, won’t you feel bad lying to her?”

Natasha grinned. “Hey, I gave aunty Camil the wrong message because you deceived me in the first place. A dignified knight like me doesn’t lie.”

After the joke, the look on Natasha’s face became more serious. “Although I do like to solve problems on my own, as the future duchess, I’ve always been living in great caution, or what happened to me last time with my cousin Verdi would definitely happen again. I trust that aunty Camil will never betray me, but I am not so sure whether she’d also not betray you. Maybe in her eyes, sending you to the gallows is the best way to protect me from the danger of being hunted by Demigod-lich. I can’t count on anybody by simply saying ‘I trust her.’”

Lucien saw a true duchess in front of him — decisive, determined, and cautious.

What was even more important was that Natasha still knew what she really wanted.

Lucien smiled lightly. “We’ve done this much, and the rest of the things are not within our control. We should head northward and eastward in turns, so that Demigod-lich will believe that we’re heading for the desert in the east following an irregular route.”

At this time, the concrete colors black, white and grey climbed onto Lucien's left hand again and then covered his entire body. The flying spell was interrupted, and Lucien instantly fell from the sky.

With a dive, Natasha clutched Lucien. Then she pulled out Pale Justice and swung it at the mix of black, white and grey.

However, this time one single strike turned out to be insufficient. Natasha frowned and kept hacking at it. After three times, the mixture of colors finally retreated.

“Are you alright?” Asked Natasha in concern.

Lucien said calmly, “don't worry. The fight can get quite intense. When the absorption process approaches the end, there'll be a big one.”

“You gotta ask Alterna some rewards when Alterna recovers,” said Natasha half-jokingly. “You're taking such a huge risk.”

Lucien answered thoughtfully, “In fact, I think I've got some rewards already. Every time when this happens, the world around me stops working, but meanwhile, my soul is still growing stronger together with my cognitive world. When I first got struck by it, it felt like that I directly skipped two years. The two-year growth has turned out to be a great boost to my soul. Now, the power of my soul is at the seventh circle. When I finish analyzing a seventh-circle spell, I'll try to advance.”

“This is not fair. We are at the same level again!” Natasha exclaimed in great surprise. “... I was working very hard to be a level higher than you. After this ends, you have to reward me as well!”

“I will, as long as you're not asking me to wear weird costumes,” Lucien revealed Natasha's secret thoughts.

Natasha shrugged. “Alright, then you'd better get up.”

Lucien finally realized that Natasha had been holding him in her arms all the time during the conversation. With a shy smile on his face, Lucien cast Advanced Fly again.

...

Half a day later, Lucien and Natasha arrived at a small town in the northern mountain range. Now, they were hiding in a mud hut and taking a break.

“The outbreak is happening so unpredictably! Before, we could still handle it, but after Demigod-lich sent out his specter minions, we are now under great pressure,” said Natasha.

Natasha’s eyes were fixed sharply on Lucien’s left hand, where the one to blame was residing. The only thing that could comfort her now was that according to Lucien, Alterna was a cute-looking blond girl. Thus, Natasha could still put up with Alterna. She also wondered why Lucien was always caught in big troubles.

Lucien could do nothing about this. “It’s completely out of my control. There’s no pattern in this at all.”

In the past hour, they had run into two teams of senior-rank specters. Many thanks to the fact that Pale Justice was the great bane of the specters, they were able to escape. Otherwise, they would have already been caught by Demigod-lich.

Natasha was about to say something to relax. Suddenly, the monotonous colors of black, white and grey haunted Lucien again.

She looked rather alert and serious. Pulling out Pale Justice, she hacked at the color layer from an angle as the many times she did before.

This time, the colors faded away immediately. But Natasha did not have time for celebrating. The next moment, Natasha leaped forward. Clutching Lucien, who was still not able to move, she rolled out of the mud hut.

Bang!

The mud wall was penetrated by a huge piece of stone. After a few shakes, the hut collapsed to the ground, raising dust everywhere.

Natasha held the sword and stood in front of Lucien. She saw the disgusting, rotten monster.

It was a group of huge apes two to three times tall as a man. But they had no skin, thus the green, rotten muscles and tissues were all revealed. In each of their hands, there was a huge stone.

“Only a group of middle-rank Rotten Looters?” Natasha sneered. Her movements were so fast that the series of piercing and striking only took her a couple of seconds.

When Natasha returned to where she was standing earlier, the huge apes had all collapsed to the ground one by one. Their huge bodies quickly dissolved into piles of pus and then disappeared.

“There must be a high-rank undead creature as the leader behind! Let’s go!” Lucien reminded. Besides, he did not want to get the innocent residents nearby involved.

After casting Speed on themselves, Lucien and Natasha ran into the mountains, changing their directions aimlessly.

A few seconds later, Natasha suddenly took a wide leap onto the big tree beside them and pierced through a huge animal. It was another Rotten Looter.

“We’re still being followed,” said Natasha seriously.

Lucien looked back and frowned. “Something’s tracking us. We have to find it out, or Demigod-lich will be coming for us soon.”

Chapter 491: The Lunatic

"How?" Asked Natasha. Although she was an expert in anti-tracking, she knew that everything was different in this dimension where everyone's spiritual power and willpower were both restrained, so she asked for Lucien's advice.

Sorcerers were known for their multiple spells serving different and specific purposes. This was another advantage that they had over knights and clergies.

Lucien took out his monocle and covered his left eye with it. Images and scenes flashed through his left pupil. Meanwhile, electromagnetic waves spread out from his eye and his body to every direction, then providing feedback to him from time to time.

Using the fifth-circle spell Eye of Thunder and Lightning, Lucien was now like a radar in human shape.

"The feedback from over three hundred meters is weak and chaotic somehow... Is this the special suppression of this world? It feels like magnetic pollution." Lucien said to Natasha through the telepathic bond between them. "But don't worry. Let's keep moving forward. You keep pretending that you're still seeking around but have found nothing so that we can lure it closer to us. We gotta hurry up, there isn't much time left for us."

"Alright." Natasha agreed.

Clenching onto Pale Justice, she walked deeper into the forest with Lucien.

Lucien then cast True Seeing on Natasha and himself, pretending that they were still on great alert but could find nothing.

After a minute, Lucien and Natasha quickly exchanged a look and suddenly accelerated. Like two flashes of shadow, they sprinted towards the end of the path, ready to turn left.

At this time, Lucien stopped without any signs and cast Move Earth, a sixth-circle spell!

The ground within a hundred meters started shaking fiercely. Invisible waves spread out, and trees fell one by one.

From the thick crown of an old tree, a black figure lost its balance and fell onto the ground.

The blackness of the figure could absorb in most electromagnetic waves including visible light, thus generating an alternative sense of invisibility. Without True Seeing, Lucien and Natasha would not be able to see it or sense it at all.

Natasha dashed forward and wielded Pale Justice downward in great momentum.

The black figure turned out to be a human-shaped monster with the head of a white tiger. The aura of death surrounding it was extremely dense. Its power should be able to directly manipulate low-rank and middle-rank specters.

Fast and agile, it dodged to the side in midair and avoided Natasha's blade. Then the black claws came for Natasha like sharp blades. Meanwhile, its power waves spread out — it was going to use its ability to cast magic-like spells!

However, the tiger-head monster suddenly lost its strength and fell right onto the blade of Natasha's sword.

Pale Justice was a legendary-level sword when facing evil creatures. Without much effort, the sword penetrated through the monster's body. Black miasma came out, and the body started rotting very fast.

"It's a senior-rank evil beast, good at tracking and assassination," said Natasha to Lucien through the telepathic bond. "Did you create this spell on your own? I've never heard such a powerful senior-rank spell that can interfere with gravity to such a degree."

"Yes, I did. It's called 'Gravity Chaos', a spell of the field of Astrology," said Lucien. He accidentally came up with the spell during the derivation of the Special Theory of Relativity.

Natasha was simply being curious, so she didn't ask further. "We gotta hurry up and leave — Watch out!"

Before she finished her words, a huge rock twice the size of the previous one that destroyed the mud hut rushed out of the woods towards them fiercely, stirring up a very strong blow.

Natasha stepped forward and swung Pale Justice at the huge rock. This one single strike slowed down the rock a little bit and slightly changed its direction. Lucien made the best use of the time and shot out a ray of green light at the rock.

The ray was so thin compared to the size of the rock, like a toothpick on a desk. However, the huge rock instantly broke down into tiny green light dots and scattered to the ground.

Something in the woods burst out in an extremely bitter howl. The howling was so sharp and miserable that one's mind could very easily be disturbed.

Natasha held Pale Justice in front of Lucien and herself. As soon as the evil howling touched the sword, it split into two halves from the middle just like a rushing flood around a small isolated island, thus Natasha and Lucien were not affected at all. However, the wild beasts nearby were all panicking under the great evilness.

Stamping on the tree trunks, a giant over five meters tall cut its own way through the woods and walked out.

The giant's skin was nearly black, and it had a pair of eerie orange eyes, pointy ears, but no hair. Its dirty nails were also orange. The most disturbing thing was that it was surrounded by a cluster of spirits forming a cloud. The horrible howl that they just heard actually came from the spirits.

"A Dead Gaint! At least level seven!" Lucien immediately recognized it. "There are two kinds of spirits surrounding it. One is those that came from the enemies it killed before, and they can be easily killed by Pale Justice. But the others came from the Dead Giants themselves and are passed down the generations as guardians. These spirits are not evil, so Pale Justice won't work well. We have to kill the giant to destroy the spirits!"

"Be careful with its Unholy Blight and Flame Strike."

Through the telepathic bond, Lucien told Natasha the basic information about the enemy.

Natasha grabbed the sword and said, "help me so I can approach the giant. Let's finish it as soon as possible."

With many years of hard training and a powerful weapon, Natasha was not afraid of the giant at all. All she wanted was to save more time.

"I'll use Exorcist Halo to suppress the spirits," said Lucien. Although he had many options, he believed that Sun's Corona would definitely be most effective in this situation.

Natasha was ready. She bent her knees and was ready to strike.

However, at this time, a layer of concrete black, white and grey suddenly covered Lucien. He had totally lost his ability to move.

"Damn!" Natasha could not hold back the swearing. She knew that she had to stop the giant first.

Yet the Death Giant had already made its move when the colors first appeared and had now arrived right in front of Natasha.

Spirits howled and cried. Natasha, who was not yet fully prepared, was knocked off into the air by the giant. Meanwhile, although the eerie shadows surrounding it had dimmed, the giant still launched its second attack.

Pale Justice kept colliding with the evil spirits, yet much of its power was restrained due to the guardian spirits.

When Natasha was defending herself, the Death Giant found the opportunity and rushed at Lucien, who was completely incapable of fighting.

Natasha's silver-purple eyes became cold. She turned back a somersault and came back to Lucien. Then using all her strength, she sprang up and swang the sword at the Dead Giant's chest.

The Dead Giant had to stop its attack to defend itself from the fatal attack. The spirits formed a black shadow that blocked Pale Justice, and its sharp orange nails came straight to Natasha.

Natasha, however, had given up defense. She let the nails sink into her rerebrace, and meanwhile, pulled the sword and slashed across the neck of the Dead Giant.

The giant grabbed its own neck with its hands, trying to stop the black blood from bursting out.

Natasha would leave it no more chance. Stepping on the ground, she was ready to leap up again and launch her second round of attack.

At this time, a beam of holy light came from the sky and encased the giant within.

The giant lost all of its life force. The surrounding spirits were finally released and slowly disappeared in the light beam.

"Are you alright?" Lucien flew to Natasha and asked concernedly.

Natasha coughed and pointed at her left shoulder. "You gotta fix this for me later."

There was a deep crack in her violet rerebrace. Her left upper arm was injured, and traces of black blood came out from the wound.

Lucien hurriedly stopped the bleeding and said to Natasha, frowning, "there's death curse in a Dead Giant's nails, and there's also toxins. Although as a radiant knight and with your top blood power, you won't die like the others. But your power will be reduced to below senior-rank. The best solution is the seventh-circle spell, Pure Blessing. A fourth-circle spell called Remove Curse shall also work, but it must be supported by some potions."

Natasha smiled. "So... you do not have the materials to brew the potions now, right? — Wait, are you also injured?"

Lucien did not look good. His face now looked abnormally dark. Obviously, he had been affected by Unholy Blight — When struck by the colors of black, white and grey, he was not able to defend himself at all.

Lucien did not realize it until Natasha pointed out. He hurried cast a spell on himself to prevent the situation from getting worse. "I didn't notice it. This also can only be completely removed using the corresponding spell and the potion called Heart of Sun."

Natasha grinned. "You didn't even notice that your own injury. You do care about me a lot, don't you?" Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Honest and straightforward as usual, she did not feel shy at all.

Lucien, on the other hand, felt a bit shy, so he switched the topic. "I do have most of the materials of the potions. But there's one missing called Bloody Family. It's a kind of red flower that is everywhere in the main material world. So I don't have them with me."

"Let's go then. This world resembles the main material world, so it shouldn't be too difficult to find the flower. We can also ask people living in the nearby small town." Natasha stood up.

Lucien nodded and cast the spells to take away the giant's heart, nails, and the piece of skin on its chest. In the future, he would use these materials to make the senior-rank magic items Dead Giant Belt and Curse Dagger.

Luckily, Demigod-lich had not caught them up yet.

...

It was a small town in the mountains where residents relied on hunting and logging.

Lucien, whose face was still abnormally dark, found nothing about the red flowers after asking the passers-by. By now, Natasha was already having difficulty lifting her left arm.

Lucien walked to a very old man and asked, "Sir, may I ask you something?"

"What?" The old man pointed at his ear.

Lucien took out a couple of copper coins used by the locals and tossed them. "Sir, I'd like to know if you know someone good at telling plants nearby."

The old man's eyes lit up. "There is one."

Lucien smiled and handed him the coins. "More specific?"

"Sir, if you just need a guide, you don't have to go to Nika the Lunatic. He's filthy and cruel, obsessed with cutting plants, animals, and beasts into small pieces every day. He says he's looking for the secret of gods. He's gone nuts..." When mentioning Nika, the old man was obviously full of disgust.

"The secret of gods?" Lucien and Natasha asked at the same time. Their left eyebrow lifted at the same angle.

The old man nodded hard, "Yes, he keeps telling people that the blessed power comes from the strange patterns on the horrible monsters. He wants to understand the patterns! Trust me, he's gone nuts. He's been acting weird since he was a kid. Things around him were always on fire or got broken. He must have been possessed by a demon!"

Lucien was very interested, "Where is he?"

"You'd better think twice..." said the old man, but when he saw the shiny silver coin in Lucien's hand, he hurriedly added. "... Well, people did not like him, so he had moved deep into that mountain. Follow the path and you'll find him."

Chapter 492: The Pioneer

After the previous several rounds of outbursts, it seemed that Alterna had temporarily come into control of the situation. It's been more than half a day since the last time the creepy colors crept out. Therefore, Lucien and Natasha had a relatively easy morning, which was a quite good thing to them as they were both injured.

Now it was already afternoon, and it was very hot. The sun was hanging up high above in the sky. Streams of sunlight fell through the leaves, casting bright light spots on the ground.

Natasha looked around and grinned, "I thought our injured looks would attract robbers, especially after you showed off the coins you have in front of the villagers. But the morning was quieter than I thought. That was much less fun."

"This is a world with no knights and sorcerers, remember? Although you're injured, the set of armor you're wearing is definitely a great threat to those who are interested in us. In their eyes, only the Divine-blooded and the Blessed can afford such a set of armor. They're not out of their mind..." Lucien grinned, and then he added casually, "also, compared to wealth, your beauty is for sure more appealing to them. I saw a couple of guys secretly tracking you in the town."

Natasha shot a glance at Lucien and said, "how could you be so sure that their target was me? By the way, look at the castle. It isn't bad, is it? I wonder if the guy named Nika had stepped onto the path of the ancient sorcerers."

In the front, where the black willows grew the thickest, there was a castle in the shape of a fortress covered with green vines and withered leaves. Although the color of the construction was hard to tell through the layers of plants, the pointy end of it had much resembled that of an orthodox sorcerer's magic tower. To the earliest generations of sorcerers, the pointy ends pulled them closer to the sky, as well as the truth of the world.

When they heard the anecdotes about Nika, both Lucien and Natasha related them to the origin of sorcerers.

Perhaps in the Age of Mythology and the Age of Steam, when dragons, elves, and werewolves ruled the land, it was because of the efforts of those lunatics like Nika that human beings were able to ascend to the power throne. However, because those ancient sorcerers had later gone down too far along the crazy and cruel path, they finally got their karma.

While in this world which was still ruled by divine right, magic had sprouted inevitably. Maybe Nika was not alone here in this world. Maybe in other places, there were more "lunatics" studying and researching just like Nika.

"Nika never learned meditation, nor is he able to cast any spells. But simply by using the incidental surges of his spiritual power, he could already move things and light things on fire. This means that his spiritual power had reached the third or fourth circle, and he's for sure much more talented in magic than I am. I'm afraid only a few sorcerers in the Congress such as Mr. Brook could rival him before learning magic systematically. He's such a genius. With so many years of hard work, it's sensible that he has made such an achievement." Lucien commented objectively.

However, being talented in magic did not necessarily mean being successful. Among the several geniuses that Lucien that mentioned, only Brook managed to reach the legendary level. In the history of magic, there were pioneers who were probably even more gifted than Nika, but none of them ascended to the senior-rank. However, it was because of the foundation they laid that the following generations could go further and further.

Talking, Lucien and Natasha approached the lonely castle.

A white, unusual-looking bird landed on the stone pillar in front of the castle.

"This's Nika's castle. Mr. Nika, the Wise, does not welcome any visitors." Chirped the little bird with its head held up high proudly.

Lucien smiled. "We wish to visit Mr. Nika the Wise, because we were told that he is an expert in plants and monster patterns. I'm also studying those, so I'd like to exchange some ideas with Mr. Nika."

"Umm? You're not another mocker?" Said the bird surprisedly, "you said you're also studying the secrets of the gods, but how could there be two lunatics? I don't know if you're lying or not. Hmm, I gotta test you first. Do you know what I am?"

"You're the only white crow in the world, Mr. Nika's pet, and you're intelligent," said Lucien smilingly.

The bird flapped its wings, content. "Great answer. But I gotta ask Nika first to see if he agrees to see you, another lunatic!"

After the bird flew into the window above, Natasha asked Lucien, "it's white because it's feathers have been dyed, right? There's no white crow according to Creature Encyclopedia."

"So it's the only white crow in the world. Other crows don't dye themselves." Lucien grinned.

Natasha realized and shook her head, smiling. "Alright."

A few minutes later, the castle gate squeaked and slowly opened. Behind the gate, a blond boy in a short, white robe said to them politely, "my teacher wants to meet you in his research room."

"Teacher? Are you Mr. Nika's student?" Lucien asked. He was having a difficult time believing that such a well-known lunatic would have a student, a boy who was only around eight or nine! Lucien wondered if the boy was kidnapped by Nika to use for human experiments.

The little boy was very familiar with the look on Lucien's face, as he had seen it many times before. "I AM Mr. Nika's student! Mr. Nika is not crazy, but a truly wise man! He knows those gods' secrets and has extraordinary powers. People say bad things about him because they are afraid of him!"

Then the little boy turned around angrily before Natasha and Lucien could say anything.

Lucien first checked around as usual and made sure that there were no magic defense circles, then he held Natasha by her right arm and walked in with her together, as Natasha's left arm had become completely paralytic.

Walking through the shabby hall and then up the stairs, they came to a dark corridor. Just as they entered the corridor, the little boy who was still angry at them suddenly spoke. "Mr. Nika is not crazy, really. He's been cutting up the plants and monsters because he wants to study them. Those hunters also kill, and they are used to blood, but they accuse Mr. Nika of being cruel. They just don't like the scenes of the experiments."

He was trying his best to defend Mr. Nika, hoping that the two visitors would agree with him.

"I understand." Lucien nodded. As a sorcerer, he was also familiar with anatomy. Meanwhile, Lucien also appreciated the little boy; he is a good student.

When he heard that Lucien said he understood, the little boy was encouraged, so he continued. "The patterns do hold the secrets of the gods. It's true! Mr. Nika has figured out how the power works, so he can manipulate flame and ice. He can also put people asleep and slow down a fall from high up. He's even more powerful than the Divine-blooded and the priests!"

"Really?" Natasha also tried to be supportive.

As the conversation went on well, the little boy became quite cheerful. "Really! I also know a little about it. Look!"

The little boy murmured some weird syllables, and his expression became rather serious. Some slight amount of magic waves emerged and formed an invisible hand. The hand then took down one of the candleholders from the left side of the corridor.

"It's a primitive version of Mage's Hand," said Lucien to Natasha through the telepathic bond.

The spell had not been simplified yet, and the boy was mimicking the language of the monsters.

"It's cool, right?" The little boy raised in the candleholder in pride. Seeing that the two visitors were nodding approvingly, his face glowed with excitement. "Mr. Nika is way, way more powerful than I am! We have neither the divine blood nor the power from gods. It all comes from hard work!"

"Mr. Nika said that we human beings have to rely on ourselves to get rid of the control of the false gods. Others don't understand, but I do. He's a truly wise man. He's even smarter than the gods!" The little boy exclaimed full of admiration.

"Indeed, a great pioneer," said Lucien seriously.

The little boy's effort to persuade the visitors was adorable. After being encouraged, he kept talking and talking, unconsciously letting out many secrets of his teacher and the place.

Soon, the three of them came to a door covered with grey beast skin, on which were complicated magic patterns.

It was a Stoner's skin. Lucien slightly frowned. It seemed that Nika was even more powerful than he thought. Although a Stoner was not as stout as a Stone Lizard, it was still a senior-rank creature as it was able to cast the sixth-circle spell, Petrification.

The little boy knocked at the specific section of the door and said, "Mr. Nika found it in a valley. But the patterns are too complicated, so he's still trying to figure out their secrets. Mr. Nika uses the skin to protect the research room."

Then the door opened. The smell of blood that came out from it was overwhelming. The entire room was like a showroom of organs. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

In this world, glass had not been invented. The weird-looking hearts, eyeballs, guts, and chunks of flesh were randomly placed everywhere. The windows in the room were narrow, so the entire space was quite dark. It's normal for someone to feel scared when staying in this room.

A middle-aged man whose black hair was all messy was concentrating on drawing something. On the operation desk in front of him lied a very terrifying monster. The upper part of the monster was a naked woman, and the lower part consisted of eight giant, black spider legs. The naked woman body was covered with mysterious patterns, and its mouth was protruding.

Lucien slightly nodded. It was a woman-spider.

The little boy felt a bit sorry as his teacher completely ignored the visitors. "Mr. Nika is always fully devoted to it when studying the patterns. He will ignore everything else, whether its eating, sleeping, or teaching me. It won't take long, though."

Lucien and Natasha exchanged a look, for they were in a hurry. Then Lucien turned to look at the parchment sheet in front of Nika.

There was a very complex pattern on the sheet and a rough coordinate system. Nika's eyebrows was twisted together. It seemed that he was facing a serious problem.

"(25, 78, 39)," Lucien suddenly spoke.

Nika unconsciously followed Lucien's instruction and traced his quill pen to the spot, then his eyes opened big and he turned around.

"You know this?"

The little boy was totally lost. Was this visitor teaching Mr. Nika?

"To analyze this kind of pattern, you must break it up. One of the coordinates is..." Lucien gave another pair of coordinates.

Following Lucien's instruction, Nika finished the analysis of part of the pattern. He stared at the numbers for a couple of seconds, and then his expression changed to a mixture of excitement and mania. He suddenly strode to Lucien.

"How did you figure this out?" Nika's voice was dry and hoarse.

Lucien did not answer him directly.

"When you're studying the patterns, you also need to look out at the world. The patterns are indeed mysterious and full of secrets, but what about the world? The sun and moon rise and fall; water flows from a higher position to the lower. What are the secrets behind them? Why is it when we jump up, we always fall back to the ground? Why don't we float up toward the sky?"

"What's about it? It's normal. We must fall back. It's the ground." The little boy chipped in.

Nika, however, was shocked.

Chapter 493: The Sage

Seeing that Nika was thinking hard but still couldn't find a clue, Lucien hurriedly cut him off. "It's the power of the earth. We call it gravity."

"Power of the earth?" Nika was still very confused. In this world where everything was still in the rudiment, even the concept of the four elements earth, fire, wind, and water was not yet proposed.

Lucien nodded. "The power of the earth attaches us to it and keeps the stars, the sun, and the moon revolving. Birds have to keep flapping their wings to resist the power and fly freely..."

As he was speaking, Lucien cast Gravity Chaos, making the gadgets on the operation desk rose into the air and then suddenly drop.

Nika threw a random monster's heart up into the air and watched it fall down to the ground. After the muffled sound of the pile of flesh hitting the floor, Nika repeated to himself, "The power of the earth..."

The boy's eyes opened big in surprise. "Sir, are... are you a wise man, too?"

The boy's voice dragged Nika out from his own thoughts, and Nika stared at Lucien in great enthusiasm. "Can you explain it to me in detail? And how did you break up the pattern..."

"We're in a hurry. I'll leave some books to you later," said Lucien, pointing at Natasha's injured left arm. "Mr. Nika, do you know a kind of blood-red flowers that can catch small animals?"

Having no idea how people in this world call Bloody Family, Lucien described its appearance to Nika. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Nika was slightly stunned. He frowned and said, "are you talking about the Gronin Flower? Aki, fetch one for this gentleman."

The boy named Aki hurriedly walked to the storage room next door.

Nika finally noticed that both of the visitors were injured. He calmed down a bit and asked, "are you here for cures?"

"No. I know magic," Lucien shook his head. "I just need the flowers to make some potions."

"Magic?" That was another new word for Nika.

Lucien slightly raised his chin and smiled. "That's how the power you have is called."

Nika remained silent for a while. In his eyes, the visitor was beyond mysterious.

Natasha, who was feeling fatigued from the injury, was just smiling and listening to their conversation.

Aki, at this time, had come back with a big red flower in his hand. Lucien saw the flower and took it over from Aki. He turned to Nika and asked, "this is the flower I'm looking for. Mr. Nika, can I borrow one of your spare rooms?"

As a sorcerer, Lucien always carried his alchemy hut with him.

Nika was not good at socializing. When he heard Lucien's words, he quickly nodded, completely forgotten that the flower belonged to him. "Aki, go and find them a spare room."

Lucien put his right hand on his chest and bowed lightly. "To show my appreciation, I have some gifts for you, Sir. Please give me enough parchment rolls or papyrus."

Nika shook his head. "You're my guest. I should help you. I don't need gifts, but later we can discuss..."

"The gifts are books about magic." Lucien cut him off.

The look on Nika's face abruptly changed.

"Aki, go and grab all my parchment sheets here!"

"Ha, Lucien, you sorcerers can be really straightforward sometimes, in a cute way," Natasha commented through the telepathic bond, laughing. "Just like that that you've never kissed a girl yet because you've spent all your time in your lab, haha!"

Seeing that his teacher was in such an elation, Aki, although he did not understand what magic was, also became very excited. He dashed for the study and then came back with a pile of parchment sheets almost as tall as him.

"From Magic Basics to Model Construction, The Significance of Modelling, Basic Magic Geometry, Element Equations behind Magic Formula, Basic Element, Low-rank Meditations, Basic Alchemy..." Lucien produced a long list.

Every time Lucien finished replicating a book, Nika read out the name. His eyes lit up with great excitement light the bright stars in the night sky. His body slightly trembling, Nika had completely forgotten everything else in the world, except for only the names of the books.

Lucien copied the elementary level books in his spirit library and translated them into the Baburian version. He said to Nika, smiling, "when you finish reading all of the books, you can organize and simplify your own knowledge and gain a deeper understanding."

Lucien was going to lead Nika to the Congress of Magic. After all, Nika was such a genius.

"Thank you, thank you!" Nika kept repeating the same words. Just from the names, he could figure out the value of these books. Then Nika said to Lucien a bit shyly, "sir, what about the power of the earth you just mentioned?"

Lucien thought it for a while. Seeing that there were still lots of parchment sheets left, he put his hand back on the pile again and copied another three books for Nika.

"These three books... One talks about theories of gravity and provides better calculation tools, one is a classic work in electromagnetism, and one introduces the latest theoretical system of Element and Alchemy. Although you won't be able to understand them in a short period of time, reading them will help you build your knowledge system from a higher perspective, so your theoretical framework will be more complete."

"Math Principles in the Philosophy of Magic, Electromagnetism, New Alchemy..." Nika could not move his eyes away from the three books.

Aki had got lost with the piles of books on the desk. He asked excitedly but also confusedly, "what are they, Sir?"

Before Lucien and Natasha left for the spare room, Lucien asked. "Mr. Nika, do you have any iron ores that look like crystal here?"

Lucien hoped that he could also fix his Holm Crown rings, so he could be more prepared for what was coming for them.

"I do! Take as much as you want!" Said Nika without any hesitation, who had already started reading one of the books.

...

The sun sank in the west, inside the castle had become darker and darker.

The door of a guest room opened with a creak. Lucien and Natasha walked out full of energy.

"Your left hand really behaved itself for the entire afternoon. I hope the rest of the six days are all like this." Natasha joked.

In the past several hours, Lucien made the potion called Heart of Sun, removed the cursing toxin from their bodies, fixed his Holm Crown rings, and partially fixed Natasha's armor called the Violet Guardian.

Lucien replied on purpose, "it's always very peaceful before a storm arrives."

"No worries. I am on full alert." Natasha pulled out Pale Justice to show that she had fully recovered.

At this time, Nika pushed his door open and dashed out. Rather exhausted but thrilled, Nika said to Lucien with a book in his hand, "although there are lots that I don't understand, I have felt the profound knowledge and the great value in the books. My distinguished guests, please tell me, where are the great sages Derrick Douglas, Edwyn Brook, and Lucien Evans? I have to find and follow them!"

Natasha burst out laughing. Lucien cleared his throat a bit as his protest.

"You can understand some of it?" Lucien was surprised. Although he knew that Nika was very gifted and talented, it was still hard to believe that Nika can understand part of the three books without having any foundations previously.

Nika rubbed his hands against each other, and his face flushed slightly. "Just a tiny bit. I first read some of the basic books and understood the terms, and then I turned to the three books. Also, I've been thinking of some of the questions discussed in the books. Now I finally understand what element, atom, gravity, and lightning are!"

"I see." Lucien nodded. Nika definitely had a very good foundation for learning magic, it's just that he had never touched upon the theoretical section. Then Lucien switched the topic. "Sir, do you know any special spots nearby?"

Lucien hoped to know more about the northern mountain range so that they could hide from Demigod-lich more easily.

Nika hardly talked to people, so he was basically following Lucien's words to keep the conversation going. "Special spots? Well... I'm not sure what kind of special spot you're looking for, but I know a valley down below a nearby cliff, where many dangerous creatures live. The skin on the door was found there..."

"... If you go over the mountain, you'll see a very creepy forest. I'm not able to spread out my spiritual power there. Besides the forest is a very, very big lake. And it's incredibly deep. There's a secret cave at the bottom of the lake that is connected to the other side of the mountain. I found it when I was hunting a water creature.

"Behind the dark forest, there's a valley filled with greyish white fog. Ghosts and specters cry in the valley all the time. So far I haven't gone into the valley yet. I dare not."

Nika tried his best to recall the places he had been to.

Lucien and Natasha listened to him carefully without cutting him off. When Nika finished, Lucien said to him, "thank you for giving us so much information. You can take the books with you and find a man named Rehau in the Metarin oasis in the eastern desert. Rehau will lead you to an organization that studies magic jointly, an organization built by the sorcerers around the world. When you get there, you will have a better environment for studying magic."

Nika knew what a sorcerer was after reading the introductory books. He nodded hard. "I can't wait. By the way, are the three sages still alive?"

Lucien simply nodded and was about to leave with Natasha. At this time, Nika finally realized that he never asked the mysterious visitor's name. "My distinguished guest, may I know your name? When I arrive at the oasis, who shall I refer to?"

Nika remembered scarcely that the groups for sharing books in the nearby area required a referrer.

Before Lucien replied, Natasha grinned and said, "his name? His name's Lucien Evans."

Nika was shocked. He suddenly lost all his words.

At this time, Lucien and Natasha had flown out of the castle.

...

Only a tint of dark red hung over the horizon. The early stars were hiding within.

"I think that the creepy valley that Nika mentioned is Death Valley, the previous divine realm of the Lord of Underworld. It's also the origin of the Solna River, and where Alterna and the mysterious existence from the World of Souls fell." Lucien introduced briefly.

"Then we have to go and check it out," said Natasha seriously. "We can probably find something to fight against Demigod-lich. We can't keep hiding."

"What a pity that you're not yet able to pick up the Shield of Truth, or we'd have no worries at all." Lucien joked.

Natasha glared at Lucien. "I have to be a gold knight to be able to pick it up. Also, legendary items are as scarce as the legends. There's no way that we can find another now."

Basically, except for the few top legends, most legends or countries only had one to two legendary items.

The breeze coming through the tree branches was rather refreshing. However, it somehow felt too quiet, unusually quiet.

Something suddenly occurred to Lucien, and he asked, "when was the last time we spotted the specter servants sent by Demigod-lich?"

The look on Natasha's face changed. "This morning."

"Go!" Lucien suddenly tensed.

Chapter 494: The Great Danger

Right now, both Lucien and Natasha dared not to fly. If they flew close to the trees, they would be blocked by hills and tree crowns, which would slow them down and delay them even more; if they flew high up in the clear sky, they would easily be spotted.

After casting Advanced Speed on himself, Lucien was moving almost as fast as Natasha, who was a radiant knight. They flashed through the dark forest like two streaks of shadow.

As they were running, a burst of bright light exploded in front of Lucien's eyes. He lost his sight for a couple of seconds because the light was so unexpected and dazzlingly bright.

Natasha, however, was made immune to the bright light by her blood power. She changed her direction in midair and jumped at a big tree nearby.

The early evening stars had been dyed with red by the setting sun. In the warm hue stood an alluring beauty in a long, white robe. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

It was Asin, the God of Love and Beauty! Natasha instantly recognized who she was.

Without any hesitation, she wielded the sword in her hand, an unreal crevice that seems to not belong to this world appeared with the movement of the sword and directly whacked the light of the dusk star into two.

Before the defense shield was destroyed, Asin's body dimmed and was about to integrate into the darkness.

However, before Asin disappeared, Lucien had activated a magic spell with his spiritual power. An invisible wall appeared on the shadow. Asin hit the wall and bounced back. Then Natasha's sword cut Asin's throat open.

There was no blood coming out, only a thick cut. Against the power of Pale Justice, the two defense spells activated were torn open like a thin piece of paper. When Asin's head fell onto the ground, her body also quickly perished.

In the Life Ritual, Asin had already died and become an undead creature manipulated by Congus and was therefore unable to ward off Pale Justice, which was at the legendary level when swung against an undead.

Bits of God's Glory drifted out from Asin's body and attached to the cracks in Natasha's armor. Meanwhile, the rotten body had lost its power and turned into Asin's original look — a centaur.

Natasha was very surprised, but it was not the perfect time asking why. She came back to Lucien and said, "let's go. Asin tried to stop us even when he knew it would be a great risk. It means that Demigod-lich is already nearby!"

Asin's domain included that of tracking and hiding, that's why Lucien and Natasha did not find out that they were being followed. If Demigod-lich was still far away from them, Asin, who still had a little bit of intelligence remaining, would not reveal Her presence in front of Lucien and Natasha.

Lucien's sight resumed. He turned around and was ready to head for the dark forest over the cliff.

Suddenly, bitter crying and howling approached them. The atmosphere instantly became overwhelmed with the aura of death. Water and life force started to leak away.

Demigod-lich was here!

Lucien and Natasha realized it at the same time. Natasha swiftly turned around and help Pale Justice straight up in front of them to block the fatal sound waves brought by Demigod-lich's Howling.

In the crying and howling, birds within the radius of two hundred meters fell down to the ground one by one, their bodies already partially decayed before they even touched the soil.

Pale Justice lit up. Its light was warm, soft, but determined. In the horrible and sharp howling, the sword trembled fiercely, as if the power had reached its limit.

Facing a legendary over a thousand years old, an experienced sorcerer with endless spells, there seemed to be absolutely no chance for them to win at all. To die in peace would be a blessing from the God of Truth.

The dangerous power came closer and closer. The distance between them would soon be less than two hundred sixty meters!

Lucien, at this time, took a step forward and lifted his left hand. Dazzling moonlight came out from his hand, and black flame twined around it.

"En?" Accompanying the voice, white light of life force and pure moisture joined together, and they formed a wall of defense dazzling in green and grey light.

Lucien's left hand fiercely hacked downward, but nothing happened.

He immediately turned around and dashed. Through the telepathic bond, he shouted to Natasha.

"Run! Out of the three hundred meters range, then we may still have hope!"

Lucien just made Alterna temporarily stopped suppressing the power of the mysterious existence in the World of Souls, pretending that Alterna was ready to fight to frighten Demigod-lich.

Lucien could only use this method once. Although it would work if Lucien simply let Alterna out, in the end, Lucien would still die from the mysterious existence's pieces losing control. Unless there were no other choices, Lucien would not turn to this last plan.

Understanding how urgent the situation was, Natasha immediately pulled out the sword and caught Lucien up. She was faster than Lucien, so she grabbed Lucien's arm and dragged him to run around the cliff.

Under the great pressure, Natasha was running even faster than she thought she could. In the darkness, the two figures became two almost invisible shadows.

The angry voice came from far behind, advancing very quickly.

"I'm going to turn both of you into corpse servants!"

The concrete colors of black, white and grey extended out and covered Lucien's body. This was the consequence of Alterna temporarily let go of the pieces.

Fortunately, Natasha was prepared for this. She grabbed Lucien with her left hand and kept running for their lives as fast as she could.

When the long mountain road ended, in front of Natasha there were two options: On her right-hand side was the dark forest, while on her left was the extremely deep lake that Nika mentioned. Meanwhile, the horrible power approaching them from behind was closer and closer.

According to Nika's words, the lake was at least four to five hundred meters deep. She slightly slowed down and cut off the dull colors on Lucien with her sword. Then, she pulled Lucien together with her and jumped into the lake.

The world suddenly became silent. They sank fast in the water.

Not yet reaching the radiant knight level, Lucien was not able to move or breathe easily as he wished underwater. He also dared not to cast Sea Cloak, as Demigod-lich might sense the magic waves.

Natasha took a glance at Lucien and pulled him in her arms. Then her lips attached to that of Lucien and infused fresh air into his mouth.

Lucien had no time to taste the kiss at all. He was sinking fast with Natasha.

Pointing at the cliff, he gestured to Natasha that there was a slant limestone cave.

Under his black cloak, Demigod-lich stared at the two paths and came into a dilemma. He cast a couple of spells but none provided a solid answer. He was rather pissed: In this bloody world, the ultimate range covered by his spiritual power was about only two hundred meters. Even with those investigation spells, the figure could only go up by around a hundred meters.

After one day of tracing, he already knew that Lucien's track of destiny was unusual and that Natasha was shielded by the power of Alterna, so he did not waste his time on casting prophecy and horoscope spells.

However, as a legendary sorcerer, Congus the Demigod-lich was by no chance a fool. After a while of thinking, Congus sent out his Devourers, Dead Giants, and mummies to the dark forest to search for Lucien and Natasha. Meanwhile, Congus himself flew to the lake and cast the spell above the lake.

"Toxin of Filth."

Suddenly, the waves in the lake turned pale and the color quickly expanded. Fish floated to the surface of the lake, half-rotten.

The lake gurgled as if it was boiling. A shadow huge as large as a castle surfaced. It was a giant monster with a dragon bloodline!

However, it had also gone rotten!

Underwater, when Lucien and Natasha saw the slant cave, both of them were very encouraged.

However, at this time, Natasha noticed that the color of the lake was turning pale very fast. The nearby algae and weeds were all gone, together with the fish. Surrounding them was the sheer silence.

"Go!" Natasha yelled through the telepathic bond.

Swimming for their lives, their speed had reached their physical limit.

When they were almost there, the muddy paleness had also arrived.

Natasha, at this time, grabbed Lucien's arm and pushed him into the cave when Lucien was totally unprepared.

Meanwhile, she turned around and pulled out Pale Justice against the death power.

The power of the sword divided the paleness into halves. Pressing against the sea cliff with her left hand, Natasha turned over and jumped into the cave.

"Watch out!" Lucien hurriedly cast a spell and stopped the paleness in the shape of disgusting tentacles from catching Natasha.

As soon as Natasha jumped out from the water in the cave, she also turned around and hacked her sword at the pale tentacles.

With joint effort, they finally got rid of the filthy paleness. However, Natasha's armor, the Violet Guardian, had been severely damaged. There was even a hole in the back.

Natasha had never had such a dangerous experience before, and she now felt extremely exhausted. But she knew that they could not stop here as they have not escaped from the danger yet. She forced herself to move on and said to Lucien,

"Keep moving. We'll be safe on the other side."

"Will you?" A cold voice came from the front of them.

Demigod-lich emerged from nowhere in his black cloak.

All their efforts ended up to be in vain. For a second, both Natasha and Lucien had lost all their hope.

However, desperation only existed for a blink. After a brief communication through the telepathic bond, Natasha picked up her sword and swung it at Demigod-lich.

"Life Depri..." Congus knew that Pale Justice was extremely powerful to specters and could actually injure him, so he was very cautious. He was ready to kill Natasha with one single strike.

However, Natasha suddenly disappeared from where she was. Congus lost his target, while Lucien was holding Sun Staff inlaid with the big gem on the top.

"A ninth-circle maze... interesting..." Congus sneered. "But you're on yourself now."

He was ready to confine Lucien using Spirit Confinement.

Lucien begged in desperation. He seemed to be in a demented state.

"All you want is to kill me, right? You want Alterna and the pieces, right? Come and get them!

"But please let her go. She has nothing to do with this. She is implicated because of me, and, yes, she's a descendant of Her Excellency Hathaway!"

Congus was a bit amused, as he was a bit surprised to see that Lucien, who was praised as always remaining well-mannered and calm, had lost all of his dignity. "For this very reason, I won't keep her alive. If they know, Hathaway and that old bastard Lord of Storm would find every possible way to kill me."

Congus stared at Lucien and continued. "What a pity. You could have the chance to become a grand arcanist, and your achievement could exceed my students', or even mine. But you overestimated yourself. Your involvement in the World of Souls and the fact that Maskelyne gave you his amulet are doomed to kill you."

In Congus' eyes, Lucien had completely lost all hope.

Lucien burst out into tears. "Let her go! I give you all you want! Alterna, and the pieces!"

What happened next slightly shocked Congus: Lucien's right hand suddenly grabbed his left arm and directly pulled it off from his body. The white bones and red flesh formed a sharp contrast, astonishing by the sight.

"You want it? I give it to you! All!" Lucien cried out aloud and threw his left arm at Congus.

Had Lucien totally gone mad?

Although feeling it quite unexpected, Congus did now lower his alert. Using Mage's Hand, he caught Lucien's left arm in great caution.

At this time, the left harm burst out dazzling silver light and the colors of black, white and grey quickly extended. The colors instantly infected the mage's hand and then completely enveloped Congus.

All the exaggerated looks and emotions disappeared on Lucien's face. Calmly, he lifted up Sun Staff and pointed it at the void.

Natasha's figure emerged in the air. Without any hesitation, she wielded Pale Justice and hacked it directly at Demigod-lich!

Chapter 495: Reward

Chapter 495: Reward

The long sword looked ordinary, radiating a soft but determined glow. As the silver-purple in Natasha's eyes became pure crystal-clear, two illusory splits that looks as though they could split the world apart suddenly appeared on the blade. In a mere second, the sword had reached Congus' head.

The vital part of a lich was not its heart and neck. Only by damaging the head, where the soul resided, could one effectively injure a lich.

Under the weight of the "Pale Justice", streaks of transparent cracks appeared in the boring mix of black, white and grey. Two needle-like red spots were revealed underneath.

Puff... It sounded like the sword just hacked onto a piece of rotten wood. All the emergency defense spells were rendered invalid by the power of the mysterious existence in the World of Souls.

"Ah!!!" A bitter and piercing shriek burst out.

And Natasha was directly blown away by the power. Blood came out from her eyes, nose, and mouth.

This was not Demigod-lich's Howling, but the spiritual power waves released by Congus in great fury. Although with Pale Justice's protection, Natasha was still severely injured. Meanwhile, Lucien suffered even more from the great power. He felt beyond dizzy, and there was a strong taste of blood in his mouth.

"Good... Good!" Congus's furious voice seemed to come from far away.

Both Lucien's and Natasha's hearts sank for a second.

Was Congus still "alive"?!

Suddenly, Congus's black cloak split from the middle. The white skeleton inside collapsed to the ground and decayed instantly. The smell stank badly.

On the skull, two deep cracks appeared, under which warm holy light twinkled.

Then with a crispy sound, the skull cracked open. The smaller golden skull in the middle also bore undescrivable unreal injuries.

Without the protection of the defense spells, this one single strike was almost as powerful as the power of Alterna to Congus.

Pale Justice, the terminator of all evils, was a legendary weapon at this moment!

The silver moonlight seized control over the mixed colors of black, white and grey, preventing it from spreading out.

"I will be back. You'd better come up with some better tricks!" Congus proclaimed in a voice was full of viciousness.

The golden skull broke into three pieces and clattered on the ground, while Congus' soul slowly faded from the scene.

"Even with this he still isn't entirely dead! Liches, no, sorcerers are so troublesome!" Natasha complained half-jokingly in a finally relaxed mood.

Lucien was already lying on the ground, unable to move. He felt that his neurons twitched under the sharp pain. However, he felt such ease in his mind. Despite the cost, they had defeated Demigod-lich!, Although he had been stuck at the accident of the legendary level for hundreds of years, he was still a true legendary sorcerer! Without a doubt, they were very proud of themselves.

"Among... Among all the sorcerers, necromancers are the hardest to... to kill." Lucien gasped through the sentence due to the great pain. But after he pulled out a tube of Water Song and drank it all, he felt better. Then he continued. "But we nailed it! Now Congus has to go back to the main material world for his resurgence using his phylactery since he had used up his most convenient backup last time. This means we'll be safe for at least one day."

Natasha stood up and carefully brought Lucien's left arm to him. "We can get ready by making the most of the day. Then as long as we can stay alive for one more day, given that the pieces can behave themselves like today, granny Hathaway and the Lord of Storm shall be arriving. By the way, can you put this back?"

"I'm not a radiant knight," said Lucien. But he still stood up slowly and took over his left arm. Pressing it against the cut, the flesh and nerves started growing, and the bones were covered in a layer of dim white light.

Carrying the Saint Badge given by Ell, Lucien was as strong as a grand knight. Plus his blood power, the magic potion Water Song, and the power of Alterna, although he could not fully recover, Lucien could still roughly put the left arm back. However, the pain and the torturing itch from the growing of flesh were so intolerable that Lucien had to bite his lips very tight to stop himself from crying out loud.

At this time, a cold hand touched Lucien's face, soothing his pain while delivering great willpower.

Natasha frowned slightly, but she joked deliberately to distract Lucien. "You finally get to know how I felt when there was a hole in my lower abdomen, huh? A grand knight can quickly recover, but it's an awful torture."

Beads of sweat covered Lucien's forehead, but were then gently wiped off by Natasha. A few minutes later, Lucien finally managed to force a smile and replied, "I couldn't tell by then. You were even discussing how to barbecue your own organs."

"Hehe, do you want me to cook one for you now?" Natasha grinned. Seeing that Lucien now felt much better, she asked. "How's Alterna right now? Is your arm growing back okay?"

Lucien nodded. "Alterna just released the control, so the pieces of the mysterious existence had a chance to recover a bit. Without my blood power and spiritual power, Alterna might not be able to always stay in control. If that happens, we probably won't be able to escape to a three-hundred-meter distance in time."

Then Lucien tried to move his left arm and estimated. "I can lift it and do some simple actions, but not the complex ones, not to mention the delicate gestures for casting. I have to use a Necromancy rite to fully recover."

Natasha felt relieved knowing that there wouldn't be any permanent injury left in Lucien's arm. Like a victor, she lifted Pale Justice and said in good spirit, "although we haven't fully killed Congus, I'm sure I'm the first level-seven knight ever who managed to kill a legendary during direct combat! That's awesome! Absolutely awesome!"

She paced around full of excitement, her face flushing slightly.

"This's the adventure I long for! A friend that knows me well, powerful enemies, dangerous fights. If I can go back alive, this is gonna be a memory of my lifetime!"

"Me, too," said Lucien seriously, staring at Natasha's lips, "but we'd better not pursue this kind of fight all the time, or we'd die sooner or later."

"Of course, if it wasn't because of you, I would have gone back to Varantine's area directly." As the future top leader, Natasha understood how important it was to keep herself safe. She arrived in Erdo this time on her own because she had previously received Hathaway's message that Lucien went missing. Thus, she had purposefully picked the commission to explore and investigate the space, so that she could search for Lucien in the area controlled by the Church, where Hathaway and the Lord of Storm were not suited to enter.

It took her two months before she found Lucien on the remote Erdo peninsula.

Natasha then added in excitement. "I'm gonna put this on record in my family history. Descendants of my family will regard me as a real knight with great bravery and determination, and they'll know that she has a sorcerer friend.”

After a short pause, Natasha smiled at Lucien. “I’m also gonna put on record that beside defeating Demigod-lich, she also took away the first kiss of a grand arcanist. Well, I’m sure you’ll become a grand arcanist in the future.”

She expressed her positiveness towards Lucien’s future achievements. At this time, thinking positively gave her the confidence to face the even greater danger coming for them the day after.

They had to equip themselves with hope to face desperation.

Feeling a bit embarrassed, Lucien smiled and asked carefully. “Don’t you feel... ugh.. disgusted when kissing a man?”

Natasha rubbed her chin and thought about it carefully, but then she said a bit confusedly, “I thought I would, but it wasn’t as bad as I imagined. Maybe it’s because you are my best friend, or maybe it’s clean as that was your first kiss.”

She smacked her lips, as if she was trying to recall how the kiss felt.

Lucien had to admit that Natasha’s masculinity was still impressive to him. Meanwhile, he was quite happy about it because this was good progress between Natasha and him.

“Alright, let’s go and check the Death Valley out,” said Lucien. “We’ll try to see if there’s a way to keep us safe.”

“Okay.” said Natasha. She wiped off the blood on her face and grabbed Lucien’s arm.

Before they left the cave, they saw something shining dimly on the ground.

“What is it?” Natasha approached it and found that there was an ancient-style ring hiding underneath the rotten golden skull.

Lucien’s eyes suddenly lit up. ” All the rest of Congus’ magic items were destroyed under Alterna’s strike. And he didn’t return to the main material world and his demiplane after that, which means this is a...”

“Legendary item!” Both of them exclaimed at the same time full of wild surprise.

Lucien walked closer to the ring but did not touch it. He explained to Natasha.

“Many magic items have creepy powers. Take my magic robe as an example, I can hide my soul in it and then wait for a body to occupy when someone tries to take away the robe. The ring may be Demigod-lich’s only legendary item, so we have to be careful. Protect me with Pale Justice; It is a legendary item when it comes to defence against soul attacks or curses.”

Natasha nodded. She pulled out the sword and grabbed it tight.

Lucien calmed himself down and cast Identification on the ring.

Chapter 496: Congus Ring A Longer

"? ? ?"

Lucien didn't know how he should react when he saw the identification result. The Identification spell yielded no information at all. He figured that it was probably because the ring was much more powerful than his current level.

"What is it?" Natasha noticed the change in Lucien's expression.

Since there were only the two of them here, Lucien did not hide his feelings.

Lucien nodded. "I'm trying to analyze it. Watch out for me. If anything goes wrong, cut off the connection between the ring and me immediately."

"Be careful." Natasha held her sword tight and stood beside Lucien.

Lucien spread out his spiritual power and carefully touched the simple black ring with it.

Suddenly, Lucien's spiritual power was dragged into an illusionary land. He stood on the lifeless earth covered with cracks and under the gloomy sky. Surrounding him were clusters of dried grass and greyish-white rivers. However, the white sun in the sky radiated a strong life force.

On the barren land, graves and black tombstones were everywhere. Many of them were slanted or broken. There were so many of them that they looked like clusters of short bushes on the deserted land.

However, the scene revealed a completely different picture in Lucien's eyes. The tombstones, the graves, the rivers, and the filthy clouds connected with each other in a way that was too complicated even to him. The complicity of the structure exceeded that of any spell structures that Lucien had ever seen, and even merely looking at it made Lucien feel dizzy and weak.

Lucien first ruled out all the illusionary images and then started analyzing it bit by bit. The work was hard, but Lucien was not aiming at figuring out the whole structure but only knowing the function of the ring.

Casting Identification from time to time, half an hour later, Lucien finally figured out where the control core of the ring was.

Withdrawing his spiritual power, Lucien said to Natasha exhaustedly, "I need to take a fifteen-minute break now. Then I'll stimulate the control core of the ring and activate the spiritual imprint left by Congus within. You seize the chance to wipe it off using Pale Justice."

During the past three years, Lucien had been working on many cutting-edge math problems with the arcanists from Tower including Leviski, therefore, the legendary-level structure within the ring was not completely out of his comprehension. He was actually able to use some smarter ways to crack it. However, because of Lucien's lack of Necromancy knowledge and his relatively low level, although he had no problem with math, he still had to refer to violence. But with the adequate support of his knowledge, using violence would be much easier now.

"You can find a way to stimulate it? It's a legendary-level ring." After knowing that Lucien did not get any feedback from Identification, Natasha's previous excitement faded away. Sometimes, a legendary level item did not bring one good fortune or power, but spelled a disaster, especially when the difference between the levels was too big.

Lucien smiled, although his face still looked a bit pale. "Why not? Come on, I probably can become a grand arcanist before turning thirty. I can at least roughly figure out a legendary structure."

In front of the woman he admired, every man would try to show off his capability, no matter how old he was.

"When I first got to know you, I didn't realize you were this smart. Honestly speaking, every time when I saw you guys playing with those numbers and shapes, I was always very impressed, although I can't quite understand." Natasha rubbed her chin and changed her tone as if she was talking to a junior. "But be careful, as I was told that overstraining your brain would make you turn bald."

Natasha did receive a full set of magic apprentice curriculum when she was young. Her mother taught her pretty much about everything except for meditation, including spell-casting, math, geometry, Element, Electromagnetism, Force Field, Astrology. Her mother hoped that Natasha could become a profound noble lady.

In other words, Natasha had at least a high school diploma if it had been in today. Besides, she also knew history, fighting, coat of arms, and manners very well.

Lucien was a bit amused. "You think a sorcerer can't deal with alopecia?"

"Well... I think you're right, but lots of nobles are worrying about it. Maybe you can help. It's always your motivation, isn't it? To benefit the public using magic." said Natasha.

The topic of their conversation kept drifting like all the time.

When Lucien first mentioned his ambition in front of Natasha, his words impressed Natasha greatly. Although as a top noble, Natasha could hardly fully understand the lives of the ordinary folks, there was no doubt to her that there was a lot of money for the nobles to dig in for in Lucien's idea, and the country could also thrive from it.

Evans Hair Tonic? Lucien thought to himself.

But he wasn't a big fan of the product name at all. He shot a glance at Natasha and then shook his head in great determination. "Enough. Let's start."

Natasha was quite content that her joke caught Lucien again. So she got more serious and held the sword tight again.

Lucien took a deep breath and again extended his spiritual power onto the ring. This time, his spiritual power did not just stay on the surface, but suddenly dived in, heading for the horrifying clusters of tombstones.

Then, based on his rough understanding of the place, Lucien came around the defense on the outside and then directly headed for one of the ordinary black tombstones.

A red line of epitaph suddenly appeared on it:

"This is the best place for confinement, as everyone will eventually be confined in this small coffin."

A name was inscribed underneath — Congus.

The scarlet words started distorting, turning into horrifying monster mouths, and they instantly tore Lucien's spiritual power apart into pieces. Behind the gravestone came out a blurry specter. Its eyes were shining in jade-green light.

"Now!" Lucien said aloud to Natasha through the telepathic bond. He was in agony as his spiritual power was suffering from the bitter impact.

This was the best chance!

Natasha was well prepared, and she fully trusted Lucien. Following Lucien's instruction, she hacked at the ring.

Greyish-white smoke was released from the ring, and it sounded like that the cluster of smoke was crying. However, under the power of Pale Justice, the smoke quickly disappeared.

Now the black ring looked very dim. The gloss on it earlier was now gone.

Lucien took some time to recover from the pain and started leaving his spiritual imprint in the ring. Meanwhile, Natasha kept staying alert in case there was a further trap left by Congus.

As soon as Lucien finished leaving the imprint, suddenly, the ring started sucking in Lucien's spiritual power like a huge vortex. Within seconds, pretty much all of Lucien's spiritual power had been drained. He had to turn to his Holm Crown ring, Origin, to get out the extra spiritual power that he saved earlier.

Meanwhile, Lucien seized the chance and turned the black hole in his cognitive world to the front, facing the huge spiritual power vortex! The two holes were like two suction pumps rivaling against each other!

The black hole finally distorted the entire space. The speed of Lucien losing his spiritual power suddenly slowed down. Then Lucien heard something snapped, and the suction from the ring instantly disappeared.

"Are you alright?" Asked Natasha concerned, seeing that Lucien's entire face had turned very pale.

Lucien sighed. "I did leave my spiritual imprint in it, but this ring is not something that I am able to use right now."

Then Lucien shared the information of the ring with Natasha through the telepathic bond:

"Congus Ring, level-one senior-rank legendary item. The wearer has to be close to the ninth circle, or he would be drained up of all spiritual power and turned into an idiot.

"The qualified wearer will be immune to all the magic spells from the first to eighth circle, immune to Confinement, Shadow Killer, Energy Drain, Command, and Banshee Howling. Also, the wearer will have a good defense against legendary-level spells in the field of necromancy and illusion, even if they are cast by a top legendary.

"The wearer's physical fitness, life force recovery speed, and physical defense will also be improved by to levels, reaching the limit of that of a gold knight. Meanwhile, there is also an extra level of magic resistance improvement up to level-two legendary, and the wearer will be immune to any toxin and disease spells lower than the legendary level, as well as some cursing spells based on necromancy power.

"In addition, the wearer is automatically cast with Advanced Invisibility (4th circle) and Advanced Speed (6th circle), unless the wearer chooses to deactivate them. Every day, the wearer can cast Confinement (9th circle) for four times, Undead Scourge (9th circle) for three times, and Time Stop (9th circle) for two times.

"Meanwhile, the ring contains horrible magic power that gives its wearer the ability to cast unimaginable legendary spells. The wearer will be able to cast Spirit Confinement twice a day, Demigod-lich Howling twice a day, and Undead Rampart once.

"This is a super powerful ring made by a formidable demigod-lich!

"Both death and confinement frighten people.

"Congus".

Natasha remained silent for a while and then sighed. "This is such a powerful ring. If Congus had chosen to use Time Stop, that would have been the end of us."

"I don't think so." Lucien shook his head and pointed at his left hand. "I have two demigods inside of my body. Although neither of them could fight directly, their mere presence can make me immune to many spells, including Time Stop. Congus for sure already knew about it."

The ninth-circle spell, Time Stop, only slowed down time-lapse within a small region. It was not for completely pausing time.

Natasha nodded, and then she sighed. "What a pity that you can't use it... I thought we'd have much hope surviving in the next day and a half."

"We can't, but someone else can. As long as we can find a target close to the ninth circle and control him, we can make him wear the ring for us. Then problem solved," said Lucien seriously.

Natasha's eyes lit up. "That's right! Especially that the false gods here in this world are not as powerful as those of the same level from our world! So the target you're talking about is...?"

"Ell, the Lord of Redemption." Lucien already had the answer.

Then he took out the crystal ball and started searching for Ell's whereabouts.

However, the crystal ball yielded no result at all. It never happened before.

Lucien frowned. "Something's wrong with Ell. I missed something."

"Try Francis. Maybe he's still around Ell." Natasha suggested.

Lucien nodded and started casting again. Then after a short while, Lucien suddenly looked up and said to Natasha, "Francis is very close to us! Maybe he's right in the Death Valley!"

Horoscope could not provide the exact location of Francis, but it's results were enough for Lucien to make a preliminary judgment based on it.

"Although we don't know what they're planning, it could be a chance for us," said Natasha. Then she turned to look at the ring, and disappointment was still in her eyes. "If we could use it, no matter what plan we take, it will be much easier."

Lucien smiled. "There are two ways to reach the ninth circle."

"What do you mean?" Natasha lifted one of her eyebrows.

Lucien continued. "First, your spiritual power will have to reach the ninth circle, but this isn't possible right now. So there's another way around: to have a fully substantialized cognitive world."

"So you are saying..." Natasha started having some clues.

Lucien nodded. "When I came up with New Alchemy, my cognitive world already reached close to the eighth circle. In other words, my arcana level is higher than my magic level."

Although one's arcana level came from the accumulation of arcana credits, therefore it seemed less reliable compared to the magic level, but to some degree, it reflected the level of one's cognitive world.

"But this still takes time. You don't have time to do research right now, do you?" Natasha asked.

Lucien picked up the ring and asked Natasha to go with him.

When they came out of the underwater cave and to the other side of the mountain, Lucien found another hiding cave and said to Natasha in a low voice.

"I don't have time right now, but I've been working on my research for long enough."

As he was speaking, Lucien took out piles of files from his pouch and said, "these are data collected by Mr. Douglas with regards to the satellites and the questions he came up with. For the past three years, I've been working on solving them."

"That's why when you called me, your voice sounded so close and clear, right?" Natasha recalled. "And when I asked you why you didn't answer."

"Yes." Lucien nodded seriously.

In the past three years, Lucien had been working with Levski and other arcanists on the Evans Geometry, which brought them lots of problems that could only be solved by tensor analysis. Therefore, Lucien had been working hard on deducing the special theory of relativity and the general theory of relativity.

Although Lucien had not progressed much in the latter, the former had already been almost ready!

The past three years of planning, accumulating, and waiting should finally fruit now!

Lucien unfolded his alchemy hut and started developing his paper under Natasha's curious stare.

"On the Electrodynamics of Moving Bodies and Mass-energy Equation."

Chapter 497: Time and Space

It was rather cold in the mountains at night. The summer heat had gradually faded away. When the light breeze found its way into the cave, both Lucien and Natasha felt very refreshed.

Natasha watched Lucien spread the parchment roll in great curiosity. Lucien activated the magic circle, turned on the crystal light, and picked up the quill-pen.

It wasn't her first time seeing an arcanist writing a paper, but she never knew that an arcanist could focus on developing his paper in such an environment and such a dangerous situation. Lucien always surprised her.

Holding her breath, Natasha watched Lucien finish writing down the title of the paper and start working on the introduction.

"The paper is developed on the basis of the relativity principle and the principle of the constancy of light velocity. Therefore, the preconditions are as follows:"

Howling of beasts came from distance.

And louder howling followed. Together, they sounded intimidating.

Natasha was a bit startled, then she murmured to herself, joking. "When night arrives, it is the beasts' and animals' turn to start their day."

She was a big fan of Arcana Voice, which was recorded and sent to her by Lucien, and learned quite some new collocations and expressions with the radio programme.

Natasha then tried to follow Lucien's deduction. She wanted to see how much she could understand.

After the first part in which Lucien had some difficulties in progressing, he started to write faster and faster. Lines, formulas, and equations flowed out of his quill-pen like a river. Natasha felt a bit dizzy chasing the lines, so she immediately shook her head and looked up. Her eyes caught the profile of Lucien's face under the light. The serious and devoted look on his face made him rather attractive.

Her left hand holding her right elbow and her right hand rubbing her chin, Natasha looked at Lucien carefully. From time to time, she said to herself in a low voice.

"What a pity..."

.....

In an oasis in the eastern desert, a building complex floated in the air like a palace.

Among the buildings, the one that took up that most space was a Church with a tall cross in the front. In the back of it was a study decorated very simply, and in the study was the Pope, Benedict II who looked like an ordinary old man wearing a soft hat. He was reading the information sent back from all patrolled areas while taking a sip of his black tea from time to time.

Suddenly, Benedict II's right hand trembled. The white teacup fell from his hand. But when it almost hit the ground, it seemed to be caught by the wind and flew back to Benedict II's hand.

Slightly frowning, Benedict II put down the teacup and walked to the window. Staring at the starry sky, he felt his breath a bit heavy.

He did not know what had just happened. But he knew it was something big.

He took a deep breath and then took out his staff. He prayed in a low voice, seeking for an indication from his God.

But he received no answers. Benedict II wondered if a fight just took place between Alterna and the existence in the World of Souls.

.....

To the east of the stormy ocean, along the coast were a number of magic towers.

In one of the magic towers, Douglas, the Lord of Storm, and Hathaway were discussing their next step. The Lord of Storm just came back from his search which had proved in vain. Meanwhile, Oliver and Thanatos were searching in the marsh in the east, chasing after a legendary-level false god. The false god itself was a black dragon, somehow worshipped by some human beings and other dragons, and thus reached the legendary level because of the power of faith. Acclaiming itself to be the Dark Dragon Lord.

Hellen the Witch of Iceland and Hathaway just had their duty shift. The former had returned to Allyn to safeguard the headquarter.

"Don't worry too much, Fernando. No news is good news." Douglas comforted the Lord of Storm.

The Lord of Storm disputed, hiding his true feeling. "Why would I worry? Lucien's always hiding so many secrets and research outcomes. He's the biggest trouble himself!"

"If there's no bigger story behind, Lucien should be safe," Hathaway commented briefly.

In Hathaway's eyes, Lucien's intelligence and resourcefulness should be able to keep himself intact.

"But if there is one..." said Fernando gloomily. His red eyes opened big. Outside of the magic tower, dark clouds started gathering because of Fernando's anger.

They were grand arcanists. Grand arcanists did not believe in coincidence. Facing all the things that had happened, they already had some rough ideas about what was going on.

As they were talking, Douglas seemed to sense something and looked out of the window. He saw that on the other side of the magic tower, the sun was slowly rising. The morning glow dyed the ocean red.

The view was supposed to be breathtakingly beautiful. However, in Douglas's eyes, the ocean now looked like a horrible blood pool.

"What happened?"

"It's good, but also not good..."

As an expert in Astrology and Force Field, Douglas could even rival the Prophet in making a prophecy.

Both Fernando and Hathaway looked out of the window. They had no idea what just happened, but they somehow felt contradictory feelings of oppression and freedom in their hearts.

.....

Natasha did not get bored at all watching Lucien working on his paper, instead, she actually found this to be entertaining. After a while, she looked around, feeling a bit confused. Somehow, she felt that space and time were changing.

The paper became longer and longer. Lucien's good effort in the past three years was now driving his cognitive world one step further, a vital step! Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Lucien's cognitive world started emerging around him. In his cognitive world, there were stars orbiting fast, rays shooting out, elements radiating and releasing particle flows, and all of them were experiencing a series of wonderful changes. It seemed that the forever = isolated river of time in his cognitive world suddenly started interacting with space, energy, and all kinds of matters. They were integrating into each other!

A silent storm was forming in Lucien's cognitive world, and the power of the storm was formidable. The structure of time and space in Lucien's cognitive world had completely deviated from the frame and description set up by Douglas and Brook. His cognitive world was getting closer and closer to the truth of the world and was now more complete.

When the deduction almost came to the end, Lucien's cognitive world had finally been fully substantialized!

Lucien did not stop here. He then turned to work on producing the mass-energy formula.

It did not take long. Lucien took a deep breath and wrote it down.

" $E = mc^2$ "

Bang! As soon as the simple but profound formula settled down on the parchment, the element light spots in Lucien's cognitive world split over and rejoined each other. The procedure released formidable power and pushed the other reflections in this cognitive world to the margin.

Bang! At her first glance, Natasha could feel the great power of destruction and booming vitality the formula had. But when she tried to take a closer look at it, the feeling was gone.

Bang! A mushroom cloud rose up from the union of elements, within which there was an extremely complex but still incomplete structure.

Bang! Somehow Natasha turned to look at the entrance of the cave. Against the small piece of sky she could see, an illusionary blazing sun suddenly appeared. Meanwhile, all the beasts' howling had returned to silence.

Bang! The Pope also saw the white sun in the sky. Its intimidating power and light overwhelmed the light of all the stars in the sky.

Bang! The grand arcanists' sights slightly froze as they looked towards the seaside, where the new sun rose up to the left of the orange morning sun!

Bang! Ell could not help raising his right hand to block his eyes. Somehow, he was a bit afraid of the new sun.

But after Natasha's one single blink, the sun had disappeared. It was still very dark outside, the burning sun was nowhere to be seen.

The howling resumed, but now the beasts were crying in fear.

Benedict II blinked. When his eyes opened again, the stars were still bright and clear in the night sky, as if what had just happened was only an illusion.

Benedict II's eyes stared at the far side of the sky. He remained silent for a long time. Even he did not understand what just happened. He felt that his heart was thudding heavily.

In the magic tower beside the ocean, Douglas asked, half out of curiosity and half out of worry. "Did anyone just crack the secret of the sun? But why did we also see it? The half-substantialization of one's cognitive world can indeed affect the real world, but that was too much..."

The half-substantialization of one's cognitive world which affected the real world was a sign of reaching legendary.

Hathaway shook her head. "Might now be legendary. Remember this world is different, the strange things constraining spiritual power."

Douglas nodded in agreement. Then he looked at Fernando who did not say a further word. "What is it, Fernando?"

The Lord of Storm rubbed his brows. "I think it might be Lucien. I gotta find him as soon as possible. Now he might be on his way to destroy the world."

As a loyal listener of Arcana Voice, Fernando had learned quite a few of trending phrases.

"It is possible." Hathaway nodded. "But we don't know where he is."

"At least we know he's still alive." Douglas comforted them.

.....

Natasha saw Lucien put down his quill-pen. She asked gently. "Has your cognition word substantialized?"

"Yup, should be able to put on the ring now," answered Lucien, who was still feeling the changes in his cognitive world.

Natasha released a sigh of relief and asked curiously, "what are those formulas about?"

"Basically, they are proving that time slows down when you move approaching the speed of light. Meanwhile, space contracts, and mass increases. So when something's moving very, very fast, clocks run more slowly, and an object's length is measured to be shorter..." Lucien tried to explain them as simple as possible. "And energy can be converted to mass and mass to energy."

Natasha knew some basics about it, but she was now still more than confused and shocked, "They are related? But... but shouldn't time and space be independent from each other? Technically speaking, space and time should just be... you know, measurements..."

Before Lucien tried to explain further, she hurriedly said, "put it more simple, please."

Lucien thought to himself for a while and then said very seriously, "to put it simple, mass is energy, energy is mass; time is space, and space is time!"

The howling of beasts from afar became more and more bitter.

Chapter 498: Prototypes of Magic Natasha's lips twitched. She wisely ended the topic. Such missions whose brief introduction was already dizzying enough were best to be left for the arcanists to understand.

She eyed Lucien up and down and asked half curiously and half concernedly, "What else have you achieved except for the substantiation of the cognitive world to the ninth circle? I'm told by both Grandma Hathaway and my mother that when similar research results were made, the cognitive world would interact with the corresponding mechanisms in the real world and yield different magic models. Considering the great noises you caused just now, you must've invented a few new magics, right? Are they about time and space, mass and energy?

The changes of the cognitive world was a main sign that marked the advancement of high-level sorcerers. Half-substantiation corresponded to the senior-rank, substantiation corresponded to archmage, and half-solidification and influencing the real world with projections corresponded to legendary.

"I gained two prototypes of legendary spells, about how mass could be transformed into energy." Lucien understood that they were the incomplete magic structure of fission and fusion. On the other hand, while his cognitive world about the structure of time and space had also changed, he lacked theories that could directly work on them. The best he could do was to optimize the spells such as Time Stop to make them simpler and easier to learn. In order to achieve the legendary spells that could really control time and space, he would have to wait until the general theory of relativity or quantum theory was released.

However, Lucien was the only one who could've obtained the structure of fission and fusion, the two legendary spells, because he was the one who proposed the model of the atomic nucleus and the decay. He was aware of the two phenomena and the chain reaction. If it were anybody else, even if they had deduced the energy-mass formula, they would've needed to learn the relevant knowledge first and made breakthroughs in corresponding research in order to have interaction.

Natasha was immediately attracted. "Legendary spells? No wonder... Lucien, what are you planning to name them?"

The invention of a legendary spell was always difficult. Seeing it with her own eyes gave her a feeling that she was witnessing history, particularly when the inventor was only in his twenties.

"Evans' Little Boy? Lucien's Big Ivan?" Replied Lucien casually.

According to the incomplete magic model, the fusion magic currently required top legendary in order to be constructed within the soul without hindering his usage. The more familiar he was with it and the deeper his knowledge was, the more powerful it would be and the fewer requirements there would be. However, even after he completely grasped it, it had to be released by a sorcerer that's at least at the level-two legendary level through the remote projection spells, magic extension, magic delay and the cooperation of refined materials.

The fission magic, on the other hand, should be able to be constructed by a level-one legendary, after it was fully analyzed through relevant experiments and magics. If there were refined materials, it would be possible for a ninth circle to perform it, too. Thinking about that, Lucien couldn't help but fantasize. "I wonder if the fusion magic will turn into helium flash or gamma-ray burst when it is beyond the demigod level. That will definitely be world-destroying..."

Hearing the two names, Natasha immediately grimaced at Lucien's groin. "I don't think the two names are very good. They seem to be implying the two different states of the same object. You may want to change them."

Lucien was immediately embarrassed. It was indeed as expected of "gentleman" Natasha. He waved his hands and said, "The magic model is still incomplete. Let's consider the names later after they are completed."

"Okay. I'll come and help you name one of the legendary magics. I'm very good at words!" Natasha decided to take over the interesting job, although she was kind enough to leave one of the names to Lucien. "Right, what kind of magic will they be like?"

Lucien briefly described them. As she listened, Natasha couldn't help but turn around and look at the dark night outside. In shock, she remarked joyfully, "Perhaps, you will be given titles such as God of Sun, or Eternal Scorch."

"I don't that I can achieve it even if I advance into the level of the God of Truth..." Lucien replied frankly and continued to influence Natasha's religious stance, trying to make her God really retreat to the spiritual domain. It was a long-term, arduous job that concerned his future happiness. Lucien did not intend to let go of it.

Natasha thought carefully for a moment. "The power of God's Arrival was far from the ultimate view that you just described. However, it might have been because the power was reserved and controlled accurately. What a shame. Your 'Little Boy' is still incomplete, and we do not have magic materials of sufficient purity and quality. Otherwise, we could establish a magic trap that is a curse on the surface and a nuclear bomb below. Then, chances are that we could kill the Demigod-lich one more time with the cooperation of the Congus Ring.

For now, she referred to the magics with the names Lucien randomly came up with.

"Things will never go as smoothly as we imagine. Also, although my cognitive world has turned substantial, my spiritual power is still in the seventh circle, and I am still a half-seventh-circle sorcerer who hasn't constructed the seventh-circle magic yet. My spiritual power from the ninth circle is not so close. Even though it is significantly improved because of the influence of the two demigods, I estimate that my spiritual power will reach the eighth circle at best a week later. It will take years before I advance into the ninth circle.

Lucien evaluated his status objectively without any frustration. He said with a smile, "Our original purpose was to put on 'Congus Ring' to increase our chances of survival. Since the purpose has been fulfilled, there's nothing to regret."

Although it was possible that Congus' head would explode if the paper was directly 'thrown' to him, Lucien believed that Congus must've learnt the lesson that he should not read or pick up Lucien's stuff carelessly after suffering two setbacks.

While talking, Lucian put on the black, iron ring that had vintage stripes.

The moment it touched his flesh, it started to absorb Lucien's spiritual power crazily. As his spiritual power quickly faded away, his cognitive world began to slightly shake, but the substantiation space and projection rapidly increased his spiritual power and slowed the flow.

After a few seconds, the crazy absorption slowed down. The black surface of the ring lost the previous dimness and emitted cold, weird metal colors.

Lucian moved his body and exclaimed in surprise, "Magic resistance, healthy, physical defense and the other qualities that 'Congus Ring' improve can coexist with the effects of other magic items, provided that they do not surpass its upper limits. This is truly a 'divine item'!"

In such a way, even if Lucien did not transform, he would have the magic resistance of the eighth circle and the body quality of a level-five knight.

"Also, it nullifies and weakens a lot of magics." Natasha observed 'Congus Ring' in amazement.

Lucien shook his head with a smile. "Nullification does not always work and can be avoided. For example, the hostile spells may target the environment instead of me and then hurt me by the changes in the environment. Also, after I put on the ring, I cannot cast magic defense below the ninth circle on myself. However, the spells prepared in advance will not be affected. So, it will depend on the actual circumstance whether or not to wear the ring."

"All in all, you can perform the legendary magic now. We will not be as helpless as before when we are faced with Demigod-lich again. Where are we going next?" Although it was only midnight, and there was still one day left before Demigod-lich arrived, Natasha knew very well that the better prepared they were, the more hopeful they would be.

Rubbing the ring, Lucien said, "One legendary magic will be enough to drain the power of the ring itself, as well as my own spiritual power. Therefore, we have to find the best opportunity. Now, let's go to the Death Valley to 'find' Ell."

"Didn't you already put on the ring? There's no need to catch Ell again, is there?" Natasha was somewhat confused.

Lucien smiled. "Something is wrong with Ell. We have to investigate it in case of any accident. Also, it is exactly because I have put on the ring that we need to catch Ell. Demigod-lich couldn't have seen it coming that I could substantialize my cognitive world or put on the ring so quickly. Then, if he sees us together with Ell, who do you think he will be wary of?"

Because Alterna and mysteries existences from the World of Souls were attached to him, Lucien was bold enough to make plans about trapping a legendary sorcerer. Otherwise, it was possible that Demigod-lich already sensed the danger the moment he settled his plan, like the Lord of the Undead.

"How cunning of you." Natasha observed.

"Alright, let's go." Lucien retreated to his alchemy table and his paper. He was about to start walking, when he thought of something else. "Natasha, you mentioned that I caused rather great noises?"

Natasha nodded affirmatively. "When you wrote the paper, there was a feeble feeling of time-and-space change around. By the time you were almost done, a new sun rose in the dark night outside, scorching and terrifying. The monsters and beasts were so scared that they are still crying at present. Although it lasted only one or two seconds, I'm certain that it was not an illusion."

"How did it happen?" Asked Lucien in surprise. Didn't such a phenomenon indicate the half-solidification of the cognitive world, which was starting to affect the real world? But he was still far away from legendary.

Interpreting his understanding to her, Lucien looked at Natasha in confusion, hoping that she could shed her insight.

Natasha looked at Lucien helplessly. "I'm terrible at such things. Well, perhaps it's because this world is unique. After all, even the spiritual power and the willpower are suppressed."

"Perhaps..." Lucien considered the possibility but did not think it through. In the meantime, he noticed the brilliance of Asin's godhood on Natasha's left arm. His lips cramped, but he decided not to remind her and simply wait for it to die away.

Natasha, on the other hand, noticed Lucien's eyes. She turned her head and looked at her left arm. "Is this God's Glory?"

"You can see it?" Lucien was even more surprised.

Natasha blinked her eyes, having no clue why Lucien was so surprised. She said innocently, "I can see it all the time, and so can other people. What's wrong?"

"That can't be right. In the main material world, people without special methods or items cannot see God's Glory." Lucien believed that Natasha was not lying to him. Then, Ell provided the laurel box at the beginning only because Francis, Jacob and the rest of them could not touch God's Glory, not because they could not see it?

"Perhaps, it's because this world is idiosyncratic." Natasha proposed the same reason. She was really not good at such things.

Lucien paced back and forth. "The idiosyncrasies of this world... God's Glory, according to my hypothesis, is the amalgamation of special electromagnetic waves. Then, how can they be seen by untrained people?"

Suddenly, Lucien had an epiphany. "Perhaps it's because the magnetic field of the body and soul of the intelligent creatures of this world are slightly different from that of the main material world. It makes their power of faith stronger and easier to disperse. Also, because the fake gods in this place do not have specific doctrines and rituals, the special electromagnetic waves that is 'power of faith' mostly leak and spread out in the air, causing severe electromagnetic contamination that suppresses the spiritual power which is also likely to be an electromagnetic wave. Does it mean that the release of willpower is also based on electromagnetic waves?"

"By the same logic, because the special electromagnetic waves of different 'frequencies' are all over the place, godhood will 'interact' with part of them, resulting in the brilliance. That's why it can be seen by ordinary people. When my cognitive world changed, it reverberated with certain electromagnetic waves in the outside worlds and caused the anomalies."

"However, what about the projection and interaction of the real world, and what about the new magic models? Perhaps, my previous guesses are just part of the truth but not the whole of it."

Looking at Lucien's meditative look and hearing his murmur, Natasha comforted him with a smile, "It must be the mysteries of the highest level and cannot be figured out all of a sudden. Let's take our time. We can find intelligent creatures and study the differences of their magnetic field later."

"Yes, Demigod-lich is what matters most right now." Lucien stopped thinking and hinted at Natasha to leave for the Death Valley together with him.

At this moment, Natasha laughed like a fox. "I thought of something. Asin, that 'God of Love and Beauty', seemed to have been a male centaur in the past, as proved by his dead body. However, after he melted part of godhood, he turned into a beautiful lady."

While talking, she rubbed 'God's Glory' on her left arm, although she could not feel anything.

"No random thoughts." Lucien looked at her solemnly.

Natasha cackled and said, "Am I such an inconsiderate girl? The godhood conflicts with your cognitive world. How can I use it when it will harm you? Huh, I need to ask Grandma Hathaway to build an extraordinary item with the godhood. Do you think I should make an earring, a ring, or a belt, a tiara, a long skirt?"

"A longsword." Replied Lucien emotionlessly.

Natasha asked in surprise, "Why?"

"A longsword forged with the godhood of a senior-rank fake god can only be wielded by a radiant knight or a talented ordinary knight. Therefore, nobody will take it away by mistake." Lucien continued emotionlessly. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

Natasha chuckled and said, "that works too. How do you think it should be named?"

Lucien thought for a moment and suddenly said in amusement. "It will be the Sword of Contract and Victory. When the young man draws the longsword, his fate is changed."

Then, ignoring Natasha's confusion, Lucien walked out of the cave.

Chapter 499: What You Want Is What You See

When they approached Death Valley, both Lucien and Natasha found it hard to believe their eyes. The valley in the darkness lost the gloom and scariness that it was famous for in the tales. It was covered in a mist, and the devastating cries of ghosts were gone. Indescribable tranquility was spreading out, making the intruders reluctant to disrupt the deepest sleep. Also, as they looked at the horizon, they could vaguely see the mild and sacred brilliance from the valley.

"Is this the Death Valley?" Natasha looked back at the cold, creepy forest to make sure that they were not in the wrong place.

Frightening roars were still echoing in the forest now and then, suggesting that the dead slaves of Demigod-lich were still searching for Lucien and Natasha.

Lucien shook his head. "This is exactly Death Valley. It seems that something is really wrong with Ell. I'm going to sneak in for reconnaissance with The Eyes first. We cannot break in recklessly."

Then, Lucien took off 'Congus Ring' first and cast many defense and alarm spells on Natasha and himself. Then, he took out the crystal ball and rubbed it, allowing it to spit out a dark meatball the size of a thumb, which had deep wrinkles all over the surface.

The meatball suddenly opened, revealing a pale eye that was filled with black lines. Then, it split into nine and melted into the darkness while they flew towards Death Valley.

Lucien, on the other hand, followed them with Natasha and hid themselves in the hollows in the cliffs not far away from Death Valley. The spiritual power was severely suppressed in this world. Even the reconnaissance magic like 'The Eyes' had been greatly shortened.

The unusual darkness inside the crystal ball was gone and replaced by the view that The Eyes saw. They were sneaking into Death Valley from different angles.

"Is that..." Pointing at a certain part inside the crystal ball, where a ghoulish-like creature more than two meters tall was entering Death Valley cautiously without any knowledge of The Eye behind it, Natasha asked, "... Congus's spectral slave?"

"It should be. Considering the time elapsed, they must be done searching the woods. Also, Congus is still in the main material world and cannot remotely command them. Well, it is a Soul Catcher." Lucien slightly frowned.

Natasha did not know the monsters as well as Lucien did. She asked curiously, "A Soul Catcher? It sounds rather intimidating."

"Yes, it is a weird and strong spectre. Don't be tricked by its ghoulish-like appearance. Look at what is below its rotten abdomen." Lucien explained gladly, reminding Natasha that she should not underestimate such creatures in the future.

For a better view, Natasha leaned on Lucien without any reluctance. Her perfume could be smelled clearly, which made him blush slightly.

"There are three tiny but vivid faces on its ribs. They are in obvious pain." As The Eye changed direction, Natasha finally saw the front side of the Soul Catcher.

Lucien pointed at the abdomen of the Soul Catcher. "Those are the souls of the creatures it has killed. Since there are three prisoners, it means that it is a Soul Catcher that has mutated, equaling to the senior rank. Those souls can bring it enough energy to use abilities similar to magic. It can be regarded as a caster of the same rank who is good at Necromancy and Illusion. When it is attacked by magic, the magic effects and the damages of certain types will be transferred to the three souls. Until the three souls are destroyed, the Soul Catcher will be utterly unaffected, and the enemy's magic will be rendered useless."

"Of course, the magic in the category of physical attack works much better on them. For knights, the most important thing is not to mistake them for ghouls or to be hurt by their magic-like abilities."

Dimples appeared on Natasha's face. "They are indeed weird. Let The Eye follow it and see what changes it will bring to Death Valley."

Lucien would've done the same thing even if she hadn't said so. He already asked one of The Eyes to follow the Soul Catcher quietly.

Inside Death Valley, the exuberant vines blocked the starlight, making the place dark and silent.

As the Soul Catcher and The Eye moved deeper, the darkness was thicker and thicker, and fewer and fewer things could be seen on the crystal ball. Finally, all the nine scenes fell into complete dark, as if they were caught in the unusual nothingness created by extraordinary forces.

Lucien tried to power The Eyes, but his command had no response from anything. The nine Eyes seemed to have been completely melted into the darkness.

Suddenly, a gentle light arose on the crystal ball, illuminating the Soul Catcher. It was fighting an angel who had a pair of wings in the back. Ahead of them was the realm of light that looked like dawn.

It was not until then that Lucien realized that six of the nine Eyes had been lost. Apart from the one following the Soul Catcher, only two passed the darkness ahead.

"An angel? What is this place exactly?" Natasha exclaimed in the telepathic bond.

Lucien hurried to control the other two eyes to change their directions, circumvent the battle, and move deeper inside. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

The Soul Catcher was rather strong, and it did not take long before it killed the 'angel'. It intended to press on, only to be surrounded by more and more angels. There were even many Virtues and Cherubim that had four wings. However, their arrival only made it easier for Lucien's Eye to sneak in.

The view of The Eyes became clearer. Natasha's scarlet lips opened and shivered beyond her control.

It was a beach gently patted by waves. On the beach, pure souls were playing distant and yet pleasant hymns with harps and other musical instruments, while they let out devout and magnificent prayers:

"Praise the Almighty Lord, praise the omniscient and omnipotent Savior..."

The whole beach was enshrouded in sacred brilliance, as if it were in the middle of a cluster of light. Far away from the beach, there was a city with twelve gates, which had the same length, width and height, and which was decorated with agates, jades and other gems. Above the city, there seemed to be six similar divine domains, and the same merry scenes could be found in four of them.

The two floors on the top were beyond the sight of The Eyes. However, both Lucien and Natasha could guess what was in them.

"Blasphemy! This is the greatest blasphemy! Who has duplicated Mountain Paradise?" Natasha was never too obsessed about the content and theological knowledge on the church classics. That was why she could be influenced by Lucien and live in peace with him. However, the blatant mimicry stimulated her piety and made her feel that the builder was full of maliciousness.

"You are one, and everyone. You are the moment, and forever..."

The hymns and prayers came over through the crystal ball. Lucien slightly frowned. Even the prayers and rituals in the Saint Truth's Cannon had been copied, too? What did Francis want? Did he really want Ell to be a 'duplicate God of Truth'?

Got to say that it's rather creative... Lucien secretly complimented, but when he turned around, he discovered that Natasha was so infuriated that her hands were shivering. However, since Lucien was still in danger, and the most important enemy right now was the Demigod-lich, she did not indulge herself but held back her anger.

Lucien was more or less moved. He couldn't help but extend his left hand and grab Natasha's left hand that was not holding the sword, pressing it gently to give her warmth and comfort.

Natasha subconsciously retreated her left hand, but she soon understood what Lucien meant. Her eyes turned gentle, and she slightly nodded her head, hinting that she was alright. When her hands stopped shaking, she slightly exerted her strength and withdrew her left hand.

Apart from the dance and the escape, it was the first time that Natasha and Lucien had held their hands. Both of them fell into a brief silence, thinking about their own things.

At this moment, a man in a white robe, with six pairs of illusionary wings on his back, appeared above the crowd of angels. He slashed down with his sword, turning into a black hydra that suppressed the Soul Catcher. It seemed that the senior-rank spectre would be killed shortly.

"Francis did this?" Natasha was aware that Francis was once Ell's follower, but she did not expect that he would become a counterfeit Seraph.

Lucien hurried to prove his innocence. "To obtain intelligence, I once transformed and blended into Ell's church. I ran into Francis there. He was adept at theology and had been alluring Ell to be the God of Truth. This Mountain Paradise must've been fabricated under his instruction."

As for his participation in the deception when he hoped to learn about the growth of the God of Truth from close up, it must not be learnt by Natasha!

"It's him! Isn't he a night watcher? How could he have committed such blasphemy?" Natasha tried to hold back her shock.

Lucian was equally shocked. "He is a night watcher?"

Before, Lucien had been too anxious when he was hunted to ask Natasha why she would cooperate with Francis. The man was a night watcher of the South Church? He was more like a blasphemer than Lucian, the Fallen Angel at the nineteenth on the Cleansing List!

Natasha nodded seriously. "At first, I did not know that he was a night watcher. Danniell, the Fire of Purification, and Masada, the cardinal, did not know it, either. However, when Francis spoke to them in private, he seemed to have offered certain tokens that won their trust. Then, they told me that Francis was the 'Thinker', who ranked the twelfth among the night watchers. He is a mysterious night watcher who only has a code name."

"It was said that he was deployed to the North Church as a spy. For that, his name appeared on the Cleansing List. He was another man of mysteries whose files were kept confidential."

"Did he really betray and join the North Church? No. The North Church couldn't have tolerated such blasphemy, either. Did he have another identity?" Lucien smelled the scent of a double spy.

Natasha shook her head. "In any case, whatever his purpose is, such blasphemy must be punished. After we are really out of danger, or if you decide to attack Ell, I will execute him in person."

However grave... Lucien secretly wiped his cold sweat, only to discover that Natasha was looking at him in a fake smile. "You once joined Ell's church. You must've contributed to the blasphemy, didn't you?"

Lucien was about to deny it, when Natasha said solemnly, "Don't lie to me."

Thinking for a moment, Lucien confessed to the role he played, the 'efforts' he made, and his purpose to study the mysteries of the gods. "... I did not hold any ill intentions. It was all meant to study the truth of this world."

"I know that you've been trying to influence me," Natasha suddenly sighed, "Perhaps because my attitude towards the Lord was affected by my mother and Grandmother Hathaway in the first place, I did not attach much importance to the Cannon and the Doctrines. The Lord is more like a cornerstone of chivalry. Therefore, I can accept your arcana studies. Perhaps, the Lord will completely turn into a spiritual symbol for me in front of your research results and the undeniable facts, but not now. I have my own boundaries. I hope that you can respect me. You are free to do whatever you want in private, but don't let me see it."

Lucien promised very solemnly, "Okay."

After the communication, both of them seemed to have dropped some burdens. They continued observing the 'Mountain Paradise' in Death Valley.

Suddenly, the black, white and grey on Lucien's left hand spread out, consolidating him again.

Under the influence of Alterna up ahead, the frequency of the pieces falling out of control seemed to be growing.

Solemnly, Natasha slashed Lucien with Pale Justice. After three slashes, the monotonous colors were broken and recalled. In the meantime, The Eyes were swallowed by the holy light when they lost Lucien's control.

"Let's evacuate first," Lucien proposed, "We haven't figured out what is wrong with Ell yet, and this divine domain is his home field. We cannot attack recklessly. At least, we need to draw him out."

Because the magics on Congus Ring worked on the outside world, Lucien feared that it would lose the cover of Silver Moon Alterna, which would raise Demigod-lich's wariness and make him realize that Lucien could use the ring. Therefore, Lucien intended to 'catch' Ell via other magics.

Hardly had he concluded his sentence when someone flew out of Death Valley. It was exactly Ell, whose target was Lucien and Natasha!

Chapter 500: Relief

"No bait is needed. He's already out." Natasha was smiling in the telepathic bond, obviously making fun of Lucien's 'prophecy.'

Ell was still wearing a crown of olive flowers and a white robe, but he appeared more hallow and tranquil. Holy light was vaguely flowing on his skin, and seven floors of Mountain Paradise were reflected in his eyes, making him even more sacred and solemn.

Holding a longsword as dark as ink, he lunged at the two of them. Stinky, decayed fluids were dropping from the sword, only to be absorbed again by a mysterious force in circulation.

"He had been seeking to absorb the godhood in the fields of death and moon. It is possible that he was tempted by the pieces of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls and decided to check it. Such fake gods are susceptible to the attraction of clergy and godhood, to the point that they may lose their sanity." Although Lucien said that, he still found it odd. Ell was almost killed by him last time and was barely able to put up any resistance. Why was he charging at Lucien so confidently when he saw them again?

Lucien hurried to cast spells such as Bull's Strength and Bear's Endurance on to Natasha.

By the time Ell entered the range, Natasha wielded her sword and sprinted at him, and Lucien simply performed 'Advanced Dispel Magic'.

Ell, who was about to use Command, immediately saw the light on his body fading away, like blossoming fireworks. The two spells that he cast on himself in advance were immediately broken. In the meantime, Natasha had already flown to his front. Pale Justice was slashed down, raising an illusionary slash that could cut any material.

In haste, Ell raised his sword and blocked Pale Justice, only to be blown back by Natasha, losing his balance. He was too overwhelmed by the violent attacks to perform divine powers.

Lucien, on the other hand, activated the magic model unhurriedly. As his greenish eyes flashed, Ell immediately felt that his magic resistance plummeted. Therefore, the seven floors of Mountain Paradise in his eyes suddenly radiated, as if it were arriving at the real world. Bathed in the holy light, Ell grew significantly stronger, which led to the changes in the environment. The darkness ebbed, and the light surfaced again. Holiness and solemnity spread out, suppressing all the evil forces.

"Semi-illusory willpower frontier? Ell has advanced into a gold knight?" Lucien and Natasha exclaimed through the telepathic bond at the same time.

After three consecutive clashes, Natasha was forced to step back in midair. Then, Ell looked at Lucien with his sacred and pure eyes. "I command you to die..."

Before he finished the spell, Ell vanished into nothingness, because Lucien raised his right hand, which grabbed a scepter where a huge gem was embedded.

The bright, holy willpower frontier around was gone. Darkness embraced everything again.

"He is stronger than before, but he hasn't reached the level of a real gold knight. I can resist him." Natasha hurried to inform Lucien of her discovery."

Lucien slightly nodded. "He should be able to borrow the power of the divine domain within a certain range. No wonder he was bold enough to come out. However, the ability to use the power of the divine domain beyond the divine domain in itself suggests that Ell's capabilities are close to a gold knight. It seems that he has received abundant 'power of faith' after combining the God of Sun, the Mother God of the Earth, and other churches."

While talking, Lucien set up magic traps in specific locations according to Maze. At this moment, another shadow flew out of Death Valley, with six wings on its back. Surrounded by lightning, he had come to aid the 'Great God Ell'.

"The God of Thunder and Lightning, and now the Angel of Thunder and Lightning?" As the distance between them was shortened, Lucien recognized the bald, muscular male.

Solemnly, the Angel of Thunder and Lightning waved his wings and tried to stop Lucien's operation, but out of the blue, he vanished into thin air, too.

Observing Lucien perform Maze consecutively, Natasha remarked in amazement, "How marvelous magic is! You will never be scared of being outnumbered."

After setting up the magic trap, Lucien did not wait for the weird maze to end on its own but raised the Sun Staff to release Ell.

Ell seemed to have given up the idea of cracking the Maze. He was focused on enhancing himself with divine powers, but out of his expectation, Lucien canceled the maze after deploying only one trap. He was rather lost for a moment.

Black tentacles suddenly rose from the ground to the sky, entangling Ell. The elemental magic seemed to be from nature and was not under the suppression of Ell's divine willpower frontier. Also, the tentacles seemed immune to the damage of many different types.

In the meantime, Natasha lunged forward and stalled Ell whose activity had been limited, not giving him any chance to react.

Lucien's black eyes became fuzzy, and Ell was stunned where he was. In the next moment, Lucien stepped forward, and the light of intelligence in Ell's eyes was weakened to the minimum. He was like a beast that lost the ability to think.

Due to the Congus Ring and the substantiation of his cognitive world, the time cost for Lucien to cast spells had been reduced again. When he performed magic below the sixth circle, it was almost close to when he was wearing the fake Davey's Robe.

"It works really well to deal with fake gods who are prone to godhood through Distraction and Retardation." Lucien flew to the front of Ell, who had been controlled by Natasha. His eyes became deep and dark. At a closer look, one would also notice stars spinning in sophisticated, captivating traces.

Ell grunted, and his eyes gradually became clear. However, he looked more respectful than ever. He said in a low voice, "At your service."

"Very good." Lucien nodded his head and gave 'instructions'.

"I feel that fake gods are rather easy to deal with. If it were a level-eight radiant knight who had a semi-illusionary willpower frontier, your Distraction and Retardation would've been weathered through by their willpower." Said Natasha half in confusion and half in amusement.

Lucien nodded and replied, "fake gods are terribly formidable in certain aspects, but their weaknesses are just as significant. For example, I cannot deal with Ell with magic in terms of Necromancy, Earth or Hypnotization. Those aspects are the focus of his clergy. So, most of the effects will be diminished, if not nullified. Also, since the battlefield is in Death Valley, the illusionary magics will also be suppressed by the divine powers, and it is not so easy to make them work."

Pausing for a moment, Lucien whispered to Natasha through the telepathic bond, "It is rather strange that we have taken him down without running into any danger, particularly when we expected that something was wrong with Ell beforehand."

"Wasn't it caused by the divine domain that's a duplication of Mountain Paradise? Perhaps, your astrology just now was inclined to the Lord. That's why you found nothing." Natasha offered her opinion, but she was not certain about it, because Lucien was the expert in this regard.

Lucien decided to try again. He took out the crystal ball and performed astrology again. This time, when the sky of fate was displayed inside the crystal ball, Ell's Host Star of Destiny was clearly revealed.

"Did I really foretell the God of Truth just now?" Lucien shook his head in confusion. Looking at Ell who showed no anomaly under his control, he said to Natasha, "Perhaps what you said is true, but why did Ell's fate overlap with the God of Truth's inside the divine domain?"

"It was not an overlap but a deviation of your prophecy." Natasha disapproved it quickly. If she acknowledged the overlap, wouldn't she be acknowledging that Ell was the God of Truth or His incarnation? That would've been a heartless satire and blow to her belief.

Lucien stopped wondering. "Let's go to the divine domain and try again. We can also kill Francis by the way and make arrangements to deal with Demigod-lich."

...

Inside Ell's divine domain, the Soul Catcher had already been killed, but Francis was already gone.

"So vigilant? No wonder he could be a spy in the North Church, and his name could be found both on the rank of night watchers and the Cleansing List." Natasha gnashed her teeth. Then, she found a secret spot with Lucien, where they performed astrology behind Ell.

"His Host Star of Destiny becomes fuzzy. Is it really because of the divine domain?" Frowning, Lucien looked at the fuzzy light spots inside the crystal ball. Then, he began to consider how to deal with Demigod-lich. "This divine domain that duplicates Mountain Paradise suppresses spectres badly. Demigod-lich will be greatly weakened here, and Ell will be boosted to the peak of a gold knight. Therefore, this will be the best battlefield to deal with Demigod-lich."

"Okay. We will attract Demigod-lich in the front, and Ell will 'ambush' him from the back. When Demigod-lich is distracted, you will deal with him through legendary magic." Natasha proposed a rough plan.

Lucien said solemnly, "We have to control the timing accurately.

Otherwise, there will be no way for us to resist Demigod-lich's magic except for 'Barrier of the Dead'. In such a way, everything will be exposed. Therefore, we have to rehearse repetitively."

"Also, Demigod-lich has Magic Trigger, Magic Order, and other magics on him. It will be highly unlikely to kill him with one legendary magic. We have to set up traps or magic circles that can disrupt the effects of Chaos Teleport, Shadow Jump, Blink, Shadow Well and other magics. Then, we will hide them with the power of the divine domain."

Since he did not know which of those magics Demigod-lich had selected for life-saving purposes, Lucien could only take random guesses according to the magic book based on his level. As a result, the preparation work was too tedious to be completed in one day. Therefore, Lucien chose a few most likely magics according to his prophecy and his experience.

Looking at Lucien preparing the magic traps wholeheartedly, Natasha rubbed her chin and said, "I finally understood what my teacher meant by saying, 'don't ever fight a prepared sorcerer'."

"This can only slightly increase our chances. The legendary are too strong to be taken down just by preparations in advance. Besides, we still have to lure him to come to the divine domain without getting killed." Lucien heaved a sigh. Natasha raised her eyebrow in confusion. "I thought we were going to wait for him to come to this place."

Lucien shook his head and said, "he'll be alarmed if so. We'll circle the Death Valley according to this route. The moment our zone of activity is suppressed, we will return to the valley."

While talking, Lucien squatted down and drew a map on the ground, illustrating the importance of positioning.

After he was done, Lucien rose and said, "Now, let's rehearse with Ell first in case we are caught unprepared."

The wind blew over and wiped the arrangements on the ground. Lucien sighed, "I hope none of them are used in the end, because it will mean that we did not run into Demigod-lich and successfully hid ourselves for the last day and a half. That's what I'm hoping for most."

"So am I. However, only by making full preparations can we ever be greeted by such luck." Natasha patted Lucien's shoulder in a smile. Then she asked in the telepathic bond, "Right, why did you secretly control the Angel of Lightning and Thunder through Command just now?"

Looking at the holy light and listening to the hymns ahead, Lucien replied in a smile, "In case of accidents."

...

A day later, when it was almost midnight, the ever-rising howls in the dark forest came to an abrupt halt, as if the place had become a hell of death and silence.

Chapter 501: Life and Death

Inside a dark forest that seemed far away from Death Valley but in fact was very close to it in a straight line.

Lucien and Natasha observed the sky that was blocked by clouds through the leaves. There were neither stars nor the silver moon tonight. One could barely see one's own fingers. The deepest fear and panic were brewing.

"Our zone of activity has been minimized. It seems that we need to return to Death Valley." Leaning against a tree, Natasha sighed at the horizon with Lucien next to her. "It's almost dawn. Aunt Camil should've arrived at the Metarin oasis. It's a pity that we have to wait another day before reinforcements arrive. I wonder if we will ever see the sunrise again?"

The two of them were caught by Congus approximately one day later. Then, they killed him and forced him to spend more than one and a half days to rebuild his body and return to the main material world. After that, they had hidden themselves around Death Valley for more than half a day. Therefore, it had been more than three days since they left Camil. Even taking the time of her recovery into consideration, she should've already arrived at the Metarin oasis.

"We will certainly see the sunrise together." No frustration could be found on Lucien's face. The more dangerous there was, the more determined he would be. His face was beaming with a hopeful, gentle smile.

Natasha was the same kind of person. She soon grasped her longsword, as resolute and confident as ever.

She looked at Lucien's left hand with a smile. "After the morning outbreak, the remains of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls must've been controlled by the silver moon. The frequency of loss of control is getting lower and lower. Perhaps, it will be one day later next time. If we can get away from Demigod-lich this time, he will not necessarily be able to find us again, even if we do nothing but hide.

At dawn, the remains of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls had the greatest rampage so far. Not only was Lucien frozen, but even Natasha, who was next to him, was also affected. She felt that two years had passed. Thankfully, it was only two minutes in reality, and no other accidents happened. Ever since then, the gap between loss of control was longer and longer, and the last loss of control was in the morning, which exposed their location and allowed Congus to reduce their range of activities.

"Alterna said that the most ferocious phase of a counterattack has passed. Next, it's time to digest the cake. However, isn't the mysterious existence of the World of Souls slightly weak? Even though he hasn't restored his consciousness, he is still rather vulnerable since he is absorbed by an existence of the same level in only seven days." Lucien expressed his confusion.

Natasha sniffed, "Is that so? If he persists for a few more days, we would be sent to the World of Souls by Congus as specters. Alterna definitely knows more about demigod stuff than you do. If she says that it's fine, there shouldn't be a problem."

Lucien was about to reply, when the last light in the forest went out. It sank into the purest darkness.

"Stop hiding. Come on out obediently, and I'll grant you peace after your death." Congus's voice that sounded like the frigid wind in hell came from the other side of the dark forest. "How much longer do you think you can hide?"

"He is less than a thousand meters from us." Lucien and Natasha looked at each other. They left the tree quietly and returned to Death Valley according to the planned route. They detoured on their way back in order to avoid the whole mountain of spectral slaves.

The scene around them was a vivid demonstration of 'scourge of the dead'.

Congus sneered, "I know that you are hoping that 'Blue Tide' has already arrived at the Metarin oasis and informed the old pervert Storm and Hathaway to rescue you. However, do you think I'm such an idiotic and imprudent person?"

Natasha came to an abrupt halt, her face pale. Aunt Camil?

"It's alright. If Aunt Camil were killed or captured by him, he would've shown it to us to sway us." Lucien patted Natasha's shoulder and comforted her gently.

Natasha soon realized it and regained her resolution. She nodded at Lucien and sped up.

Congus' voice got closer and closer. "While I was in too much of a hurry to catch you two rats to deal with 'Blue Tide', I changed the contact in the Metarin oasis into my loyal subordinate. Rehau has always been a secret student of mine. Do you think your cry for help can be delivered to the other side of the ocean?"

Lucien's face slightly changed. It had been more than two months since Congus started to monitor him. He must've made arrangements regarding everything. However, while he lost that hope, he was still far away from desperation. Just like what Natasha said just now, if they could get rid of him this time, the remains of the mysterious existence would not run out of control easily, and they would be safe again. By the time Alterna recovered, the roles of the hunter and the hunted would be swapped.

Natasha took a breath in relief. She said to Lucien in the telepathic bond with a smile, "He indeed failed to capture Aunt Camil. Since Grandma Hathaway and the Lord of Storm asked me in private to search for you in the areas under the control of the church, they must've sent secret contacts specifically."

That's good. Lucien put on a smile, too.

Having no doubt that the two of them were around, Congus intimidated them with words and suddenly turned into grey smoke that was filled with countless weird bugs. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

The bugs were of the same color as the smoke, but their heads were twisted human faces, which were so illusory that they seemed to be made of souls. Humming, they spread out of the grey mist and soon covered the area. In less than twenty seconds, they finished the search in the area. Then, the smoke floated forward and covered a new area.

Seeing that, Lucien and Natasha accelerated again. They passed through a secret cave and returned to the entrance of Death Valley. Leaving blurred shadows behind, they rushed into the valley.

"Hum! Hum! Hum!" The upsetting noises of bugs suddenly echoed.

"Crap!" Lucien secretly exclaimed. He hurried to hold Natasha next to him with his left hand. Then, both of them blinked and disappeared.

The legendary sorcerer had too many uncanny methods. He had discovered the two of them in advance!

A green ray shot where the two of them were previously at only one second late. The stones, the mud and the plants all turned into green spots of light, and a gigantic pit that was enough to bury dozens of people appeared.

Congus cackled. "Got you two rats! Let's see how you get away this time!"

His voice was brimming with intense hatred. It was the greatest humiliation that a Demigod-lich could be killed once by two 'kiddos' who hadn't even reached the ninth circle!

Teleporting into Death Valley, Lucien and Natasha went at full speed and swooshed past the deep darkness, arriving at the area that they had prepared in advance.

"A divine domain?" Congus floated above Death Valley instead of acting recklessly this time. "You want to team up with a fake god to deal with me, and to weaken and restrain me with the enhancement of the divine domain and the magic circles you set up in advance?"

"Hehe. Let me show you what a sorcerer should be like!"

Congus raised his hands, and seven minor meteorites fell from the sky surrounded by fire. Illuminating the dark night, they smashed into Death Valley.

"Damn it! A massive attack!" While Lucien was braced for it, he was still shocked by Congus' cautiousness and decisiveness this time and cursed. In the telepathic bond, Natasha exclaimed in ways not expected of a 'lady', too.

"Hide!" Lucien and Natasha rushed to the place they prepared, while they asked Ell and the fake angels under their control to dodge.

The meteorites almost hit Death Valley at the same time. Under the stimulation, divine defenses immediately showed up, but they were soon shattered by the Meteor Swarm. After the attack, the defense of the divine domain was already ragged.

However, Congus did not stop. He raised his hands again, and another seven meteorites fell simultaneously.

Time seemed to have slightly halted. After a boom, a minor mushroom cloud rose from the valley. The overwhelming smoke deprived the area within several hundred kilometers of their original colors.

Inside the divine domain, the city decorated in agates and jade was half-collapsed by the blast. The parts that were directly hit were even razed to the ground. The vines that had blocked the sky in the past were broken and burnt. The pure souls and angels were blown away by the wild wind, not to be seen again. The holy halo was eclipsed by the rampant dust. The magic circles deployed in advance were riddled with holes, and dilapidated walls were the only things that could be seen.

It was not until five consecutive 'Meteor Swarms' that Demigod-lich Congus descended and searched for Lucien and Natasha.

Below the ground of the divine domain, Lucien and Natasha hid inside a 'fortress' while they listened to the incessant collisions outside.

"Thankfully, you prepared this bomb shelter in advance." Sensing the violent quakes and the dust that was sprinkling from the ceiling, Natasha raised her thumb at Lucien.

Lucien smiled and said wisely, "It is common sense to be prepared for air raids. It's good that they are just small meteorites."

"But the magic traps you set up have been rendered useless." Natasha looked rather solemn.

Lucien nodded his head. "Most of them, yes. However, a tiny proportion of them are rooted in the divine domain, which will not be completely destroyed as long as Ell is not dead. I hope that some of them are still functional."

The explosions outside stopped. Lucien hurried to reach out to Ell and confirm their location for the upcoming counterattack.

Congus landed inside Death Valley. Looking at the messy ruins, he searched for Lucien and Natasha through magic methods. In the meantime, since the holy halo was not entirely gone, he was aware that the master of the divine domain hadn't perished yet, and therefore was even more vigilant.

The 'mosquitoes of souls' flew out of him and spread out. Suddenly, a shadow rushed out of a collapsed building, with a common longsword in her hands.

Reflecting the fire and the holy halo nearby, the longsword carried the air of divinity, and the shadow seemed to have been melded with the longsword. Surrounded by two illusionary gaps, she slashed at Congus.

Congus did not use legendary magic that required the cooperation of short spells, in case the master of the divine domain attacked him with his ring when he cast the spells. He raised his hands, and all of the colors around Natasha faded away, replaced by the greyness of the void. Natasha's movement was halted under 'Time Stop', her longsword frozen in midair.

When Congus was about to extract Natasha's soul, another person rose from behind his back. He had the Sun Staff in his right hand, preparing to 'lock' Natasha in the maze when necessary, and his left hand was emitting silver brilliance as it was raised high at the enemy.

"You are going to cheat again?" Ignoring the air of the silver moon on Lucien's left hand, and not bothering with Natasha who was in the zone of 'Time Stop', Congus summoned a void-like black ball in front of his skull. Unleashing the greatest horror, it was about to be shot at Lucien.

It was Orb of Ultimate Destruction, a ninth-circle magic!

"He is not using any legendary magic. He is truly wary of Ell." Delighted, Lucien instructed Ell to attack.

However, there was no response to his command.

Chapter 502: Grand Entrance

Chapter 502: Grand Entrance

“No response?”

“Something is indeed wrong!”

Apart from shock, Lucien couldn't help but feel that he had seen it coming. It was like something long-expected finally took place, or the other boot on the upper floor finally hit the ground.

Not trying to call again, and not wasting any more time, Lucien decisively commanded the ‘Angel of Lightning and Thunder’ who was hiding in another bomb shelter to attack!

When he said that it was in case of accidents, he meant the accident of when Ell went wrong!

The Orb of Destruction that seemed able to create a void took shape. The two needle-like red spots on Congus' white skull stared at Lucien and locked onto him, making him feel coldness rising from the bottom of his heart.

Suddenly, another shadow flew out from Congus' left rear. He had six wings on his back and was surrounded by lightning and the holy halo. Attracting the remaining atmosphere in the divine domain, it seemed that he was the master of the divine domain.

As a fake Seraph, he was on the second tier in the divine domain and could execute part of Ell's power on his behalf!

No expression could be seen on Congus' white skull. The Orb of Destruction blinked and arrived next to Lucien, and he started chanting: “Spirit Confinement.”

He had been wary that the master of the divine domain, who was close to level nine, would ambush him with ‘Congus Ring’, which had quite a few legendary magics on it!

“Spirit...” A complicated voice that almost overlapped with Congus’ spell echoed following him, and massive magic waves emerged.

Having no time to check the ‘master of the divine domain’ who had been solidified into a statue, Congus discovered in shock that Lucien had a black, weird ring on his right hand, which looked so familiar.

“He has just advanced into the senior rank. How can his cognitive world be substantialized?”

“How is it possible?”

For a moment, Congus felt that his soul and his cognitive world were collapsing. It completely violated his common sense!

“... Confinement!” As the weird spell ended, Lucien’s spiritual power flooded into the ‘Congus Ring’ incessantly like a river that had just broken the dam. On the other hand, the moment the Orb of Destruction hit the target, the trigger was activated, teleporting him to the other side of the battlefield. He was away from the confinement, and he watched the ruins turned into destructive black.

Illusionary souls appeared around Congus, trying to crawl into his body. Immediately, the two needle-like red spots on Congus’ face were frozen. As a result, the area of ‘Time Stop’ collapsed, and Natasha was normal again. In the next second, she did not bother to look at Congus but simply slashed at a certain corner in the ruins.

Out of nowhere, feeble magic waves spread out from the white skeleton enshrouded by souls. Congus vanished and blinked to a corner not far away. He freed himself from the illusionary souls that hadn’t really slithered in, but his forehead was greeted precisely by Pale Justice!

It was an estimation and a plan that Lucien made according to the effect of ‘Brief Blink’. When the other places were occupied by the holy air of the divine domain, there was an 80% chance that the spectres would choose this corner to hide in!

Congus, who was briefly affected by ‘Spirit Confinement’, did not have any thinking ability, and could only count on his instincts!

A firm and gentle hue popped up on the longsword, surrounded by two illusionary, horrifying gaps. Congus' black cape was abruptly cut, and his pure skeleton fell apart. The gold skull was broken into three pieces, with earsplitting howls echoing from the mouth.

However, right then, the skull revolved and got covered by the feeling of a twist of time and space.

When everything was settled, Congus was already gone, and Natasha had been blasted by the howls.

Despite using Pale Justice to block, she was still blown away by the terrifying soundwaves. She fell heavily, with blood on her lips. She was apparently heavily wounded.

“Chaos Teleportation... He's still not killed. Legendary Sorcerers are really hard to kill.” Lucien's spiritual power was almost dry, and he could barely raise his hands. “Let's get out of here fast. Congus' capabilities are not really compromised.”

The main body of the Demigod-lich was the gold skull. The skeleton was mainly meant to stabilize part of the magics. It was not a big deal even if the skeleton was lost. Therefore, Congus still had at least 95% of his strength left. After he returned, he would definitely vent his fury through legendary magics. Lucien, on the other hand, had run out of spiritual power, and Natasha was also heavily wounded. If they did not seize the opportunity to flee, there would be no chance of survival for them except for mutual destruction with the enemy.

Natasha did not say anything but wobbled to Lucien, helping him to get back on his feet. They were ready to leave Death Valley. Now, the loss of control of the mysterious existence was longer and longer. As long as they ran a thousand meters away before Congus returned, he wouldn't be able to locate the two of them as easily as before. Their chances of survival finally did not seem slim now!

“Although I'm heavily wounded, I can still keep this speed. As long as Congus' landing point is not very close, we will be safe.” Natasha comforted Lucien in delight and observed the surroundings warily. She did not need Lucien to remind her to know that something was wrong with Ell after seeing that it was the Angel of Lightning and Thunder that was standing there stunned.

Hardly had she concluded her sentence when everything around them changed. The collapsed buildings were raised again, and the town decorated with agates and jades were as complete as yesterday. Pleasant hymns and overwhelming halos appeared again, decorating the place as if it were the real Mountain Paradise, although the pure souls and angels were nowhere to be seen again.

Ell flew out of a bomb shelter. Wearing an olive garland and a white robe, he smiled at Lucien and Natasha who raised her longsword. "One of you is out of spiritual power, and the other is heavily wounded. Even though you have a legendary ring and a longsword that's equal to legendary, you still cannot put up any resistance."

His vibe was unpredictable and intimidating. However, Natasha refused to wait to die. Gritting her teeth, she was about to wield her sword and attack.

Right then, Lucien secretly patted her arm and spoke in the telepathic bond, "Wait a moment. There's still a chance. Later, you will run backward as fast as you can. Don't look back."

"You want to die together with the enemy?" Natasha's voice was shivering.

Lucien smiled, "There are still chances that I may survive. Over the past few days, the remains of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls have been greatly weakened. Even if Alterna completely lets go of it and attacks the enemy, chances are that my body will decay but I can hide my soul in the magic robe of the 'Immortal Throne'. The extraordinary item will never be corrupted so easily. I'll have to count on your help then. It's not a big deal for a sorcerer to change a body."

"But..." Natasha wanted to say something, because it was only Lucien's own deduction. If the power left in the remains was beyond his estimation, the item as well as his soul would be decayed together.

“There’s no need to say anything. This solution has better odds than you fighting him. Isn’t it obvious which option you should choose?” Lucien criticized Natasha’s hesitation. “In my heart, you have always been a determined knight who makes decisions after ruling out emotional factors. Don’t disappoint me.”

Seeing the unusual rigorousness on Lucien’s face, Natasha bit her lips and nodded hard. Her silver and purple eyes were covered with mist. Then, she slightly backed off and stood next to Lucien’s right hand.

The conversation was conducted in the telepathic bond and did not take much time. At this moment, Ell floated not far away and said while looking at Lucien’s left hand. “After I kill you, I will have plenty of time to return to the World of Souls before the Demigod-lich comes.”

The World of Souls? Both Lucien and Natasha looked at him in astonishment.

Ell enjoyed their astonishment and burst into laughter. “Do you still not recognize who I am?”

Solid black, white and grey colors surfaced in both of his eyes.

“The mysterious existence of the World of Souls? You...” Lucien was surprised at first and then looked at his left hand. No wonder it was so weak. Had the largest portion secretly escaped to Ell?

Ell smiled, “Alterna’s greatest mistake was that she did not foresee that part of my main consciousness had been awakened in advance. She was stalled by the power that I dropped. Until the power is fully absorbed, she will be swallowed if she gets distracted and attacks anyone. In the meantime, my current body is not bad at all. The power of faith is copious, allowing me to return to the ninth circle quickly. While I cannot deal with Demigod-lich for now, am I unable to deal with the two of you in your current states?”

“So, you can go to hell.” Ell summoned the power of the divine domain. The holy halo was more dazzling than ever before. Because of the blockage of the body, it was in no conflict with the mysterious existence of the World of Souls at all.

Enhanced by the power of ‘Mountain Paradise’, and surrounded by the sacred light, he looked like the real God of Truth.

Lucien’s heart became heavy. He began to discuss with Natasha about the time to run. In the meantime, he talked to Alterna and asked her to attack despite the risks.

Suddenly, the hymns and praises were thousands of times more magnificent, making Lucien and Natasha feel that their minds were cleansed. Ell, on the other hand, was stunned, but was still emitting the holy brilliance.

“What’s wrong with him? Lucien asked in confusion.

Natasha shook her head cluelessly.

“Hehe, finally.” A familiar voice came from the entrance of the Death Valley. Francis, in a plain robe, and with six illusionary wings, slowly walked in and watched ‘Ell’ zealously, as if he were appreciating a piece of artwork that he had just completed.

Natasha’s eyes were frozen. “Francis, what have you done?”

Francis seemed overjoyed, and Lucien and Natasha posed no threats to him right now. Therefore, he replied rather cockily, “Faith is gathered according to different prayers, sublimating into godhood. You should know it already as ‘Leviathan’.”

“You know that?” Lucien did not expect that Francis would recognize him.

Francis laughed. “I did not see it, but it does not mean that none of the existences saw it. I only learnt it a few days back when I was heavily wounded by you.”

After saying that, He continued his topic, “However, since godhood is the congregation of beliefs and represents the strongest desire of different souls, how can regular creatures bear it? The fake gods such as Ell, Avando, Asin and Antanas became more and more bigoted, extreme and crazy because of the influence of godhood. Countless people must've been crying and driving them in their heads. Therefore, for the fake gods, the higher they go and the more faith that they gather, the crazier and more dangerous they will be. Few fake gods can advance into the legendary realm."

"Does it have anything to do with what you are doing?" Seeing that Francis was so calm that he seemed to have forgotten that a Demigod-lich was returning, Lucien asked in confusion.

"Oh, I'm off the topic." Looking at Ell respectfully, Francis said, "If a fake god had the doctrines, clergy, rituals and prayers of the Lord, and his believers worshiped him as an omniscient and omnipotent being like the Lord, do you think that his godhood will be closer and closer to the Lord?"

"How can you invoke the Lord? What you are doing is pure blasphemy!" Natasha berated him more than angrily.

Francis burst into laughter. "How can it be blasphemy? What do you think will happen when his godhood is more and more like the Lord?"

Instead of waiting for Lucien and Natasha to reply, he turned around to Ell and said piously, "You are one, and everyone. You are the beginning, and the end. You are the moment, and forever."

Boom. The final step of the ritual seemed to have been finished. Infinite holy light burst out from Ell, suppressing the mysterious existence of the World of Souls inside his body. In the sky, the hollow and unpredictable hymns echoed again. A gigantic, illusionary cluster of light that was divided into seven layers surfaced uncannily. From the first to the fifth layer, there were holy spirits and angels, there were all kinds of musical instruments, and there was happiness and peace. On the sixth layer, there were six Seraphim, who were worshiping the indescribable brilliance on the seventh layer.

"Mountain Paradise..." Natasha found it hard to believe.

Lucien, on the other hand, was stunned.

As if attracted by the enormous force, Ell was more and more synchronized and alike with the light of the seventh layer. In the end, with the main consciousness of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls, he flew towards the infinite brilliance whose feet was embraced by an angel.

Francis declared frantically, “How can such an idiotic fake god resist the assimilation of the Almighty Lord?”

“What I have been worshiping and preaching has always been the Lord. How is it blasphemy?”

“Your kingdom come, your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven.” Francis drew a cross on his chest devoutly, the vertical bar shorter and the horizontal bar longer!

Lucien, on the other hand, heard only one voice: “Welcome to FM XXX. This is God of Truth.”

Chapter 503: "Hunter"

Chapter 503: "Hunter"

Enshrouded in holy light, Ell had turned into a glittering ball that was projected to the seventh layer of 'Mountain Paradise' and melted into the infinite brilliance.

Natasha shook her head nonstop, overwhelmed as if she were the little girl whose mother had just passed away again. Her years of faith bordered on collapsing as she was faced with such a scene. Lucien's years of influence couldn't have amounted to the shock and desperation she had at this moment.

Facts were the most powerful weapons!

Lucien, vaguely knowing what was going on, managed to suppress the crazy roars in his head. Noticing Natasha's countenance, he suddenly had the bizarre idea that he should give Francis a great gift to thank him for his contributions to Lucien's happy life. Of course, that is, if he and Natasha could survive the disaster.

At this moment, while Lucien could not see his own face, he could absolutely imagine how fabulous it was. Shock, delight, confusion, panic, fear and all the other indescribable feelings were surging inside his heart like a tsunami.

Watching Ell being merged with 'God of Truth', Lucien suddenly discovered that the Saint Badge he wore quivered, and the source of divine power inside changed into 'God of Truth' without any resistance. It was not until this moment that Lucien understood why Francis was bold enough to accept the Seed of Spirit.

"Wait, the main consciousness of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls is still inside Ell's body. Will the God of Truth have indigestion? Will he explode and destroy the world?" Such an idea suddenly occurred to Lucien, who watched 'Mountain Paradise' with his mouth open. Did Francis know that Ell was possessed by the mysterious existence of the World of Souls? Somebody might get killed!

Hardly had the idea occurred to him when the infinite, obscure light on the seventh layer expanded abruptly, as if it was proving Lucien's speculation. He couldn't help but put on a bitter smile and leaned towards Natasha. Being killed by the self-detonation of 'God of Truth' seemed almost a kind of 'glory'. The future history of magic would probably record him in such a way: "This is a sorcerer who once slew a god, although he perished because of that, too."

A gentle breeze echoed. The dimmest piece of black, white and grey was spat out from the light. The monotonicity in him was broken and flew far away, and the projection of Mountain Paradise gradually faded.

"What a shame. They were not merged. Otherwise, I could've tried God's Arrival!" Francis watched the scene as zealously as before,

Try God's Arrival? With your capabilities, I'm afraid that your body and your soul will fall out on the spot. Lucien secretly laughed at him, but he was even more grave. Francis did know that the main consciousness of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls was hidden inside Ell's body. He was even more mysterious than they imagined. Would Lucien's suicide attack work in front of Mountain Paradise's projection?

Pointing at Francis, Natasha demanded, "Your rhetoric cannot cover the nature of your blasphemy! Your words in themselves are blasphemy!"

Francis drew inclined crosses on his chest slowly. "I am no less devout to the Lord than you are, except that our opinions on the Lord have great differences both theologically and generally. However, it is not evidenced that I am a heretic. We have only gained a new understanding of the existence and the form of the Lord under the enlightenment of a great prophet."

"A great prophet..." Lucien repeated in confusion. That sounded like the head of the heretics lurking within the North Church. Was he a certain Saint in the North Church?

Lucien was glad about the debate between Francis and Natasha. A delay was very helpful for him to recover his spiritual power. Even though he could only use magic below the senior rank, Natasha was still capable of fighting Francis, who was only a level eight with his help. What he was worried about was the Demigod-lich who left through the Chaos Teleportation and the projection of Mountain Paradise that had not completely vanished.

Suddenly, the black, white and grey piece attempting to fleet stopped, and a gold skull appeared before it. Congus landed at a spot nearer than everybody anticipated. He had arrived in advance!

The black, white and grey piece shivered, as if it was communicating with Demigod-lich. After only two seconds, Congus burst into laughter. Opening his jaw, he swallowed the black, white and grey piece.

The two needle-like red spots danced crazily like fire in the wind and gradually turned gray. The space around Demigod-lich was twisted, and his vibe soared intimidatingly. In only one moment, he seemed to have broken away from the hundreds of years of being halted and upgraded by one level. Also, it seemed that he was the mysterious existence that controlled the specters, and not controlled by it.

The grey fire bouncing in Congus' eyes, he turned to Lucien, Natasha, Francis and the projection of Mountain Paradise that was about to disappear, before he said gloomily:

“You will all die.”

...

Inside the magic tower across the ocean, the Lord of Storm read the intelligence report before him. Lightning glittered in his eyes, and tornadoes rose around him, blowing away everything inside the house except for the chairs that Hathaway and Douglas were seated on.

“Congus...” Fernando roared. Then he rose abruptly and said to Douglas, “Ask Bergner to help me.”

Bergner was the name of the Tower Prophet. He had entered the alternate dimension, too.

Douglas' usually kind face was filled with graveness, too. "Alright. You and Hathaway will go to rescue Lucien, and I will watch over Vicente in case he plays any tricks."

Fernando, being a reckless man, flew towards the place where the Portal to Alternate Realm was deployed immediately after Douglas' approval. Hathaway remained silent and followed him.

By the time they reached the lobby of the Portal to the Alternate Realm, Bergner, the Prophet, had already been notified by Douglas and was already waiting. His grey hat seemed to be a small version of the tower.

Nodding at the Prophet, Fernando entered the Portal to Alternate Realm in the lead and returned to Allyn.

When Hathaway and Bergner also arrived at the magic tower in the Congress of Magic, Fernando implemented a telepathic bond and walked out.

"Aren't we going to deploy a portal to the northern mountains of Erdo Islands?" Bergner confusedly watched Hathaway walk out with Fernando.

Fernando's voice bordered on screaming. "Relocalization and reestablishment will take another day. However, it will only take us less than a minute for us to reach Heidler from here. Since Vicente and Congus are not there, we will control the Hand of Paleness in no more than an hour."

"Bergner, foretell the location of Congus' phylactery and the location of the Portal to Alternate Realm he used." Hathaway requested straightforwardly.

Bergner was more or less stunned. "You want both of them?"

"If he is dead, everything will be settled." Fernando's red eyes were filled with terrifying and depressing storms.

...

“Your Excellency Demigod-lich, congratulations on advancing to the second level of legendary with the help of the remains of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls. You are likely to be promoted to a demigod and control the power of death.” Francis said in a smile unhurriedly, although he was faced with the threat of a legendary expert.

Congus was dazed. “Do I know you?”

Is he trying to surrender?

However, learning the lesson from the three previous encounters with Lucien, Congus did not intend to chatter on. Dead people were the safest targets to talk to!

Francis slightly bowed and drew the weird crosses on his chest. Then he said respectfully, “The great prophet will arrive with my body. I hope Your Excellency Demigod-lich can live until you enjoy your beautiful future.”

Congus suddenly had a bad feeling. The gold skull was opened, and a hoarse voice echoed, “Spirit Confinement!”

Soundless explosions took place. The remainder of the Mountain Paradise’s projection over Francis’s head unleashed holy brilliance that blocked the shadows which intended to confine his soul, creating the weird feeling that time and space had been twisted.

With the help of the twist, a most extremely evil, cunning and formidable air rose abruptly inside Francis’ body, which then formed a dark shadow dozens of meters tall behind him. The shadow had two curly horns and a pair of bloodred, mocking eyes on his obscure face. The enormous black wings on his back blocked the sky of Death Valley.

After he arrived, minor volcanoes rose in the divine domain similar to Mountain Paradise. Red magma flowed out, and black smoke spread throughout the place with an intense smell of sulfur. The temperature seemed to have risen by hundreds of degrees.

Below the volcanoes, there were another eight horrifying scenes.

There was a cold plain of eternal silence, there was a muddy stinky swamp, there was an infinite slope of rocks, there was a magnificent bronze castle, there was a world made of fire, and there was a colossal gap whose bottom could not be seen. After only one moment, Death Valley seemed to have turned into a hell.

Looking at the shadow in disbelief, Congus blurted out, “Lord of Hell!”

The shadow turned out to be Maldimos, the Lord of Hell!

Hearing Congus’ exclamation and learning the shadow’s identity, Lucien felt that lightning struck his head and illuminated the scenes he had forgotten, allowing him to connect everything.

Why did Rhine know that the seal of the Master of Argent had something to do with the secrets of the World of Souls?

Why was he confined when he was well-prepared and wary, when Sard got away easily?

If Rhine had not known the secrets of the World of Souls, or that the Master of Argent was sealed in Aalto’s projection, he wouldn’t have participated in the scheme or explored the World of Souls, which meant that he wouldn’t have been trapped. If he hadn’t been trapped, he wouldn’t have asked Lucien to summon Silver Moon Alterna to have a head-on clash with the mysterious existence of the World of Souls, resulting in heavy losses on both sides.

If the target had been the gods, few could have plotted against them without them knowing it.

The other identity of the Master of Argent turned out to be Tiphotidis, the Ice Duke, who was the lord of the eighth level of hell!

Perhaps, the Lord of Hell had already realized the World of Souls and the secrets it contained from the incident when Tiphotidis was sealed. It could be seen by the fact that he pretended to be the great prophet of the ‘Horizontal Cross’ church. The devil who was best known for his cunningness and prudence was certainly unwilling to directly deal with the mysterious existence of the World of Souls. Therefore, he set up a scheme to attract Rhine to join the game and instigated Silver Moon Alterna to fight the mysterious existence of the World of Souls, so that he could take advantage.

So, Lucien had been pushing forward his scheme without noticing anything was wrong. There had always been somebody else behind the curtain.

It was indeed as expected of the Lord of Hell and the Head of Devils!

Chapter 504: Sunrise

Chapter 504: Sunrise

In the projection of hell, the devils surrounded in flames and smoke lunged at Lucien, Natasha, and the Demigod-lich with the cold wind that could freeze their souls. The succubi inside the bronze castle let out soul-stirring moans... As Maltimus, the Lord of Hell, arrived, the projections of countless devils formed a terrifying legion.

Demigod-lich, who had only a gold skull left, opened his mouth after brief astonishment, releasing an ear-splitting howl that echoed directly in the soul. The quakes spread out, and the intense air of death was rising.

Within the range of the howl from the Demigod-lich, the volcanoes, rocks and, castles remained unchanged, but all of a sudden, a senior-rank devil almost three meters tall who was wielding a fiery sword collapsed without a sound.

As if contaminated by him, the swarm of devils fell like wheat that had been reaped. In only two seconds, the first wave of the devil legion that marched aggressively was annihilated.

“Life Ritual.” After his advancement, it was much easier for Congus to perform the legendary magics. The time gap between the two unique magics that were based on the Land of Dirt, his demiplane, and Demigod-lich, his legendary class, was much shorter than before.

As Congus’ voice spread out, the fire from hell turned grey, the stinky swamp was dry and broken, the bronze castle decayed and faded, and the cold wind of death on the silent plain raged even more violently. The devils that had just collapsed rose again, their skin wrinkled and their muscles rotten. With needle-like redness beaming out of their eyes, they turned around and charged at Maltimus, the Lord of Hell.

The extracted vitality was gathered into filthy, dim clouds in the sky that was illuminated by black lightning. Grey water drops poured down toward the Lord of Hell torrentially.

At this moment, Congus's demiplane seemed to have overlapped with the projection of hell. Soul Catchers rose one after another, the giants of death threw rocks, evil beasts commanded the legion of the dead, dozens of stinky skeleton dragons flew in the sky, and countless shadows wandered between illusion and reality unpredictably, making it barely possible to put up any resistance.

Scourge of the Undead!

Although none of the spectres were legendary, they had the advantage in numbers. Now that the Lord of Hell had been stalled by Congus, they could still hurt him.

After the space was twisted through the projection of Mountain Paradise, Maltimus' projection here had already reached the level of grand arcanist and close to the peak of legendary. Congus dared not be careless at all.

Lucien and Natasha were both shocked at what they saw. Congus was indeed too imprudent earlier. He did not carry out 10% of his abilities when he dealt with the two kiddos who were only seventh-circle and level seven. If he had treated them with his current attitude, however quick-witted Lucien was and however resolute Natasha was, they could've only died.

The fire that was similar to sulfur was ignited on Maltimus, blocking the dirty rain. He whispered: "Life Deprivation."

Bam, bam, bam, bam, bam. The spectres exploded like blooming fireworks.

Eleven silver balls of light suddenly appeared next to Congus. They also expanded and exploded, and it was not until only two of them were left when he finally blocked Maltimus' Life Deprivation.

However, Congus' Undead Scourge had already been wiped out by then!

Inside the ruins, Natasha managed to stab Pale Justice before her to thwart the attack of Life Ritual and Life Deprivation. The sword trembled and hummed violently, emitting the brightness of sacredness and determination, while it protected a tiny range nearby. It seemed that the sword might be broken at any moment.

For Maltimus and Congus, Lucien and Natasha, who had lost their combat abilities, were not worth their attention at all. The aftermath of their attacks could've killed the two of them, had it not been for Pale Justice, which was a legendary weapon for both spectres and devils.

For Congus, if Lucien restored his spiritual power at this moment and could still use his ring, he wouldn't mind working with Lucien temporarily to deal with the Lord of Hell. There were no eternal friends or foes but only eternal interests. However, it was a pity that Lucien absolutely did not have any ability to provide help.

Maltimus, on the other hand, was rather cautious and did not do his best. He was worried that Lucien would set Alterna free at the cost of his own life. However, Alterna, who only had the strength for one attack and who had been weakened by the material world, was not too great a threat for a demigod like him who knew all the details about her.

Swallowing the consciousness of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls, and melting the World of Souls with the hell, were his greatest purposes. Otherwise, he wouldn't have tried so hard to diminish the consciousness of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls. Even if he could not kill it, he could still assimilate it!

"Death Lament." Congus' spell sounded like an unpredictable, illusionary song, that made the sulfur flames on Maltimus die out dully.

Pale Justice wailed and blocked Death Lament, but it did not seem able to hold on much longer.

Lucien hinted Natasha to draw the longsword and run back when he launched the suicide attack with the strength of Silver Moon Alterna.

However, the ivory light inside Lucien's left hand suddenly expanded. Unhurriedly, it swallowed and digested the remains of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls.

Such quickness, such ease and such an astounding result dumbfounded Lucien, whose head seemed to be illuminated by a light that drove away all the darkness. All the details that had escaped his attention before were now clearly visible.

Why did the mysterious existence of the World of Souls lose control so coincidentally?

Why was it never out of control after he was wounded when he mixed the potion and wrote the paper?

Why was Alterna unable to control her 'appetite' when faced with Asin, if she had been so cautious before, to the point that she took the chance when nobody noticed to the Lord of the Underworld?

Furthermore, when the Master of Argent was slain, according to Rhine, he summoned Alterna and borrowed her strength.

It was a lie that the absorption and digestion would take seven days.

In his confusion and shock, Lucien only felt that the strength contained in his left hand changed and grew rapidly. In the next instant, the strength was poured into Lucien's body, allowing his spiritual power to soar, like the sorcerers whose capabilities were temporarily improved through projections or summoning.

At this moment,

"But it is not complete." Having no time to ask Alterna what happened, he could only reply that there was still a long way to go for 'fusion magic'.

Boom. Alterna did not say anything, but stronger, higher power surged into Lucien's soul and body. His perceptions of the world entirely changed.

Lucien, at this moment, seemed to be in space. The material world next to him lost all the external conceptions and turned into part of his cognitive world: Electrons jumped in orbits, accepting and launching quantum photons now and then; protons and neutrons formed the atomic nucleus under the strong interaction... The deep and cold light flowed out quietly Extending his hand that was made of his spiritual power, Lucien realized that he could directly ‘control’ them. He was immediately shocked.

However, Lucien soon realized that it was not the best moment to relish the experience. He hurried to review the knowledge and mechanism of fusion and project them into different magic models.

The time seemed to be elapsing slowly. Also, he had the main core of the fusion magic, and his spirit library had enough introductions to its mechanism. Therefore, a rather shabby magic structure without any assistant models soon appeared before Lucien.

“Control it, release it.” Alterna sounded as serious as before.

Lucien was rather scared. “No launch, no extension, no nothing! We are going to be killed, too!”

“I’ll take care of it. Hurry up.” Alterna promised him. The ‘cognitive space’ around immediately faded, revealing the real world, where Maltimus was still fighting Congus, and Pale Justice and Natasha were still managing to resist.

Lucien took a deep breath. The feeling of entering deep into matter lingered before his eyes. Therefore, he extended his left hand, and the silver light drew uncanny traces in the air as if he were controlling the particles of the entire world!

Natasha was the first one to notice that something wasn’t right. Sensing that Lucien was performing complicated magic, she turned around and looked, only to catch a pair of eyes that were deep, dark and filled with infinite mysteries.

The demonic eyes were emanating unimaginable charm. Natasha could barely move her head away after she saw them.

Lucien opened his mouth and declared hoarsely, as if he hadn’t spoken for years:

“Eternal Blaze!”

Along with the spell, silver brilliance burst out of Lucien’s body. The moon seemed to have landed, turning Natasha and himself blurry.

It was not until they heard the spell that the Lord of Hell and Demigod-lich noticed Lucien’s changes. When they sensed him, they discovered, to their surprise, that terrifying, overwhelming strength that exploded from Lucien, and infinite light was coming at them like the scorching sun in the midday.

Having no time to take other actions, Congus hurried to chant, “Undead Rampart.”

Walls made of souls and bodies surrounded him, almost as good as Wall of Sighs, the highest defense magic in Necromancy.

“Alterna!” Maltimus, who was more or less braced for it, roared. The hell next to him collapsed into a Hellish Barrier.

However, under the scorching heat, the radiant rays and the enormous blast, rocks were shattered, ramparts were melted, and barriers were broken.

The Lord of Hell and Demigod-lich both wanted to leave using teleportation. However, they realized that they had locked the space during their battle earlier, like they usually did. Therefore, in their red eyes, the scorching light from the grey fire was brighter and brighter, occupying their horizon and swallowing everything!

Boom! The terrible explosion did not echo until this moment, deafening everyone!

Outside of the northern mountains, Lucien, Natasha and Alterna appeared from the fuzziness. Then, they all heard the explosion and saw an incandescent sun rising far away, dispelling the deepest darkness before dawn.

“It’s sunrise...” Natasha looked at Lucien and then at the ‘sun’, mumbling to herself.

The sun soon disappeared. A gigantic mushroom cloud where the fire was surging popped up, blocking half of the dark sky.

Chapter 505: Roar

Chapter 505: Roar

In the headquarters of the Hand of Paleness at Heidler, inside a dark, steepled magic tower, after destroying the barricades through Advanced Cracking and Elemental Dissection, Fernando and Hathaway found the entrance to the Land of Dirt, Congus' demiplane, with the help of Bergner's astrology.

Then, they repeated what they did. Since their master was not here, most of the defenses were broken in only one hour by two grand arcanists and one prophet. The only thing left before them was Demigod-lich's secret chamber where his phylactery was kept. They saw a black box that was embedded with all kinds of rare gems and sensed the bouncing of soul fire inside.

"It's a barrier of 'Desperate Abyss'." Bergner reminded Fernando and Hathaway in case they were swallowed. The magic circle with which Demigod-lich protected his phylactery certainly entailed dangers.

Fernando simply twisted the space around with 'Electromagnetic Storm', blocking the last connection between the magic circle and the control pivot, while Hathaway started to brutally crack the barrier with 'Extravagant Dissolution'. They did not have the time or patience to analyze and guess the riddles to destroy the defenses at minimal cost. In order to gain more time for the rescue, it was acceptable to suffer the counterattack or even be heavily wounded.

The magic circle was dispelled and broken layer by layer. The secret chamber seemed to have become an abyss, and a powerful counterattack was about to be launched.

Suddenly, Fernando, Hathaway and Bergner all sensed something and raised their heads. Through the transparent barrier, they observed the black phylactery.

The space above the phylactery was twisted and blurred abruptly, displaying the outbreak of infinite light, in which a gold skull was howling miserably while being broken and melted.

The air of destruction was able to be sensed by Fernando, Hathaway and Bergner even though there was a 'Desperate Abyss' in between.

As the gold skull quickly vanished, the projection of the scene was blurred, and the viewpoint went further and further away.

The three legendary sorcerers discovered in shock that a strange, orange cloud in the shape of a mushroom rose in the mountains where the light burst out. It was so large that almost half of the sky was blocked.

The blast spread out, raising rings of smoke, which made the 'mushroom' look exceptionally weird.

After leaving a deep impression on Fernando, Hathaway and Bergner, the mushroom disappeared together with the projection of the scene.

"The explosion was as powerful as a full-strength blow from the president." Reviewing what he just saw, Bergner reached the conclusion. He looked at Hathaway, as if he was asking the opinion of the authority in the elemental field. "It looked like simple, explosive magic. Generally speaking, the power of such magic can be improved. I wonder if it can reach the level of God's Arrival in the end."

Looking at her front in silence, Hathaway seemed to be considering something, or organizing her speech. "I sensed that the explosion had something to do with the mysteries of the sun. As to how much it can be improved, I cannot say anything without examining the theory and the structure of the magic first."

"Who was Congus fighting?" Fernando slightly frowned. "Mysteries of the sun... Is it still with the boy Lucien? But what did he use to perform the magic of such a level?"

When the illusionary sun rose earlier, Fernando already sensed that it was possibly related to Lucien. Now that the same scene had appeared again when Congus hunted Lucien, he naturally associated the two incidents. However, he did not think that Lucien had advanced to the peak of legendary all of a sudden. Even though he had insights on the mysteries of the sun due to his previous research, and he achieved the model of legendary magic, his strength had to be improved step by step. Therefore, Fernando suspected that Lucien borrowed power from somewhere.

The precious magic gems on the black phylactery began to emit different colors and absorbed the other materials around, rebuilding a gold skull. Fernando and Hathaway looked at each other and accelerated the speed of cracking ‘Desolate Abyss’.

After almost an hour, the gold skull took shape, and Congus woke up from the dark. However, the outburst of light that resembled the arrival of the sun still lingered in his eyes.

For undead creatures, such light itself caused the greatest damage, not to mention that it came with a terrifying blast and unbelievable high temperature. Congus almost failed to weather through it and became the first lich who couldn’t be revived even though he had a phylactery.

“The Silver Moon had recovered a long time ago and had been waiting for a chance. Thankfully, I made it back alive.” Congus thought to himself in fear. At this moment, his soul was still being developed inside the gold skull, and he hadn’t sensed the surroundings yet. “Also, what exactly was the magic that Lucien Evans used? How could it have been so horrifying?”

Although he only had time for a peep, he could tell with his experience that Silver Moon Alterna lent her strength to Lucien and allowed him to perform the magic. If the spell had belonged to the Silver Moon, it could’ve been cast much easier.

“How many more secrets is the boy hiding?” The more he hunted Lucien, the more shocked he became. But soon, he calmed down and considered future plans. “The Silver Moon has recovered. The predator will become the prey. It’s a pity that the main consciousness of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls was wiped out by Lucien’s ‘legendary magic’ along with my shell. All my endeavors have proved to be for nothing. I even lost my ring!”

He had been quite satisfied about the legendary ring and regarded it as a divine item. Although he had chosen Necromancy, the field he was best at, and used his legendary class as the architecture in order to improve the odds of success, which meant that the abilities of the ring overlapped with his own abilities, it did not change the fact that the ring was the only legendary item that he had forged. It was a masterpiece that made him proud.

“Lucien and Natasha, the two rats, are not dead. I cannot stay in the congress anymore. Should I join the guys in the World of Souls, or should I hide in the Dark Mountain Range?”

Pondering for a while, Congus made up his mind to enter the World of Souls. He gnashed his teeth, “If there is any chance in future, I will definitely fulfill my promise and turn you two little rats into corpse prostitutes!”

A moment later, as his spiritual power restored, Congus’ gold skull floated, and his eye sockets were filled with the previous needle-like redness. He was about to go to the nearest gap to the World of Souls.

“You?” It was not until this moment that he noticed Fernando, Hathaway and Bergner who were observing him. Sensing the horrifying fury that the Lord of Storms was holding back, he hurried to say, “Lucien is not dead, and neither is Natasha!”

He was worried that the old pervert would change from roaring into attacking in excitement and wipe him as well as his phylactery. Now that his capabilities had been reduced by a half and not entirely recovered, there was no way that he could resist Fernando, not to mention that expressionless Hathaway was standing next to him.

“You have still done things that are punishable by death!” Fernando roared.

Congus calmed down and looked at the prophet that the congress sent. “Bergner, it was wrong of me to try to kill a senior-rank sorcerer of the congress and to search for Silver Moon Alterna and the World of Souls on my own. I should be punished as a warning for the other sorcerers of the congress. However, Lucien Evans is not dead. Please be careful about the degree of the punishment. Also, I demand a meeting of the Highest Council, where all the members will discuss my punishment together. This is the treatment that a legendary sorcerer deserves!”

The congress had only eighteen legendary sorcerers. The Church, which was the most powerful of all, had only twenty of them. The legendary are the best warriors and the foundation for any organization. The loss of a legendary sorcerer was a great retrogression to every organization. Therefore, Congus was qualified to propose such a demand.

Bergner, who always considered the development of the Congress of Magic, nodded and said to Fernando and Hathaway, “Congus has violated the rules of the congress and almost killed a senior-rank sorcerer. It is indeed a horrible mistake. However, it’s still ‘almost’. Lucien Evans is alive. Therefore, Congus’ crime does not deserve the death penalty.”

“Also, I believe that you are well aware of the role of a legendary sorcerer. He should be punished aptly. For example, under the witness of magic source, Congus will swear to the two of you or to Lucien Evans that he will not hurt him anymore. He will also offer tremendous compensations and be appointed as an explorer of a few dangerous areas. That should be enough.”

“Hunting a senior-rank sorcerer of the congress blatantly is a severe provocation against the order of the congress. If such a behavior is not punished with alarming penalties, I believe that all the sorcerers in the congress will worry about themselves. There will be no sense of community at all. Compared to such a consequence, the loss of a legendary sorcerer is not unacceptable!” The Lord of Storm tried to suppress his anger, but he sounded like he was roaring even when he was only expressing his reasoning.

Congus still looked at Bergner and said, “However, Lucien Evans is not dead, and he actually did not suffer any loss. Is a senior-rank sorcerer more important than a legendary sorcerer? Although he may become a grand arcanist in a few years, that’s only a possibility! His new alchemy system hasn’t been proven yet! Do you want to kill a legendary sorcerer just to appease him?”

“I believe that the members of the Highest Council should be able to make a judicious conclusion about which is more important, a sixth-circle sorcerer who may grow into a legendary sorcerer, or a sorcerer who has already advanced into legendary!”

He intentionally avoided the terrifying legendary magic that Lucien just performed and simply focused on his current identity and position.

As long as the case was appealed to the Highest Council, Vicente, who had the veto right, could at least keep him alive!

Bergner looked at Fernando and Hathaway in a dilemma. “In any case, the punishments for legendary sorcerers should be decided by the Highest Council together, not by us in private. Alright, Fernando, Hathaway, let’s bring Congus back to Allyn and convene a meeting of the Highest Council to discuss his mistake, evaluate his sincerity and value, and make a final decision.”

Douglas’ request for him, other than providing help, was to stop the two grand arcanists from outrageous actions. Therefore, he suggested that the two grand arcanists should consider the future of the congress and attach enough importance to a legendary sorcerer.

Fernando’s face was a bit twisted, and his eyes were occupied by storms. However, he contained himself and fell silent, as if he had accepted Bergner’s suggestion.

Seeing that, Congus was relieved and started enhancing himself with the magics such as ‘Magic Order’ in case of accidents.

Hathaway, on the other hand, simply walked out, as if she had accepted the result more easily than Fernando did.

By the time Hathaway reached Bergner, Bergner suddenly felt that a world-destroying storm burst out in the tiny chamber. Lightning rose like trees, and thunder blew up the ceiling. Noises of broken items echoed nonstop. The weather within ten kilometers was affected and changed into a thunderstorm, too.

Congus' cry came to an abrupt halt when it just rang out. The crystal ball in Bergner's hands glittered, and he was about to save Congus, but the silver, grey eyes on Hathaway's expressionless face simply stared at him without blinking, until he abandoned all his movements.

"Ahhh!" The phylactery was broken. A scream that seemed to be echoing inside the soul disappeared as quickly as it appeared.

The thunderstorm ended. Fernando walked to Bergner's front. With the remaining lightning flashing in his red eyes, he roared terrifyingly: "Let's convene a meeting of the Highest Council to discuss which is more important, two living grand arcanists or a dead legendary sorcerer!"

Chapter 506: A New Way of Searching

Chapter 506: A New Way of Searching

The gigantic mushroom cloud slowly disappeared, but earthquakes were still coming over from deep down like soundless cries. The violent wind raised dust that carried the air of death, making everyone feel that their faces were burning.

It was not one mountain but a group of mountains here. At this moment, having sensed such obvious aftermaths when she was outside of the mountains, Natasha had a new understanding about the power of 'Eternal Blaze'. "It's almost as good as Dracula's Scream..."

She had once entered the Dark Mountain Range and observed the place where Lucien fought Dracula with the Observer's Castle. She was shocked by the broken environment, and she had the same feeling today.

"There's still a huge gap. When the spell Eternal Blaze turns into 'atomic fusion', it will probably be as powerful as God's Arrival." As an earthling, Lucien had natural fondness of fusion magic, and he felt regretful that he could only perform it once with the strength of Alterna. In order to be a human-shaped hydrogen bomb, he would have to reach level three of legendary, which was where most of the grand arcanists were at. Also, the power of the magic was only limited by the user's capabilities and understanding about its mechanism. It wouldn't be strange that he could directly destroy the world someday.

By then, the Congress of Magic would have to solemnly swear that they would never use 'Lucien's Big Ivan' first.

"The temperature at the center. The sunlight it produced suppresses spectres and devils as well." Alterna said gravely next to him.

She had changed to a new hairstyle. The long gold hair had been combed to the left side of her head and dangled down from there, revealing her pure and beautiful face. Plus her white robe, she looked much more like a princess than Natasha did.

While Lucien was very curious about whether Alterna understood the special theory of relativity and the mass-energy formula he wrote, or she had inferred the power and status of the magic based on the structure of the magic and his description for it, the secret involved a demigod, and he could not predict the consequences if he asked recklessly. Therefore, he calmed himself down and asked with a bitter smile, “Your Excellency Alterna, didn’t you say that you needed seven days to absorb the remains of the mysterious existence of the World of Souls?”

Lucien suddenly grew anxious as he said that. He had thought that Alterna was one of the silly guys who acted based on their instincts. Together with their natural closeness, he was bold enough to whine. However, she was apparently one of the scheming guys, and she was also an honorable demigod. Would she be infuriated by such a question and even kill him?

If he survived all the disasters, only to be killed by the Silver Moon for a complaint, he would definitely die with regrets.

Well, would she prefer to be regarded as a male than a female?

Alterna replied solemnly, “I needed seven days if I were to eat it slowly.”

She said with a ‘I didn’t lie to you’ look on her face.

Lucien and Natasha both felt awkward, because she could’ve digested it in one day or shorter. He asked, “Why didn’t you eat faster if you could absorb it quickly?”

Both of them understood that Alterna did it for the purpose of attracting the masterminds behind the curtain. It was only a subconscious question due to the fear and anxiety in the past days.

Pressing her face with the right hand, Alterna replied equally solemnly, “I ate it slowly because I was waiting for the main dish.”

The main dish? Lucien understood that it referred to Maltimus, the Lord of Hell. However, the central area of Eternal Blaze had such a high temperature and such an intense release of energy. His projection that hadn't reached the peak of legendary yet couldn't have survived at all. What was there to eat?

If the purpose was to weaken him so that she could fight him in hell, the loss of a projection could only cause a minor injury at best. Under the enhancement of hell, Maltimus would still be able to compete with Alterna who was not in the home field.

According to the congress' descriptions on 'Lord of Hell' and 'Will of Abyss', they were slightly different from Alterna in that they seemed to be limited to the worlds they lived in. Therefore, they could not arrive at the main material world freely. Even if they did, they would be weakened. The only exception was the War of Dawn, when Maltimus gathered enough strength and sacrifices with a terrible scheme and opened the gate of hell, descending on the main material world. It was a pity that he was blown back by the pope's God's Arrival.

On the other side, their strength would be boosted in hell and in the abyss. They were the places that the Church had the weakest influence in apart from the alternate dimension controlled by other organizations.

Thinking about that, Lucien suddenly felt regretful. If even two experts in the legendary level couldn't have left any traces, there couldn't be any items or materials that survived the disaster.

Alterna seemed to have seen through Lucien and Natasha's confusion. She remained as solemn as before as she replied, "The roasted goat? He was not the main dish; the qualities he displayed were my target."

The qualities displayed? Lucien and Natasha looked at each other in shock? Was it the Lord of Hell's understanding about the nature of the God of Truth, the method that he briefly broke the limitation of arrival by twisting the space with the projection of Mountain Paradise, the skill with which he improved a level-eight radiant knight to a level-three legendary one, or the extraordinary abilities such as 'Life Deprivation' that he demonstrated during the battle?

The moment she recalled it, Natasha couldn't have seemed more torn. She found it unacceptable that the Lord of Hell could indirectly make the projection of Mountain Paradise arrive. Her faith was greatly shaken.

Lucien was more inclined to the first speculation. "God of Truth?"

Alternia neither nodded her head nor did she shake it. Instead, she said very, very carefully, "Do not walk on that path, for it may be wrong."

After that, she looked at Lucien's left hand. "The rest of my power and the 'cake' has melted into your left hand. You can take a look at it."

Thanks to the powerful recovery of the Silver Moon, Lucien's left hand that was ripped off had been restored. Hearing that, he focused his attention and moved his spiritual power over to examine it.

Before he knew it, Lucien had the illusion that he was viewing everything from an unimaginable perspective high above. Also, he seemed to have touched the mysteries of death and spirits for real and established a vague connection with the World of Souls.

However, it was still just a feeling. Lucien woke up very soon. He saw a silver moon rising before him, leaping into the sky and illuminating a corner, resonating with the sunrise in the east.

Under the illumination of the silver moon, the frozen, monochrome illusion popped up, and a pair of gigantic bat wings seemed to be rising inside.

In the next instant, everything was gone except for the sun.

"Mr. Rhine is finally unshackled." Lucien remarked in delight. Whatever role he played in Alternia's plan, whether he was tricked or directly involved, the fact remained that he was a friend who offered Lucien great help.

Looking at the sky quietly, Natasha suddenly said with a smile, "You played a lot of roles and tricked many people. Did you see it coming that you would be tricked by such a beautiful and seemingly harmless girl without noticing it at all? This is truly remarkable.”

While the Silver Moon was genderless, Natasha obviously preferred to regard her as a girl.

Lucien explained with a helpless smile, “I just felt that a demigod could’ve attacked me directly if she meant any harm, and no tricks were needed. That was why I fell for it.”

“There’s no need to explain.” Natasha said in amusement, “Didn’t you say when you comforted me that the girls who seemed silly, soft, cute and beautiful, tended to be dark inside? Haha. Your theory has been proven.”

Lucien could only smile now.

Pondering for a moment, Lucien replied, “The greatest benefit is that I can study the nature of a demigod’s power and slightly sense their understanding about the world. My connection with the World of Souls is also strengthened. In the meantime, this left hand should be able to nullify magic, divine powers, elements and other abilities. However, since there is not much power left, it can only affect abilities no higher than the eighth circle. Also, unless I have groundbreaking research products in the field, there will be no way to improve it in the future. As for the rest of the abilities of the left hand, I have to figure them out during the usage.”

It was similar to Bloodline Elimination, but could not deal with the natural effects caused by extraordinary powers, such as the mountains collapsing by magic, or the illusionary gaps of space from Natasha’s sword.

“That’s great. You have earned a lot. Your spiritual power must’ve reached the eighth circle, right? Natasha said rather enviously.

Examining himself, Lucien nodded, “It only just stepped into the eighth circle, but I haven't even constructed a seventh-circle magic yet."

Then, he comforted Natasha, "You've done a great job in the test of life and death this time. Your chivalry and willpower have both been trained. Also, with your bloodline, you will meet few obstacles before you enter into legendary after you become a radiant knight. Chances are that you will advance into level eight very soon."

"Chivalry..." Natasha suddenly sighed, "I don't even know how to face the Lord now."

Her chivalry was partly built on her faith. The collapse of faith tended to result in the plunge of willpower. She would not die of it, but further advancements would be very difficult.

Lucien comforted her in a gentle voice, "Sympathy, courage, protection, justice and other spirits of chivalry, are they all the bliss from Mountain Paradise? In your heart, is there not sympathy for the weak, the protection for your family, friends and subjects, the hope for order and virtue, the courage to fight enemies and difficulties, and the determination in your opinions and glory?"

"Natasha, all the virtues and spirits originate from our heart. The real Lord is not out there, not on Mountain Paradise, but in your heart. Each of us have a Lord that solely belongs to ourselves in our heart. Unless you give up on yourself, he will never be gone."

Natasha put on a smile that covered up her gloom. She said lightheartedly, "Lucien, you are very fit to be a priest. Well, I need time to review my mind. Alright, let's go. Your Eternal Blaze was too noisy. Perhaps, His Excellency Varantine is coming."

"I'll stay in the northern mountains and wait for my teacher and Her Excellency Hathaway to come. Considering the uniqueness of my fate, it will be difficult for Varantine to locate me." Although Lucien hated to say goodbye, he still said toughly, "You need to get out of here fast and return before the Church discovers this."

"Okay." Natasha did not hesitate.

Right then, a stormy roar echoed far away, “Lucien Evans!”

The roar seemed to be from a place far, far away. Lucien couldn't hold back his smile, “My teacher does have a loud voice...”

The transmission of electromagnetic waves was limited in this world, but soundwaves remained unaffected. Therefore, the Lord of Storm decided to search for him with ‘Lord of Storm’s Roar’, a ninth-circle magic, which was the most effective way.

However, it was still amazing that the voice was delivered so far away. Lucien could only remark that his teacher was not scared that he would be discovered by the Church at all.

“I’m going to meet Grandma Hathaway, too.” Natasha’s eyes glittered.

Chapter 507: Summer Change

Not far away from Death Valley that was already gone, Fernando, Hathaway and Bergner floated in the sky and observed the destruction, inferring the temperature and power of the explosion based on the astonishing traces and the gigantic pit.

"If this was really an explosive magic, wouldn't the sun be a planet where such explosions happen all the time?" Bergner asked at a loss.

It was not because he was hostile against 'fusion explosion'; it was just that he felt lost as a prophet when the sun, which was in a very important position in astrology and horoscopes, finally revealed part of its mysteries.

After Fernando killed the Demigod-lich, Bergner did not leave in fury. According to Congus' reason, it was obvious that two living grand arcanists were more important than a dead legendary sorcerer. If Congus' self-defense was left aside and the rules of the congress were respected, Fernando wasn't wrong doing what he did, either.

Perhaps because the Lord of Storm had always abided by the rules of the congress, people had forgotten that he was short-tempered not only in academic questions, or how he achieved his legendary class and nickname. It was not until he suddenly attacked that Bergner felt it was only reasonable and as expected of the 'Lord of Storm'. Therefore, he accepted the result with a bitter smile.

Fernando shook his head, "Technically speaking, this was not an explosive magic. I don't find any unique traces left by the traditional explosive magics. There's only the purest release of energy and an unimaginably high temperature."

He specifically added 'traditional' when he mentioned the explosive magics in the school of elements. It was obvious that he regarded what was before him as a brand-new way of using explosive magic that approached the mysteries of the sun. Walking down the path, the faction of light and electromagnetism would be able to be partly included in the field of elements.

"Exactly." Hathaway nodded softly and agreed with Fernando's conclusion.

Bergner, a prophet who was not good at elements, sighed, "I can't imagine that Lucien Evans has created such a magic. However, I do have a feeling that the times have changed. Perhaps starting from this moment—No, since Lucien proposed the Energy Quantum Theory, arcana and magic have entered a marvelous and appalling era."

While Fernando and Hathaway did not respond to Bergner's words, their looks and their silence suggested that they were considering it. What a prophet said must not be overlooked easily.

At this moment, two people flew close from far away. Fernando's hands that had been clenched in fists all this time loosened, and he criticized gravely, "You were truly idiotic this time! You didn't know that somebody played tricks on you, and you were forced into the Portal to an Alternate Realm just like that! If you are this careless again next time, I think I will have to collect your body for you, if your body can be found at all!"

Hardly had Lucien arrived when he was greeted with the storm of roars that he had missed. He felt rather warm to see his teacher's angry look, and therefore hurried to admit his mistake.

"Granny, how did you come so soon? We thought we would have to wait until the evening or the next morning." Natasha had often heard Lucien talking about his teacher's roars. She observed it joyfully and planned to record it to make fun of Lucien later. However, after a while, she changed the subject for some reason.

Hathaway looked much more gentle as she stared at Natasha. She said casually, "We killed Congus and came from the Portal to the Alternate Realm that he established."

"You killed Congus?" Lucien was surprised and delighted. He was worried that 'Eternal Blaze' could not kill Congus who had a phylactery, and that there would be infinite trouble if the guy escaped. He did not expect that his teacher had already taken care of the problem.

They must've held back a lot of pressure, mustn't they?

"He should die!" Fernando did not change his attitude. Then, he held back his 'anger' and asked with a fake smile, "What's with your magic? That illusionary sun we saw the other day was made by you, too, wasn't it? What about the Silver Moon and the existence from the World of Souls?"

"Master, you saw it, too?" Lucien did not expect that his teacher could've seen it over such a long distance. Then, something most important was obviously missing in his speculation at that time. The world was more complicated than he thought.

Hathaway had been standing quietly. She interjected at this moment, "Everybody saw it. Is it a legendary magic that was derived from the new alchemy?"

She was keener than anybody else as she was studying the 'new alchemy'.

"Yes. I noticed some phenomena when I studied the decay of atoms and reached a lot of conclusions. After I killed Congus for a second time, the knowledge was integrated, and the world gave me feedback. I achieved the prototypes of two legendary magics, which triggered what you saw. Later, with the help of the Silver Moon, I completed the main body of 'Eternal Blaze', or 'Atomic Fusion', and released it." Lucien did not reveal the special theory of relativity or the mass-energy formula but explained it from the experimental phenomena that would be seen in the new alchemy.

The deduction of the special theory of relativity was not difficult. Considering the knowledge and the existing accomplishments of the Congress of Magic, anybody who overcame their biases could come up with it in a few years. However, it was exactly because of the biases that Lucien dared not show his teacher the paper immediately.

While the wave theory of light and the particle theory were the foundations of different factions and cognitive worlds, the opinions on time and space was the fundamental 'common sense' that every arcanist used to understand the world. They came from everyday, intuitional and errorless feelings. For example, even the ordinary people had the feeling that time flowed by quietly as they enjoyed peace.

Therefore, for an arcanist, absolute, independent, time was the cornerstone of their worldview. It was well believed that 'Time Stop', the ninth-circle magic, merely froze the area and slowed down the movement, and that it did not really manipulate the time. The magic was like an upgraded version of Deferment.

The disruptive part of the special theory of relativity was not the mass-energy formula but the idea that time and space are relevant. It told people that time was a function of speed and depended on matter, which would be a revolutionary storm no smaller than the one caused by the Energy Quantum Theory. In the meantime, it declared the obsolescence of 'Ether'.

After all, the preliminary studies on fission and fusion did not require the mass-energy formula. Therefore, Lucien hid it for now so that his teacher could take it in slowly.

Thinking about that, Lucien secretly asked for forgiveness in his heart. "My teacher is always the first one to take the hit of the groundbreaking theories. I feel really sorry for him. Well, can fission and fusion help him reach a higher level?"

Fernando asked solemnly, "Fusion? The other is fission?"

The decay of elements that was observed was clearly fission. That was why he asked in excitement.

"Fusion releases energy just like fission does?" Hathaway asked the important question, with zealotry beaming out of her silver grey eyes.

They completely forgot that the area was under the control of the Church, or that an insane explosion of 'Big Ivan' just took place, but simply floated in the air and discussed atomic fission and fusion.

Having been taught by Lucien in advance, Natasha listened enjoyably and chimed in now and then. Bergner, who was terrible at elements, was so overwhelmed that he simply left and stayed on alert.

After a brief introduction, Lucien said, "Master, Your Excellency Hathaway, the explosion previously must've been noticed by Varantine.

"Varantine? Does he dare to come here?" The Lord of Storm glared at Lucien. There were two grand arcanists and one level-two legendary prophet. Why would they be scared of the leader of the ascetics who was not even a Saint?

Even if the pope came here in person, Fernando still believed in the capabilities of his side as long as God's Arrival was not available. Although they could not beat him, it was not difficult to escape. A legendary sorcerer was more difficult to kill than any other class, unless they were surrounded and the space was blocked. But since a prophet was here, it was absolutely impossible to ambush and surround them.

Despite saying that, Fernando held back his desire in arcana exploration. He went on, "Let's go back to Allyn. You can write your experiences with the Silver Moon and the existence of the World of Souls into a report. Tell people the things about Maskelyne, too, if you want. You cannot face the World of Souls on your own."

Congus had some files left in his place, which let Fernando know why they had been chasing Lucien.

Natasha took the opportunity to bid farewell, ready to return to the knights sent by Duchy Violet.

"Talk soon." Natasha was not upset by the departure and made a gesture of electromagnetism messaging to Lucien with a smile. She flew away at ease after whispering something to Hathaway in secret.

Seeing that she left, Fernando suddenly put on a horrible smile. "Lucien, your pursuit of love seems very tough."

Have I been seen through? Lucien asked embarrassed, "What are you talking about, master?"

"Haha, don't be shy. I have abundant romantic experience. What have I not been through? The only reason why I'm single right now is that I do not think it is a big deal now. Whatever question you may have in that regard, you are free to ask me." Fernando made fun of his student without any reservations.

.....

In the Nekso Palace at Rentato, the capital of Holm...

A white candle was burning inside a silver candlestick. The dim light from it created an air of loneliness and desolation under the contrast of the storm and lightning outside.

Sard, wearing a white hat, looked at King Feltis who was lying on the bed and said, "Your Majesty, your life came to an end a few months ago, and it has been sustained by the divine power since. However, even the divine power cannot extend your life anymore. Everything is set. You can return to the arms of the Lord in peace. Rest assured. Death is not the destiny. You will enjoy eternal happiness and salvation on Mountain Paradise."

Feltis' dirty eyes became clear, and he appeared more or less guilty, but his guilt was replaced by more dutifulness and determination. He said intermittently, "Honorable Saint Sard... Rex, the things... will be in your hands. Holm has always been a kingdom favored by God... and it will always be one."

Rex, Duke of Frenburg and president of the Parliament of Nobles, was full of grief in front of the king whom he had served for years. On one of his knees, he grabbed Feltis right hand and said, "Your Majesty, I will live up to your hope."

"It's my mission to add more glory to the Lord. Your Majesty, rest assured, the prince will not fall into hell." Sard drew a cross on his chest.

Crack. An enormous lightning struck and illuminated the room. Feltis closed his eyes with a smile, his right hand slipping off.

.....

In the residence of the Minister of Finance, Count Henson was woken up from his dream.

"What? His Majesty has been summoned by the Lord? Get the wagon prepared now!" Count Henson stood up from his bed abruptly and walked out in his pajamas. His lady hurried to follow and covered him with a black gown, before she handed over his staff.

Count Henson who had lost his usual grace went to the wagon at the gate of his villa almost running. Then he shouted, "Hurry! To the Nekso Palace!"

Having not activated his bloodline, he ran far more slowly than a wagon dragged by Dragon Scale horses. Being carried to the palace, on the other hand, it would expose his panic. Therefore, despite his anxiety, he simply cleaned his clothes inside the wagon to show that he was very calm in order to give other nobles confidence.

BOOM. A lightning bolt struck, and deafening thunder echoed, exactly an implication of Count Henson's heart. The wagon rolled fast as the coachman tried his best, making mud splash everywhere.

The four wheels rolled so fast that the whole carriage was almost thrown when the wagon took a turn.

The window was opened as a result. The wild wind blew in, and raindrops the size of beans poured into the wagon. The night outside was as dark as ink and seemed to contain infinite horror.

The wagon stopped outside of the Nekso Palace. Count Henson rushed into the palace despite the storm. Then, he saw Duke James and Duke Russell who were standing by the gate.

"What's the situation? Where is the prince?" Count Henson breathed hard. He was already an aged senior.

With a gloomy face, James replied hoarsely, "The prince has been summoned by the Lord, too, because of grief."

BOOM! BOOM! BOOM!

Count Henson's exclamation was eclipsed by a series of shocking thunder. He stood in the rain and simply allowed it to pour on him. There was nothing but fuzziness before him, now bright and now dark.

Chapter 508: Candidates

Inside the Parliament of Nobles in the Nekso Palace.

Torrential rain was pouring outside with deafening thunder and dazzling lightning, as if it were the end of the end, but all the members of the Parliament of Nobles in Rentato had been gathered in the hall. White wigs and black capes could be seen everywhere.

Had it not been for the power of the natural lightning, which made the experts below gold knights too scared to fly here, all the members of the Parliament of Nobles would've been gathered, and it had only been one hour since the Lord summoned King Feltis and Prince Patrick. Of course, the nobles who could not make it here had also learned from their spokespersons and allies in Rentato remotely and forwarded their opinions.

They had never been more grateful for the Allyn Telephone and the Telegram Company. While the 'wired phones' that they promoted were limited to Rentato and the capitals of a few counties because of the complicated infrastructure and the huge cost that came with it, it was the only means of communication for the nobles who were unable to deploy and use expensive teleportation arrays in such weather. Many nobles decided to help with the promotion after witnessing its advantages.

"How was the prince summoned by the Lord?" Count Henson took a hot bath in the restroom in the Parliament of Nobles and changed his clothes and wig. It was not until then that he was finally freed from shock. He put on a white paper flower and seated himself in the front row, asking James, Duke of Paphos, Russell, Duke of Wolfburg, and Viscount Harrison, who had come after informing the Congress of Magic.

The four of them were the leaders of the Liberal group apart from Prince Patrick. They had to reach a consensus first, or the nobles on their side would lose confidence.

Duke James put on a white wig in the Parliament of Nobles to cover his bald head. He said sullenly, "I don't know, either. It already happened when Russell and I came to Nekso Palace. We examined the prince's body and discovered no anomaly. It was indeed a body collapsed caused by overwhelming grief. I don't think anybody could've assassinated him when he was protected by His Excellency Kritonia."

Kritonia, 'Heart of Time', was one of the two legendary knights of Holm. In the whole world, there could only be no more than five knights who could reach level three of legendary, he and Rudolf II were among them. As for the legendary knights who reached the peak of legendary, apart from the monsters such as Prince Dracula, Prince Abyss, and the lord of the first level of hell, there was only one among human beings, who was Saint Melmax, the captain of the Temple Knights and a member of the Grand Cardinal.

Although he claimed that no assassinations could've happened under Kritonia, James did not seem certain of it at all.

"His Excellency Kritonia was a hero in the War of Dawn and a legendary knight who crushed the Magic Empire's reign in Holm together with the late king. However, he is approaching the end of his life. He needs to consider and arrange more things than ordinary people do." Duke Russell said expressionlessly, "He cannot observe the situation as quietly as His Excellency Winston of the Solefen family."

Winston, 'Night Walker', was the other legendary knight of Holm, who was now supervising the kingdom's colonies in a few alternate dimensions.

Viscount Harrison sneered, "I, for one, don't believe that the prince passed away because of grief."

Harrison, Henson and the rest of them knew that Patrick had been a crown prince for four decades. It was inevitable that there was a conflict of power between the prince and the king. The two of them hadn't been intimate since a long time ago, particularly when their ideologies differed greatly. The nobles might've believed it if Patrick's body collapsed because of ecstasy.

"With everything coming to this point, we need to forget our grief and focus on two things. Firstly, we need to ask the sorcerers of the Congress of Magic to investigate the prince's death in private. Secondly, we carry out our backup plan and support David to assume the throne." After Count Henson calmed down, his blue eyes became sharp again.

Patrick had always been in poor condition. The liberal nobles had been prepared that he would die earlier than the king. Therefore, they were not panicked after they passed the initial shock and panic.

David's father was King Feltis' cousin, as well as Archmage Morris' nephew and student. Although he had died in an adventure, David, a grand knight, was completely inclined to the Liberal in daily life as well as in official affairs under his father's tutelage. He was the most suitable candidate of the royal family for the liberal nobles. Also, his bloodline was very close. According to the law of nobles, he was the fourth heir on the list.

"Okay." Duke James nodded heavily and informed the other liberal nobles of the result of their discussion.

A moment later, Rex, 'King's Griffin', the president of the Parliament of Nobles who wore a blue cape and a white wig, walked in, followed by a black-haired, smiling man whose silver grey eyes told everyone unmistakably that he belonged to the Hoffenberg family.

"Gordon!" The liberal nobles became solemn.

Duke James couldn't have looked more awful. "Didn't he claim that he would serve the Lord for his life? Didn't he quit the Sword of Truth's Knights and go to Lance, the Holy City, to join the Temple Knights?"

"A level-eight radiant knight no more than 50, the Torn Sword..." Duke Russell and Viscount Harrison whispered gravely.

Noise echoed in the hall. The other nobles, be they liberals or conservatives, began to whisper to each other. Count Gordon was a genius and an eccentric of the Hoffenberg family. He became a radiant knight when he was only 35 years old. He was appointed as the deputy captain of the Sword of Truth's Knights by King Feltis. However, as a pious believer, he went to the Holy City at 40 and joined the Temple Knights.

His bloodline was much further from King Feltis than David's was. However, his rank as a radiant knight was influential enough to raise his right of succession to be on par with David. While the Hoffenberg family was not unpopulated, most of its members were more distant in bloodline, or were not knights, or they had already embarked on the path of magic, thereby forfeiting their qualification.

Duke James and the other liberals thought that Rex would support Alex, his nephew who had just activated the bloodline of 'Sword of Truth'. Then, in terms of strength or blood connection, David would inherit the throne without suspense. Nobody expected that Gordon would come back.

As the mallet knocked the table ahead, the hall of the Parliament of Nobles immediately fell quiet.

Rex drew a cross on his chest and said sorrowfully, "Our great king, His Majesty Feltis, and our honorable crown prince, His Highness Patrick were summoned by the Lord an hour ago. Let's have a moment of silence and pray that they be favored by the Lord on Mountain Paradise."

James and the other nobles stood up and drew crosses in the quiet and grievous atmosphere.

Five minutes later, Rex hinted that everybody should sit down and turned tough. "Because His Highness Patrick, heir of the kingdom, has also been summoned by the Lord, without leaving any children, the Parliament of Nobles will elect an heir according to the law. The election will be based on the right of succession, on the premise that they are blessed by the Lord."

By 'blessed by the Lord', he meant that a Grand Cardinal would come to host the ceremony of inheritance.

Rex did not allow the nobles to speak. Pointing at Gordon who was next to him. "The royal family of Holm is in peril after such a strike. Therefore, Count Gordon decided to consider for his family and asked for the Lord's forgiveness. He quit the Temple Knights and returned through the teleportation array of the Church. He is a level-eight radiant knight and of the purest bloodline of 'Sword of Truth'. I propose that he should inherit the throne. Please vote by raising your hands."

"Wait a moment." James stood up and said loudly, "Under such circumstances, according to the law, only if more than two thirds of the members agree and none of the nine dukes objects can the elected inherit the throne. Is it the case, President Rex?"

Rex looked at James gloomily, "Yes, and no. When all the other candidates have no more than one fifth of the votes, the last candidate will not need to meet the requirement. In emergencies, the candidate with more than half of the votes will inherit the throne directly. I believe that it is an emergency right now. The throne cannot be left empty."

"It is not up to you whether or not this is an emergency; it requires everyone's vote. Now, I propose Count David. He is closer to His Majesty in bloodline and much more entitled to the throne than Count Gordon. Also, he is a grand knight who has activated the strength of his bloodline."

James did not speak on the podium but looked around at other nobles on the spot. "I don't think any member will object to the hereditary hierarchy, right? If anyone agrees to it, then the candidates stronger than his son or his grandson can invoke the example and steal the title when they are about to inherit the title, right?"

It was the foundation to keep the nobles in fact. Every noble wanted to leave their title to their direct heir. If the strong were free to rob, every family would be filled with assassinations and internal strife.

Of course, that was one of the reasons why they succumbed to the Church. The independent and powerful church could ensure that nobody would disregard the rules because of their strength.

A conservative stood up and bowed at everybody courteously, "According to the law, the bloodline abilities are the foundation of nobles, and powerful strength will be considered during inheritance. Considering the strength of a radiant knight, Duke Gordon and Count David are on par. Therefore, electing Count Gordon is not in violation of the law and will not result in the collapse of order."

"Also, Count David's father was a sorcerer. We need to consider if he can be blessed by the Lord."

His brief reply completely resolved James' attack.

Count Henson stood up with a feather pen. He also bowed around courteously and said, "Just because the father is a sorcerer does not mean that the son is not a devout believer. Count David has never missed any church session and often donates to the Church. Everybody knows his piety well. I believe that the Lord can certainly see it and tolerate it. Count Gordon, on the other hand, once entered the Temple Knights. I find it hard to believe that he will place the interests of Holm before everything else in the future. This is not blasphemy of the Lord but a confusion of the power of the Church and the power of the king."

At such a moment, he had no time to be subtle but pointed out the confrontation of the two powers.

Gordon raised his hands and smiled, "Speculations are not proof. I believe that I will view the questions of nobles as the king of Holm instead of as a Temple Knight."

The other liberals and conservations stood and offered their opinions. In the end, Rex said, "Now, a show of hands. Those who agree with Count David, please raise your hands."

Arms were raised. They did not seem to be many, but they already made up one third. While the liberals were outnumbered by the conservatives, they were more united.

Rex frowned at that as he could not invoke the first special clause now. Thinking for a moment, he proceeded, "Those who agree with Count Gordon, please raise your hands."

Arms were raised. It did not seem to be a problem that he would have the approval of more than half of the people. Rex began to consider how to make the motion of the state of emergency pass.

Suddenly, the raising of hands was stopped when there was still not half. Rex looked at Duke Solomon, stunned. The noble who had a black mustache shook his head, stating that he would not support candidates with distinctive church backgrounds. As a major leader of the conservatives, his attitude directly influenced many other nobles.

Duke James smiled, "President Rex, it seems that we need to discuss and negotiate for a long time."

Now that Duke Solomon hesitated, he was confident to kick Gordon out through compromises.

Rex fell silent. Looking at the mallet in his hands, he suddenly raised his head, "I will propose another candidate."

He intended to force Duke Solomon and the rest of them to agree with his proposal with the emergency of the situation, but they were more stubborn than he anticipated. He could only activate the backup plan now.

"Who? Who is higher on the hereditary hierarchy than Count David and Count Gordon?" Duke Russell expressed his objection.

Rex replied unhurriedly, "Natasha Violet, Countess of Violet, has activated the bloodline of 'Sword of Truth'. She is closer to His Majesty than Count David is. Also, she is a radiant knight and a devout believer that can be blessed by the Church."

Chapter 509: Resul

Duke James, Count Henson, and the other liberals looked at each other and saw objection in each other's eyes. While Natasha had been in Holm, she was still too young to have a political view. Also, it was an unchangeable fact that her teacher Beliel, 'God's Glory,' was a member of the Grand Cardinals. According to sources, she had been raised by the Church since six. She was a devout believer, only slightly better than Gordon as a candidate.

"According to bloodline, Natasha, Countess of Violet, is the heir only next to His Highness. She is a radiant knight and a devout believer. So, she is the most reasonable heir to the throne." Rex looked rather tough.

Duke Russell stood and said while shaking his quill pen. "President Rex, we are both aware of it, but why are we discussing other candidates? Because Her Highness Meredith, Countess Natasha's mother, automatically abandoned her right to the throne when she became a sorcerer. That is to say; her children are no longer entitled to it."

Count Henson and Viscount Harrison looked at each other with a bitter smile, in that they had to offer objections using sorcerers as an excuse when they were inclined to the Congress of Magic.

Duke Solomon said solemnly, "If the logic stands, David will not be entitled to the throne, either. A noble's right comes from their bloodline. Unless it is deprived according to the law, they will always enjoy it. What Countess Natasha activated is the purest bloodline of the Sword of Truth. Her right of inheritance comes directly from His Majesty."

Rex seemed more or less relieved. Duke Solomon seemed able to live with that. So, he went on, "I discussed candidates in the meeting just now, instead of asking Princess Natasha to inherit the throne directly, because she is now the only heir of Duchy Violet. According to Entry Three, Clause Five of the inheritance law, if the inheritor has the rights to other countries and families and such rights cannot be combined, their position will be lowered by one level on the hierarchy, which makes her on the same level as David and Gordon."

Duchy Violet played an important role in the Church's defense in the northwest. The Church would never give it to Holm.

"Since the previous two candidates are not unanimously approved, it is definitely not a problem to propose Princess Natasha." He began to call Natasha princess, acknowledging her position in the royal family.

"Duke James, Count Russell, do you have any objections? If not, we will have a vote." Rex looked at the few leaders of the liberals.

Duke James and the rest of them were caught unprepared. They had thought that the conservatives would ignore Natasha as they did. After all, everybody knew the relation between Meredith and Hathaway. She was an excellent sorcerer herself. Who could have seen this coming?

Gender? No, females' right of inheritance was specified in the law.

Strength? Worse. As a genius who became a radiant knight in her twenties and who was likely to become legendary, she was more distinguished than any of them.

Too close to the Church? Won't work. Other than being a pious believer, Natasha did not have any behavior to be criticized. She had never flattered the Church by jeopardizing the interests of the nobles of Duchy Violet.

As for her suppression of the Congress of Magic on the surface and her ban on magic recorders and phones, such things could not be discussed openly. They could not publicize that they were cooperating with sorcerers, in which case Rex might change his attitude and ask Sard to come in and purge the nobles who had been corrupted by sorcerers. Those things could be done but never be talked about.

For a moment, the liberals couldn't find a good excuse.

Duke Solomon, on the other hand, cleaned his black cape and asked, "President Rex, I heard a rumor about Princess Natasha, and I hope you can explain it. It is said that she and Lucien Evans, the Fallen Angel, are a couple deeply in love with each other. Will she betray the nobles, indulge the Congress of Magic, and infuriate the Church because of that?"

After Louise came to Holm, Lucien's identity was no longer a secret. Every noble knew that he was that great musician. After he made it to the top twenty of the Cleansing List, the history of the great musician had been dug out, too.

Hearing Duke Solomon's question, James suddenly breathed heavily. If that were the case, it would not be unacceptable that Natasha became the queen.

Rex replied unhurriedly, "Regarding that, I learned the answer from His Excellency Saint Sard, who was the Grand Cardinal of the parish of Violet and knew everything. Princess Natasha is attracted to females. Lucien Evans is just an excuse and a disguise for her. They are not as close as rumors have it to be. Also, the princess is a very devout believer. Sylvia, her partner in the past, was killed by her without any hesitation after she learned that Sylvia was a magic apprentice."

"What?"

"Was the most beautiful musician killed because of that?"

"No wonder 'Ode To Sylvia' was rewarded with a manor by Princess Natasha."

It was the first time that the nobles heard the gossip, which was from Grand Cardinal Sard, who couldn't have lied about such things. They immediately whispered to each other.

Count Henson now found it impossible to accept Natasha as the queen. He coughed and said, "Homosexual love is in violation of the Lord's tutelage. Also, there will be no offspring. Such an inheritance will be meaningless."

"That's just the idea of some preachers. The Lord only taught us not to be obsessed with lust. As for the offspring, I believe we can make it clear to Princess when we invite her to inherit the throne that she must give birth to a child as soon as possible. As for her relationship with her spouse in private, that's not our concern. I believe that it is not a great compromise for her. If she doesn't accept it, we will discuss other candidates." Rex looked at the members of the Parliament of Nobles. "If there are no other questions, let's vote."

Duke Solomon, one of the leaders of the conservatives, raised his hand first. He was not as extreme as Rex and preferred a candidate that was acceptable for the Church, the parliament, and the nobles in case of a great conflict within the country, which would only result in the decline of Holm. In such a case, even the winning nobles would not earn much. Natasha was undoubtedly a suitable candidate.

Duke Solomon's father was 'Night Walker' Winston. His influence on the conservatives was as great as Rex's. Many people followed him to raise their hands, and so did the nobles who supported Rex. Soon, two-thirds of the participants had raised their hands. Duke James and Duke Russell, on the other hand, were gloomy and prepared to use the dukes' veto right.

Suddenly, Viscount Harrison thought of something. He wrote on a piece of paper, before he passed it on to Duke James in secret.

Knowing that he was scared that the gold knights such as Duke Rex could overhear them, Duke James did not blame his redundant move. Instead, he opened the paper that read, "Princess Natasha is closer to Her Excellency Hathaway than we imagine."

Duke James had a complicated look on his face. After discussing with Duke Russell, he suddenly raised his hand, which was quite a shock for most of the liberals. But they still chose to believe in him and followed his lead.

Rex put on a smile. "Very good. The Parliament of Nobles has unanimously passed the motion that Natasha Violet, Countess of Violet, is to be invited to Holm to inherit the throne."

He knocked the gavel and declared, "This meeting is now concluded."

.....

Watching the conservatives leave, Duke James said to Viscount Harrison solemnly, "I hope you're right."

"We can only take our chances. Rex seemed well prepared. I'll report the result to the Highest Council. They will decide whether or not assassination is necessary." Viscount Harrison left in a hurry.

In a secret chamber inside the Nekso Palace, Rex spoke to two seniors respectfully, "Your Excellency Saint Sard, Your Excellency Kritonia, Natasha has achieved the right to the throne as per your instruction."

"Very good." Sard smiled peacefully, his dangling eyelids blocking his dirty eyeballs.

.....

On the 35th floor of the magic tower in Allyn, in the meeting room of the Highest Council, one of the twenty-four chairs was gone.

"We discussed the problem before. I don't think it's the best choice to let Beliel's student be the queen of Holm. I suggest we eliminate her in advance." Said Vicente, the Lord of the Undead, coldly, without looking at Hathaway at all."

Vicente, who was well prepared, proved his innocence in Congus' incident, and provided sufficient evidence that Congus' students were unaware of Demigod-lich's actions, protecting them from being punished.

Several members of the Highest Council nodded, agreeing that Natasha and Gordon should be killed to ensure David's right to the throne.

Hathaway looked at them, coldly, "This is the Hoffenberg family's business. Whoever meddles with it will be my sworn enemy. Also, I believe that Natasha will be a just queen who will not be biased towards the Church."

Due to her lack of eloquence, she simply threatened her enemy.

"But how many people support you? Vicente challenged Hathaway.

Davey, the Innovator, said lightheartedly, "I believe in Hathaway's judgment."

"What's wrong with you?" Without a sign, the Lord of Storm began to roar, "Kill Natasha and Gordon? Are you planning to terrify all the nobles in Holm, Brianne, Colette, and Calais? Sard will smile in his dreams! The nobles will be completely inclined to him! Seven legendary knights in four countries, plus the Grand Cardinals in their parishes, that will be twelve legendary warriors, two of whom are level-three! It's enough to suffocate us!"

The other members of the Highest Council couldn't help but shift their heads under the roar, but most of them secretly agreed with him. While Fernando was short-tempered, unamiable and even slightly freakish, he had always considered the development of the Congress.

"Fernando, what's your opinion?" Douglas asked in a smile. He was least influenced by the roar.

Fernando looked around with his red eyes, and most members did not dare to look back at him. "At the very least, Natasha is not a bad choice."

"Not a bad choice. Yes, I agree with that." Douglas was more willing to trust Hathaway and Fernando.

Vicente meant to object, but his influence was diminished by the Demigod-lich's incident. His allies were unwilling to support him at such a moment. Therefore, the Highest Council reached a conclusion very soon. Natasha would not be stopped, but her tendencies would be observed so that she could be destroyed or controlled when necessary.

.....

After he returned to his library from the meeting room, Fernando saw Lucien who was wearing a black, double-breasted tuxedo pacing back and forth.

"Master, what's the situation?" Sensing that his teacher came in, Lucien hurried to ask.

Fernando chuckled. "Natasha will not be stopped from inheriting the throne, but it's mostly up to herself. Violet is far away from Holm, and she still has her father to take care of."

Then, he said solemnly, "Lucien, this is the best I can do for you. It depends on yourself whether or not you can trick a queen into your bed."

Lucien smiled in embarrassment, "It's very difficult. Natasha likes girls."

"That's indeed a problem..." Fernando thought for a moment. Then, his eyes shined. He opened the space gate to the demiplane, leaving Lucien in the library in confusion.

A moment later, Fernando walked back with a belt with beautiful stripes. He gloated, "It's still there. This is my most remarkable achievement in alchemy when I was young. Lucien, put it on, and you and Natasha will be a loving couple soon enough."

"What's this?" Lucien found it odd and did not dare to take it over.

Fernando grimaced and raised the belt, "A gender-transitioning belt, of course. You will become a real girl after you put it on. Natasha is close to you enough. The only obstacle between you should be gender."

Lucien did not see his face, but he guessed that it must be filled with anger and awkwardness. "Master, this is my boundaries. Please don't joke about it."

"How boring. You are unwilling to sacrifice anything for love." Fernando shook his head exaggeratedly, teasing his student.

Lucien looked back at him expressionlessly, "That's not important.

The important thing is, why did you build a gender-transitioning belt when you were young, master?"

Fernando's smile was immediately frozen. Then he glared, "Somebody asked me to build it for him."

"Tsk..." Lucien shook his head, not convinced at all. "There are wrong names, but no wrong nicknames. No wonder they all call you a freak."

"What's that attitude? Life is all about trying. Lucien, I'm very worried about your life status. A man who hasn't tried anything is pathetic." Fernando sniffed and drove Lucien out. Chapter 510: Ceremony

In the Ratacia Palace in Aalto in the City of Psalm...

Hearing the news forwarded by Philibell, the new Grand Cardinal of the Violet parish, Natasha said with apparent grief, "I didn't expect that my grandfather and my uncle would be summoned by the Lord so quickly."

Although she knew that King Feltis was unwell due to old age and Prince Patrick had always been weak, and she was braced for bad news, Natasha still couldn't stop sorrow from surging in her heart. As she grew up, she had fewer and fewer blood family members who cared for her selflessly. That was the most heartbreaking experience in life.

"Patrick didn't succeed the throne after all..." Grand Duke of Orvarit, who knew the Hoffenberg family even better than Natasha, sighed. But he did not say anything more and simply looked at Natasha, "Are you willing to go to Rentato to inherit the throne of Holm?"

Natasha thought of Holm and Lucien. She then looked at her weary father, whose violet hair had now been mixed by grey. She shook her head firmly, "Holm has many heirs, but you only have me."

"I've been taught to shoulder the responsibility of the Violet family and Duchy of Orvarit. How can I leave?"

Grand Duke of Orvarit patted Natasha's shoulder comfortingly. He smiled at his daughter, "What if I want you to go?"

Huh? Natasha was stunned.

Philibell, who had a beard, echoed peacefully, "You can still come back after you go there. While the Church forbids the Kingdom of Holm from merging with the Duchy of Orvarit, you can be the sovereign of both countries and ask different offspring to inherit them. Therefore, you can stay in Holm for one year and Orvarit for another. The transmission circle will be open to you. This is the Church's reward for your family's years of devotion."

In doing so, it would be easy to both control Natasha and direct the nobles to be used to 'autonomy.' The conflict between the royal power and the regular nobles would be greater.

"Also, I'm still in good shape, and I can be the Grand Duke for at least another twenty years," said Grand Duke of Orvarit half-jokingly, "Your mother was married far away from her family. She felt guilty when she saw her father growing old and her brother haunted by diseases. She failed to meet your grandmother for the last time when she passed away. She felt that she owed a lot to the Hoffenberg family. Therefore, I hope that you can go to Holm when it needs you the most to make up for your mother's regrets."

Natasha fell silent. Her hands were clenched in fists, and she nodded slowly, "Okay."

Philibell said half-seriously and half-jokingly, "Your Highness, the Church is aware that your favorite type is different from that of regular girls. Therefore, we have helped you remove the demand that you must be married. However, you still have to have offspring, which I believe is also the hope of the Grand Duke and the nobles of the two countries. You may consider asking the angels to arrive inside your body as your children. That's a glory only for the devout believers."

Sard blamed what happened in Aalto on Lucien, claiming that Lucien manipulated Princess Natasha when she wanted to comfort the Grand Duke. So, the Church knew that Natasha's sexual orientation was never changed. The Grand Duke learned a thing or two about it later, too.

Natasha lowered her eyes and said, "I'll try."

What she was thinking to herself, however, was something else. "Is the sexless conception that Lucien mentioned real? Can I borrow his... thing?"

Since he made up his mind, Lucien had made up various plans. In case Natasha couldn't handle the pressure and got married to a random noble for a child before he won her over, he regularly introduced the knowledge, including artificial insemination and test-tube baby to her.

Having received Natasha's confirmation, Philibell said kindly, "I will not disrupt your farewell anymore. For your safety and convenience, it would be best if a minor legion of knights comes with you. Their family may use the transmission circle with them."

The regular knight legions, due to different functions, were made of a hundred to five hundred knights of various levels, their squires were ten times more, and soldiers were even more than that. A minor knight legion was the guards for the heirs to a throne, usually made of one radiant knight, three grand knights, six knights, a hundred squires, and five hundred soldiers. However, what Philibell mentioned obviously only included the official knights and their families.

He left after that. The Grand Duke said to Natasha with a smile, "Just now, I said that I could be the Grand Duke for another twenty years, but you'd better not keep me waiting for that long. I want to see my grandchild and the future of the Violet family sooner."

"I'll try." Natasha prayed that Lucien's 'technology' wouldn't go wrong.

The Grand Duke looked at Natasha and said, "I want you to go to Holm, not only because I want you to make up for your mother's regrets, but also because he is there. You won't be separated anymore. So, you need to hurry up on the grandchild thing."

"Father, what are you talking about? Who is he?" Embarrassed, Natasha pretended to be ignorant. Where was her father's misunderstanding from?

The Grand Duke said in a smile, "Who else? Lucien Evans, of course. While you were a pretend couple years ago, my intuitions tell me that you are not a fake one now. I'm very happy about it."

Father, you are overthinking... Natasha thought to herself. However, she hated to hurt the Grand Duke's feelings when they were about to depart and therefore did not explain. In the meantime, she made up her mind to conceive with Lucien's bloodline.

"Don't think I know nothing. To whom have you been talking to for more than one hour every day over the past years?" Grand Duke of Orvarit suddenly felt that his daughter was not as emotionally keen as she claimed.

Natasha tried not to laugh. "That's because we are good friends. I never intended to hide it from you, or you wouldn't have known it at all."

"Alright, go pick your knights. Camil will go to Holm with you." Grand Duke of Orvarit decided to ask Camil to find an opportunity to 'remind' Natasha.

Natasha nodded his head. "Alright, I'll talk to you regularly after I reach Holm."

She began to make plans. "I'll bring John's family and give Lucien a surprise..."

.....

The transmission magic circle was opened in the Radiance Church and glowing.

It was one of the largest magic circles to provide reinforcements when the Congress of Magic attacked. Fifty knights could be teleported at once. Despite the fortune of the South Church, such magic circles were only deployed in Lance, Antiffler, Aalto, Rentato, and Hem.

In ivory light, Natasha, Camil, nine knights and their family, about forty people in total, appeared in the transmission magic circle. The ordinary people such as Joel were dizzy and gagging.

Of the nine knights, only John, a level-three grand knight, brought his whole family. The other knights thought that such trouble was unnecessary since they would return to Aalto in one year, and they only brought their wives and children.

"John, you can't go anywhere without your parents? Are you not grown yet?" Fenge, another grand knight, joked with him. He was John's friend and knew that John wouldn't be pissed by a few teasing words.

After weathering through the dizziness, John was in a hurry to take care of Joel, Elsa, and Elvin. He replied with a smile, "It's a rare opportunity to go abroad. Shouldn't we bring our parents and brothers to appreciate a different view? Also, wasn't it, Her Highness' notice that we must bring all family members?"

"I don't think so. Did you hear it right?" Fenge looked at Natasha in confusion.

At this moment, the maids from the Nekso Palace came over. They cleansed Natasha's hair, eyebrows, and other facial parts and donned a cape with the emblem of the Hoffenberg family outside of her ivory armor. That was a purple sigil enshrouded in clouds, with a sacred crown at the center that was next to a gold scepter and a blue longsword on two sides.

"Your Highness, please go to the Nekso Palace with your knights and return to the Radiance Church according to the marked route, where you will be crowned." Rex, president of the Parliament of Nobles, bowed respectfully.

Natasha said solemnly, "Please lead the way, Duke of Frenburg."

John and the other knights hurried to settle their families and leave the Radiance Church with Natasha, arriving at Nekso Palace.

It was late at night after a storm, damp and dark.

"Start!" Rex, who was leading the way, waved his arms.

A knight raised his horn and blew it hard.

Wu!

With the horns, four knights including John rushed out on their horses, followed by Natasha who rode on her horse majestically.

Wu! Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

The magic crystal lights in the manors were turned on, embracing the new sovereign like the stars in the sky.

"This is..." None of the knights had ever seen such splendor. They were rather shocked.

Wu!

Candles were lit by the houses next to the street. Countless people peeped at their new lord through their windows and door gaps.

Natasha suddenly grew nervous, because crowning required the illumination of the holy light. Could her faith pass the test?

She suddenly felt something. Tilting her head, she saw a black-haired man standing behind a window. His face and his unique monocle were so familiar.

She couldn't help but smile when she saw Lucien. What was there to be scared of if she had weathered through the hunting of legendary experts?

Did she not have sympathy, loyalty or bravery in her heart?

Therefore, Natasha pressed forward with her head held high, leaving a deep impression on the nobles and citizens of Holm.

As they passed through the streets, it was dawn when Natasha and her knights reached the Radiance Church. She was bathed by the first light of morning.

Getting off the horse and stepping into the Church, Natasha walked into the hall unhurriedly to the front of Grand Cardinal Sard, kneeling before the saint cross.

After questions and answers, she laid her left hand on the Cannon and raised her right hand, pointing at the sky with three fingers: "I, Natasha Violet, swear solemnly before the Lord.

"I am a devout believer of the Saint Truth, I will abide by the Cannon and the law of Holm and defend them with my life, and I shall always be ready to fight for the glory of the Lord and the interests of Holm until I die!"

Sard examined her faith with the book of Cannon in front of her.

With a peaceful mind, Natasha was interrogated by the holy light if she had ever broken her knight vow. When given a negative answer, the holy light glowed as if an angel had arrived.

Sard said gently, "You are a devout and determined believer; you are a brave and stubborn knight; you are qualified to be the sovereign of Holm."

While he talked, he took up the gold crown on the red velvet cushion nearby and put it on Natasha's head.

"I hereby announced that under the grace of the Lord, Natasha Violet is to become the Queen of the Kingdom of Holm and all the lands affiliated to it, the Protector of Faith, the Violet Countess, the Lord of Billbis Islands, the Lord of Soloho and Baltimore, the Duchess of Emden, the Lord of the Most Glorious Sword of Truth's Knights, the Most Magnificent Verdict Knights, and the Most Ancient and Honorable Saint Cross Knights."

Natasha raised her head with the crown and took over the symbolic 'Sword of Truth' that was glittering sacredly, allowing it to emit sharp brilliance.

Duke Rex, Duke Solefen, Duke James, Duke Russel, and all the other nobles fell to one of their knees: "Greetings, Your Majesty!"

Chapter 511: Discovery

The morning after the rain was particularly refreshing. The sun was not high yet but was warm and gentle.

The selected Dragon Scale horses, emitting silver grey brilliance, accommodated the proud knights to go to the Nekso Palace, galloping as gracefully as if dancing.

Behind them, Natasha accepted the tributes of her subjects with a gold crown and the 'Sword of Truth', followed by the nine dukes and other lower nobles.

After they reached the Nekso Palace, the nobles dispersed and went to the hall where the Parliament of Nobles was located, waiting for the queen to host her first meeting.

Natasha returned to the queen's house calmly and turned on a divine power circle, blocking the center of the Nekso Palace. Then, she took off her armor and changed into a black court dress under the help of Camil and two maids.

Hinting to the two maids to leave, Natasha finally revealed slight exhaustion. "That's a lot of pressure. I don't know who are my enemies, who are my friends, and who are supporters that I can win over. This place is too strange and depressing compared to Orvarit. I didn't even dare to speak when the divine power circle was not activated. Kritonia, 'Heart of Time', is the one responsible for the safety of the Nekso Palace and the entire Rentato."

It was obvious that she did not trust Kritonia.

"Actually, you don't need to come to inherit the throne. Holm is much more complicated than Orvarit. As an outsider who lacks concrete support, you can be involved in schemes and riots easily." Camil said a lot of things despite her usual coldness. "Whether you are inclined to the Congress of Magic, or the Church, or try to balance them, it will all be very troublesome."

Natasha said in a bitter smile, "I know it. Even if I collaborate with the Church to strike the Congress of Magic, disregarding Granny Hathaway and the royal family of Holm, it may still not be enough to resist the Congress. They are expanding to fast. In order to contain them, we need both Holm and the help from Brianne, Colette and Calais. Also, it will raise objections and even the revolt of the liberals, which may result in the division of the kingdom, turning Holm into ruins."

"If I'm inclined to balance, the Church will definitely urge me, and I will have to consider that the Violet family and my father are at places where the Church is most powerful."

"Why did you make such an unwise choice if you knew it so clearly?" Camil blamed her.

Natasha shook her head and said ruthlessly, "What excuse did I have? If I state that I'm unwilling to assist the Church, it would be a betrayal of faith that will be punished by the Holy City, and the Violet family will be weakened openly and clandestinely. Therefore, when I heard the news, I thought that I might go to Holm someday, but not now. However, my father suggested that I come and let me know my mother's regrets."

"Since I couldn't find an excuse, and the blood of Hoffenberg runs in my body, I might as well shoulder the responsibility of Holm. I do not wish to see a civil war in Holm that transforms my mother's beloved hometown into hell. That's why I'm here."

"Besides, I am a devout believer, the leader of the Hoffenberg family and the Violet Countess. The Church should respect my will to some degree, just like before."

"Natasha, that was before. If the situation in Holm comes to a critical moment, the Church will never consider what you think but only ask you to sacrifice for the Lord." Camil found Natasha's plan too ideal.

Natasha smiled and said firmly, "If it is completely against my will, I would rather sacrifice myself. The Church cannot interfere with the power of the throne randomly. That's a deal the two parties reached before the Lord hundreds of years ago. If the Church violates it, they will be heretics and raise all nobles' hostility."

Camil looked at Natasha and helped her clean her necklace. "What are you planning to do? What do you want Holm to become? What's your future direction?"

"Well, I don't know yet. I cannot make up my mind for now."
Natasha was more or less confused.

Camil looked at her solemnly, "Then, you'd better figure it out fast. Whether you are to lean towards the Congress of Magic or the Church, or to maintain balance, you have to make a decision soon. That's the only way to make preparations in advance."

She was referring to the Duchy of Orvarit.

"I understand. The principles of my administration must be settled soon in order to issue laws and eliminate opposition. However, that needs a much deeper understanding about the situation in Holm. Now, the only thing certain is that even the most liberal noble is unwilling to be eliminated by the Church and even the most conservative noble wouldn't want to return to the dominance of the royal power hundreds of years ago. That is, not considering people like Gordon who are completely devoted to the Church. So, I should try to maintain balance for the time being." Natasha nodded.

Then, she turned around and looked at the mirror. Touching the emblem of the Hoffenberg family, she said to herself, "Before that, I need to figure out my faith. What is the Lord to me in my heart? What's the relation between the Lord and the Church? Only by seeing through myself can I make future plans, advance into level eight and draw the Sword of Truth. Also, it's hard to tell what Grand Cardinal Sard thinks and wants..."

She did not tell the Grand Duke or Camil about the shaking of her faith. Besides Lucien, only Fernando and Lucien guessed a little from the projection of Mountain Paradise that Francis summoned.

"Alright, it's time to go to the Parliament of Nobles." Camil opened the gate.

Natasha looked at the mirror again. When she saw the fear and sorrow of the beautiful purple-haired girl inside, she suddenly thought of something else, "After I become the queen of Holm, I cannot go to the magic tower to visit Granny Hathaway, or check his unique magic tower and the Atom Institution that he mentioned a lot in Aalto. My every move will be interpreted by the malicious nobles. If I do those two things, it will be a sign that I'm inclined to the Congress of Magic."

"It's impossible for them to visit me under Kritonia's watch... While we are closer in distance, we are actually further from each other."

"I hope his new encryption algorithm can protect our communication..."

.....

In the hall of the Parliament of Nobles, Natasha stood on the podium and accepted the nobles' tributes again. Then she said concisely: "Now, I'm going to announce two things. Firstly, the whole country will mourn for a month as my grandfather and my uncle's funeral is prepared. In the meantime, the meetings in the Parliament of Nobles will be suspended, and all the orders and policies needed will be proposed to me."

Now that the king and the prince had both been summoned by the Lord, it was reasonable of Natasha to propose such a request. Therefore, none of the nobles had any objection.

Natasha went on, "Secondly, In light that I don't know much about the affairs of the kingdom yet, and based on my confidence in the policies that my grandfather and my uncle released, unless any unexpected and unprecedented event takes place, I will not approve any motion that changes current policies or ministers in the next six months. Please contribute to the prosperity of the kingdom just like before."

"What?" The nobles exclaimed in shock.

Rex stood up and objected, "Your Majesty, there are many problems in the kingdom that need to be addressed in time. Isn't it too extreme that no motions will be approved?"

"Before my arrival, the kingdom has been growing prosperously thanks to the policies and the efforts of the ministers. Are they no longer applicable just because I am here? Will they turn from being helpful into poisonous in only six months?" Standing straight, Natasha asked back resolutely.

The nobles, who were used to the old King Feltis and the weak Prince Patrick, suddenly felt a lot of pressure.

"No, that is not what I mean. I'm only implying that they may not reflect the current situation." Rex defended himself. He did not want to be marked as someone who slandered the late king.

Count Henson, as the Minister of Finance, was relieved. His post seemed safe now. Therefore, he stood up and argued with Rex, "Her Majesty made it clear that, if anything unexpected happens, say, a certain minister proves to be guilty of a crime, then she will certainly replace him. But until then, carrying on the previous policies and personnel will help the kingdom pass the shock caused by the demise of the king and the prince. I agree with the proposal."

The winners in the past felt more or less regretful that they couldn't earn more, but they could live with it since their interests were not jeopardized. Therefore, both the conservatives and the liberals seconded it. How could anyone in the Parliament of Nobles not be a winner in the past?

"One more thing. I will bequeath estates and properties to the ten knights who came with me from the treasury of the royal family. If there are no objections, this meeting will be over. Let's prepare for the funeral." Natasha looked at the nobles.

It was not the nobles' place to comment on how the money of the royal family was spent. Therefore, they rose and bid the queen farewell.

After they went out, Camil looked at Natasha carefully. "Well done. It was redundant of the Grand Duke to ask me to watch over you."

She believed that Natasha had been well trained as the Violet Countess in the past ten years.

Natasha smiled at the garden up ahead. "There are abundant population and material resources in the new alternate dimensions. They will be the focus of the Church and the Congress. Therefore, I followed someone's advice and did things by not doing anything first."

What she did not mention was the other focus of the Congress, which was the mysteries of 'fission' and 'fusion' that Fernando and Hathaway were working on from the legendary magic models Lucien provided including 'Eternal Blaze'. Lucien couldn't explain the experiment phenomena, as it was based on the discovery and research on the particles such as neutrons. Therefore, he simply ascribed them to Alterna, claiming that he constructed the models by the power of the Silver Moon and the feedback of the world. As a result, the two grand arcanists had to completely dedicate themselves to the research. But of course, since there were magic models, it was still much easier than aimless explorations.

In Allyn, Lucien stepped into the Atom Institution.

After Fernando confirmed the existence of nucleus by blowing gold foil with hydrogen particles and Lucien found neutrons by blowing nitrogen with the same particles, establishing his own alchemy system, the elemental sorcerers went crazy, and so did the sorcerers of other schools. More and more arcanists began to blow weird things with particles, hoping to find something. Therefore, Lucien saw quite a few more similar magic circles and alchemical devices in the Atom Institution, like the electromagnetic cyclotron he 'invented'.

"Master, you're back? We were hoping to find you!" Katrina and Layria exclaimed in delight.

"What's up?" Judging from their faces, Lucien could tell that it was a good thing. Find authorized novels in Webnovel , faster updates, better experience , Please click www.webnovel.com for visiting.

With a brilliant smile, Katrina said, "Master, we discovered an unusual phenomenon when we ran low-temperature experiments. When metals are lowered to a specific temperature, their electrical resistance will be gone!"

Chapter 512: Students Different Thoughts

Superconductivity? Lucien almost blurted out.

Before, when he asked Jerome, Annick, Katrina and Layria to run experiments on the changes of nature of different materials in low temperatures, Layria was mainly meant to create a vacuum with coal. He did not expect that they would discover superconductivity at all, because helium was not found yet, and there was no way to approach absolute zero. Later, he was so busy with other things that he forgot about their task.

After Jerome advanced into middle-rank and got his Holm Crown Ring, he filed an application to Lucien and changed the focus of his studies to X rays. So, his previous projects were given to Katrina and Layria.

However, Lucien merely regarded it as a potential supplement, and he asked the two girls to focus on the new alchemy, namely the particles in the elemental field. He did not expect that he would embrace a pleasant surprise today.

Holding in his emotions, Lucien asked in surprise, "The electrical resistance is gone?"

superconductivity, what a beautiful noun. Lucien couldn't help but think of the mag-lev technology, the large particle collider, the hope to strengthen his electromagnetic gun, and magnetics-restrained controllable fusion.

"If controllable fusion is achieved, the power source of Allyn will be better improved. Similar sky cities will no longer be restrained by energy. The legendary sorcerers will have one more standard item, which is a city that floats in the blue sky. Well, should I call it 'Sun Well' or 'Eternal Furnace', or maybe 'Evans Energy Core'?"

Lucien was woken up from his fantasy by Layria's delighted voice. "Yes, it is not gradually gone, but suddenly disappears when the temperature is lowered to a certain place!"

"What materials did you use? What was the temperature?" Lucien began to ask more carefully. Annick, Heidi, Sprint, Jerome and other people also came close. The two girls had been obviously overjoyed since a few days ago, but they didn't tell anything to their partners, so the other students were already filled with curiosity.

Calming down, Katrina said, "Master, since the helium you discovered lowered the minimally possible temperature, we were interested in the experiment again and tried many materials in our spare time. Half a month ago, when we studied the mercury in low temperatures, we discovered that its electrical resistance was suddenly gone when the temperature was lowered to 4.2 degrees from absolute zero. Later, we tried other metals such as lead and reached the same result, except that the temperatures were different."

"Yes, I never knew that electrical resistance could disappear!" Layria could not believe her discovery even to this moment.

Lucien listened carefully and asked them to repeat their experiment. He was gradually freed from his previous ecstasy, too. The superconductivity right now was still based on materials in an extremely low temperature, which meant that it was highly impractical. Despite the assistance of magic, it would be difficult to be applied in reality.

For example, if Lucien were to increase the power of his electromagnetic gun magic with the ultra-powerful magnetic field caused by superconductivity, he would not only have to combine the similar structures into it but also melt the parts in Snow Goddess' Whip where a low temperature could be created. As a result, the magic would be terribly difficult to achieve. Lucien estimated that it was at least legendary level. By the same logic, in order to achieve controllable fusion, he needed to be improved to Silver Moon Alterna's level.

Also, the relevant files in his spirit library had not been unlocked yet, so there was still a long way to go in the research of superconductivity. After the substantiation of his cognitive world, Lucien was already able to read the files on the special theory of relativity in the spirit library, part of them on the general theory of relativity, and part on the quantum theory, but the more advanced and detailed files were still locked.

Lucien nodded in approval at the girls' demonstration. "Do you know the value of your research? It means that you will win a Silver Moon Medal. The sorcerers of the electromagnetics faction will crazily love you."

Jerome and others gasped, not expecting that Katrina and Layria could win a Silver Moon Medal.

Sprint, Heidi and Annick, on the other hand, were rather frustrated. They believed that Mr. Jerome deserved a Holm Crown prize, which was a reward for his devotion and persistence. When the man became a sorcerer, they hadn't even known what magic was yet, so there was nothing to be jealous about. However, now that some of their classmates were going to win the highest honor in electromagnetics, they felt rather complicated.

Katrina and Layria blushed and couldn't say anything in their excitement. It was not until a long time later that Katrina said, "Master, we knew that the research was very valuable, but we did not expect we would be awarded for it. Right, this is our paper. Could you see if there's anything wrong? If not, would you please sign your name?"

It was a project of the Atom Institution. Lucien couldn't break the rules. He browsed through the paper, checked the data, and signed his name, before he gave it back to the girls and said, "You should also sign your names. As second-circle sorcerers, you are qualified to share the honor."

Lucien smiled at Katrina and Layria whose hands were shaking. "You are waiting for me to come back before you publish it?"

"Of course. This is your research. You are undoubtedly the lead author. Also, being praised by you is more exciting for us than being given a Silver Moon Medal." Said Layria delightedly.

Lucien chuckled in a good mood. "Submit it in the Sorcerer Administrative Department later. However, you must not go easy on your following research, and you should try to find materials with superconductivity in normal temperature. Right, you need to work on particles, too. Don't stray from the path you choose."

"Understood!" The girls replied with their heads held high, apparently overjoyed.

Suddenly, Katrina thought of something else and asked, "Master, when we discovered superconductivity, a very incomplete model appeared in our cognitive world. It was even more incomplete than the feedback you described. It's absolutely impossible to complete the model. Why is that?"

"Of course it is incomplete. Have you figured out the nature of superconductivity and understood why it only appeared at a low temperature?" Lucien patted their shoulder with a smile, "If you cannot complete it for now, you can improve other electromagnetic magics based on it to improve their power or lower their difficulty."

Layria hurried to ask, "Master, can we ask you questions about improving magics? We don't have any experience in that."

Although they learnt the basics in school, they had been working in the Atom Institution since graduation and never needed to improve any magic. Therefore, they asked for their teacher's help subconsciously.

"I'm your teacher. You are free to ask me any questions." Lucien nodded. He was rather curious about their incomplete model, too, and hoped to improve the power of his electromagnetic gun with it.

Receiving an affirmative reply from their teacher, Katrina and Layria went to the Sorcerer Administrative Department joyfully. Lucien, on the other hand, looked back at Annick, Sprint, Heidi and Chelly. Sensing their complicated feelings, he asked with a smile, "Very envious and jealous?"

As if stung in the back, Sprint suddenly stood straight and raised his head, "Not at all! I will definitely earn the highest honors of different fields just like you, master."

"Well, I'm indeed a bit jealous. I'm going to teach them a lesson tonight. They kept it from me for such a long time!" Heidi admitted it rather frankly.

She tried to cover her real feelings with a joke, but her smile was still rather awkward.

Annick scratched his head. "Sort of. However, I'm quite satisfied with my research about particles. According to Mr. Lazar, Mr. Jerome and Mr. Rock, it's a world full of treasures, and whether or not I find anything depends on my efforts. I believe that I will achieve something in the future."

He was only slightly more talkative in front of Lucien and his fellows in the Atom Institution.

"I envy them, but my studies on that are still shallow. It's perfectly normal that Katrina is ahead of me." Chelly, who came one year later, was rather cool about it, but she appeared to be bothered by other problems.

Lucien saw it but did not ask. He simply said, "I have just returned from an alternate dimension. Who can tell me the latest studies on arcana and magics in the past two months?"

Jerome replied, "After your New Alchemy was published, all the sorcerers in the Congress of Magic went mad! It touched the field of the Creator! Therefore, regardless of their faction, as long as they knew part of elemental magics, they were all working on your 'new alchemy' and the particles, even including the arcanists who had distinguished achievements in their fields."

"On the other hand, the war between the particle theory and the wave theory has entered a predicament. The former cannot explain light quantum, and the latter cannot explain the classic double-slit experiment. Hehe. The sorcerers of the two factions are both conducting relevant explorations, hoping to defeat the enemy."

Heidi shook her head at the stubborn supporters of the wave theory. However, it was true that the confirmation of light quantum hypothesis could not completely invalidate the wave theory, because many phenomena were still inexplicable. Those sorcerers, living through their panic, picked up classic experiments as their weapons again.

The supporters of the particle theory, on the other hand, had made a gratifying comeback and was on par with the supporters of the wave theory now.

Annick added, "According to the journals in the past two months, many arcanists were trying to explain President Douglas' experiment from the perspective of the wave theory."

Lucien nodded at that. He planned to write a paper that copied the Lorentz transformation to explain President Douglas' experience, so that his teacher could be mentally prepared for the special theory of relativity that he was going to submit to his teacher later.

"Alright, I basically get it now. There is no need for you to envy Katrina and Layria. They deserve the honor because they persisted in the experiments on the materials in the super-low temperatures. You, on the other hand, are faced with a boundless world of particles where infinite mysteries lie. What you can get is solely up to yourselves."

"Is there anything you want to ask me? If not, I'm going to Rentato."

Annick and Sprint raised their hands when other people shook their heads. "Master, I have one question."

"What is it?" Lucien raised his eyebrow.

Annick and Sprint looked at each other and asked boldly, "Our question is the same. Master, theoretically speaking, your cyclotron should improve the energy of particles infinitely as long as the space is large enough, but why were the cycles of the particles changing and breaking away from the acceleration field of the cyclotron in the end? Should the cycles only be concerned with electric charge, mass and intensity of the magnetic field? None of the factors changed, and the particles were only sped up!"

Lucien frowned. He could not tell them that it was the relativistic effect, right? The faster an object is, the greater its mass would be... In physics, the Lorentz transformations is a one-parameter family of linear transformations from a coordinate frame in spacetime to another frame that moves at a constant velocity (the parameter) relative to the former.

Chapter 513: Inside and Outside the House

Thinking for a moment, Lucien asked, “As the speed and energy of particles are improved, the radius of their tract will grow accordingly. However, the capacity of the cyclotron is limited. In order to break the boundary, you will have to either expand the capacity with space-related magics, or build a particularly huge cyclotron, setting a radius of ten kilometers.”

If they were not clear about the problem, Lucien intended to fool them with this excuse for now.

“Master, that’s not what we meant,” said Sprint in a hurry, “Based on the specifications of the cyclotron in the institution, we calculated the theoretical particle energy we can reach, but it was quite different from reality. The particles deviated from the acceleration field much earlier than it was accelerated to that level. It was obvious that the orbits and the frequency of electrical field changes were in conflict, which was odd. Just like Annick said, shouldn’t the orbits only be concerned with an electric charge, mass and intensity of the magnetic field?”

Annick added, “We intended to adjust the frequency of the electrical field changes to adapt to the changes in the orbits, so that the particle energy could be better improved. However, we lacked the corresponding knowledge to calculate the new orbits. So, we are hoping that master could tell us whether you discovered the phenomenon when you invented the cyclotron, and whether you could point out the source of our problem.”

It seemed that they had indeed found a problem. Lucien nodded softly, “Annick is a very prudent man. Now that you dare to raise it, it means that it is a real phenomenon that has been repetitively tested. However, I was forced to enter the alternate dimension after I devised the cyclotron, and I haven’t run any experiments with it. I cannot think of an explanation just yet. Therefore, we need to work on the problem together.”

“The formulas regarding the movement of particles in the magnetic field and the electric field seem alright. They have been proved in the early phase, too. So, we need to find out the different conditions that caused the problem.”

“The speed was fast.” Heidi interrupted. She had heard a lot about the problem from Annick and Sprint.

Sprint thought and said, “The energy was improved, and the radius of the tract grew larger.”

Lucien waved his hands. “The essence of the latter is the increase in speed. Considering the different conditions of the two phases of the experiment, does it suggest that the formulas are no longer applicable, or that the other specifications of the particles, such as electric charge and mass, will change, in high speed or high energy?”

Lucien already held back his surprise. He intended to raise the consideration of the arcanists, so that they would be mentally prepared for the special theory of relativity later.

“Hehe, how is it possible? The faster, and the larger the mass the more the electric charge will be?” Heidi grimaced. How could the improvement of speed change mass, the in-built nature of an object?”

Sprint and Annick looked the same. They believed that part of energy was transformed into electricity in the high energy state. For them, even if the formulas were not applicable in the high speed state, they were worth studying more than the joke that the mass had grown larger.

“There’s still some time until the end of the month. You will work on the question and write a paper. I’ll ask Mr. Drummond to publish it on ‘Arcana’.” Lucien ended the topic and asked about the studies of Jerome and the other people.

However, it had been only two months. It was already impressive of the Atom Institution to discover ‘superconductivity’ and ‘relativistic effect’. Naturally, no significant breakthroughs were made in other experiments, although Jerome did dig into the nature and usage of X rays, discovering that it could be a chronic curse when energy was increased.

After inspecting the Atom Institution, Lucien returned to Rentato on the magic steam train, waiting for the evening.

.....

Tall, strong, gold-haired, and handsome, John was well observed by the maids when he patrolled in the Nekso Palace.

“John, your time is up. Time for me to patrol.” Fenge came to replace John when the night fell. Natasha had deployed the knights who followed her to Holm to different key locations in the Nekso Palace. “It will be your turn to supervise the interrogation room of the Nekso Palace. Don’t be captivated by the beautiful girls of Holm and forget that.”

John patted Fenge’s shoulder in a smile, “Do you think I’m like you? Alright, I’ll bring my family to the villa and settle them down first.”

John found Joel, Elsa and Elvin in a room in the Nekso Palace. Led by a maid, the four of them went to the villa that Natasha offered to them.

“The architectural style is vintage and graceful, obviously different from Aalto.” Joel observed his family’s villa in a great mood, not upset by the separation from his homeland. He was too focused on appreciating the exotic landscape of the foreign land.

Not an artist as Joel was, Elsa observed the environment and said in satisfaction, “As expected of a villa granted by the royal family. It’s much better than our house.”

Passing through the blooming garden and reaching the gate, the maid brought out a bronze key rather shyly and opened the gate. Then, she pressed the wall skillfully. After a crack, the hall was ablaze with light. The crystals glittered brilliantly, driving away the darkness.

The view deeply astounded Joel, Elsa and the rest of them. Their own hall was as bright as day, splendid and dazzling, like nightless Mountain Paradise in the Cannon.

Noticing their shock, the maid said proudly, "Lord Baron, they are the crystal electric lamps that can only be seen in Holm. They are powered by the electric current transmitted from the river far away. It's very easy to use them. All you need to do is to press the switch."

As a maid of the royal family, she represented the queen. So, she could not call them magic lights, like the ordinary people did, but have to call them by their official name.

Pointing at the row of switches next to the gate, the maid showed the newcomers how to use them.

As the crystal lamps were lit one after another, stars seemed to be glittering in the villa splendidly. John, Joel, Elsa and Elvin were so dazzled that they thought they were in a dream.

"Unbelievable. I'm already falling in love with this place." Elvin, who had been an adult for a while, had the curiosity of a young person. He was thinking how to brag about this to his friends after he went back.

The maid led the few of them into the hall. Pointing at the bar near the dining room, she said, "The orange wall there can be opened. The lower part is to store wine and food, while the upper floor creates ice. If you put the ice into wine, you will enjoy a unique flavor and forget the heat of summer."

While talking, she opened the magic refrigerator that had been built into a wall. "There's also a wine cellar in the basement of the villa. They are both powered by electricity. Ordinary people are free to use them, too."

She was talking to Joel and Elsa.

"Oh, so cool! The ice cellar is a bumpkin compared to this!" Elvin praised and took out a bottle of wine with ice, feeling the heat of summer dispersing.

“What’s this?” John calmed down and asked, deep in thought.

The maid smiled, “The inventor has named it ‘refrigerator’. They are expensive and cannot be manufactured yet. For now, you are the only ones who can enjoy them besides Her Majesty and a few great nobles.”

“By ‘you’, do you mean all the knights who come with the queen?” John asked, pretending to be casual.

The maid smiled but didn’t reply. She continued to show them the villa and introduced the novel objects here, showing, the silver boxes hanging in every corner of the house.

What surprised Joel and Elsa was that those boxes would blow out wind of different temperatures and create coolness as long as the buttons on the wall were pressed.

Before they finished their tour, something began to ring loudly.

“What’s this? John and Elvin asked the maid while they looked at the iron ‘monster’ on the table that was marked with numbers.

The maid hinted for him to pick up the bar-shaped object with a smile. “It should be for you, Lord Baron.”

John picked up the object in confusion and heard Fenge’s laughter before it reached his ear. “John, is that you?”

“Yes, it’s me. Fenge, what’s this about?” John asked in ignorance.

Fenge replied with great satisfaction. “This is Holm’s unique wire phone that supports remote, direct communication. What a marvelous object! If anything goes wrong, I’ll be able to inform you immediately.”

He seemed to be receiving the same introduction on the other side of the line.

“Most of the nobles and merchants in Rentato have such phones. The contact list is over there. You can dial and call them if you need anything.” The maid pointed at a notebook next to the ‘phone’ in a smile.

“Alright.” John needed to sort through his mind after seeing so many inventions at once.

After introducing the servants, the maid of the royal family left. The house became quiet again.

They should all be simplified magic objects. Were they made by him? John considered. When he raised his head, he saw suspicion in Joel’s eyes, too.

Suddenly, Elsa said in a low voice, “This is Holm. Do you think Evans is around?”

“What if he is? Can we even meet him? The queen has just been crowned by the Church. Besides, we sold him out once before...” Joel said somewhat bitterly.

Hearing his words, Elsa’s eyes turned red, and she couldn’t say anything.

John, on the other hand, fell silent and sighed.

Elvin, who hadn’t activated his bloodline, was not bothered. “We were doing what Brother Evans told us to do. Besides, magic items are everywhere in Holm. The sorcerers must be very close to the nobles.”

While saying, he adjusted the frequency of the radio he found.

“Don’t care about what other nobles do. As outsiders, we do not have support. We need to consider Her Majesty’s reputation.” John said thoughtfully.

Suddenly, a voice as refreshing as that of a lark echoed from the radio. “... Mr. Lucien Evans, a member of the Arcana Review Board, has returned from the alternate dimension safe and sound. He condemned certain extremists of the Hand of Paleness for their stubbornness and the rumors that they instigated the Necromancy sorcerers who were unaware of the truth to spread out. Such rumors, as twisted facts, are a slander for himself and the Congress. He calls for everyone to be united around the Highest Council that is centered at President Douglas.”

“What happened exactly? Allow us to replay the story for you...”

“A member of the Arcana Review Board...” John repeated the title.

Joel and Elsa murmured, “Lucien Evans...”

Outside the villa, the lamps went on one after another. In their shadow, Lucien stared at the bright window with his hands in his pockets, wondering if he should go in and meet Uncle Joel in such a situation.

Hu. After a soft sigh, Lucien turned around and slowly walked to the royal magic tower of Holm.

Chapter 514: Anomaly at Nigh

The royal magic tower of Holm was in the district of the nobles. It didn't take long for Lucien to arrive at the gate. He took off his mask and entered the tower after passing the examination.

The night was getting dark, but the magic tower was more lively than any of Lucien previous visits. Since the queen was from the City of Psalm, it remained to be seen whether the attitude towards sorcerers would be changed. Therefore, for their safety, some of the sorcerers living in Rentato brought their family to Allyn, and some hid in the royal magic tower of Holm.

It was right after dinner. Sorcerers in groups of twos or threes were roaming or discussing in the hall. The merry laughter of children could be heard now and then.

Rebeca was talking with a few sorcerers of the Will of Elements about the most popular 'new alchemy system', when she saw a young man in a high hat walking in through the gate. Her eyes were suddenly frozen, and she exclaimed in both panic and shock, "Good evening, Mr. Evans."

All the sound in the hall was gone. Everybody shifted their eyes to Lucien and greeted him one after another, Good evening, Mr. Evans."

They were so respectful that they did not seem to be facing a young sorcerer no older than 25, but one of the legendary bigshots.

Lucien keenly sensed the attitude change of the sorcerers of the Will of Elements and the branch of Holm. Those sorcerers respected and envied him in the past, but they revered and worshiped him right now, as if he were a grand arcanist or a legendary sorcerer.

Was it because of the new alchemy?

Looking at the lady who greeted him first, Lucien nodded and said, "It's been a while, Rebeca."

Her 'mistake' allowed Lucien to take part in the annual meeting of elements and alchemy, where his paper on the periodic table was approved by Raventi. Therefore, Lucien remembered her very well. Besides, she was very close to Lazar, who talked about her all the time. Chances were that she would become Mrs. Lazar soon.

"You—You still remember me, Mr. Evans?" Rebeca asked in surprise and delight.

Lucien pointed at his head with a smile, "I always have a good memory. Besides, Lazar mentions you all the time."

"I wonder when he is coming back." Rebeca said with some worry.

After the small talk, Lucien bid her farewell with a smile and went to the upper floor.

The other sorcerers crowded after he disappeared into the lift and quacked: "Rebeca, you know Mr. Evans so well?"

"I have many questions and considerations regarding the new alchemy. Could you forward them to Mr. Evans for me?"

"Can you ask Mr. Evans whether more sorcerers are needed in the Atom Institution?"

Rebeca suddenly felt that time was really flying. She first heard Lucien Evans' name because her love for the Symphony of Fate and the great musician. Then, she learnt from Lazar that a genius arcanist had appeared whose very first paper had been highly praised. After only eight years, the quiet young man had created one record after another and was about to reach the summit of arcana to appreciate the landscape of the height with the few grand arcanists.

However, she was not jealous of him, because the gap between her and the terrifying arcanist who had been coming up with revolutionary theories was too large for any jealousy. She could only feel helplessness and admiration.

Also, the new alchemy was different from Lucien's previous achievements, which were only confirmed and accepted after suspicion and disputes. It had been regarded as the spark of wisdom that would illuminate the new world since it was born. Most of the sorcerers were crazy about it.

They all understood that 'new alchemy' was essentially different from the previous 'alchemy', in that it was more of an internal model of atoms and a system that was built on such a model and depicted the changes of elements. 'Alchemy' was just additional knowledge; the mysteries of the microworld were its main content.

It was very important for the sorcerers who explored arduously in the depths and darkness of the microworld. From this moment on, the exploration in the field was no longer blind. It's like stars shining in a dark night, or a lighthouse that the ships in a storm finally saw.

Of course, they knew that a lot of problems regarding 'new alchemy' were yet to be addressed, but it had undoubtedly opened the gate of creation. Lucien would become a grand arcanist because of it someday!

"Perhaps one day, we will be able to change matter freely." A sorcerer said with sincere delight.

Another sorcerer looked at the lift and remarked with admiration, "When that day comes, Mr. Evans will definitely be one of the most dazzling names in the history of magic."

...

The new alternate dimensions were still being developed. The archmages and senior-rank sorcerers including Raventi mostly hadn't come back. Lucien entered his office and looked at the Nekso Palace that looked like a galaxy on earth through the window. Then, he turned on his 'communication glass'.

"... Hello, Lucien?" Natasha sounded exhausted.

Her earrings had been modified by Lucien, allowing her to hear the encrypted voice.

Lucien said with a smile, "Good evening, Your Majesty. Are you reading the files of the intelligence department and the secret library?"

The reason why he spoke to Natasha from the royal magic tower of Holm was because he did not want to expose himself.

While there was no way that Sard or Kritonia could've cracked his encryption algorithm, they could detect the source of electromagnetic waves that they perceived. If he were to contact Natasha from Allyn, it would raise suspicion about his real relationship with her, but if he was in the royal magic tower of Holm, it would mislead people into thinking that he was Hathaway, as it was perfectly normal for a senior to care for a junior.

"Yes, although you told me a lot about Holm in the past years, it was broken and unsystematic. I need to grasp it more deeply and comprehensively." Natasha then chuckled and said, "As the queen's loyal knight, Count Lucien Evans, what do you suggest?"

Radiant knights were usually given titles of viscount or count. So, senior-rank sorcerers could enjoy the same privilege.

Lucien said with a smile, "Meet the great nobles, the powerful nobles and the nobles in charge of critical positions one by one. Talk to them and find people whom you can trust and depend on. As the queen, you have the natural right to command them. There's nothing to worry about. Right. After the funeral, start to inspect the Sword of Truth's Knights, the Verdict Knights and the Saint Cross Knights. Regroup part of the squads. Of course, most importantly of all, you need to improve yourself. The sooner you reach level eight and pick up the level-three Sword of Truth, the easier it will be for you to take initiative of the situation."

"But who can I trust and depend on?" Natasha said in a self-mocking smile.

Lucien comforted her, "You need to know your heart and your faith first. If you don't know what you want, you can never tell enemies from friends. Although you can intensify the conflict between the liberals and the conservatives and maintain the balance, it will not last. After all, the conservatives are backed by the Church, and the liberals are supported by the Congress."

Instead of waiting for Natasha to reply, Lucien decided to stimulate her faith. "According to the news from the Congress, the prince may have been murdered."

"What? By whom?" While Natasha thought that the deaths of her grandfather and her uncle were coincidental, they had been on the verge of death in the first place, and it was still acceptable. But hearing what Lucien said, she was more than shocked and infuriated.

"We suspect that Kritonia, 'Heart of Time', did it. Only his abilities to control time could've make the prince die of grief flawlessly. At that time, Sard and Rex were both in the Nekso Palace." Lucien was sorry for Natasha but still finished brutally.

Natasha took deep breaths. "Are you saying that the Church and part of the conservatives planned it? What proof do you have?"

"There is no direct proof. What can be confirmed is as follows: Sard, Rex and Kritonia were all in the Nekso Palace back then, which can be proved by many nobles and maids; also, Her Excellency Hathaway examined Prince Patrick before the new year and believed that he could live for another five to six years; the liberals including Duke James proved that the prince and the king were as indifferent with each other as enemies. How could he have been grieving? You must know a thing or two about them." Lucien introduced the intelligence he collected in the past day.

After a long silence, Natasha said hoarsely, "I'll bid farewell to my uncle's body in the funeral. I wonder if I can find anything..."

Her voice sounded lost and overwhelmed, which pained Lucien. Knowing that he went too far, he hurried to rectify it, "Even though it was done by the Church, it does not mean anything. The God of Truth lies in everyone's heart, and everyone can pray to Him directly. The Church, on the other hand, is just an organization that tries to separate the believers from the Lord. It may be righteous, and it may be evil."

"Just review your path as a knight and consider what is it that you have been persisting in. Are you going to defend the glory of the God of Truth, or that of the Church?"

"Of course I'm defending the Lord. But if the Church is abandoned, how can we organize the rituals and praise the Lord?" Natasha was trapped by the details.

Lucien said with a smile, "The Church is a tool between the believers and God. If it is no longer necessary, just throw it away. If it is still useful, you can modify and make it suit you. There's no need to cling to the South Church."

"Wait, wait, wait. I need to sort through my faith." The fact that Prince Patrick could've been murdered by the Church was quite a shock to Natasha.

...

Under the night sky, Juliana, who was summoned from Aalto, spoke to a few night watchers next to her in an enchanting tone, "The Church is weak, the nobles are arrogant, and the glory of the Lord has been severely tarnished. Therefore, we will purge the unqualified believers as per the will of the Lord."

She pointed at a villa not far away. "Baron Austin is a corrupt man who is inclined to the sorcerers. According to his servants, he listens to 'Arcana Voice' every day. Our purpose is to clean him and defend the glory of the Lord, but we will probably be punished by the Church. Are you willing to do that?"

"Night gathers, and now my watch begins..."

Chapter 515: Sard's Apology

Chapter 515: Sard's Apology

In the living room on the second floor of the villa, Baron Austin was listening to the sweet voice of Ms. Nightingale attentively in his pajamas.

Since it was inappropriate to go to his mistress during the time of a national funeral, he could only kill time by listening to 'Arcana Voice'. Also, he found many programs in the channel very interesting, sometimes even more interesting than spending time with his mistress.

In Holm, except for the most conservative nobles and believers, it was a fashion to listen to the forbidden music radio station. The content in it was the topic in many parties of the liberals. Whoever did not listen to it would be considered outdated and rejected by their circle.

"... From today on, the program will change slightly. Next, you will hear 'Holm Observation' that is hosted by me. It will inform you of the major events in the kingdom."

"... I believe our dear audience have learnt that the beloved, respected Prince Patrick followed King Feltis due to grief after the king passed away. However, what about the process and the details? This program will direct you towards the truth behind the case."

Austin had been leaning against the sofa casually, but he sat straight and became solemn after hearing the introduction.

Holm Observation's exploration on the matter was still in the phase of unproven speculations. It interviewed random eyewitnesses to prove that Prince Patrick was in good health during the few days prior and couldn't have collapsed all of a sudden.

Although Nightingale did not say it outright, she was clearly insinuating that the Church did not like the prince for his favor of magic and alchemy. Anyone could infer from her words that the Church had assassinated the prince.

Austin gasped hard. He recalled what the liberals in the Parliament of Nobles said. The more he thought, the more suspicious he became. A week ago, the prince had just hosted a gathering of the liberals. His body condition was exactly like before, and he was in such a terrible relationship with the king. How could he have died from grief?

"They are bold enough to kill the crown prince..." Austin put the wine cup back on the table and began to pace.

When his back was faced to the window, two shadows lunged in and attacked him who was only in the level of regular knight easily.

"Who are you? How dare you attack a noble... Night watchers?" Austin saw the black gloves that the two men wore. "You are bold enough to arrest a noble directly? You are breaking the agreement between the Church and the nobles!"

Juliana flew in from the window and looked at Austin coldly, "The Church is too weak. Only we can defend the glory of the Lord."

"Are you going to divide the nobles and the Church, weaken the Church, and make it impossible for the glory of the Lord to spread?" Austin was not an idiot. He realized that he had encountered one of those zealous, extreme night watchers. Therefore, he simply suggested that their doing was on the contrary of their purpose.

"The Lord is almighty. He did not stop you because it is a test for us. If purging the nobles who have been inclined to the sorcerers like you raises the objection of the nobles of Holm, it will mean that they are all corrupt and beyond rescue. The throne must kneel before the Lord." Juliana loathed sorcerers from the bottom of her heart. She extended her hand coldly and pressed Austin's forehead. "Repent in hell!"

"How dare you..." Holy light glowed, and Austin's head was pierced through. The blood was all vaporized. Even the rug was not stained.

Juliane put her left hand on her right hand and said, “Write down why we purged him and what he committed, submit it to the inquisition, and forward it to the Parliament of Nobles.”

“We punish sinners as representatives of the will of the Lord; we do not hide.”

“Understood!” The other night watchers echoed simultaneously.

...

Inside the royal magic tower of Holm, Lucien reminded Natasha in the end. “Be wary of Sard. There’s no telling what he is up to.”

“If he is really influenced by the World of Souls, like the pontiff and the saints in the North Church, his purpose may be to separate the five parishes here from the Church and to make himself the pontiff...” Since she hadn’t figured out her stance yet, she was not sure whether it was a good or bad result.

Lucien shook his head. “Don’t blindly refer to history. Sard is too sophisticated for that. After all, the South Church cannot stand yet another division. Besides, he has been in office for only two months. I fear that he hasn’t even won the cardinal of the Holm parish yet. What can he use to create division? Not to mention that there are parishes defended by other saint cardinals. Therefore, don’t be fooled by his recent performance.”

Natasha said softly, “All in all, I’ll try to find out his purpose. You’d better be careful, too, because you are the easiest one to deal with among the high-ranking experts on the Cleansing List.”

“Rest assured about that. I have the Congus Ring with me.” Lucien looked at the iron ring on his left hand.

Because his left hand would nullify the supernatural powers, Lucien had moved the Holm Crown Rings to his right hand and only kept the legendary ring that remained unaffected on his left hand.

“Okay, everyone knows that you have a legendary item!” Natasha pretended to be jealous. “After I sort through my heart and advance into level eight, I will have one, too! I’ll also bring the Shield of Truth over. In that case, I'll have the strongest defense and the strongest attack. Haha!"

She did not want Lucien to end the call depressed and therefore made fun of him.

...

When it was dawn, Duke Rex, president of the Parliament of Nobles, flew to the Radiance Church gloomily.

"Your Excellency Saint Sard, I need an explanation. Why did the night watchers eliminate a baron and official knight without the approval of Her Majesty and the Parliament of Nobles?" Rex spoke to Sard in the library angrily, "It will dishearten all the nobles? How can they trust the Church and contribute to it later?"

Sard replied peacefully, "I only just learnt of the matter. I'll ask the inquisition to deal with the few night watchers. An explanation will be given. Rex, you know that there are a lot of extremists among the night watchers. You cannot let the friendship between the nobles and the Church be sabotaged by a few rabid dogs, right?"

Rex was more or less appeased by Sard's attitude. "If it was the personal operation of few night watchers, and they are punished rigorously, I'm confident to pacify the nobles who favor the Church, but it's hard to say the nobles who favor the Congress of Magic. Also, the queen will reject the Church and us if she runs into such things when she is just crowned. I hope that Your Excellency Saint Sard can control the Church well in case of other extreme cases."

"I'll try to get the Holm parish under control in two years. In the meantime, I hope that nobles can pay attention to what they say and do and inform me in time if they are noticed by the extremists of the Church." Sard replied friendly, "Right, write the nobles' reactions to the matter into a document. I'll report it to the pope. In any case, the extremists are devout night watchers. The pope has to approve it before they are punished."

Rex nodded. "Alright, I'll have someone write it. Now, I'm going to the Nekso Palace and explain it to the queen face to face, in fact she is infuriated by the incident.”

Watching Rex leave, Sard picked up the paper on the desk, which was the list of the few rogue night watchers.

Reading it with a smile, Sard brushed it with his thumb, and Juliana’s name was immediately gone. Then, he picked up his quill and wrote, “... Because of the long suppression from the Congress of Magic and the consecutive holy light cases, many extremists have appeared in the clergy and night watchers in the Holm parish. Some of them believe that they have to eliminate the blasphemers within us to be united against the Congress of Magic. Some are similar to them. They believe that the Church is too weak and the nobles are too arrogant. Only by being radical can they wake up the numb people.

While others doubt the necessity to resist the Congress of Magic and believe that we can live in peace if we both make compromises.”

“The incident this time was caused by the second type of extremists. I admit that my control over the parish is not good enough. I ask Your Holiness to send my previous assistants, Vera Amelton and other people from the Violet parish, to help me, so that I can settle down the issue and contain the extremists, and the nobles will not be pushed to the side of the Congress of Magic again.”

“As for the punishment, I believe Octave, the cardinal in charge of the inquisition of the parish, holds full responsibility for the matter. Cardinal Amelton will replace him. However, in light of the complexities in the parish, he will still serve here...”

...

Reading the document submitted by the night watchers and listening to Rex’s defense, Natasha was emotionless.

It was not until he spoke of the Church’s decision that Natasha nodded and said, “Extreme lunatics are everywhere. The relation between nobles and the Church is not to be affected by them. I believe that most nobles will accept it as long as the Church shows sincerity.”

Rex was relieved. It was indeed as expected of a queen from the City of Psalm to be inclined to the Church. “It’s very wise of you, Your Majesty.”

Right when he was about to leave, Natasha suddenly asked, “According to the night watchers’ report, Baron Austin was listening to ‘Arcana Voice’ when he was arrested and executed, and the radio station was playing the content that implied Duke Rex assassinated my uncle Patrick. What’s your take on that?”

“It is without a doubt the slander of the Congress of Magic that tries to sow discord between Your Majesty and the Church! They do not have any proof. It’s just random talk.” Rex defended himself solemnly.

Natasha raised her eyebrow. “You listened to the program?”

“The intelligence workers listened and reported the content to me.” Rex explained.

Natasha nodded and didn’t pursue it further. “Submit the intelligence to me earlier next time.”

It was not until then that Rex realized he had misspoken. He hurried to say, “Because you were occupied by too many affairs recently, Your Majesty, I filtered the intelligence first and only submitted the important information. In the future, it will be directly submitted to you.”

“It’s alright. I understand your kindness. You may leave now.” Natasha asked Rex to leave, as casual as before.

It was not until Rex was out of the palace that Natasha suddenly turned solemn.

...

Lucien reached the 33rd floor of Allyn magic tower through a lift and entered ‘Thunder Hell’, Fernando’s demiplane, through the Portal to Alternate Realm in the library.

Fernando’s hair was more or less messy. It seemed that reverse engineering of fusion and fission was more difficult than Lucien imagined when a lot of knowledge and discoveries were missing.

“Right on time. Describe your feelings when you performed ‘Eternal Blaze’ again.” Fernando raised his bloodshot eyes and looked at Lucien. Then, his face became rather complicated, “You have new papers again?”

Lucien was holding a pile of papers in his hands.

Chapter 516: Suppor

Chapter 516: Support

Lucien could feel his teacher's complex feelings. He handed his papers over and said, "There's nothing subversive in it. It's just trying to explain Mr. Douglas's experiment on light speed and the related correlation. It shares some similarities with the previous assumptions put forward by several arcanists."

Lorentz Transformation. That was what Lucien prepared for his teacher to get him mentally prepared.

Fernando still felt quite suspicious, but he took the paper anyway and started reading. As he read further, the look on Fernando's face changed greatly.

Lucien could not help asking, "Sir, is it alright?"

Fernando grinned, "This is the second time this month that I read something like this."

Lucien was a bit surprised, "Someone submitted a similar paper already? But, I didn't find anything similar when I searched among the files in Arcana Review Board. I wouldn't bring it to you if I knew..."

Fernando temporarily put aside all his questions about fusion and fission and looked more cheerful now than he usually was, "I know, because he hasn't submitted it yet. He dared not. He brought it to me and asked my personal opinion."

"Who is he?" asked Lucien curiously. He was actually not too surprised since the data from the light speed experiment had been available for more than three years, and many wave theory supporters were trying to use the data to support their belief. It was not a big leap forward if an arcanist had found something like Lorentz Transformation.

Although the sorcerers in this world were experiencing lots of turnovers because they still had a lot to explore, when it came to sheer thinking, they were good.

“It was Oliver. Three years ago, he had a bet with Florencia, and he started working on it since then. His project was delayed because of the exploration of the new dimension, and he finally finished putting together the whole transformational equation group. His paper’s saying that, using Ether as the observer, moving length contraction happens to compensate for the difference in light speed in all directions, which explains Douglas’s experiment. I suppose your paper is about the same thing, right?”

Fernando just finished reading the introduction of Lucien’s paper. He assumed that Lucien’s paper was the same.

Lucien nodded, “Yes, but why did Mr. Oliver not submit it?”

Although Oliver was studying the Dark Dragon Lord, he should still be able to have his wife, Florencia, or his students submit the paper.

“Because he believed that there were still things, important things, missing, and he couldn’t explain why the phenomenon exists. He then got a new direction to go in, but the reasoning couldn’t go further. So he was kind of stuck, which was why he came to me.” said Fernando.

“So what’s your opinion, sir?” Lucien asked.

Fernando smacked his lips and said, “I told him that his thinking wasn’t clear enough yet. He was still swinging from one side to the other. But I also couldn’t help him with explaining the cause of the phenomenon. I told Oliver to find some time to talk to you. You’re known for being open-minded and creative, so you probably could help.”

Fernando put on a cunning smile and looked at Lucien, “I didn’t expect that you’d come up with the same explanation, but I remember that you’ve been ignoring Ether all the time. There’s no way that you suddenly decided to use Ether to explain Douglas’s experiment. Also, part of the equations, here, the length contraction, is problematic, and I’m sure you know it. So, Lucien, what are you really trying to achieve throwing this paper at me?"

Lucien looked in his teacher's eyes, but did not say anything.

"I think you've dug in further. You are getting us prepared using this paper. You can take it out, your true paper." said Fernando.

Lucien saw his teacher's red eyes were very sincere and kind. He had to admit that his teacher knew him very well.

But should he just throw the special theory of relativity directly at Fernando?

Seeing that Lucien was still hesitating, Fernando glared at him and said, "What? You're worrying that I might not be able to take it? Come on. I've already got my lesson from light quantum and energy quantum. There's nothing that can explode my mind anymore. Even during that time, although I did lose control a bit, I'm still here, right? Safe and sound."

Lucien still remembered clearly how Fernando suffered from the great frustration and fury when this happened last time. But he dared not say.

Weighing his words, Lucien said, "I think the change in length doesn't come from the contraction of matter, but the contraction of space."

"Space contraction... Interesting. Maybe we should see space from another perspective... Oliver once mentioned it as well." Fernando wasn't too surprised because of the existence of space barriers, demiplanes, and space spells.

"If we just put aside Ether here, just based on Mr. Douglas's experiment, classical electromagnetic theory, and the studies on bodies in motion, we can put forward a postulate – the idea that the speed of light is a constant, independent of the relative motion of the source." Lucien explained further.

Fernando's right hand clenched and tapped his chin, "I see. If based on that, there'll be lots of things to talk about. You just give me the paper."

Lucien hurriedly added, “There’s one more precondition – the principle of relativity. There are quite some papers talking about it. You probably have read some of them before.”

Sorcerers often cast sound waves magic spells. A long time ago, they had found that when their enemies approached them quickly, the sound became quick and short; when their enemies fled away from them, the sound was prolonged. The change in sound waves seemed to be closely related to speed. The phenomenon was broadly discussed and therefore introduced the principle of relativity. Meanwhile, some arcanists were also looking at the changes in light waves from stars.

There was another common phenomenon that one could see in daily life to prove this: When a magic steam train approached from afar, the steam whistle would become increasingly sharper; but when it passed the observer, the steam whistle would become deeper.

Fernando nodded slightly, “Two preconditions only? Good. It’s like your style: Start from less axioms and hypotheses, and use more logical reasoning. Give the paper to me. I’m prepared.”

“Sir, why don’t you further develop Mr. Oliver’s transformational equations on your own based on the two preconditions? You can see the units in the equations from a brand new arcana perspective. In other words, they are no more mere math symbols.”

Fernando was a bit pissed, but he still accepted Lucien’s advice, “Let me see what conclusion you’re hiding!”

He walked back to his desk and picked up the quill-pen. He first wrote down the two preconditions, and then started working on the equations.

When he first started, everything went very smoothly. A grand arcanist’s knowledge was way more than enough for the initial deduction.

However, as he wrote down further, Fernando’s quill-pen stopped above a certain line.

The black ink formed a small drop at the pen point, and then dripped down onto the parchment.

The ink slowly spread out.

The space they were in, Fernando's demiplane, Thunder Hell, suddenly became very stormy. The thundering and lightning were roaring.

Fernando looked up. His red eyes were full of shock.

Lucien did not look away. Instead, he looked right into Fernando's eyes.

Fernando took a deep breath and closed his eyes. Then he started working on the equations again.

As Fernando wrote down more equations and more stage conclusions, certain changes were happening in the study.

Rulers, quill-pens, books were contracting, and the clock was ticking slower and slower.

Lucien closed his eyes and spread out his spiritual power. The changes were real.

However, the changes were so tiny that only a senior-rank or above could notice.

The changes taking place in Fernando's cognitive world was affecting the real world!

That was the power of a legendary sorcerer!

After a while, Fernando finally put down the quill-pen in his hand and looked at the final conclusion attentively. He laughed in a mocking way at himself, "I thought I'd had a basic idea about the truth of the world, but I was totally wrong. Space and time are in fact very, very different from what we feel. The equation shows that time is actually a function of speed, depending on the matter. If it wasn't my own derivation, I'd definitely yell at you badly."

Fernando then looked up and said very seriously, “But this conclusion is based on the single postulate, and we need things more solid than this, although this can be used to explain why part of the starlight saw spectroscopic redshifts.”

Fernando had not fully accepted it yet. The conclusion had to be proved by some further evidence, or it remained a fancy toy.

“Well... We might be able to use it to explain some of the problems that we ran into working on the artificial planets. Of course, this theory is not complete yet. Gravity is not involved, so it must still be problematic.” said Lucien.

Then Lucien mentioned some records of data that his students collected and the questions coming up, “... so when we accelerated particles, there was a difference between the result and what we expected, and the theory of relativity would be able to explain it: Mass increases as the speed increases, so the orbital period also changes. We can use this formula to work out the variable and adjust the changing frequency of the electric field. If the particles can be further accelerated without trying away from the field, the theory of relativity will be able to be indirectly proved.”

Fernando decided to take action immediately. In his magic lab, Fernando did exactly as Lucien said.

Then Fernando got the particles that carried the greatest energy ever. Then, he released a sigh, “Lucien, in your programme, Arcana Voice, you talked about outlook of world, on life, and on value. In my understanding, the outlook on the world is how an individual perceives the world. Apart from humanity and history, it equals a person’s cognitive world.”

Lucien had no idea why Fernando wanted to talk about it now.

Fernando grinned, “But when it comes to how to understand space, it also involves the outlook on life and values. So I’m thinking... Why don’t we call you the Destroyer of Three Outlooks” Lucien's face twitched a bit. He did not find Fernando's joke interesting.

Fernando looked Lucien up and down with a meaningful smile on his face,

"I've learned my lesson from you, Lucien. That's why I'm still here now after all of this. I am now more or less suspicious about every theoretical system. But for others, Lucien, you have to reveal your theory of relativity bit by bit, especially for Douglas. Your theory is a huge turnover to his, and he's been through a lot of things in the past one or two hundred years. The wave theory of light, quantum theory... I'm afraid that this might be too much for him to take. I mean, I don't think Douglas's head is going to explode or his demiplane is going to collapse. Not that bad. But what happened to Brook might happen to him again. Mental changes are possible, too."

"Sir, I never thought of throwing it directly at people. You insisted.." Lucien could not help complaining.

Lucien had started feeling more casual in front of Fernando.

However, Fernando just directly ignored Lucien, "I'll start with Oliver. He should be able to take it as he's seen the problems. Then I'll have him submit his paper to make the senior-rank and above think."

"Why senior-rank and above?" Lucien asked.

"Because those below can't understand," said Fernando succinctly.

Fernando then slowly walked back to his study and said.

"You're already level seven in terms of arcana credit. The argument between wave and particle theory is still going on, and the number of papers about your new alchemy should be booming soon. With all these, this paper should be able to take you to level eight. However, now you should work on improving your magic level, as it's just a matter of time for you to become a grand arcanist. You must have benefited from having the two legends temporarily living inside of your body, and I'm sure that the congress will also favor you to a great extent."

Currently, Lucien had fifteen thousand arcana credits, which meant he was halfway from hitting level eight. He also expected that the reward credits from new alchemy would be very considerable.

In the study, Fernando handed Lucien the paper, "Take a look at what's missing here. If there isn't, I will not have to read your paper."

Lucien took a glance at it and found that his teacher had also missed mass-energy equation as Einstein did. He smiled and picked up the quill-pen,

"Sir, there's one thing missing."

Lucien started writing on the parchment. The point of the pen slightly scratched the surface and made a tiny, soft noise. Fernando watched the entire process of derivation, and the look on his face changed several times: There was solemnity, shock, and then great excitement.

Lucien kept writing. Eventually, the formula came out: $E = mc^2$.

A thick bolt of lightning flashed through the sky outside the window. For a moment, the entire demiplane was illuminated by it.

Then the deafening thunder followed. It's great power even made the window frames shake.

"I see! That's what that part of the structure means! The mutual conversion between mass and energy! No wonder extraordinarily high temperature is possible in new alchemy!" Fernando said aloud to himself, out of great excitement.

He was so thrilled that it sounded like he was roaring. Finally, he had seen direction in making further progress in legendary level using new alchemy and by putting together all the fields that he was good at together!

Although the two magic structures – fusion and fission – were still too complex for him, and it would take time for him to understand bit by bit, he finally saw hope for reaching the next level!

.....

In the Bright Hall in Lance, the Holy City, the grand cardinals were discussing the latest report submitted by Sard.

“The priests and night watchers in Holm parish are not being reliable.” said Saint Melmax, the leader of Temple Knights.

The rest of them remained silent. They all knew what caused the priests’ mental instability. Part of it was because the Pope had been improving and modifying some fundamental theology theories. If they said anything improper, the Pope might be pissed.

“If we choose to launch a war right now, most priests and night watchers in Holm parish would be ready to fight, which is good. But right now we’re not ready for a war. We have to focus our power on the new dimension where both population and resources are abundant,” said Benedict II in cold voice, “so do as Sard proposed: punish the night watchers and gather the red robes, including Amelton.”

Philibell hurriedly nodded, “As you command, Your Holiness. I’ll assign a new red robe to the Inquisition.”

No one else said no because this basically had nothing to do with them.

.....

In the Radiance Church, Sard had received the written reply. He gently stroke the paper, smiling.

When his fingers came across, at the end of the punishment list, a new name appeared: Juliana.

But her punishment was much less severe, compared to the punishment for the other two night watchers who caught Baron Austin. She would be put into jail for a year, but the other two would be sentenced to death.

“Ask Octave to come.” said Sard to the red robe outside through the divine circle.

.....

A while later, Octave walked out of Sard’s study. The look on his face was extremely gloomy and sombre. A couple of minutes earlier, he had been stripped of his title and duty as the leader of the Inquisition!

The position was only lower than a parish leader.

Octave felt that it wasn’t really his fault. Radical night watchers came up almost every year.

Killing a noble who listened to Arcana Voice was not a big deal.

Should they just watch evilness spread out but do nothing?

The Church was getting more and more cowardly!

Walking in the Radiance Church, Octave felt the sympathetic eyes from other priests. He thought to himself in his heart,

“Your Holiness, do you see this? They think I am right! Your decision isn’t proper!”

.....

June 20th, after King Feltis and Princess Patrick’s funeral.

In a long, black dress, Natasha had an interview with Count James, Russell, and Henson.

“The Church has decided on the punishment. The two leading night watchers are sentenced to death, and all the other night watchers involved will receive different punishments. You may inform Baron Austin’s family, and please extend my heartfelt condolences.” said Natasha, crossing in front of her chest.

Count James wasn’t happy, “Only the night watchers? The lunatics won’t learn their lesson! We can’t live in fear all the time! The leader of the Inquisition must be punished, and any night watchers who are prone to go extreme must be controlled and killed! That's what we nobles, at least most of us, believe. It's also for your own safety, Your Majesty!"

In fact, the punishment decision was already acceptable to him. The Church, he knew, had made big compromise. He was saying this to see Natasha's attitude.

Count Henson and Russell nodded.

Natasha said seriously,

"The Church is at fault, of course, as they did not keep an eye on those extreme night watchers. But they have apologized and made an acceptable decision. The murders' death is the most important thing that Baron Austin would want. Also, Octave has been stripped of his duty. I believe that Saint Sard will keep the lunatics in line. I understand your concern, but what you ask for needs time."

Count James was a bit disappointed, "We obey your wish, Your Majesty."

After leaving Nekso Palace, both Russell and Henson jumped onto James's coach, but neither of them said anything on their way.

When they almost arrived at the villa, Russell released a sigh and broke the silence, "Her Majesty has always been a follower since she was young, and she grew up in Aalto where the Church's power is extremely powerful. It makes sense if she slightly favors the Church. Let's not be too pessimistic."

"But I'm afraid this is just the beginning. Her teacher's Beliel, God's Glory." said James with his sullen-looking face.

Count Henson nodded, and he lowered his voice, "We have to be prepared, just in case..."

At this time, a Dragon Scale horse came close to the coach. It was one of Jame's knights.

"What happened?" asked James.

Somehow the look on the knight's face was full of surprise, "Her Majesty is visiting Holm Royal Magic Tower to see the seniors!"

"What?" Count Henson could not believe his ears. The world had seemingly gone nuts in his eyes.

.....

In a spacious living room in Holm Royal Magic Tower, Natasha was waiting to see the sorcerer members in the royal family in Holm. She said proudly, "I really have to thank those extreme night watchers, or I wouldn't be able to find a chance to come here. When Duke Rex asks, I'll say that I'm here to reassure the Liberals. The Church caused these troubles, so they won't say anything about this as well."

But Natasha was also aware that visiting the magic tower was the farthest she could go. She could never visit Allyn. Holm was different because many royal families still gathered here.

"You're not here just for this, right?" said Camil, who knew Natasha very well.

Natasha looked more serious now, "I took Lucien's suggestion and collected some of my uncle's hair and flesh. By testing them, we can know the accurate age of my uncle when he died to see if he was ever affected by the power of Heart of Time. This is very strong evidence, as time always leaves its trace!"

"'Heart of Time' could manipulate time after the princess's death." said Camil, who did not know much about the limit of Kritonia's ability.

Natasha shook her head, "He can't make time flow back. Also, Lucien told me that some changes only happened to people who were alive, unless he actually once brought uncle back to life."

"Sorcerers are always full of tricks." said Camil, who did not quite understand.

Natasha overlooked the city of Rentato from the high castle. After a while, she cheered up a little bit, "I've known Lucien for years, but I never got a chance to celebrate his birthday with him. I was quite upset that I was going to miss this one as well, but now the problem has been solved. I'll visit Duke Rex's manor and properties during the day and come back here on Lucien's birthday in the evening!"

Natasha thought to herself hard what gift should she prepare for Lucien.

She walked back and forth in the living room, and then noticed that Camil was staring at her.

"What is it, aunt Camil?"

"Look in the mirror," said Camil, using her chin to point at the mirror in the corner.

Natasha was confused, but she did as Camil said anyways. In the mirror, she saw a purple-haired lady whose cheeks were flushed with joy and excitement. Her face was glowing with a sweet smile extending all the way from the corner of her lips to her eyes.

"I look... different." murmured Natasha surprisedly.

Natasha remembered that the last time she was like this was years ago, when she was still with Silvia.

Camil said calmly, "You've fallen in love with Lucien Evans."

She was not asking, but saying a fact.

"What?!" Natasha's eyes suddenly opened big as if she just got struck by a bolt of lightning.

Chapter 517: The Preparation

Chapter 517: The Preparation

Camil's face was rather cold, but her eyes were shining with wisdom. She said straightforwardly,

"You're always happy when you see him. You always share lots of topics with him, but you still feel good even if you two are not talking. Simply being with each other is sweet enough. And you keep mentioning him when talking to me."

"You fancy him turning into a female. Is that normal?"

"For him, you chose not to stop the night watchers; For him, you faced great dangers and temporarily put aside your responsibilities. You distracted Prince Dracula for him; you protected him from Demigod-lich. You call yourself his friend?"

Natasha was totally shocked, "But... but he's a man. I've been helping him because we are good friends!"

Camil's blue eyes stared at Natasha until Natasha started feeling a bit uneasy, "True. You're a knight and you help your friends. But how have you been feeling? You were once in love before, so you should be able to tell."

Natasha started walking back and forth in the room restlessly.

Suddenly, she strode towards the door.

"Wait!" Camil did not expect this. She was worried that if Natasha would do something extreme, say, killing Lucien or hurting herself.

Camil softened her voice to comfort her, "Natasha, love comes regardless of sex. You always told yourself this, right? It just happened that you fell in love with a woman, but this time, it's a man. Don't panic."

As she was saying this, Camil was also a bit worried. She was worried if she just picked the wrong time to tell Natasha everything, if she would disappoint the grand duke.

Natasha slowly turned around, but the look on her face was full of joy.

Her eyes looked gentle and her cheeks flushed. There was great excitement between her brows. At this moment, she looked absolutely stunning.

Camil was so surprised that she became speechless. She felt that Natasha had somehow changed.

After encountering Demigod-lich, Natasha kept falling into confusion from time to time. But now, probably because she had found her new target, Natasha was no more at loss, instead, her eyes were shining with determination!

Natasha grinned, "Aunt Camil, don't worry about me. I'll work hard for my own happiness!"

"What...?" Now it was Camil's turn to feel lost.

Did Natasha already accept the fact within such a short period of time?

Natasha's clenched her right hand, she said with great determination, "I'm a knight. I don't dodge when there's a problem. I seek solutions."

Her voice gradually rose,

"My faith is to move forward, forward, forever. I'm going to defeat all the barriers in front of me!"

"No matter how he will respond to this, I'll not yield. I'm gonna tell him how I feel about him, defeat him, conquer him!"

That was the declaration from Natasha.

Camil should have thought about this as well. And so she had kind of expected this result.

Natasha grinned. Her left hand reached into her pocket. The small laurel box containing the godhood of the God of Love and Beauty was in it.

Natasha decided to be the one to solve the problem.

...

Lucien did not have to analyze Evans' Freezing Ray since he was the one who created the spell. After managing to control the fast-growing spiritual power, Lucien had built the structural model of the spell within his soul and became a seventh circle sorcerer.

Pushing open the window, watching the garden shining in the warm sunlight, Lucien's heart was full of joy. He was becoming stronger and stronger, the situation of the world was now relatively settled, and the lady he loved had come all the way to him. Although there were still many difficulties, things were heading to the positive side.

The monocle he was wearing was getting a bit hotter. Knowing that someone was contacting him, Lucien turned it on.

"Lucien, you know where I am right now?" It was Natasha's voice.

Lucien smiled, "You can't be in Allyn, right?"

"Haha, I'm at Holm Royal Magic Tower." said Natasha proudly.

Lucien was quite surprised, "Holm Royal Magic Tower? You don't care about the Church? They may overreact to it."

"No worries. I have to comfort the Liberals here, for what happened. It was the Church's bad, and they have to understand and support me." said Natasha half jokingly using the tone of a queen.

Words escaped Lucien's lips, "Then on June 25th can you..."

"On June 25, are you available..." Natasha asked him simultaneously.

They both stopped, and smiled.

According to the custom in this world, birthday celebration lasted for more than an entire day, from the night before to the next early morning.

Lucien rubbed his chin and the smile on his face was big, “I’m always available when the queen asks.”

“Great. Then on June 25th, at Holm Royal Magic Tower, I’ll celebrate your birthday with you,” said Natasha cheerfully, “I’ve known you for so many years, but I never got a chance to do so.”

After they ended the call, Lucien walked back and forth in his room excitedly. He wielded his right fist in the air out of great excitement.

“One more step forward.” Lucien said to himself.

He could not sit down. Thoughts flashed through his mind. He believed that Natasha also had some feelings toward him. Maybe he should try to make a breakthrough.

Lucien decided to write it down – his plan:

“Target: To be with the girl I am in love with.”

“Step 1: Prepare good ingredients and make a couple of good Chinese dishes.”

“Step 2: Arrive at Holm Royal Magic Tower earlier. Make things romantic using candles, piano, and wine.”

“Step 3: Lead the topic and try to see how Natasha will respond. Three choices available: Keep trying, speak it out, and temporarily stop.”

“Step 4: Details – If Natasha doesn’t like it, stay back but don’t give up. Take more time to build it up. If Natasha’s attitude remains ambiguous, keep talking about our past experience and building stronger connections. When things are right, seize the chance and speak it out.”

“Notes: What to prepare”

“First, Natasha fancies sweet and main courses that are tender and juicy. She doesn’t mind spicy and less common food. So the dishes can include sweet and sour fish, sautéed lamb liver, roast suckling pig, honey pumpkin, etc, depending on what ingredients are available.”

“Second, get a piano and a violin ready. The music has to be romantic, but For Silvia and Exodus should be strictly forbidden in case sad memories triggered. Music list includes Marriage d’amour, Ballade pour Adeline, Canon In D Major..”

“Third, write down all the possible questions and get prepared...”

Lucien wrote a lot, like he was doing an experiment. He thought really hard, trying to find anything that he missed.

Lucien read the plan line by line. Then he started considering what might happen if his plan did work out. He felt the muscles in his arm and chest. Obviously, they were not very impressive, compared to that of the knight.

Lucien smacked his lips, slightly frowning.

“I gotta get prepared for this, too.”

Ten minutes later, Lucien had arrived at Allyn Advanced Arcana Library. His face flushing, his throat a big dry, Lucien said to the alchemical life,

“Umm... I just... Umm... Pink Book, please.”

...

After seeing the sorcerers from the royal family, Natasha walked to the top floor of the magic tower using the excuse to take a rest. But she walked to the entrance of Hathaway’s demiplane, with a big, sweet smile on her face.

Her left hand was still gently stroking the small laurel box in her pocket. She had hope in her mind. She believed that when he chose to wear the ring, all the barriers between them would disappear.

Lucien was good looking. If he became a lady, he must be gorgeous. She had to keep a close watch on her girl, in case someone would steal her.

That was what Natasha was thinking to herself.

But her left hand touched something cold. The big smile kind of froze on her face.

It was Pale Justice.

“I am a man.” said Lucien seriously. He once said this to Natasha.

The memories rushed back to her and filled her mind.

He was the black-haired, young man whose talent dazzled the audience;

He was that gentleman who she could talk to all day long about any topics without any stress or pressure.

He was the man that had great determination who never put her down from his back in the dark forest even when facing the greatest danger;

He was the resolved explorer who left Aalto for his magic dream;

He was that smart sorcerer who was always resourceful when Demigod-lich was chasing after them;

He was her knight, who cared about her, made fun of her, and stood in front of her.

Natasha stood where she was for a while. Then with a soft smile on her face, she turned around and left before she entered Element Paradise, Hathaway's demiplane.

The small laurel box had also been put into the bottom layer of her storage pouch.

Chapter 518: Birthday Gift

Chapter 518: Birthday Gift

It was June 25. The sun was as bright as Natasha's mood right now.

Whispering in a delighted tone, she prepared her face and her clothes in front of a mirror. Since she was not a rookie in romance, and she had plenty of similar dates when she was with Sylvia, she did not reject skirts, broad-edged hats, earrings or necklaces. Therefore, it was no trouble for her to find a delicate black dress whose edge was slightly puffy, revealing the mysteriousness of the night and the attraction of the unknown.

"Huh. This is not so flirty that it contradicts my style and scares Lucien, and nor is it as tough and charmless as the knight suit." Natasha moved casually and commented in satisfaction.

The court dress was not in the style of the conservative Holm or that of the open Tria, but in the graceful style of Aalto between them. The neckline of the dress was slightly low, making it possible to see the fair and delicate skin down below, but if she did not bend, nothing inappropriate would be exposed at all.

The dress had been finely cut, too, highlighting Natasha's long beautiful neck, highly-rising breasts and slender but powerful waist in the most eye-catching way, filling her with the charm of a female.

Natasha observed herself and encouraged herself, "Sylvia used to envy my body figure a lot in the past. I am never too thin or too fat. Lucien will definitely be amazed."

She was not unsure of herself. However, after dropping Lucien's 'gender transitioning plan' the other day, when she recalled the past, she realized that she had never attempted to stress her femininity during her company with Lucien, and she had no idea whether she was a lady or a gentleman in his eyes. Therefore, she intended to correct her 'bad' impression of Lucien as soon as possible.

Queen Natasha was certainly not someone who would back off. Whenever she had a target, she always pressed forward determinedly and would fix the problems if she ever encountered any.

.....

Allyn, in Lucien's magic tower...

Trays of Chinese dishes that had just been cooked were placed on the table in the living room, but there was no fragrance coming out, because they had all been kept with preservation magics.

Lucien took off the apron that he used for cooking and walked to the mirror while whispering a song merrily, observing himself, "Huh. Stick to the plan. I need to slightly change the style of my coat and give Natasha a brand-new feeling. I have to change the image of being just a good friend that I've built so far.

The black frock coat slightly wriggled into a black cloak. Inside it, there was a white shirt, a black waistcoat, and a rather casual bowtie on the neckline.

His pants that were in the same color were equally straight, covering his shiny black shoes.

Men's clothes were not as complicated as women's. However, the slight change of coat already changed Lucien's vibe. He was a quiet and even conservative man before, but he had additional passion and confidence right now, making him look even more attractive.

Putting on his monocle, Lucien combed his fringe, allowing it to cover the right side of his forehead from the left side.

After he cleaned himself up, Lucien frowned at himself, seeing that his hair had reached his ears, feeling that he was not masculine enough. He thought to himself, "Should I cut my hair short and keep a mustache?"

The idea had just occurred to him when Lucien realized something. He spoke to himself in amusement, "This should be what Natasha prefers. If I change myself into a masculine man, I will only achieve the opposite of my purpose!”

Lucien turned around, fixed the dishes with magic, and put them in the storage bag that was awarded to him after he became a senior-rank sorcerer. Suddenly, he snapped his fingers and exclaimed ‘I almost forgot’ in his business. Then, he hurried to pick up a peppermint candy from the table in the living room and tossed it into his mouth.

“Keep your mouth fresh.” Lucien said in a smile and then bumped his fist at himself in the mirror:

“Keep it up!”

.....

Natasha was very satisfied with her look and barely put on any makeup. She merely changed her hairstyle to make her long hair even more alluring.

After she finished picking her clothes, as usual, she took out a few candies in different flavors from her storage bag.

“Which flavor will be better?” Natasha hesitated for a moment. Considering Lucien’s preference, she selected a sweet violet sugar and put it into her mouth.

After she was all set, Natasha was about to leave and begin her ‘quest’, when she suddenly remembered something from a long time ago, “Sylvia mentioned that Lucien had been staring at her legs and her silk stockings like a wolf since the moment he saw her. Huh, although Lucien explained that it was because he did not expect to see such a byproduct of alchemy, I would rather believe that he likes it than go there unprepared. After all, he certainly does not dislike it.”

Whispering again, Natasha opened her closet and picked a pair of black silk stockings and garters of the same color with her clothes.

Sitting on the sofa, Natasha took her right foot out of the black shoe and put it on the table. Her foot was slightly small compared to her height. It was graceful and chubby, and her toes were long and cute. There wasn't any messy potion on her fingernails, either, which emitted healthy and attractive pinkness, like five vague roses.

As she rolled the thin silk stockings and covered the tip of her foot, hazy blackness buried her skin bit by bit and enshrouded her long, straight right leg.

After finishing both feet, Natasha put on the garters and stood up again. She pulled her dress and observed the result. Her legs behind the black silk stockings were obscure and unbelievably captivating.

"It's really good to be a radiant knight. My legs that were too solid before are now perfect. Haha." Natasha praised herself without the least embarrassment.

Then, she looked at the beautiful girl inside the mirror. Some anxiety and worries beamed out of her face.

However, those emotions were soon dispelled by her resolution. Natasha clenched her right hand and said to herself in the mirror:

"Natasha, you can do this!"

.....

Lucien walked out of the living room in a smile and reached the lift of the magic tower somewhat anxiously.

When he stepped into the lift, Lucien looked around and, upon seeing the garden outside of the enormous window, he thought of something. "Crap! I didn't prepare any flowers! I've forgotten such an important thing!"

Checking the time, Lucien realized that he barely had time to search for flowers elsewhere. Therefore, he focused his attention on his own garden. "Well, I can claim that I've raised and cared for the flower for years. That will definitely show my sincerity."

Comforting herself, Lucien left the lift and flew out of the window. Without any hesitation, he picked the violet, which was Natasha's impression in his heart.

“Thankfully, the bloom season hasn’t passed in the high sky yet, or I’d have to make them blossom with magic.” Lucien did not know Natasha’s view on flowers and therefore merely picked eleven of them.

Having no time to think whether he had forgotten anything else, Lucien cleaned his clothes again and walked out of the magic tower, but Sprint, Katrina, Annick and other students stopped him.

“Master, where are you going? Isn’t it your birthday today? We’re planning to celebrate it with you.” Heidi asked with delight and surprise. Why did her teacher seem so strange today? He had even changed his style.

Lucien did not expect to run into them, either. He said rather awkwardly, “I’m going to meet a friend. You can come again tomorrow night.”

Heidi, Annick and Sprint were going to ask which friend it was, but they were stopped by Chelly, Layria and Katrina respectively. The three girls held back their laughter and said, “In that case, we will not delay you any longer, master.”

That was exactly what Lucien wanted. He hurried to leave on a wagon.

“Why did you stop me from asking?” Heidi looked at the girls in confusion.

Chelly, who was the most experienced one of all, smiled, “Didn’t you notice that master’s spring has come?”

Huh? Sprint, Annick and the other bachelors were still baffled.

.....

Reaching the royal magic tower of Holm on a wagon, Natasha entered the previous guest room with Camil gravely and met many members of the royal family in a hurry.

Then, she took a deep breath and said to Camil, “Aunt Camil, I’m leaving.”

“Don’t make it like a battle. Take it easy.” Seeing how dominating and magnificent Natasha was, Camil hurried to ask her to be gentle.

“Okay.” Natasha nodded, knowing that she was a little bit too obsessed about it. She put on a casual smile, walked to ‘Lucien’s Office’ on the same floor, and knocked on the door.

Without any wait, the door was opened. Natasha’s eyes immediately shined. She seldom saw Lucien in such a style, and freshness always meant unknown, further adding to his charm.

Lucien, on the other hand, was rather stunned. He had never seen such a gorgeous Natasha that was filled with femininity.

Natasha was very satisfied about Lucien’s reaction. She smiled, “Are you not letting me in?”

Lucien was back to himself. He cleared the way and revealed the room that was in a hazy atmosphere.

In the office, the left side was a chamber with a bed, the right side was the library, and the living room was in the middle with a piano in a corner and a round table at the center. On the table were trays of unique, carefully-decorated food and two candles. As the dim light of candles flickered, the fuzzy and romantic atmosphere was building up.

Natasha, who used to have candle lit dinners frequently, never thought that such slight changes could make the common environment so fascinating.

Lucien directed her to the table, pulled the chair and asked the lady to sit down first. Then, he took out the champagne that was kept in ice. Pouring half a glass for each of them, he returned to his seat on the opposite side.

“After knowing you for almost eight years, I can finally celebrate my birthday with you now.” Lucien raised his wine glass and said, while he considered his plans:

“First of all, I will direct the subject to the meaningful things that we’ve experienced together, so that Natasha will be emotionally softened. Then, I will play the piano and build the atmosphere as much as possible. After that, I'll be able to drop the hint."

Natasha raised the glass at Lucien. She smiled, "How time flies. You are 25 too now. Happy birthday, Lucien."

After a clink, both of them sipped the champagne. Lucien took the opportunity to review his plan. In a warm smile, he was going to direct the subject of their conversation.

At this moment, however, Natasha stood up and said in a smile, "I have a birthday gift for you."

"What gift?" Watching Natasha walk towards him gracefully, Lucien hurried to recall the other part of his plan that specified his reactions and directions after he received her birthday gift.

When he smelled vague fragrance, Lucien opened his mouth and was about to express his delight at Natasha's gift.

But suddenly, Lucien saw that Natasha bent over and held his chin with her right hand.

What's going on?

Lucien was stunned. Then he felt that Natasha's scarlet lips were pressed to his mouth, that her fresh and smooth tongue opened his teeth and stuck in with the sweet smile of violet, looking for a partner to dance with.

What's going on?

Lucien realized that all his plans seemed unable to follow the actual circumstances. He subconsciously hugged Natasha back, allowing their tongues to dance together.

After a long kiss, Natasha let go of his mouth. Her lips captivating and her eyes hazy, she looked at Lucien who was still perplexed about what was going on and said in a slightly hoarse voice:

"Do you like my birthday gift?"

Chapter 519: The Pace of a Knight

Chapter 519: The Pace of a Knight

“Do you like my birthday gift?”

Natasha’s voice was slightly hoarse. She tried to pretend to be casual, but her heart was still beating faster than usual, as if the anxiety deep inside her heart was spreading out. Did Lucien like it? Would he accept it?

Even though she was a queen and a brave knight, she found it hard to remain calm, and she was not as confident as she appeared

“Even if he refuses me, I will not give up. I will definitely conquer him someday!”

Natasha made up her mind and encouraged herself that one failure was acceptable.

Suddenly, she felt that there was a hand on her waist and her back, and she heard Lucien’s deepened voice:

“I love it, but...”

The hand on her back suddenly pressed hard. Caught unprepared, Natasha leaned forward to Lucien and saw his eyes where a surging storm was rising.

“... but it is not enough!”

Huh? Natasha hadn’t understood what he meant, when her mouth was already blocked by Lucien. She sensed his scorching breath spurting on her face.

Her lips were sucked and divided by Lucien, and a tongue broke into her mouth firmly. It went on a wild rampage, searching for the bold and open partner from a moment ago.

Well? Natasha seemed to understand something. She closed her eyes in delight and excitement. The dimness before her eyes seemed to have been completely illuminated.

Lucien kissed particularly wildly to express his long-repressed feelings, but he was still more or less ill at ease. Was it only a birthday gift just now? Did it mean anything else? Was he mistaken?

Uneasiness, expectations, anxiety... Everything had been mixed and cooked into a pot of indescribable feelings. Lucien slowed down and waited for Natasha to give an affirmative answer.

Suddenly, Lucien felt that the fresh and smooth tongue entangled his own. It was so powerful and so sweet that it was even trying to push back into his own mouth. In the meantime, two hands held his head.

Boom. Lucien felt fireworks blooming in front of his eyes. Natasha had given her answer obviously.

Their kiss gradually grew intense. After who knows how long, the two of them were finally separated.

Lucien was about to say something, when Natasha, whose face was flushing, said in delight, "Lucien, you taste better than I thought."

Her pink tongue licked her lips quickly and agilely.

Lucien was immediately embarrassed. It was indeed as expected of Natasha. However, that was why he liked her.

Natasha breathed heavily. "After overcoming my mental resistance, I realized that I fell in love with you a long time ago. No, Lucien. I want to solemnly tell you..."

Her silver purple eyes became serious. "... that I love you. I hope we can try living together. I want to share my remaining life with you until death do us part."

As a girl with enough romantic experience, Natasha knew very clearly that confessions of love could only be done when two people knew each other very well. Confessing love to a stranger that one barely knew would only terrify them, and if they were willing to accept it, they would be after the pursuer's fortune or sex.

Lucien suddenly felt that the date plan he drafted arduously was a waste of time, because it had proved useless before he had a chance to use it. Even the confession of love had been done by Natasha.

However, it was not the time to be bothered by that. Lucien looked at Natasha's eyes warmly and tried not to let his ecstasy shake his voice. "Natasha, I love you too. Since I don't know when, I have already been enjoying spending time with you. I realized what I wanted on our return to Aalto. Over the past years, I've been trying to approach you and pursue you. I also would like to share my remaining life with you. I want you to be my wife."

Always remembering that 'those who date not for the purpose of marriage are scoundrels', Lucien expressed his solemn attitude.

Natasha put on a brilliant smile. It was the best feeling in the world that the one you loved loved you back.

She seemed tired of keeping her back bent. Therefore, she descended with her hands on Lucien's shoulder and sat on Lucien's legs directly. Then, her face looked rather strange.

Lucien hurried to explain in embarrassment, "This... This is a normal reaction."

Crap. The romantic atmosphere was slightly sabotaged.

Natasha immediately realized what was going on. She slightly twisted her back and observed Lucien's funny face as she expected. Then, she craned her head and spoke alluringly next to Lucien's ear, "Lucien's Big Ivan?"

"Yes." Blushing, Lucien did not know how to reply.

Natasha opened her mouth and sucked Lucien's earlobe, letting the numbness spread throughout his body. Then, she let go and chuckled, "I like your reaction. Don't be shy."

More than embarrassed, Lucien turned his head and sucked

Natasha's fair ear softly, too. Out of his expectation, he saw that her body was shivering, and that redness rose from her neck to her cheeks.

Was it her sensitive point?

"I like you doing this do me, too." Her eyes as hazy as a mist, Natasha spoke directly. Then she asked both curiously and happily, "You said you fell in love with me and tried pursuing me years ago. Why didn't I feel anything?"

"I feared that you were only into girls. So, I've been trying to build up my relationship with you and change you." Lucien replied honestly.

Natasha smiled and seemed moved. "Lucien, I'm still into girls, but you are the only exception. Despite your gender, I don't feel uncomfortable at all having physical contact with you."

While saying that, she turned her waist to further prove what he said, making it even more difficult for Lucien to hold it back.

"Hehe. Since you were trying to build up our relationship, you must've made plans for the birthday dinner, didn't you? Would you have done it if I didn't confess?" Natasha seemed to be enjoying Lucien's self-containment. She moved her waist slowly but unstoppably while she asked.

"Yes. I made a whole plan that included food preparations, subject guidance, piano-playing, love-confessing and everything." His brain filled with blood, Lucien simply confessed dutifully.

Natasha was stunned. It was just a casual question, and she did not expect that Lucien did have a plan. Therefore, she asked in great interest.

Now that he had accidentally blurted out the embarrassing thing, Lucien had no choice except to introduce his whole plan. In the end, he said, "As it turns out, the plan is absolutely useless."

Natasha burst into laughter. "This is so you! How hilarious!"

Her voice suddenly stopped as she laughed. Her eyes turned deep and profound as she said hoarsely, "But I like! I like it very much!"

Lucien sensed Natasha's breath was getting hotter. Looking at her in the eyes, he understood her happiness.

Although he had never been through such situations before, he suddenly felt that the plan was not entirely useless. While the content on the plan was never put into use, the plan itself successfully touched Natasha. Lucien immediately felt sweet and happy, but that was soon disrupted by Natasha's declaration.

"Lucien, let's have a baby." Natasha seemed unadapted to being emotional. She hurried to hold herself back and suggested delightedly.

Lucien almost passed out. Wasn't it going too fast?

Sensing nothing wrong, Natasha continued happily, "I was planning to make a child by means of artificial insemination that you mentioned with your bloodline. However, such trouble is unnecessary now. We can be more direct. Haha!"

Lucien was embarrassed again. "Natasha, don't you feel that you have ruined all the romance?"

Natasha finally realized it. She said regretfully, "Right..."

But she was soon refreshed. She looked at Lucien in a smile, "In fact, I think this is the atmosphere that is most suitable for you. Don't you think so?"

"Me too. It's relieving without any pressure." Replied Lucien honestly.

Natasha went on the previous topic, "Lucien, I really I hope that we can be together openly someday, and that our children can grow under the bliss of their parents. Yes, that's an idea that I'm certain of right now and a goal that I will strive for. Protection is the feeling from the real Lord at the bottom of my heart. It is there and it will always be, never to be shaken by anything else."

Her eyes were clear and firm, as if she had found her path to walk on.

“Me too. I hope that our children can grow up in a complete family.” It was easy for a couple to fantasize about the future when they were together. Lucien, being no exception, smiled, too.

Natasha chuckled. “But first of all, we need to have a child.”

“We can work it out later.” Lucien responded in a smile.

Natasha, however, moved her waist again. “Is that so? Your Big Ivan seems to be suggesting otherwise. I want to take care of it right now.”

Instead of waiting for Lucien to reply, Natasha sat straight with only the support of her spine and grabbed Lucien’s hands.

“Natasha...” Lucien found it hard to keep up with the progress.

Hardly had he concluded his sentence when Lucien felt that his right hand, under Natasha’s guidance, touched a highly-rising spot that had a tip on it.

“Do you like it?” Natasha’s voice was even more hoarse, as if she were fascinated, too.

His blood flooding into his head, Lucien couldn’t help but nod his head. Then, his left hand was pulled by Natasha through the layers of clothes and touched her smooth, elastic skin.

“Do you like it? Natasha leaned forward on Lucien and asked again hoarsely and sexily.

“I do.” Lucien felt that he could no longer be called a man if he contained himself any longer. Getting both of his hands busy, he said, “Let’s go to the bedroom...”

“Let’s do it right here, on the table, on the rug or on the chair.” Natasha chuckled and said, her voice filled with infinite charm.

Lucien felt that the first time was best on bed. Therefore, he tried to pick up Natasha. But all of a sudden, he felt that a slightly cold hand dug into his clothes and slipped all the way downwards from his chest until it grabbed his thing.

“I can’t wait to taste your feelings.”

Water seemed to be dripping from Natasha’s silver purple eyes, as she kissed Lucien’s lips again.

Chapter 520: Philosophical Time

Chapter 520: Philosophical Time

There was no window in the bedroom. The bed was messy, filled with a fragrant and strange smell that brought blushing subtleties.

Holding Natasha, Lucien leaned against the headboard, deep in thought.

After relishing the wonderful feeling when their bodies and souls were melted together, he suddenly grew a lot and seemed to have become a psychologically real man after only a few hours. A heavy responsibility had been added to his shoulder. From today on, he would no longer be alone. He had a partner, and probably a few lovely new lives in the future, with whom he would walk together until the end of his life.

Therefore, Lucien began to review his life goals and adjust his plan, trying to figure out how to be together with Natasha openly.

“According to the files in the library, it’s true a man’s ‘philosophical time’ after doing that.” Lucien made fun of himself after thinking that. Such heavy subjects had never occurred to him before.

As his eyes moved to the rug in the bedroom and the doorstep, Lucien’s eyes saw the messy clothes that had been thrown all the way. That black dress had been torn into God knows how many pieces under their joint efforts. Lying on the floor, they outlined a shameful scene with the many suspicious traces around.

Looking at that, feeling the smooth and elastic skin under his right hand, and smelling the sweet fragrance that was mixed with a weird scent, Lucien suddenly felt hot, and his libido surfaced again. His right hand pressed slightly harder.

Clang! Clang! Clang!

The bell of the Radiance Church echoed at this moment, announcing that it was already the 26th.

In a fragrant wind, Lucien was sealed by the pink lips again. The strong and sweet tongue softly divided his teeth and entangled his own.

The kiss was not intense but filled with warmth. They felt and tasted each other, not leaving out any corner.

After a long time, their lips were finally separated. Natasha said in a brilliant smile with her dreamy eyes, "Happy birthday, my knight."

Lucien hugged her again and gave her another long kiss. Then he smiled, "You didn't sleep?"

Natasha wriggled and leaned next to Lucien, before she said thoughtfully, "No. I've been considering my life path. I'm planning to figure out my confusion in my faith. I'm also thinking about what I should do to change Holm so that we can be together openly."

"It's going to be a long and difficult path, but I will not give up."

Lucien couldn't help but smile. Had Natasha entered the 'philosophical state', too? It was truly as expected of Her Majesty.

Thinking about that, Lucien turned to Natasha, only to discover that the thin, white velvet quilt had slipped during her previous movement, revealing the graceful and firm rising below. The tiny tip of redness on it made Lucien blush and pant again. He subconsciously turned around to avoid the wonderful view.

"Do you not like it?" How could Natasha have ignored Lucien's anomaly? She chuckled and laughed at his conservativeness. Then, her eyes passed Lucien's body and caught the broken clothes on the rug. "You were nothing like that before. You were as ferocious as a beast and tore my dress into pieces."

Holding back his urges, Lucien subconsciously argued, "It was torn by you."

"Is that so?" Natasha leaned her face to Lucien and said in a smile, "I remember it now. Somebody couldn't untie the dress a moment ago and forgot to use magic in his fury. Therefore, out of my love for him, I tore the dress myself. Lucien, do you prefer this explanation or the one where you were as ferocious as a beast?”

Lucien had nothing to defend himself. So, he could only reply gloomily, “I prefer the first one.”

Natasha smiled and praised him, “However, your performance was indeed excellent. You appeared rather immature at first, but you were rather experienced in the second time and got me under you when I was unprepared. It felt rather good to enjoy myself without doing anything.

“Also, with all the magical assistance and your body condition as a grand knight, you gave me the ultimate pleasure that I had never experienced before. I have never been as exhausted without fighting.”

“Although I am too tired to even move my finger, I can’t feel more pleasant, particularly when we were melted. It’s like our souls are interwoven. That must be love.”

She talked about his performance without the least awkwardness.

Lucien secretly wiped his sweat. The atmosphere when he was with Natasha was too weird. They must be a unique couple.

“Me too. I had unprecedented happiness. Right, it must’ve been because of my instincts as a man that you felt that I was experienced.” Lucien certainly would not say how knowledgeable he was and how pained his back was right now. “I don’t think you experienced it before, right?”

Lucien realized that it was terrible the moment he said that, because it would remind Natasha of Sylvia.

Natasha was not bothered. “The knights’ control over the muscles is very strong. Ordinary people can make them happy, too. When there was love, the enjoyment would be as good, but still, I had a feeling that I enjoyed it but did not enjoy it enough. In comparison, I almost passed out just now. Hehe. The last few of your magics are good. We can try the assistance of other strange magics in the future.”

Queen Natasha was a curious but rational woman. However, she did not think she needed to contain herself when she explored things in that aspect with her partner.

“Okay...” Lucien replied almost he was almost at a loss for words. He was so hasty in the previous two sessions that he completely forgot the tricks on the Pink Book. He merely built up himself with the magics such as potency and rejuvenation.

In the meantime, Lucien thought to himself, “The body transformation of radiant knights lasts too shortly. It can only be used at the critical moment, or the cast will ruin the feeling. I need to develop a new transformation technique to let me have the strength and agility of the radiant knights but not their supernatural abilities. That way, it should be enough to extend the effect by half an hour.”

It was not used for fighting, so supernatural abilities did not matter.

Thinking about that, Lucien recalled what happened to the living room a moment ago. Even though their magic and supernatural powers were within control, their exertion of strength had already collapsed the chairs and tables. The cuisines he prepared were also tasted by Natasha in a very weird way. If they hadn’t entered the bedroom at the last moment, Lucien was suspicious that the bed would’ve been collapsed, too. “I have to craft magic furniture now...”

Natasha turned around and leaned on Lucien’s chest, allowing their naked skin to contact directly. She asked worriedly, “Were we too hasty? I just couldn’t control myself. After I realized that I fell in love with you a long time ago, my years of feelings burst out like a torrent.”

Lucien was too inexperienced, which made Natasha, who had entered ‘philosophical state’, slightly uneasy.

“Not at all. I’ve waited for years.” Lucien did feel that it went too fast, but he was gratified by the company of the girl he loved and did not feel anything wrong later.

Natasha nodded in satisfaction. After another long kiss, she said regretfully, "It's past dawn. Although I would like to stay with you, I need to go back to the Nekso Palace now, or I will raise the suspicion of the Church if I spend the night in the royal magic tower of Holm. We are both young and still have a long life ahead of us. I believe that we will be really together someday."

"I understand. The constraint right now is for the happiness in the future." Lucien hugged her and took out her storage bag, ready to put clothes on her.

Natasha suddenly winked. "Is that so? Your Big Ivan seems to be saying otherwise. It wants one more time, doesn't it?"

Lucien looked at the ceiling helplessly, "You need to go back."

"Well, there is still some time. It should be enough." Natasha's eyes were suddenly rippling like water. Then, Lucien felt that her long legs slipped past his own, whose smoothness was passed on to his heart in a numbing feeling. "Lucien, didn't you say that it was only because of shock? But why do I feel that you are really into silk stockings? Both the dress and underwear have been torn by you, but the silk stockings are still intact."

Lucien blushed and did not say anything. His body turned hot under the provocation, while the long leg slid all the way to the critical area.

Lucien couldn't hold it anymore and grabbed Natasha's leg, about to put her down.

Natasha reached Lucien's chest, her silver eyes glittering and her voice lascivious. "I will be on top this time."

The air was filled with panting and squeaky noises. Suddenly, the bed collapsed in a bam, but the two of them did not stop at all.

After a long time, Lucien lay on the bed, satisfied and fatigued, while Natasha stood next to the bed, sorting her black dress delightedly.

"I'm going back." Natasha bent and kissed Lucien. Then she said solemnly, “I wonder if you could invite the King of Nightmare to stay in Aalto for a while in case of any trouble.”

“Rest assured. I’ll take care of it. The Grand Duke will not be in danger.” Lucien had already thought of it.

Natasha left the room in a light mood. After resting for a while and restoring part of his strength, Lucien got up from the collapsed bed and put on his magic robe. Walking to the living room, he watched Natasha get on the wagon and leave through the window.

“My life has entered a new phase after today.” Lucien remarked in complicated feelings.

After Natasha returned to the Nekso Palace, Lucien talked to her for another hour through electromagnetism messaging. It was not until then that he finally sat on the rug and began to analyze the eight-circle magics, trying to improve his magic level.

Before he knew it, it was already morning. Lucien cleaned his clothes and opened the door tiredly, picking up the ‘Holm Weekly’ that he subscribed to.

“... His Excellency Saint Sard is worried about the mental faculty of the clergy and night watchers in the Holm parish. He has decided that the personnel will study in the Rentato abbey and communicate with the other four parishes on this side of the Storm Strait...”

“What is Sard trying to do exactly?” Lucien scratched his chin at the headline.

Chapter 521: Paradox

Chapter 521: Paradox

Lucien, who knew a thing or two about Sard, speculated his intention with the newspaper in his hands. “He is trying to influence the clergy and the night watchers of the Holm parish and build them into his own subordinates? The communication of personnel must be for the same purpose. He will also be able to send spies to other parishes...”

When he thought that Vera Amelton had mastered the inquisition in the Holm parish, Lucien felt quite reverential for Sard, who had made such great use of the incident where a few radical night watchers lynched a liberal noble.

“Chances are that Sard is behind the few night watchers... But what does he want exactly by doing so? Divide the Church after he grows powerful? However, both the new church that he creates in the future and the South Church will no longer be the best in the world. Even their own territory will be invaded by the Congress, the North Church, or the Court of Elves. Sard can’t be that stupid, can he?”

“On the other hand, if the Lord of Hell is behind him, it would be understandable that his goal is to weaken the Church. However, for people like him, unless the benefits overwhelm his sanity, he will never degenerate into a servant of devils from a saint.”

“Is Sard trying to replace Benedict II after the pope is summoned by the Lord?”

“It’s been almost thirty years since Benedict II’s coronation. According to history, he has no more than thirty years before he ascends to Mountain Paradise like the previous popes. Sard, whose longevity is still huge, can definitely afford the wait.”

The phenomenon that popes in history always had a short time had been noticed by the Congress of Magic and other forces, but it never had a reasonable explanation. It was suspected that they were too close to the God of Truth and used the god’s strength too often, and therefore their body and soul couldn't take it anymore.

Lucien shook his head and browsed through the newspaper, thinking to himself, "I hope Natasha learns a thing or two about Sard. If he intends to divide the Church, he will have the full support of the Highest Council. However, what I fear is that he is ambitious enough to instigate the Church to fight the Congress so that he can eliminate his opposition in the five parishes, before he ascends to the throne of pope with the secrets from the World of Souls.

"By then, he may very well break the limits of longevity for other popes, which will be a nightmare for any force."

While thinking, Lucien went to the top floor on the royal magic tower of Holm, ready to return to Allyn by way of the Element Paradise.

During the gap of the 'second battle', Natasha reminded Lucien that the Church paid even more attention to him after the new alternate dimension was discovered because a man who was likely to be at the peak of legendary must be suffocated in the cradle!

Therefore, she asked Lucien not to meet her too often, and she would contain herself, too. She also suggested that he jump via the demiplanes when he went to Allyn.

Strolling in the corridor, Lucien encountered many members of the Will of Elements. He greeted them in with a constant smile.

Those sorcerers, however, looked equally weird, which made Lucien rub his face and smell it in confusion. He had taken a hot bath before he left. There shouldn't be any scent of love on him anymore. What could be the problem?

"K, what's the look on your face?" By the time Lucien encountered the tall and frank K, who also had the weird expression, he finally couldn't help but ask.

Since Larry, K's teacher, was on a quest, K had been studying the 'new alchemy' independently for a while and met many problems that he would like to discuss with Lucien. At this moment, he tried to hold back his smile and scratched his head, "Lucien, you are like a man who just had his wedding. You have this foolish smile on your face, and you emit a weird sense of satisfaction. You are also walking unsteadily. Anyone with the preliminary experience can tell what happened."

His meaning between the lines was obvious.

Lucien rubbed his forehead in embarrassment. Did he show his cockiness so patently?

So, he hurried to hide his smile and tried to make himself not look so happy.

After talking to K for a while, Lucien stepped into the Element Paradise. After the change of time and space, he saw a pair of silver-grey eyes before he was adapted to the dizziness.

"Your Excellency Hathaway..." Having just slept with her junior, Lucien couldn't help but feel that she was some sort of 'mother-in-law' standing before him.

Not having any expression, Hathaway said very seriously, "She is a girl that is very serious about love. I hope you are not as a playboy as Oliver."

Grand Arcanist Oliver had always been used as a negative example by the rational ladies.

"Your Excellency Hathaway should know very well my love life in the past years. Commitment is the gentlest but most powerful strength in this world, and that is my attitude towards both magic studies and my love." Faced with his 'mother-in-law', Lucien was naturally both sincere and solemn.

After a brief silence, Hathaway nodded her head slowly, with slight delight on her face as if she was comforted by the fact that Natasha and Lucien were finally together. "I've been watching you. If you were otherwise, I would've stopped you. If you contradict yourself, we will be enemies."

Her words were always concise and sometimes subtly ambiguous.

Lucien secretly wiped his cold sweat. Thankfully, he had always been strict about himself. Except for his illusions, he abode by his principles even when he was alone, or it would've been hard for him to pass the test of his 'mother-in-law'. "I will cherish her, respect, comfort her, and accompany her from this day forward, for better, for worse, for richer, for poorer, in sickness and in health as long as we both shall live."

Under the pressure of his 'mother-in-law', it was hard for Lucien to organize his speech, so he simply modified the wedding vow from Earth.

Hathaway did not pursue any further but nodded, "He who honors his words is a qualified man. I have some questions regarding the new alchemy to discuss with you."

Hu. Finally passed. Lucien took a long breath in his heart. Discussing arcana questions was much easier than facing the interrogation of such an intimidating 'mother-in-law'.

Lucien and Hathaway did not stop the discussion until more than half a day later. Then, Lucien returned to Allyn, planning to ask for the files about the clergy in the Holm parish. The files specified which of them were radicals, which were reactionists, and which were appeasers who wished to live in peace with the Congress of Magic. The list could be given to Natasha for her reference.

It was the beginning of the operation that Lucien had come up during his 'philosophical state', partly based on the British Reformation.

He found the order that Henry VIII issued very agreeable. "Those who do slanderously and maliciously publish and pronounce, by express writing or words, that the king should be heretic, schismatic, tyrant, infidel or usurper of the crown... are guilty of high treason. "

Hardly had he left the magic tower of the Will of Elements when Lucien's monocle became hot. So, he turned on the magic circle.

“Lucien, where were you? Come here. Oliver has some questions that he wants to discuss with you.” The Lord of Storm’s loud voice echoed.

Lucien hurried to explain, “I spent the morning discussing ‘new alchemy’ with Her Excellency Hathaway...”

Fernando, however, had already cut the communication impatiently. He was rather bad-tempered when he was reverse-engineering ‘fission’ and ‘fusion’, and he was not interested in Lucien’s explanation at all.

Turning off the monocle, Lucien raised his eyebrow. Had his master made Oliver accept it? That was rather fast...

...

On the 33rd level of the Allyn magic tower, Lucien walked into Fernando’s library.

Fernando was scribbling when Lucien walked in. Suddenly dazed, he said in a vague smile, “Today is your birthday. Did you date the queen last night? Also, it seems that you’ve been well tasted by ‘Her Majesty’, haven’t you?”

“Huh?” Lucien secretly suspected that his disguise was flawed. How could his teacher tell?

Fernando immediately laughed out aloud. “How inexperienced of you. I was just bluffing. However, I could tell that you had a date with Natasha even without using the prophecy magic.”

“Why?” Asked Lucien, subconsciously.

Fernando chuckled, “I smelled the air of estrus when you were far away. How about it? Do you feel that your life has entered a new phase?”

Lucien was rendered speechless.

“How shocking. I thought that it would take you years before you made any progress, but it actually only took several days. I’m beginning to suspect that you are not my student Lucien!” Fernando ‘mocked’ Lucien, “but I’m completely relieved now. Natasha is now definitely on the Congress’ side. We will try to support you to be the Prince of Nekso. But it will take time. Don’t be hasty. Lucien, what a rarely-seen gem you are. Not only are you capable of arcana studies, but you are also good at sex-traps...”

Fernando was in such a good mood that he sounded more and more absurd as he rambled on, but he seemed more happy about Lucien’s love life than about the Congress’ increasing influence on Holm.

Prince of Nekso was a title for the queen’s husband, originated from the title of the prince who built the Nekso Palace.

“Master, where is His Excellency Oliver?” Lucien hurried to change the topic.

Fernando grew serious when it came to arcana questions. He led Lucien to his demiplane and showed him Oliver, who was wearing a white wig. It must be admitted that he was a handsome, graceful middle-aged man.

“Evans, when Fernando gave me your paper, I found it unacceptable and believed that the view on time and space was ridiculous and wrong. However, after consideration, I realized that this view had germinated in my heart a long time ago, and I never had the guts to boldly take the step forward because of the boundary of the experience and common sense of the past.” Said Oliver in a smile.

Lucien was slightly relieved. It seemed that this guy’s cognitive world was not broken. “I feel relieved that Your Excellency Oliver does not reject it.”

“In fact, when we studied electromagnetism, many sorcerers and I tried to integrate Mr. President’s theory with Brook’s theory, thereby constructing a real arcana system that can be used in every aspect. After all, the sources of all things should have the same nature, which we can call magic, or arcana, or truth, but it can’t be in two different systems.” Oliver spoke of his dream.

It was the common wish of all sorcerers to find a system that could explain everything. They had been pursuing it for thousands of years since the Magic Empire.

“During the integration, we found a lot of problems and conflicts, which were never resolved because we could not let go of our common sense in the past. It was exactly because of those experiences that I found it not difficult to accept your paper. I believe that many other sorcerers are the same, but of course, those who cannot accept it are definitely the majority.”

Lucien nodded his head. He had estimated that the ‘relativistic time’ would be attacked by everyone and did not expect that certain sorcerers had already done remarkable research on the problem. The idea was so disruptive that Oliver and his fellows would certainly not write into papers but would only discuss in private until convincing proofs were found. Therefore, Lucien knew nothing about it earlier.

Oliver changed the topic. “But there are still a lot of problems in your paper. I would like to discuss them with you today.”

“With pleasure.” Lucien sat on the couch next to Oliver. Fernando was ready to join the discussion, too.

Oliver took out his paper and pen. “It’s about relativity and the dilation of time. Consider a simplified experiment. There are two twins. The elder brother flies at a speed close to that of light, whereas the younger brother stays where he is. When his brother reaches a planet that the light can only illuminate with a journey of fifteen years, he returns immediately. Then, which of them will be younger when he meets his brother?”

“From the perspective of the younger brother, he was still, and his brother flew away at a speed close to that of light. According to the formula where high speed equals to slower time, his elder brother obviously should be younger than him.”

“However, from the elder brother’s perspective, according to the principle of relativity, he can regard himself as still, in which case his younger brother had fled away from him at a speed close to that of light. Then, obviously, the younger brother should still be younger.”

“So, it is a paradox.”

Lucien smiled. It was exactly the problem that he expected.

Chapter 522: On the Future

Chapter 522: On the Future

Lucien picked up a quill and drew two lines on the paper. “First of all, I admit that the system of relativity is very imperfect. It cannot explain inertia. It is also limited to the uniform-speed reference system and cannot be extrapolated to the uniform accelerated frame of reference.”

“However, regarding the question that you presented, it is not a paradox in this case. Here are the timelines of the brothers, let’s analyze them respectively. For the elder brother to fly away with a speed close to that of light, he would need an acceleration from stillness to his eventual speed, which is a process that cannot be neglected. If he intends to return, there would be another acceleration process in the opposite direction. It has to overcome inertia and cannot be neglected, either. In the meantime, considering the principles of relativity, the younger brother never overcame inertia...”

While analyzing, Lucien calculated with hypothetical data. The simplest approach was to explain inertia and gravity with the general theory of relativity, but Lucien couldn’t do it just yet. He could only slightly introduce the concept and then calculate the two timelines with his knowledge in calculus to reach a result.

“... Therefore, the elder brother would be younger than the younger brother. To be more exact, his body changes were slowed down...” Lucien concluded.

Oliver rubbed the quill and read Lucien’s calculation carefully. In the end, he nodded, “It was immature of me to have overlooked acceleration and deceleration. However, if his brother does not return but keeps wandering in space, after he reaches a stable speed, which one of them would be younger?”

“It’s a moot question. If the elder brother does not return or meet his younger brother, they would be in two different reference systems and could not be compared, like two people living in two utterly unrelated worlds. They have their own lives, but they do not depend on each other.” Lucien smiled and pointed at the air nearby. “Perhaps, there is such a real material world right next to us. It overlaps our world, but they have absolutely no influence on each other. Chances are that some people are holding a lively ball exactly in this place of that world.”

Fernando did not find anything wrong with Lucien’s explanation. However, he became solemn after hearing the random example that Lucien came up with. “That’s a strange thought. If such a world does exist, our studies on time and space will be only at the beginning phase, because it’s hard to imagine that two overlapping worlds that are both made of materials do not affect each other.”

Lucien hurried to shake his head. “It’s just a random thought. There’s no need to ponder on it. It is not of any theoretical background or actual significance.”

In his carelessness, Lucien proposed part of the content of a certain view on time and space in the spirit library. However, it was just an unproven speculation that was not appreciated by the mainstream.

“Then, we will move on to the next question...” Oliver opened his mouth again.

After extensive communication, since the relativistic effect had been proved by the accelerated particles, Oliver accepted the system for now, but he also reached a consensus with Lucien and Fernando that it was still an imperfect theory. Being that according to the theory, time flows slower on artificial planets than it does on the ground. However, according to actual data, the opposite is true.

“In any case, we have finally made a huge step on this path. I have a feeling that it will be a major reform in the macroscopic field, and we need to direct other arcanists carefully. Hehe. Lucien, you’ve shown remarkable abilities in both microscopic and macroscopic fields. It will be a dilemma for you to choose your legendary class. Other people’s problem is that they can’t find or construct a legendary class that befits their cognitive world, but you are wavering between two choices. How they will envy you!”

Oliver praised him, "I'll submit the matrix of transformation as soon as possible so that it will be published in the next issue of 'Arcana'."

Lucien had been cautious about the problem and explained everything based on experimental results and actual phenomena. After all, it was possible that the relativistic system or the quantum mechanics system suddenly proved unfit for the law of this world.

Soul, spiritual power, space barrier, world feedback, magic models and everything else reminded him that this was a world which seemed the same as Earth but might differ greatly in critical fields.

However, since he could find better approaches to study them, Lucien could only slowly grope forward on his current path.

After ensuring his relationship with Natasha, Lucien had a more detailed plan about his future path. He was planning to adopt a more conservative attitude. After all, he was no longer alone. Which meant that he would focus on quantum mechanics and use relativity only as assistance during the construction of his cognitive world later, and that he was ready to modify the theory of relativity anytime according to quantum mechanics.

At least, according to Lucien, quantum mechanics was the only theory that could explain the differences between the two worlds, including magic, spiritual power and bloodline assimilation, when they had a lot of identical parameters.

Now that he was taking a bet, Lucien preferred quantum mechanics to the general theory of relativity!

Of course, the gravity control and time control that the general theory of relativity brought were something that Lucien could not abandon, either.

"The new alchemy is not perfected yet, and the construction of a legendary class is far away. I haven't thought much of it yet." Lucien speculated that the legendary class should be something like 'Atom Control', which would lower the demands on his studies of 'fission' and 'fusion'. Chances were that 'Atomic Fission' and 'Eternal Blaze' would be the fundamental magics of the class, like ‘Spirit Confinement’ for Demigod-lich and ‘Element Disintegration’ for Hathaway.

Lucien did not say anything else. He suddenly changed the topic. “Your Excellency Oliver, I’m told that you were studying the Dark Dragon Lord. Have you found anything?”

Since Lucien proved himself to be a master of the field after submitting ‘Report on the Changes of the Godhood of Ell’, Oliver did not hide anything but said directly, “I met many problems. The moment the Dark Dragon Lord leaves his alternate dimension and enters the main material world, his godhood will decline. It seems that the power of faith cannot be imposed on him against the space barrier. So, he can only resort to his previous accumulation.”

“But why is the Saint Truth not affected at all? Is this the difference between the Fake Gods and the True God?”

Although he was talking about the True God, Oliver showed no reverence. God for him was just a noun and a target to research on.

Lucien did not understand either. Recording what Oliver said in his note, he bid him farewell, ready to leave ‘Thunder Hell’ and went to apply for the files.

“Evans, wait a moment.” Oliver suddenly stopped Lucien.

Lucien looked at Oliver in confusion. He was not familiar with the guy. What else could they talk about?

Oliver smiled, “I made certain mistakes recently. Therefore, I intended to write an opera as an apology for Florencia. Evans, you are the best musician. I want to cooperate with you. The tunes and melodies of the operas in the past were hardly satisfactory.”

“I’ll try when I have time.” Lucien intended to build up his friendship with Oliver. It was always better to have one more supporter than one more enemy in the Highest Council.

Also, Lucien was also planning to write an opera as a gift for Natasha in the anniversary next year. Although he had the spirit library as his reference, he was hoping to adapt the works on a large scale. After all, it would seem more genuine if the gift that he offered to his love was actually created by himself. He could use Oliver's advice.

Receiving an affirmative answer, Oliver left in satisfaction, promising that he would send the script to Lucien in a few days.

After he left, Fernando scorned, "He will die in the hands of a woman someday. I'm even suspicious that Florencia will give him a critical attack when he is asleep after she is done tolerating him."

"A legendary sorcerer cannot be killed so easily..." Lucien was not worried about Oliver's safety.

Fernando did not say anything else. He turned to Lucien and said, "Don't speak to anybody after your relationship with Natasha. Take it slowly."

Although somebody could've guessed that Natasha celebrated with Lucien for his birthday last night from their traces, it remained obscure how close their relationship was since she left at dawn. Also, Lucien exposed his own traces on purpose, because he could've returned under a transformation mask.

...

In the Affair Committee, Lucien found Thompson.

"You want the files of the clergy of the Holm parish? Since when have you been interested in politics?" Thompson was rather surprised. In his eyes, Lucien was an ascetic sorcerer who was not interested in the outside world at all, as proved by the fact that he did not even have a partner.

Lucien smiled, "We all live in the Kingdom of Holm after all. If we want to run experiments in peace, we cannot ignore politics. Thompson, I believe I have the clearance, right?"

"Of course you do. Your clearance are only second to the members of the Highest Council now." Thompson asked his subordinates to find the files and gave them to Lucien. "You can't take them away or copy them but can read them here."

Lucien browsed through them and focused on the people who were willing to get in touch with sorcerers, recording the names on his spirit library.

“... Cardinal Richard, level eight, spoke that God loves people and cares about what they do but not who they are in his public sermon...”

Rubbing the name with his thumb, Lucien had a target.

...

In the Nekso Palace, Natasha met the nobles large and small according to the previous routine.

Although a brief conversation was not enough for her to grasp what everybody was thinking, it was something worth doing because it could deepen her impression on the nobles and their reverence for the crown deep in their hearts.

“Your Majesty, I have a summer resort in the suburbs. Would you honor us by your presence?” Duke James changed his previous rejective attitude and said to Natasha rather flatteringly.

Natasha smiled, “I will visit it if I have time.”

As she expected, after her birthday celebration for Lucien was discovered by them, the liberals suddenly became much more enthusiastic and supportive of her.

After the baldy James bid farewell respectfully with a smile, Natasha finally asked Camil who just entered the hall. “Aunt Camil, what’s the reaction of the Church?”

The Holm parish’s reaction would be Sard’s reaction!

Chapter 523: Protection

Chapter 523: Protection

Camil had never agreed with Natasha and Lucien's test for Sard. She believed that it was too hasty and best be postponed until Natasha had a bunch of loyal supporters because it might infuriate the Church. However, she barely objected to Natasha's decisions after they were made, and she tried to cover the traces after they had determined their relationship.

At this moment, her solemn and rigid face looked somewhat strange. "A secret letter was delivered from the Radiance Church, reminding you that you should know your boundaries when you appease the nobles who are in favor of the Congress of Magic, and that you should not go to the royal magic tower of Holm too often, which would disappoint the devout and loyal nobles."

"Just that?" Natasha raised her eyebrow. It was a reasonable reaction, but the problem was that it was too reasonable. There was no telling what was on Sard's mind at all.

She, too, felt that Lucien's proposal was a bit risky, but she understood that the situation could not be changed if she did not overstep the boundary. Under the threat of the Congress of Magic and the Church, all the nobles would sit on the fence first before leaning to any side. The current situation was like a pool of dead water. She could not achieve a satisfactory result without churning it first.

Keeping the strange look, Camil continued, "Also, it encourages you to instigate Lucien Evans to repent, whatever it takes. As long as Lucien Evans betrays the Congress of Magic, and joins the inquisition and becomes a leader of the night watchers, it will be the greatest contribution. The Church will give you full support."

A grand-arcanist-to-be, and a talented sorcerer regarded as the future of the Congress of Magic, seemed to be in love with a certain pious believer. Such encouragement was more a reaction that the Church would take.

“The reaction is a little weird.” Natasha paced back and forth, not knowing what Sard meant exactly. Did he really believe in her devotion and think that she could seduce Lucien over, or was he just covering the incident with a random excuse?

“It’s hard to guess what an old fox is thinking...” Natasha raised her left hand and touched the communication earring subconsciously, hoping to discuss with Lucien. But then she realized that Lucien should’ve returned to Allyn. Therefore, she hurried to stop in case the purpose of the test was exposed.

When her long, vigorous fingers accidentally touched her earlobe, Natasha suddenly recalled how Lucien cared for it. Her lips immediately curled into a smile, and her eyes became gentle, too.

Camil turned around at the window, as if she found such an expression unsuitable to look at. It was not until Natasha was back to herself a few seconds later that she continued, “There’s something wrong with Sard’s reaction, but it is still reasonable. I suggest you stop testing him in such a way in case you cause a fire. Sometimes, you just need to wait for changes to happen.”

“Aunt Camil, I understand. The most important thing right now is to improve my strength and to control the Sword of Truth as soon as possible.” Natasha said calmly, not making any radical judgment because of ecstasy.

After Camil shut the gate of the palace, Natasha stood behind the desk and picked up the quill. Taking a deep breath, she began writing: “Protection, sympathy, justice, kindness, bravery...”

The words that represented chivalry flowed from her pen, fluent and magnificent at first but dim and obscure later, as if they were interrogating her own heart, faith and path.

After a long time, the only words below Natasha’s pen was ‘protection’ and ‘bravery’. Also, the strokes became clear and emitted firmness.

In such a way, Natasha sorted through her experiences so far, her recent confusion, the dawn she saw after she made up her mind, and the ideas that Lucien imbued with her, gradually locating the source of her chivalry and her faith, which was the love for her family and subjects and the bravery against enemies and schemes.

“Perhaps, this is the Lord in my heart.”

Natasha dropped the quill. Looking at the words on the paper, she had a strong sense of relief, as if the dust on her heart had been wiped off. While her confusion and hesitation in the past hadn't been completely eliminated, she believed that she could definitely walk out of the swamp as time went by.

That would be the moment when she advanced into level eight and drew the Sword of Truth.

When that day came, she would not need to activate the defense in the Nekso Palace, or cover herself with Lucien's 'Congus Ring' next to her, when she intended to test Sard's reaction.

Warming up her body, Natasha suddenly had the desire of fighting that she hadn't felt for a long time. Therefore, she grabbed 'Pale Justice', opened the gate of the palace, and went to the 'Knight's Corridor' that had been intensified specifically, eager to unleash her delight by exhausting herself.

.....

Inside Duke of Frenburg's residence...

The conservatives, who have waited for a long time, also rose when Rex finally walked in. They asked, "What's the Church's attitude regarding the incident last night?"

Rex sat straight and frowned, "His Excellency Saint Sard reminded Her Majesty that she should not visit the royal magic tower of Holm too often, and that she should have boundaries when she appeases the nobles who are inclined to the Congress of Magic."

"Only a reminder?" Count Barady observed in disappointment.

Rex snapped his crimson coat. “The queen is also encouraged to allure Lucien to betray the Congress of Magic.”

“Isn’t it feeding a goat to a tiger?” Duke York said angrily.

In his eyes, Lucien would grow into a grand arcanist and a legendary sorcerer sooner or later, finding his way into the Highest Council. Even though Douglas would be the president for a long time due to the longevity of sorcerers, it would still be much better than betraying and joining the night watchers.

It was not the War of Dawn where sorcerers could barely keep themselves safe. The current arcana system was not esoteric for him, either. Queen Natasha would only be seduced by him if she were to seduce him. It would be best to ask them to draw the lines.

Could they only use radical methods when the queen was already enchanted?

Duke Rex shook his head. “His Excellency Saint Sard was worried that radical methods would anger the queen and make her lean towards the nobles who favor the Congress of Magic.”

Duke of York was a grand knight in his thirties. Not as patient as the older men, he couldn’t help but stand up and pace anxiously. “Are we going to let things run their course? The queen’s tendency is apparent now. It is balanced but more inclined to the Congress of Magic. Many nobles on our side are not firm. They are used to following the crown and their lords. It is estimable that more nobles will be working with James, Russell, Henson and the rest of them. Our comparison will be reversed in a year. We have to make preparations.”

Duke Rex stared at Duke York. “What preparations?”

Looking around at the five dukes, three marquises and five counts in the room, Duke York said subtly, “We will make preparations like what you did when the late king was summoned by the Lord, president.”

His family was Kritonia’s family. That was why he spoke to Rex so boldly.

Rex changed his face. “York, I didn’t do anything. I only accepted His Majesty’s request to make Holm stronger. Did you hear any rumors?”

Duke Solefen coughed and interrupted Duke York. “York, do you want to divide the country? Do you want every noble in your territory to covet it? Order is the foundation for nobles, or we would’ve been separated and swallowed. We will only approach doom if we are too radical.”

He raised his hands to stop other nobles from interrupting and went on, “I believe that the current circumstances are tolerable. Although the queen is likely to be biased towards the Congress of Magic due to Hathaway and Lucien Evans, her other decisions obviously show that she will not abandon us. She needs balance and stability, which are what I want to see, too, instead of a ruined Holm.”

“Anyone who attempts to sabotage the stability of the kingdom will be the Solefen family’s enemy.”

He spoke bluntly without the rhetoric of nobles, but it was based on the fact that his father was the other legendary knight of the kingdom. Other people couldn’t copy him.

“This is my opinion. I’ll be on my way if that’s all.” Clearing his black cape, Duke Solefen rose and left, followed by two dukes, two marquises and three counts.

Duke York watched Solefen leave. In the end, he snorted, “Balance and stability. It seems that he has heard ‘Arcana Voice’ and ‘News of the World’ a lot.”

The phrases began to spread from those channels.

Duke Barsaton looked at Duke York weirdly. How did you know their origin if you hadn’t listened to it?

Then, he coughed and said, “As far as I know, the Solefen family has established alchemical workshops with sorcerers in private, earning abundant revenue from magic lamps, magic radios and telegrams. Also, they have vast lands in the alternate dimensions. The introduction of fertilizer has increased their family wealth because of the improved yield of the lands.”

He was insinuating that, while most people in the Solefen family were firm believers, they were actually happy to see the ‘balance’ and ‘stability’.

Duke York opened his hands. “Therefore, we need to make preparations.”

Duke Rex and the rest of them looked rather gloomy. After deep thought, Count Barady said, “Maybe we don’t need to do anything. Somebody has always been discontented...”

.....

At night, the wind started to blow on Rentato, driving away the heat of the day.

Lucien, who had transformed, walked with Alferris, who was in the appearance of a little boy, was going to the ‘Salvation Church’ in the east district of the city.

“You will let me enter Richard’s dream later with Dream Casting.” Lucien said to Alferris.

Although he was capable of the sixth-circle magic, Alferris was one of the best experts in terms of illusions and dreams below the legendary level. It would be a better option.

According to the files, Richard was a renowned cardinal in the Holm parish. He was a native of the country and grew up in the Rentato abbey. He had never been away from the place during the hundred years when he turned from an intern priest into a level-eight cardinal. Many priests and bishops in the parish were taught and raised by him. However, because he was too gentle, and his interpretation about the Cannon was different from that of the Church, he was kicked away from the central circle of the Holm parish after the public sermon. He was a target that was worth getting in touch with.

Before, Lucien planned to ask the Affair Committee to send somebody to test and persuade him, and after the guy's ideas were figured out, he would be referred to Natasha for final observation. However, the files showed that the Affair Committee had sent a lot of sorcerers and liberals to persuade him, but to no avail. The Congress of Magic was certainly not so idiotic that they never thought of getting in touch with the appeasers before Lucien proposed.

Therefore, Lucien decided to meet Richard in person and get a comprehensive understanding about his opinions. But in the future, such things should be entrusted to the trustworthy sorcerers in the Affair Committee, because the most important thing for him was still to increase his strength.

Alferris licked the ice cream that Lucien specifically made for him and asked, "No problem. You can do whatever you want in the dream."

As a crystal dragon, he hated heat.

After they reached the Salvation Church, Lucien and Alferris found a corner to hide in, and Alferris cast the spell remotely. Now was the time of evening prayer in the church. The complete defense circle was not activated yet.

.....

After the prayer, Richard was going to return to his house, but he ran into a young man in a black cloak when he just went out of the church.

Narrowing his eyes, Richard smiled, his white eyebrow shivered. "A dream? Who are you? Do you want to persuade me?"

Lucien thought for a moment and said, "I would like to discuss justification by faith with you, Your Highness."

Richard was stunned.

Many sorcerers and nobles had talked with him before, but none of them had ever discussed doctrines with him.

Chapter 524: Questions

Chapter 524: Questions

“I heard that you said god’s love towards the mundane shows no preference. No matter if he’s an ordinary folk, a sorcerer, or even a vampire, as long as he follows the Cannon, as long as he behaves himself, he is regarded as a loyal believer, and he can be saved.” said Lucien calmly, like he was a scholar here for a theology discussion.

Lucien did not strictly follow the theological doctrine, justification by faith alone, as the Saint Truth was still different from the religion on the Earth. If Lucien just copied everything and used them here, it would be a big joke in Richard’s eyes.

Therefore, Lucien further developed the content and meaning of justification by faith alone, and gave it a more comprehensive religious context.

Hearing Lucien’s question, Richard gradually realized this young man’s intention. He assumed that the young man was a sorcerer or a demon here to tempt and persuade him. So he smiled and said, “So the honest have no fear, he will live in the hollow realm; the kind have no fear, he will ascend Mountain Paradise; the just have no fear, he will be blessed...”

What Richard just said came from Cannon, and he said, “If a sorcerer or a vampire, like you said, can serve the Lord with their whole heart and soul, can strictly stick to their belief, he is righteous and will be saved. The night watchers are those who have been saved. But what the rest of the sorcerers and dark creatures are doing goes exactly the opposite way.”

“So Cardinal Richard, I understand you’re talking about those ancient sorcerers. They killed masses. They were crazy. They are everything but righteous. They shouldn’t be saved, yes. But what about the sorcerers today? Most of them obey laws. They behave themselves, control themselves. Their ways of living comply with the instruction of Cannon.” Lucien smiled.

Richard knew that the young man was talking about those arcanists who were fully devoted to their experiments, so he said seriously, “They are blasphemers. They are full of lies when they are with the true followers.”

“You mean studying things in the world is regarded as blasphemy?” Lucien pointed at the sky, “Is there a line in Cannon saying that the world should not be explored? Did Lord ever tell the mundane that they shall never approach his realm?”

Richard indeed recalled, and he realized that the young man was not talking nonsense. There were warnings for those false believers, the evil, the bloodthirsty, but nothing strictly prevented the exploration of the world.

Lucien was well aware of what was in Cannon and what was not as he saw Francis transcribing the doctrines multiple times, and there were also books in his spirit library for reference. When Cannon was put together, it was many years before the congress was established. At that time, Douglas was probably still a middle-rank sorcerer, and there was no such thing as world exploration.

Therefore, in the Cannon, only bloody human body experiments were strictly forbidden, but most arcanists were not from the school of Necromancy.

After several minutes of silence, Richard said, “The mundane shall stay away. The mundane shall bow. That means human beings should not approach the realm of God.”

Lucien was, for a moment, a bit speechless. Those priests could always get what they want from a doctrine by reading into it from different perspectives.

Fortunately, Richard added, “Also, in the Doctrines, it says that the mundane shall never step into the forbidden area of God.”

That was the exact topic that Lucien wanted. He hurriedly said, “The Doctrines? But it isn’t for God, but from the popes and some priests. Is it authoritative?”

Richard slightly frowned, “The Pope is the only speaker of God on the land. His words are words from Lord.”

“But the North Church don’t think so.” said Lucien. He was very grateful that there was the great division in the Saint Truth, or he would never have the weapon to bombard the doctrines in front of Richard, a true theology expert. Also, Lucien wasn’t here for a real discussion, but to guide Richard to figure it out his own thoughts, which was the psychological guidance part in Lucien’s illusion!

When it came to criticize and denounce the North Church, Richard could go on and on. These words made Lucien’s head extremely heavy, but all Lucien was waiting for was one specific sentence.

“... All the lambs shall receive baptism where the shepherds pray for them. Under the shepherd’s guidance and help, they can be saved. The leader of the shepherds speaks my will.” said Richard. The lines which set up the statues of a pope were more than familiar to him.

light flashed through Lucien’s eyes and he instantly cut off Richard, “So justification by faith alone is not possible. No matter how devoted we are, no matter how we behave ourselves according to Cannon, the salvation has to depend on the priests and the pope, right? ”

That was a question that had been bothering Richard for years. This was his first time facing the question thrown at him by someone else. Richard was, for a moment, completely speechless.

“God has love for everyone, but more for shepherds, right? God has love for everyone, but is unwilling to directly connect to an individual’s heart, right? When a man prays, the praying will work better in a church than in his own bedroom, right? A priest can only get divine power when the pope nods, right?” Lucien seized the chance and threw at Richard a series of questions.

Richard tried to say something, but he knew that many priests got their divine power simply when they were reading Cannon or praying, without any extra guidance, so he remained silent.

Lucien raised his voice,

“If the pope is indeed the only speaker of God, why does he keep misreading Cannon? Why has he made so many changes to the Doctrines?”

“If God does not allow human beings to explore the world, why did the pope rewrite the doctrines and rebuild divine spells according to the arcanists’ findings?”

That was the very reason why Richard’s thinking had been messed up in the past twenty to thirty years. He did not know what to say.

“Therefore, I think, the Church, the pope... They are in fact standing between the followers and their Lord, because of their own desires for power. No matter if an individual has divine power or not, all the mundane should be equal in front of Lord, and those who betray the Cannon, including them, will be thrown into hell for what they’ve done.”

“Those who demand and acclaim sophisticated church rituals and those who say that the Church must be served are the fake believers. They are preventing God from loving everyone of us.”

“And those who keep changing the doctrines based on their will must be demons that are hiding!”

Before Richard could say anything, Lucien kept throwing the words at him, leaving Richard no chance to dispute.

“We should make those get out of the way who keep talking about faith and belief but are in fact blaspheming God’s will.”

“Say farewell to those monopolists who are sucking in power and wealth from common people’s pure faith!”

“Between Lord and followers, there should be no barriers made by any. There should only be faith, and the faithful demeanour!”

Richard stared at Lucien. This young man had spoken out all the things that he had been thinking to himself but dared not say, and in a more detailed, more structured, and more radical way!

Lucien stopped here. He was waiting for Richard's response.

After a long time, Richard finally put on a bitter smile and said, "The power of the priests should be regulated. Lord gave them divine power to make them protect followers, not to make them rule."

Lucien grinned.

...

When the mist cleared, Richard opened his eyes. He realized that he was still praying in front of the cross.

He sighed, "Fallen Morning Star... He deserves the title."

Outside of the church, Alferris said in surprise with its two big amber-colored eyes open wide, "That's it, Lucien? Countless have failed persuading him!"

"I did not persuade him; He persuaded himself. If there was no root, my language trap would never do him in. He's a theologian, but I'm not," said Lucien calmly, "I was just giving him an idea, and the fact that he agreed with it was the most important part."

Alferris gave Lucien's theory a very general conclusion, "Anyways, you're smart!"

"I'm just good at mental guidance and know something about theology. In other words, among those who are good at illusions, I am the one who knows theology the best; and among those theologians, I'm best at mental suggestion." Lucien grinned.

Also, he had a whole spirit library in his soul.

Lucien felt a bit more relaxed now. If everything went well with Richard, he should be able to bring him to Natasha later. However, when he was about to leave with Alferris, he sensed a dangerous power approaching.

Someone was coming.

Chapter 525: Assassination

Chapter 525: Assassination

The sense only lasted less than a second, like it was just a false hint. But the ring, Congus Ring, that Lucien was wearing was reminding him that it wasn't just an illusion.

“Lucien...” Alferris tried to talk to Lucien, but was stopped by him. Its big amber-colored eyes looked confused.

Who is it? What was the person doing here this late at night, near the small church located in the civilian zone of the city?

But the dangerous power never came back again. So Lucien said to Alferris using secret messaging, which would only produce tiny magic waves, “Someone was nearby, at least senior-rank. Now it seems that the person has gone into the Salvation Church. We gotta wait here for a bit longer to make sure Richard’s safe.”

Alferris all of sudden got excited. An enemy meant a fight; fight meant victory; and victory meant trophy!

Lifting its claw, Alferris wiped off its drool.

.....

Standing in front of the cross, Richard reflected on the conversation he just had with the young man. All the messy thoughts that had been bothering him had now become more organized and consistent, which helped him reform his heart full of faith.

At this moment, he felt great peace. He prayed silently, “My Lord, if you think I’m twisting Cannon, please let the divine light devour me, because I deserve it.”

In the course of time, Richard started to be covered in a layer of divine light, like he was a saint that got blessed by God. He opened his eyes and looked up again at the cross, and then he said in a deep voice, “You are one, and everyone. You are the moment, and forever... I think I understand why the Church should exist. The existence of the Church should protect faith, not interrupt it. Everyone is entitled to get enlightenment from Cannon, as long as they are devoted."

Richard had never felt more relieved than right now. His heart was full of joy and faith, thudding a bit faster in excitement. He even felt that now he was able to reach level nine although the progress had been rather sluggish for the past decades.

"It's all your blessing. Only truth lives forever." Richard crossed his chest.

In Lucien's eyes, Richard would have already stepped in level nine for a long time if it had not been because of his own confusion and struggling. His true faith and the deep understanding in theology would even bring him to the next level – a saint cardinal, legendary level.

Richard stood up. After all of the priests had left the hall, he headed for the garden. Breathing in the fresh air mixing with the flower aroma, he carefully thought about the reform that he was going to propose and felt truly blessed by his Lord.

No matter how difficult the reform would be, no matter who was going to step out and stop him, Richard was determined to carry it out.

At this time, he sensed someone walking to him.

It was someone with a red robe, wearing a biretta.

"Octave?" Richard recognized him.

Octave once listened to him preaching in Rentato, and he was the previous red robe in charge of the Holm Inquisition.

Octave was a serious-looking, middle-aged man, whose black brows were thick and light blue eyes sharp. He smiled and said, "You must have heard what's been going on recently. I'm a bit confused, so I wonder if I can talk to you."

“You have resentment in heart, so you are closing your eyes?” asked Richard using the lines in Cannon.

The look on his face and his voice was calm and soothing.

Octave crossed before he answered, “Yes, I’m afraid resentment will take charge of me and eventually make me forget my true intention – to serve the Lord. But sir Richard, should we just let the evil free and keep telling ourselves to hold ourselves back because of all the reasons? Isn’t this betrayal to Lord’s message?”

Then Octave cited the Cannon, “... because of faith, he showed no fear facing demons and flame. He threw himself into the crowd of the most dangerous enemies, and there was no retreat...”

He asked himself the question, and also the Church.

Richard shook his head, “What is evil? Why was the killed nobleman evil?”

“He listened to Arcana Voice; He worked with those sorcerers to make money.” Octave raised his voice.

Richard pointed at the Cannon in his hand, “Lord only told us not to be greedy, not to lie, not to indulge, not to disregard lives. Which one did he fail?”

“He lied.” answered Octave.

Richard smiled, “Those who lie will not ascend to Mountain Paradise, but linger on the land and be punished by lightning and flame. The Cannon never says that those who lie deserve death punishment.”

“He worked with a sorcerer! He listened to Arcana Voice!” Octave did not know what else to say.

Richard said peacefully, “As long as the sorcerer is not evil judged by the Cannon. There’s no such thing in the Cannon saying that he was not allowed to work with a sorcerer.”

“How can a sorcerer not be evil? The Doctrines says...” Octave cited the lines.

Richard just smiled, until Octave's voice gradually lowered his voice.

"Since you're willing to follow the Doctrines, I'd assume that you respect the Church's decision. Why are you angry?"

Octave's face lit up with this new perspective, "I see. I'm not against the Church, not the Doctrines, but the pope and the leading priests who stand high above in divinity but keep misinterpreting the Lord's words. They have strayed away, thus they're no longer capable of delivering the correct messages! Sir Richard, I know that you've been against the revision of the Doctrines. Please step out and awaken the rest of them! We have to propose to resume the original Doctrines."

"What if the pope says 'no'?" asked Richard. He had just been through lobbying, and therefore he immediately noticed the indication in Octave's words.

"If he says no, then we will choose a new one! I believe that many grand cardinals share the same opinion!" said Octave excitedly, "In my mind, sir, you're an ideal candidate!"

"This Isn't what we want. The correct way to do it is to let every devoted follower to interpret the Canon. That's justification by faith!" Richard shook his head.

Octave was a bit surprised. He did not expect that Richard's belief was even more radical than his.

Octave kept trying to persuade Richard, but Richard would not listen. Richard had made up his mind to stick to his reform.

In the end, Octave said in frustration, "Then I should leave you alone now, sir. I hope that one day you'll agree with us, and we always expect you to be one of us."

Us? Richard slightly frowned, but he did not ask.

After Octave had left, Richard went back to improve his reform proposal.

Meanwhile, at the end of the corridor, Octave suddenly stopped walking. There was a creepy smile on his face, and in his hand, there was a brown scroll which contained formidable power.

It was always much easier to use a dead person because his mouth was forever shut.

A Richard who got killed by a sorcerer was more of a trigger than a Richard who was alive!

The moment after Octave tore the scroll, the formidable power rushed out. Instantly, the grey color climbed onto Richard's body and infected the entire space within a certain radius.

Everything in the area had stopped moving under the power of the ninth circle spell, Time Stop.

Then Octave tore open another black scroll. The surging magic power targeted directly at Richard and removed all the defensive divine spells that Richard had, and the power could also by chance damage the items that Richard was wearing.

The ninth circle spell, Cracking (Advanced)!

However, when Octave took out the last scroll, Orb of Ultimate Destruction, a figure suddenly appeared in front of him.

The figure pointed at him, and then all of the divine items he was wearing instantly broke into pieces, including the red robe, and part of his body!

Octave was totally unprepared. He had lost the ability to take any actions either physically or mentally.

With New Alchemy, Lucien's spell, Elemental Order, had now had even stronger power, close to the ninth circle.

Although the divine circles had covered most of the magic waves from the spell, since Lucien was so close to it, he still sensed it and was now here to save Richard's life. To avoid being noticed by the legendaries in Rentato, Lucien did not choose to use Congus Ring.

In Lucien's eyes, what Octave just did was such a waste. Senior-rank scrolls were even more scarce than senior-rank items, since they could only be used once and the materials were rather difficult to find.

In other words, basically, Octave was trying to kill Richard using a great sum of money.

Lucien pointed at Octave again. He was going to lower Octave's magic resistance and then take him back using Petrification for further questioning.

At this time, someone suddenly jumped out from the darkness and his sword directly hacked at Lucien's neck!

Octave was not alone. There was another radiant knight, possessing the bloodline of Elimination!

He knew Lucien, and Lucien knew him, too. The radiant knight was the previous night watch leader from Aalto Inquisition, Lend!

Now Lend was already a level six radiant knight, and somehow he recognized Lucien. Driven by the exhilaration and anger, Lend could not hold himself back anymore.

Because of his bloodline, Elimination, Lucien defensive spells would be removed!

The edge of the sword cut in Lucien's body, but the body turned into foam. With a creepy smile, Lucien disappeared gradually.

Illusion! Lend's heart sank. He hurriedly wielded his sword for defence.

However, at this time, a giant creature showed up behind him. It's big, amber-colored eyes looked at Lend attentively. And then its mouth opened, and the freezing and numbing dragon breath came out.

Under the great pressure from the most powerful creature, Lend's mind blanked for a moment.

Meanwhile, Lucien appeared again beside Octave. And he directly jumped onto the level eight red robe.

Octave realized that Lucien had cast Baler's Transformation. He scoffed in his mind – A sorcerer turning himself into a radiant knight, how stupid was that?

So he laid a divine defensive circle in front of him against Lucien's attack. As long as he could get out of the place later, he could report to the Church that Richard was in collusion with the Fallen Angel!

However, to Octave's great surprise, Lucien's left hand had directly broken through the divine circle. The fist was covered with a layer of moonlight, and a mix of colors black, white and grey.

Octave wondered what it was.

He wondered if he was just in a dream.

Lucien's left fist went right into the side of Octave's face. Instantly, blood burst out and his teeth fell out.

Octave passed out.

Lucien controlled his power, or he would have punched Octave's brain out

Chapter 526: The Great Prophe

Chapter 526: The Great Prophet

Like a shattered kite in the air, Octave's body was fiercely punched backward by Lucien. Blood spurted out of his mouth, and he had totally lost his consciousness.

Suddenly, the look on his face distorted, and from his body, beams of light burst out. The light was shaped into four pairs of white wings behind his back.

Octave's light blue eyes slowly opened, but now they had become colorless. Looking down upon Lucien, the eyes were sheer cold.

"Angels on the Ground?" Lucien murmured.

Octave heard Lucien's exclamation and said triumphantly, "We're the righteous blessed by God, apostles who take Lord's true will. Of course, we have the power of angels. And you, you filthy Fallen Morning Star, should be cleansed by us!"

Octave said his words quickly. The lines came from the Cannon, and the language was from heaven.

However, Octave's mind was rather clear under the angel's power, and he knew that the power would not last long. Also, if the fight between them went on, the Radiance Church, Holm Royal Magic Tower, Nekso Palace could notice the chaos here at any time. Therefore, he flapped his wings, from where scattered light came out. The light spots then joined together, turning into a magnificent lightwave that rushed at Lucien with significant momentum.

Lucien, who was now with radiant knight power, was caught up in fighting against the light wave. Even the power in his left hand could not help him get out of trouble. Seeing that, Octave scoffed, and then, without hesitation, he reached Lend after a flash and grabbed him. Lend was already out of consciousness because of the crystal dragon's breath. Octave's four pairs of wings blocked the dragon's claws, and then Octave forced his way out of Salvation

Church.

The wings closed, the light disappeared. Octave took Lend with him and both of them vanished into the darkness.

He knew that Lucien and his pet couldn't be chasing after them. Given that he was one of the biggest enemies to Sard, Stone, and the leading night watchers, Lucien had to leave the site as quickly as he could.

Octave cast a series of divine spells to remove the trace he left, and after Lend recovered, he made it twice as secure by asking Lend to use his blood power, Elimination, to cover their whereabouts. Then he finally headed for his real destination.

The night had quieted down because the fight stopped just in time. Those who possessed formidable power in the city were left in peace.

"I didn't expect him... Lucien Evans..." said Lend word by word in extremely bitter hatred. He hated himself for not being powerful enough to kill this cunning demon himself.

Octave sneered, "It was a sneak attack, or we wouldn't have been so passive. But his left hand is weird. The power in it is like your blood power, but even better in nature. It felt... It felt like his power had a much higher rank."

"Higher rank? Was Lucien Evans once the archangel, Fallen Morning Star, God's Left Wing?" said Lend out of astonishment. Although Lucien's titles were familiar to many night watchers, they never believed that it was true. They believed that it was the Pope's explanation to eliminate the negative influence.

Octave was afraid of the power in that left hand. He remained silent, as he didn't know the answer either.

In silence, they kept moving ahead. After a while, Octave said in a low voice, "We can ask the great prophet. He's the Angel King who carries the true will of the Lord. His mission is to defeat the corrupt pope, so he should know Lucien's secrets. In the future, we'll be able to be more prepared.”

Lend slightly nodded, “We’ll also have to confess to the great prophet since we failed our mission. Richard hasn’t been on our side yet, and we also failed to kill him and cast the blame on a sorcerer. By the way, Cardinal Octave, I don’t remember you being this talkative. You know, you didn’t have to say that out loud...”

Octave did not have to say it – the part that mentioned killing the pope. Octave and Lend both knew about it since they were the core members of the secret group.

Octave touched his face. Although all the wounds had healed, he still remembered the unbearable pain he just went through. He said in a bitter emotion, “I got punched on my head. Yes, I talked too much. I feel that I’m still not able to fully control my body and my mind.”

Lend nodded as he understood. Without saying anything further, he and Octave arrived at a small, shabby church.

Although the place looked shabby, the inside decoration was stunning. Its exquisiteness and luxury was a sharp contrast to its outside appearance.

Octave and Lend were very used to it. They quickly walked through the praying hall, heading for the confession room.

“You two are back.” said a young man with sharp facial features who was walking towards them. He was in his early thirties, but was already wearing the red robe.

Octave slightly nodded, “Arthur, we failed.”

The young man was the most promising red robe valued by the great prophet, and also the most talented priest in Holm Parish in the past fifty years. Before thirty-five, he had already become a level nine red robe. The man named Arthur was regarded as one of the most competitive candidates for the saint cardinal position. However, due to his radicalism, he was always excluded from the central power of Holm Parish.

Arthur's eyes slightly squinted considering that he wasn't expecting this answer, "Failed? With three level nine scrolls?"

"We were close, but then we ran into Lucien Evans. I believe that he was there to persuade Richard." said Octave. He did not mention anything about Lucien's left hand to Arthur, as he thought to himself that this should be a secret only accessible to the great prophet.

"He was hiding, so we were not prepared. He even had a dragon! We managed to run away using Angels on the Ground." Octave added.

Arthur's brown eyes lit up for a moment. He then thought to himself and said, "This is our chance. We will keep it a secret for now. Not telling anyone else that Lucien Evans is contacting Richard might be of benefit to our future plans. If we have no solid evidence, because of Richard's prestige, we'd probably be in trouble."

Lend said calmly, "I know what you mean, Arthur, but the decision should be left to the great prophet."

Arthur did not say anything but directly left for the abbey in Rentato.

Octave and Lend continued to walk along the corridor and then they were surprised to find that they had run into seven to eight red robes on their way, which meant that most of the senior-ranks in the secret groups were all here today, and they were all extreme radicals, consisting one fourth of the entire Holm Parish.

"What's going on here?" Octave asked Lend.

Lend had no idea, although he joined the group prior than Octave, "Maybe there's some emergency. We'll know very soon."

They knocked on the door of the confession room. The gentle but clear voice came, "Octave and Lend? Come on in."

Pushing open the door, Octave and Lend walked in. They bowed to the great prophet who had just finished his confession.

Space was limited here. The candle in the room was not capable of lighting up the entire room. Shadows stretching on the ground, the place seemed a bit intimidating.

The great prophet was standing in the darkness, his face was hidden, but his deep eyes had the power to attract anyone's attention, as if they could suck in one's soul.

Octave saw that there was a book in the great prophet's hand, but he could not see the name of the book clearly.

"You failed?" The prophet asked calmly and gently.

"Yes." Octave and Lend lowered their heads deep, and they recounted what happened in detail.

"This isn't your fault. I made a mistake. I did not ask for God's implication before sending you two there." said the prophet sorrowfully, as if it was him who failed the mission.

"But, it has proved the fact that we're on the correct path. If we take actions too late, the priests will fall into the vicious sorcerers' traps one by one! The pope and some of the grand cardinals are in fact helping the evilness!" the great prophet raised his voice.

"You're the great prophet; you lead us to confront the evilness," both Octave and Lend crossed, "only truth lives forever!"

"What do you two think of the Grand Cardinal Sard? Do you think he might join us?" asked the great prophet.

Octave and Lend both looked up at the great prophet in confusion. Why would the prophet be asking this question?

At this time, finally, Octave was able to see the name of the book:

The Interpretation of Dreams.

"The great prophet, why are you reading this strange book?" Octave could not help asking.

At this time, the great prophet's face started twisting and divine light burst out from his body. The white, light wings stretched out and filled the entire space. Behind the wings there was the bright sky. Suddenly they were up in the air, not in the confession room anymore!

The dignity and divinity made them have the urge to kneel down.

“Six-wing Seraphim... No, wait, this isn’t right...”

Octave stared at the gorgeous-looking angel standing in front of him in astonishment, but somehow the face was quite familiar to him, as if he had just seen it.

Then the beautiful face put on a creepy smile. The answer struck Octave,

“Lucien Evans!”

The surroundings had all disappeared. Octave opened his eyes. Richard, the crystal dragon, and Lucien Evans were staring at him.

What was it? Was it a dream?

Seeing Octave panicking, Lucien grinned,

“The ones you saw in your dream came from your consciousness. I’ve got a rough idea about who the members are.”

“The place looked shabby, but inside it was luxurious and grand enough to be compared to the Bright Hall, which indicates that in your belief, you’re doing something righteous, even though it requires you to hide in the darkness and your hands will be covered in blood. You look upon heaven, however, you’re in hell...”

“You couldn’t see the face of the great prophet. This means that when you talked to him, the great prophet hid his face...”

“The confession room was narrow, dark, and intimidating. This shows that when you first came to the great prophet, you were in the darkest period of your life. Assumably, that confession room was the very one that you were in...”

“At the end, there were light wings. He once showed his great power in front of you, and that was perhaps where you got your power from, Angels on the Ground...”

Lucien’s tone was dull, but Octave’s face was getting pale.

In Octave’s eyes, Lucien was blocking part of the light from the window of the Salvation Church, making it look as if he actually had the six pairs of light wings.

Chapter 527: "Angel King"

Octave opened his mouth and was about to speak, when gentle, holy light suddenly illuminated inside his body, swallowing both his body and his soul.

After the light disappeared in spots, all the traces that suggested Octave's previous existence were gone, just like what had happened to Lend, captain of the night watchers.

"What is this?" Richard frowned, unable to stop Octave's death.

His hands inside the pockets of his long cloak, Lucien said gravely, "For them, 'Angels on the Ground' is not just a 'grace' that can increase their strength for a short while, but also an incurable 'poison' at critical moments. It should be a precaution in case they are captured and confess their secrets."

After knocking out Octave in one punch, Lucien did not feel anything yet, but the battle where Alferris teased with Lend on the other hand had great changes. Suddenly receiving the enhancement from 'Angels on the Ground', Lend had the overwhelming advantage. If Lucien hadn't finished his battle so quickly and offered help in time, Lend would've probably escaped. Even though the man failed to do so, Lucien could only watch him be swallowed by the power of angels without being able to do anything.

It was for that reason that Lucien did not try to move or wake up Octave, so that the guy could be brought back to Allyn for interrogation, but obtained his intelligence directly via Dream Casting while the power of angels was suppressed by the Silver Moon and the mysterious existence of the World of Souls. Otherwise, Lucien would have preferred to ask for the help of Atlant, the Eye of Curse, or Stanis, the King of Nightmares.

Richard found it unacceptable and shook his head. "How could the Lord's envoys do such things to the Lord's servant?"

It was almost the same as what demons and devils did to their worshipers. Also, since even he, a level-eight cardinal, was unable to do anything about, it was obvious that the enemy was no ordinary angel. The pure holy light just now convinced him of the source of the power.

"Angels are just God's messengers, but they do not necessarily represent God. The pope that Octave described as corrupt is still able to use God's Arrival. Perhaps, this is a test of the God of Truth." Taking advantage of Richard's bewilderment, Lucien directed him to what he wanted the man to think about.

Richard looked at the ground where Octave disappeared with the typical blue eyes of Holm and mumbled, "Was that 'prophet' really 'Angel King'? Could he really accomplish the religious reform through the pope and the Grand Cardinals?"

"At least based on Octave's subconsciousness, he was convinced that the Angel King had arrived through certain things." Lucien was more or less confused about that. When he first heard 'great prophet' from Octave in the dream, he thought that the Lord of Hell, his old friend, had come again, and was certain of God's relationship with Sard. However, Octave's unsuspecting attitude towards the prophet made Lucien doubt himself, because the Lord of Hell could not steal the power of the God of Truth on his own but had to count on the senior-rank believers.

Therefore, the Angel King, who was only second to the God of Truth in Mountain Paradise and had arrived for real, while not as strong as the Lord of Hell, couldn't have been deceived by the Lord of Hell directly.

Perhaps, the great prophet was just a puppet that the Lord of Hell introduced, and there were other masterminds such as Sard?

While thinking about those things, Lucien went on, "Also, Bishop Richard, you have announced that the right to the interpretation of Canon should be returned to the devout believers. Then, why do you have to rely on the pope and the Grand Cardinals to perform a top-down reform? You should encourage your believers, count on your believers, and use their overwhelming strength to crush the obstacles that stand in the way of faith. Perhaps, that is the purpose of the God of Truth's test, and the reason why he did not stop the schism of the Church."

Richard turned around and looked at Lucien, stunned. He had never considered why the two parts of the Church both had divine powers after their separation from that point of view. Thinking for a moment, he shook his head and said, "The pope and the the Grand Cardinals are in possession of the extraordinary powers that the Lord grants. The reform will be pointless if I count on the weak believers alone, unless the Lord recalls the divine powers and grants every believer enough strength."

"Bishop Richard, your definition of believer is too narrow. Are nobles believers? Are radiant knights, gold knights and legendary knights believers? As long as your reform meets their wish to communicate with the Lord directly, so that you can make them join your cause, plus part of the conscious members among the Grand Cardinals, it will be possible to experiment on your reform on a small scale." Lucien did not elaborate on it but offered a simple tip. "By then, you will be the unique saint in the history of the Church. Chances are that you will be favored by the God of Truth and become his real spokesperson on earth."

Lucien did not have any god-related faith and naturally could not understand a pious bishop like Richard. Therefore, he habitually allured the man with power, fame and a position on Mountain Paradise after death. In Lucien's eyes, it was hard to push forward Richard's reform without the boost of interests.

Hearing what Lucien said, Richard's eyes suddenly shined. "Yes. I have to count on and activate the believers. They are the foundation of Mountain Paradise and the targets of the Lord's grace!"

Lucien couldn't help but wipe his cold sweat. As a non-professional who was mixed up with too many things, he found it impossible to imagine what the guiding principle and roadmap that Richard came up with in the end for his religious reform would be like.

They did not waste any more time. Fearing that the death of Octave and Lend would raise the wariness of the great prophet, Lucien and Alferris asked Richard to turn on the divine power circle and left the Salvation Church.

Alferris walked next to Lucien, grieved, with the translucent, amber eyes filled with sorrow. It repeated nonstop, "My trophies, my trophies..."

Lend was swallowed by the holy light without leaving anything, and most of the valuable items on Octave were destroyed by Lucien's Elemental Order. Therefore, Alferris caught no treasure at all.

Lucien patted it in a smile. "I'll keep the scroll of 'Orb of Ultimate Destruction'. The rest of Octave's items will be yours."

Alferris immediately turned around and lunged at Lucien. Extending the tongue, it licked his hands enthusiastically, "Boss, sign me up for another hundred years!"

Where else could it find such a rich, generous and prize-winning partner?

Alferris almost wanted to lock Lucien in its house and urge him to write papers every day!

Lucien was amused by the shameless crystal dragon. Tossing the last few items to him, he hurried to retreat his hand.

Alferris opened the storage bag that Lucien kept the items in temporarily. Its eyes glittering, it poured the treasures into its palm and licked them one after another, as if it were leaving its unique mark on them.

After licking, Alferris counted the treasures with great passion while he asked obsequiously, "Lucien, I didn't know that you had such a profound understanding about dreams."

"It's part of my research, but most of the things I said were far-fetched." Replied Lucien unconcernedly.

Alferris looked at Lucien, finding it strange. "Are you not scared that you reached a wrong conclusion?"

"The few key points are alright. Octave's impression on them was too deep. His reactions could've been analyzed in the dream without any tricks. As for the rest, it doesn't matter whether or not I was right. Does his mental faculty have anything to do with me? Am I responsible for his psychological health?" Said Lucien with a smile.

Alferris did not pursue the question any longer. Counting the lovely treasures, it said angrily, "Lucien, it was outrageous of them to say that I was your pet. We are obviously partners!"

"Yes, partners." Replied Lucien casually.

Thinking for a moment, Alferris asked curiously, "Are pets more important for sorcerers? I can tell that most sorcerers have pets."

It only studied the theories that it was interested in. Pets, which might share its treasures, did not interest it at all.

"Sort of. Pets are the extension of a sorcerer's body. They are the eyes and ears of a sorcerer..." Lucien generally introduced the functions of a pet.

Alferris fell silent as he talked. Lucien looked at it in confusion, only to discover that it was eyeing himself with glowing eyes.

Alferris suddenly lunged at Lucien and licked his left hand intimately: "Boss, recruit me as your pet!"

.....

After getting rid of Alferris with a lot of trouble, Lucien returned to his magic tower and turned on the communication with Natasha.

"... After Richard sorts through his ideas, I will summon him and talk to him. If his ideas are in the interest of us and the nobles, I'll propose to Sard that he be appointed as the archbishop of the royal family." Natasha was in a good mood after hearing Lucien's voice, but she did not reach a decision recklessly.

After their test on Sard's reaction, almost everybody knew that she was still a 'friend' to Lucien. Therefore, Natasha was not afraid of communicating with Allyn anymore, as long as the frequency was not high.

Lucien was thrilled about it. A while back, he still needed to go to the royal magic tower of Holm cautiously, but the reality had changed much faster than he planned.

"Archbishop of the royal family?" Lucien did not quite understand what the job was about.

Natasha explained with a smile, "The archbishop is responsible for the religious problems within the royal family. The castles of the royal family and the private churches within the manors are under his authority, too. However, my grandfather had been in poor health for the longest time and relied on the treatment of the saint cardinal. Therefore, the Grand Cardinal of the parish was also the archbishop of the royal family. But as a matter of fact, the two posts are independent, and I have a say on the candidate of archbishop."

Lucien immediately realized that it should be a post that the Church set up to control the royal family before the Congress of Magic could compete with the Church, but it was something that Natasha could make use of now.

"Natasha, do you have any systematic ideas about the future of Holm? The Congress and I can only cooperate with you if you have a vision." Lucien asked gently.

Natasha chuckled. "I think we should discuss the question face to face. Lucien, I thought of you every time I saw the moonlight over the past few days."

She expressed her feelings boldly and straightforwardly.

While feeling happy and sweet, Lucien was more or less rendered speechless. Shouldn't he be the one doing the sweet talking?

Chapter 528: Manifestation of Influences

Sensing Lucien's silence, Natasha asked rather confusedly, "You don't like me being so straightforward?"

"No, I love your spontaneity and your aggressiveness. You wouldn't be the Natasha that I love if you cringe shyly." Lucien expressed his feelings, too. "However, I feel that what you said was too 'tough', and it was more suitable for a man to say."

That was because the original quote left a deep impression on Lucien.

Natasha snorted and grimaced, "In fact, when I said that, I had imagined a scene in my mind, where I played Moonlight, building a peaceful, slightly sorrowful atmosphere, before I left the piano, walked to your front, fell on one of my knees, grabbed your hand, kissed the back of your hand, looked at you in your eyes, and confessed my love to you emotionally. Haha."

Lucien was amused. Had Natasha duplicated the romantic confession of love that she planned for Sylvia to him?

After laughing for a while, Natasha said delightedly, "I was just kidding. I know that you don't like it. But to be honest, it's quite strange. I used to be a knight who was so good at romance, but why are the topics always diverted to strange courses, ruining the atmosphere, whenever I want to talk sweetly to you?"

"You are good at romance and sweet talk? As I recall, I was the one who taught you that confession." with a smile, Lucien teased Natasha.

Natasha raised her voice and argued solemnly, "That's only one of them. I'm adept at sweet talking. It was exactly based on romance and sweet talks that I won Sylvia! Right, that is not my point. My point is, why does the romantic and sweet atmosphere between us always change weirdly?"

As time went by, she seemed to have forgotten the trauma of the past and could talk about Sylvia in a regular way.

"In fact, I like the atmosphere. I feel that it is relieving, joyful and warm to be with you, and I don't need to worry about the change of feelings if we continue on like this." Lucien thought for a moment and expressed his feelings frankly, too. However, Lucien felt that his face was flushing when he talked in such a way, and he was certain that Natasha was not.

Natasha chuckled and said emotionally, "Me too. It makes me feel very happy and comfortable, as if we had started since a long time ago and we will continue to the end of our life. When I was with Sylvia before, I was always worried that she might abandon me and choose you. But now that I'm with you, my heart is very peaceful, because I know that you will always be here by my side. It is not about gender or external pressure. Even if you were a girl, I believe that you still wouldn't give up."

"Lucien, although I had romantic experiences, I have never been intimate with a gentleman before. If I do anything wrong or overstep your boundaries, please do tell me so that I'll pay more attention in future. Problems occurred between me and Sylvia exactly because we were not candid enough to each other, and we did not communicate often. I want to protect our love."

Lucien smiled. He was somewhat excited but managed to control his voice and make it gentle, "Natasha, me too. I don't have much love experience. If I do anything terrible or clumsy, please don't despise me and just tell me straightforwardly."

"It is your clumsiness that I like!" Natasha's voice became hoarse, enchanting Lucien's ears. "I am looking forward to my birthday when I realized that we will celebrate it together."

"What gift do you want?" Asked Lucien half-jokingly. It could only be a surprise if he was the one who prepared the gift.

Natasha lowered her voice and chuckled, "You should know what gift I love most."

Lucien was immediately lost for words.

However, Natasha followed with a smile, "I was just kidding. I know it's your boundaries. You never encouraged me to abandon my family and responsibility and elope with you, and I will respect your thoughts, too. I will only imagine it in my heart until the day you are willing to do it yourself. For me, the best birthday gift is that you accompany me to pass the dawn."

"However, there's still more than one month to go before my birthday. There should be chances for us to meet in between. Lucien, I miss your temperature, your smile, your different looks, and... and your 'flavor'."

Lucien had thought that Natasha would be shy in the end, but out of his expectations, she spoke it out so openly. Therefore, to defend a man's dignity, he followed, "I miss you, too. I miss your everything."

"Really?" Natasha said in a slightly hoarse voice, "By then, I will wear your favorite dress and silk stockings. Do you want black or any other colors?"

Her voice was so captivating that Lucien's body became hot. He was about to reply, when Natasha cut off the electromagnetism messaging with an evil laugh. It was quite a bummer for Lucien.

Pacing back and forth in his library, Lucien thought to himself, "Last time, it was Natasha who pushed me over. Next time, I have to be more active and push her over, or I wouldn't deserve to be called a man."

"Huh, what should I do? What distance should I keep so that I can push her over without being pushed over by her?"

"After we enter the room, if she is in the front, I'll hug her from behind and kiss her earlobe, which will weaken her strength..."

"If we walk into the room next to each other, I'll distract her attention with other topics. Right, I can confess my love boldly so that she will be overwhelmed by surprise..."

"Or maybe, I can trigger the softness in her heart with a romantic atmosphere, so that she will be pushed over by me willingly?

"But what if she is as straightforward as yesterday?"

Without him knowing it, Lucien began his 'meticulous' 'Natasha Push-over Plan'.

.....

While the two of them who were in hot love tried to control the frequency of their communication, they had been talking every other day. Very soon, it was already the Month of Fire (July).

Cleaning his clothes, Lucien spoke to Leo, his butler, "You will audit the accounts of the few companies with a few assistants who are good at numbers. I've already talked to Arthur."

Although he was not in charge of specific affairs, Lucien maintained his interests in the Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company, the Mineral and Harvest Company and the Gift from Elements Company by seasonally auditing them. While those people couldn't have the courage to embezzle his revenues, it would be good for both himself and them if he was more strict.

"Yes, my lord." Replied Leo respectfully.

After seeking his revenge and settling his life, he had a plan of reestablishing a family and was now dating a middle-aged lady who studied magic.

After he left the magic tower, Lucien went to the Atom Institution, intending to continue the analysis on 'Magic Order', the eighth-circle magic, after a brief visit, so that his magic strength could be adapted to his cognitive world sooner.

Hardly had he entered his office when Lucien saw Annick, Sprint, Katrina and other students waiting for him, each holding one copy of Arcana.

"Katrina, Layria, has your paper on superconductivity been published?" Lucien thought that it was the reason for their excitement. After all, they had never published any paper on Arcana before.

Katrina said with a delightful smile, "Yes, it has, master. It's on the third page of Arcana of this issue."

"Also, many sorcerers of electromagnetics wrote letters to us. Some even visited us in person." Layria was also very happy. She was flattered by such treatment.

Lucien checked the arcana badge of the two girls. Realizing that they had been successfully upgraded to level four, he nodded his head in approval, "You will have to continue on the work. Right, is there anything else?"

Sprint, the most impatient of all, opened Arcana and said, "Master, take a look at the paper on page one. His Excellency Oliver has proposed a solution to the problems in Mr. President's light speed experiment. He has offered a transformation formula on the length reduction of materials in the motion against Ether."

"A solution?" It was not until then that Lucien realized that they were excited about Oliver's paper. Therefore, he took over the journal and browsed through it, checking if it was in accordance with their previous discussion.

His students looked at Lucien expectantly and solemnly, hoping that he could point out the problems of the paper. They were frustrated, however, because Lucien closed the journal calmly after skimming through the article.

"Master?" Heidi couldn't help but ask.

Lucien raised his eyebrow. "What's up?"

"Do you have any... thoughts?" After a brief hesitation, Heidi asked straightly.

Shaking the journal in his hands, Lucien asked back, "What thoughts do I need?"

After a brief silence, Sprint said anxiously, "Master, this is an explanation on Mr. President's light speed experiment with Ether!

It's a strike on the particle theory! Now, all the sorcerers in Allyn who support the particle theory are waiting for the opinions of Mr. President, His Excellency the Lord of Storm, Her Excellency Hathaway and you."

After he broke the silence, other people immediately chimed in.

"The supporters of the wave theory are cocky again. They've found a new weapon!" Said Heidi in dissatisfaction.

"Master, did you find any flaws in this paper?" Annick asked cautiously.

"I feel something is wrong with the paper, but I can't tell what it is." Chelly rubbed her hair.

"It seems to be only an assumption..." Katrina and Layria said simultaneously.

Because their teacher had proposed the light quantum hypothesis, and they belonged to the elemental school, they were all supporters of the particle theory.

But after they wrangled for a long time, Sprint and his lot discovered that Lucien was as tranquil as before, as if the paper they read was just an illusion.

Heidi asked in confusion, "Master, are you not mad? Do you not want to refute them?"

"Why would I be angry?" Pointing at the journal, Lucien smiled, "I just checked it. His Excellency Oliver has only proposed a theoretical explanation that is still an assumption. It only suggests that things can be like this but cannot explain why things are like this. Also, it hasn't been proved by any experiment or phenomenon yet. Why should I be angry?"

Heidi patted her chest in relief and said, "That explains a lot. I thought you betrayed the particle theory, master."

The other students looked more or less the same.

Lucien looked at them and said solemnly, "When did I say that I support the particle theory?"

Huh? Heidi, Sprint, Chelly, Katrina's jaws almost hit the ground. Even Annick and Layria, who were usually calm, were stunned, too. Weren't you the one who came up with the light quantum hypothesis?

"Until the interference and diffraction can be explained from the perspective of particles, my opinion on the particle theory and the wave theory is the same. They are both flawed and cannot explain the nature of light." Lucien took the opportunity to inculcate his ideas into his students.

Dazed, the few young men did not know what to say.

At this moment, Lucien's monocle became hot. Somebody was reaching out to him.

"Lucien?" a loud voice echoed. "Have you read today's 'Arcana'? What's your take?"

After hearing that, Lucien suddenly smiled. No matter how many prizes he won and how many revolutionary theories he came up with in the past, he was never considered a real authority compared with the renowned specialists such as Raventi or Gaston, but only a genius who had earned something through inspiration. Therefore, when there was any problem that they wanted to discuss, they would never talk to him first. However, after the 'new alchemy' was submitted and he had a complete system that belonged to himself, everything had changed subtly.

One's influences in most cases were best manifested in other people's subconscious reaction.

Chapter 529: Busy Lucien

Lucien respected the honorable archmages who were dedicated to arcana studies like Raventi. He smiled and said, "I just got this issue of Arcana and haven't read it yet. However, if that is the paper you would like to discuss with me, it shouldn't be a problem, as I communicated with His Excellency Oliver in my teacher's place a few days ago."

"You discussed with him?" Raventi was slightly surprised. Oliver and Lucien were not associated in his impression, and Lucien should be the last person that Oliver turned to. However, Raventi soon found a reason. The Hand of Annihilation must've been over to discuss with the Lord of Storm, and Lucien happened to be there at the same time. Therefore, he was invited to join the discussion.

After thinking it through, he asked impatiently, "Do you think that the length of materials will be reduced when they move against 'Ether'? Is it necessary to explain His Excellency Douglas' experiment from the perspective of 'Ether'?"

Raventi was one of the Elementalists who was relatively open-minded but had his own persistence. He could accept that atoms could be subdivided, but he could not imagine that materials could be reduced in length during movement on their own without the integration of spiritual power.

"First of all, this is just an assumption, exactly like the assumptions that many supporters of the wave theory came up with before. It shouldn't be treated with bias because it is proposed by a grand arcanist." Lucien repeated what he said to his students earlier. Then he said, "Also, I don't think it's the reduction of the materials. If the reduction is real, I think it is more likely to be the reduction of space..."

Heidi and Annick both realized why their teacher was so calm after hearing the conversation between Lucien and Raventi. It was only because he had read it in advance.

"How cunning of you!" Heidi secretly complained in her heart. Then, the same thought came to Katrina and the rest of them, they listened to the discussion between their teacher and Raventi attentively, referring to the journal in their hands now and then.

After a long time, Raventi finally cut off the communication in great satisfaction. Lucien raised his eyes, only to see six pairs of eager eyes. They seemed rather relaxed, as if their previous anxiety had been cleared after he expressed his opinion.

"Master, I'm still confused about this." Katrina hurried to ask. Their master was on their side after all!

After Lucien explained their questions, Annick frowned and asked in confusion, "Master, you mentioned earlier that you are inclined to neither the particle theory nor the wave theory? Then what is light exactly?"

When he mentioned it, Heidi and the other students recalled the topic that astounded them a moment ago. They all looked at Lucien with confusion and worry.

Thinking for a moment, Lucien retained his serious attitude and said, "If you drop your preconceptions about the wave theory and the particle theory, and if you consider really based on the experiment phenomena and results, you will discover that light shows both the features of particles, as suggested by the photoelectric effect and the Brook scattering experiment, and the features of waves, as suggested by the double-slit experiment, the diffraction experiment and the Brook spots. Therefore, both the wave theory and the particle theory have shortcomings that they cannot overcome, and they cannot depict the light completely. I believe that waves and particles are unified on a higher level, except that they have different projections in reality."

It was the first time that Lucien explained the question in front of everyone. It was more of a psychological warm-up for his students.

Annick and the other students were deep in thought after Lucien's explanation, but they seemed more puzzled.

Lucien did not intend to continue the War between Wave and Particle. So, he shut his mouth in time, planning to return to his office and peruse Arcana of this issue. At night a few days ago, his cognitive world suddenly had hazy, cubic stripes all of a sudden, which were similar to the structure of a new legendary class that Fernando had mentioned repetitively. It made Lucien suspect that somebody had proved a certain prophecy in the 'new alchemy', but it was not about neutrons, the most important of all.

Lucien could've found the neutron on his own after repetitive experiments. However, his magic level was not adapted to his cognitive world yet, and he hadn't learnt a lot of regular magics. Because of his unconsolidated foundation, there might be hidden problems if he allowed for grand changes in his cognitive world. After all, even if the new legendary class was constructed, he couldn't put it into use for now.

Lucien believed that in a year or two, when his knowledge about seventh-circle and eighth-circle magics was abundant enough, and his magic level had been stabilized, it would be the best opportunity for him to 'discover the neutron'.

When he was about to step away, Lucien felt that his monocle became hot again.

"Lucien? Have you read the latest issue of Arcana?" It was Gaston's voice this time.

Lucien sighed with a smile. "I just discussed with His Excellency Raventi about it..."

They discussed for a while. Gaston expressed his ideas and listened to Lucien's opinion. In the end, he said, "I barely discussed arcana questions with you before. You are more distinguished than I expected. What other suggestions do you have regarding His Excellency Oliver's paper?"

"I feel that his transformation matrix can be applied to many other places. It may be worth studying." Lucien mentioned it subtly.

Gaston was certainly unable to capture Lucien's meaning between the lines yet. He smiled, "I also feel that the matrix can be used in many other research frontiers. Right, Lucien, I don't think you have heard yet. The Arcana Review Board has decided that with your expertise, you should not only be responsible for the revolutionary papers. A well-deserved authority, you should be in charge of the review of your fields."

"What fields?" Lucien grimaced. Ever since the untrained arcanists discovered that they could not make a breakthrough in his place, he hadn't reviewed any paper in a whole year and almost forgot that he was a reviewer. After all, there weren't many revolutionary papers.

However, Lucien did not refuse the Board's decision, because reviewing more papers was also an exercise and a way to obtain inspiration. Even the papers that cannot be passed might bring him a new insight.

Gaston smiled, "All board members agree that you are an authority in elements, alchemy, thermodynamics and mathematics. All the papers in the four domains may be forwarded to you. Also, you will also be responsible for the quantum photon papers in the school of Light-darkness and the papers related to X rays and electrons in electromagnetics. Is there a problem?"

So far, although Lucien had won the Prize of Immortal Throne and the Silver Moon Medal, nobody really considered him an authority in necromancy and electromagnetism, not to mention horoscopes, illusionary, transformation or summoning that he hadn't made any distinguished achievements in them.

"Not at all." Lucien replied.

Gaston praised him, "Lucien, you are the most amiable one of all the gifted arcanists that I've seen. One other thing. I am planning to establish an institute that belongs to myself like you. However, in the microscopic field, the resources of the Congress will surely be invested in the Atom Institution. Therefore, I'm planning to study something else other than the new alchemy. Do you have any suggestions? Is there any field worth paying attention to in the school of elements?"

Lucien could already imagine similar institutions and research centers growing larger and larger in number. Sorcerers were no fools. After the new alchemy was proposed, other than confirming his talents, they must've realized the advancement of such a research methodology — both in terms of results and in terms of funding.

Thinking for a moment, Lucien replied solemnly, "I believe that the studies on synthetic living matter is far behind the current development of arcana. It's a field worth digging into."

"Thank you." Gaston thanked him sincerely.

After the conversation ended, Lucien looked at the students who hadn't left due to curiosity with a smile, until they were almost crept out.

"Master, anything else?" Heidi, the boldest of all, asked in a shivering voices. Were there still quizzes and exams? They were almost middle-rank sorcerers!

Lucien shook his head. "Don't worry. I've found something for you to work on."

That's exactly what we're worried about! Layria and Sprint put on bitter smiles.

"As you may have heard, I will shoulder the full responsibilities as a member of the Arcana Review Board. Therefore, as my student, you have to help me with the review on the papers allotted to me." Said Lucien solemnly.

Sighs echoed. Sprint, Katrina were surprised at first, because it was certainly amazing to review other people's paper, but very soon, they were all frustrated.

Chelly said timidly, "Master, while our arcana level is now three or four, and we are some sort of middle-rank sorcerers, that's because what we are in touch with is the most cutting-edge stuff in the elemental field, and it's easy for us to obtain arcana credits."

"In fact, it's been only four years since we graduated. We haven't grasped enough knowledge or done in-depth research in many fields. I fear that there will be many problems if we review other people's papers. Even you may be blamed."

Including Sprint, who was often the most confident one, all the students nodded in agreement. One might trip himself if his step was too wide.

"This is exactly the way for you to build up your knowledge. I will re-review every paper you review. Whenever an error is discovered, the reviewer will have to write a report to be about why they made the error and what they can learn to avoid it. For the record, my re-review will be meticulous and rigorous in the first few years until you know what you are doing." Said Lucien solemnly.

"Yes, master." The few students immediately agreed with it.

Heidi, then rubbed her cheek in relief and smiled, "In fact, reviewing papers is not bad. It will help us to build our own knowledge system as soon as possible. I was freaked out a moment ago, because I thought that master was assigning ten knowledge points and exercises to us like before."

"A great proposal. I'll prepare a quiz for you when I have time. Hopefully, you won't be lonely before you become archmages." Lucien had thought to modify the Course of Theoretical Physics directly, but too much knowledge about the theories of relativity and quantum mechanics was in it. After the general acceptance of the two theories improved, his students and more arcanists would definitely 'enjoy' it.

"What?" Heidi's face was pale, as she felt the eyes of Sprint and other students who were going to tear her apart.

If she wasn't lonely before she became an archmage, she would certainly be lonely for the rest of her life...

At this moment, the smile on Lucien's face was like the smile of a devil.

.....

After dismissing the scared students, Lucien began reading the papers. Very soon, he noticed an article which was titled as 'An Analysis On the Spectrum of Hydrogen Lines Based on the New Alchemy'.

"... So, they found the Balmer formula [2. Johann Balmer, a Swiss mathematician, discovered (1885) that the wavelengths of the visible hydrogen lines can be expressed by a simple formula.] based on the theories, which befits the experiment result." Lucien realized the source of his gains. It was different from Earth where the formula first came up based on experience.

When he was about to read the paper more carefully, Lucien's monocle became hot again.

"Who's calling me this time? What a busy day..." Lucien complained, as he hadn't enjoyed a moment of peace in the whole morning. The Course of Theoretical Physics is a ten-volume series of books covering theoretical physics that was initiated by Lev Landau and written in collaboration with his student Evgeny Lifshitz starting in the late 1930s.

Chapter 530: Rock's Suggestion

Chapter 530: Rock's Suggestion

After he activated the communication circle, a mature, pleasant female voice came from his monocle, "Lucien?"

Lucien was stunned for a moment, unable to tell who it was. It was not until the speaker opened her mouth again that he finally realized that she was Lady Florencia, the wife of Grand Arcanist Oliver.

"Lady Florencia, is there anything I can help you with?" Asked Lucien in confusion.

Florencia chuckled, "Do you think I have nothing better to do? I wouldn't have contacted you if there weren't anything. What's your opinion on Oliver's paper? You must've read this issue of Arcana, right?"

Lucien was even more baffled. You and your husband could've discussed it in private. Why do you bother to ask an outsider? However, Lucien recalled that the couple seemed to be in conflict. He smiled and said, "I have read it and discussed it with His Excellency Raventi and Mr. Gaston. If you don't mind, I'll start from the beginning. Is that okay?"

"Yes." Florencia replied quickly.

After exchanging their views on the paper, Florencia was silent for a moment. Then she lowered her pleasant voice and said, "Lucien, did Oliver ask you to work on an opera together with him? You'd better refuse him."

"How did you know?" Oliver's intention to please his wife had been found out by Florencia? That was rather a surprise for Lucien. What a terrible secret-keeper!

Florencia's suppressed voice emitted delight. "He always complained that there were no real musicians in Holm, and that nobody could adapt his script into an excellent opera. So, if he intends to please me with a new opera, how can he forget you, a grand master who ranks very high even in the entire history of music?"

"Then, how did you know that he would please you with an opera?" Lucien finally understood that Florencia inferred it based on her understanding about her husband and their previous married life. Having just started his own love life, he asked curiously.

Florencia chuckled again, but her laughter seemed to contain complicated feelings. "He's always like this. It's either jewelry or emotional poetry, or a new opera, that he creates in person. The previous two choices were recently used. Considering his personality that he would not use them repetitively, it is easy to infer that he's going to make an opera this time."

"Then, why did you ask me to refuse him? You don't want to forgive him?" Lucien patted his face after the question. How could he have asked it directly? It turned out that he had a gossip side, too.

Florencia laughed without any delight. She teased with bitterness, "After you wrote For Sylvia, Sylvia died. If you write another opera that is meant to mend the relationship between a couple, only to separate them in the end, I believe that your love music will become a curse in everybody's mind. It's for your own good that I asked you to refuse him."

Lucien captured Florencia's meaning between the lines keenly. "My lady, are you going to renounce your marriage with His Excellency Oliver?"

"Yes." Florencia responded. Then, she poured her feelings out. "I tolerate him again and again, but he never really regretted. I'm too exhausted and desperate to deal with him any longer. I have my own arcana and magic studies. I have teachers, students and friends. It's not like the value and significance of my life will be gone after I leave him. Sometimes, love can't cover everything. Perhaps I can find new happiness after we are separated."

She spoke rationally without any tears or yelling, which made Lucien hear the resolution in her words. It seemed to be a decision that was made after deliberation, not a spur of the moment decision. Therefore, he did not persuade her but simply smiled, "In that case, I'll wish you a happy new life in advance, my lady."

However, based on Florencia's familiarity and understanding about Oliver that she revealed unconsciously, could their relationship really be cut so easily? Lucien was quite suspicious about it.

Florencia said in a low voice, "Lucien, you are really a good man. I often think that if I hadn't run into Oliver but encountered you who are both more talented and more loyal than him, my marriage would've been so happy that it made other people jealous. I envy young Natasha."

She was Morris' student, and Morris was a member of the royal family of Holm and a junior that Hathaway thought highly of. So, she had a general understanding about Lucien and Hathaway's dialog the other day and learnt how Lucien refused all kinds of temptations over the past years.

"Thank you for your compliment." Although he had received a good-man card, Lucien was not bothered at all because he already had his love. He simply smiled and thanked her.

Florencia suddenly chuckled, "In fact, I once had the idea of retaliating against Oliver, and I planned to have a soulful and physical relationship with another gentleman exactly like what he did to me. At that time, you were one of my targets, but you completely ignored my charm. Also, I couldn't overcome the psychological barrier myself, either."

"Now that you have little Natasha, there's no way that I would do that. I've suffered the pain myself, and I will not let another girl suffer such unforgettable pain again. Lucien, be nice to young Natasha. If you have another woman, I'll seduce her and get her away from you completely. Hehe. She lost her mother when she was still young. She must be very into a mature women like me."

Lucien rubbed his chin in embarrassment and hurried to change the subject, “My lady, you mentioned that I was one of your targets. Did you have other candidates?”

Florencia felt much more comfortable after the revelation. She held back her laugh and said, “I am very demanding. Few people met my requirements. Also, they had to have strong backgrounds so that they would not be killed by Oliver. Therefore, besides you, I planned to seduce my teacher. However, after careful analysis, I found that the odds of success were not high. Lucien, do you think if my dress is fully embedded with the Wave Stones, the Sun Stones, the Ice Crystals, the Dragon Hide and other precious materials, my teacher will be captivated by me?”

Lucien pointed it out directly, “I believe that His Excellency Morris would take off your dress, push you to the bed, and leave with your dress.”

“Haha! I think so, too!” Florencia was stunned at first. Then she burst into laughter.

Lucien raised his eyebrow. Feeling that it was inappropriate to make fun of the seniors behind their back, he hurried to ask, “It’s been a while since I met His Excellency Morris. What studies is he busy with now?”

“My teacher almost drooled after you proposed new alchemy. That’s a field that controls the changes of materials. If anyone can get to the bottom of it, they would have however many treasures they want. Therefore, my teacher has been completely devoted to it ever since.” Florencia said jokingly. As a matter of fact, for a ninth-circle elementalists such as Morris, Donald and Raventi, new alchemy had shed the light of legendary for them. How could they not devote themselves to it?

Lucien replied equally humorously, “If Alferris were not a dragon, I would’ve suspected that Alferris is His Excellency Morris’ natural son. He truly guards his fortunes like a dragon.”

After some chit chat, Florencia said, “Lucien, you should work harder and try to have a child with Natasha soon. If Oliver and I weren’t that into a childless relationship, we probably wouldn’t be like this today.”

“The situation today is still too dangerous for us to have children. Also, it’s been less than one month since she was crowned. There are months to go before any urge or pressure.” Lucien had talked with Natasha about that, too. There would be a lot of changes in the coming years, and pregnancy would weaken her and keep her in danger. Therefore, they should consider the question after Holm was stabilized.

Natasha couldn’t have agreed with it more. She wanted to be married to Lucien openly and let their child be born in a complete family.

Regarding the problem that the higher one’s rank was, the more difficult conception would be, the ‘Forced Conception’ on the Pink Book was certainly not developed for nothing. It was a creation of a certain legendary in order to continue his bloodline. When he saw that magic at the beginning, Lucien had the idea that he could establish a clinic in Allyn that specifically treated infertility.

After ending the conversation with Florencia, Lucien more or less hesitated. Considering the closeness, Florencia was Morris’ student, and Morris was Natasha’s senior, so he should refuse to cooperate with Oliver as per her request because they were on the same side. However, he had already promised Oliver, and it was inappropriate to go back on his words.

After thinking for a moment, Lucien made a decision. “I’ll wait until their marriage is waived. If His Excellency Oliver still wants an opera to get back with her, it would be in no conflict with Lady Florencia’s request.”

“... Also, does Lady Florencia’s request that I should not work with her husband suggest that she is still wavering and scared that she may be swayed under the opera?... I hope their relationship would not end in tragedy even if they are discovered...”

Suddenly, the monocle became hot again. Lucien rubbed his eyebrow helplessly and turned on the communication circle.

“Lucien.” Morris’s voice came from the monocle.

Lucien exclaimed and replied somewhat awkwardly, “Good morning, Your Excellency Morris.”

“Why do you sound weird?” Asked Morris in confusion.

Lucien smiled. He couldn’t confess that he had just made fun of the grand arcanist with the grand arcanist’s student just now. So he simply asked, “Is there anything I can help you with, Your Excellency Morris?”

“Have you read the latest issue of Arcana?” Morris’ question was the same.

Just like that, Lucien spent the entire morning discussing with familiar archmages and senior-rank sorcerers. However, the legendary sorcerers such as Douglas did not reach out to him, because their wisdom was enough for them to see the problems in Oliver’s paper.

Lucien was not free again until noon. He planned to continue reading Arcana after lunch. If he did not study and follow the latest papers, he might commit horrible mistakes even though he had the spirit library.

At this moment, Rock, who was wearing a black tuxedo, walked in and knocked on the door of Lucien’s office. “Lucien, do you have a moment?”

“Have you accomplished the mandatory task?” Lucien invited him in with delight.

Rock said relaxedly, “Of course, as a member of the Atom Institution, the mandatory task for me was very simple. Lazar must be returning soon, too. Lucien, the reason why I’m here is to inform you that we are running out of hands and space as our research programs grow larger in number.”

“I’ll file an application to the Magic Research Board, so that we will have the other unoccupied laboratories on the eighteenth floor.” Lucien replied. He was already an unquestionable authority in the field of atomic research. It was not difficult to do. “As for hands, don’t we have many arcanists?”

Counting himself, there were ten arcanists in total.

Rock opened his hands. “We have too many arcanists. Nobody is willing to run errands anymore. Your students all have their own research programs as they grow up. Therefore, we need to hire a batch of magic apprentices.”

“Then, go to the Task Zone to issue tasks, or contact the magic school and ask them to recommend the best students.” Lucien asked suspiciously, “Why do you care about that?”

Rock did not look like a man who cared about that sort of thing.

Rock chuckled but admitted honestly, “I’m getting anxious seeing that you and Lazar have both found your love. This is the place I spend most of my time in. How can it work out if there is no ‘fresh blood’? The few female students of yours are quite good, but they are all too proud because of you, and they do not think that I’m a big deal at all.”

“No coercion or intimidation.” Lucien reminded him.

Rock rose in satisfaction, “I’m looking for a partner for the purpose of marriage. Why would I do that? I’m going to the Task Zone. Considering the reputation of the Atom Institution, countless apprentices will apply for it. Well, would it be too troublesome?”

“Resume review, written exams, and interviews. You can screen them through three procedures. It’s all yours. I’ll supervise it in person once in a while.” Lucien said rather mischievously, hoping to give the magic apprentices a lesson about job hunting.

Chapter 531: Hot Tide

Chapter 531: Hot Tide

After seeing Rock off, Lucien shook his head and smiled, not having high hopes in him. Then, he focused his attention on Arcana and finished it. He saw the paper that Annick and Sprint submitted for discussion about the differences between the actual effect and the ideal effect of the cyclotron. They vaguely determined that energy was transformed into electricity, but they failed to come up with any formula to deduce the specific data to adjust it.

“I hope more people can begin thinking about this question.” Lucien closed the journal and focused on analyzing the eighth-circle magic.

.....

On July 3, in the morning, the tide of hotness was surging.

Lowi had no idea how many times he had come to the magic tower of Allyn. He only knew that if he couldn't find a task that he was capable of to earn enough rewards for his rent, it would be barely possible for him to survive in Allyn where everything was expensive. He would have to leave the center of arcana and magic tower and look for opportunities elsewhere.

“This is my own fault. I was too sloppy in school and did not work hard enough. I failed to become an elite apprentice, so I can't be recommended to the good posts.” Lowi did not complain but blamed himself for his lack of effort. If he had become an elite apprentice in school, he could've been recommended to the Sorcerer Administrative Department, the Apprentice Assessment Department, the Task Zone or other departments of the Congress, or given an opportunity to work in the major organization and journals' offices in Allyn. That way, he would get in touch with many official sorcerers, and a decent pay that was enough for him to survive in Allyn.

Lowi touched his pocket. There was a recommendation letter in it for the local magic group in the Paphos County.

Although in the eyes of the magic apprentices who went to remote counties or even the Solar Islands, to be recommended to the Paphos Country, one of the top three prosperous places of Holm, was something worth envying, it was entirely meaningless for Lowi who had realized his mistake after graduation because it was not Allyn. If he left the center of arcana and magic, he would be left behind by his classmates who stayed in the place soon enough.

According to the survey made by ‘Allyn Impression’, a collection of tidbits that appeared only a few years ago, every one of ten apprentices who stayed in Allyn for three years after they left the magic school became an official sorcerer. The elite apprentices that were recommended to good positions even had a terrifying ratio of one in three, which was far higher than other branches where the ratio was one in twenty.

In the Solar Islands and the remote counties, it was an astonishing one in thirty. Unless there was absolutely no choice, nobody wanted to go there. But the situation seemed to have improved after the channel of ‘News of the World’ appeared.

After thinking that, Lowi moved his finger away from his pocket, determined not to be left behind by other people at the beginning.

However, his heartburn made him smile bitterly. In order to save costs, it had been a while since he enjoyed breakfast.

His family was not rich in the first place. If he couldn’t find a job that suited himself and paid well, his dream would have to succumb to reality, unless he accepted the tasks that were evidently dangerous.

“Life, or dream? What a hard choice.” Lowi teased himself and swallowed to allay his hunger. Cleaning his apprentice robe that had been worn out, he walked to the Task Zone.

Finding a silver counter that was not occupied yet, Lowi raised his head and read the missions displayed on the green screen.

“Secret mining mission in the southern desert of the Gusta Empire: The pay is one arcana point or a Thale every day, and additional pay will be calculated according to the quality and quantity of minerals. Please refer to the appendix for the details. Capability Request: Unrestricted. Number: Unrestricted. Danger Level: Very High. You will need to face the monsters in the desert and take care of the night watchers and the clergy. In the meantime, the minerals contain invisible curses.”

The abundant pay dazzled Louis’ eyes, but he was stopped by the final description. It was impossible to accomplish the task without the capabilities of an official sorcerer. Eight out of ten apprentices would be killed.

“... Holning’s store needs an alchemy assistant for three years. Food and accommodation will be reimbursed.”

Lowi was tempted. Despite the lack of pay, which meant that he couldn’t buy materials or borrow books, the reimbursement of food and accommodation could help him avoid the expensive life in Allyn. Also, he could learn a lot by working as an assistant to an alchemist.

“But I’m a sorcerer more inclined to spell-casting than craftsmanship. A delay of three years will make me further behind. I might as well go to the Paphos county and learn the latest research through the magic radio.”

Lowi shook his head and continued reading, but the tasks were either too dangerous or too unrewarding for him to resolve his imminent crisis.

Lowi was frustrated after reading the new tasks in half an hour. Did he really have to leave Allyn?

The sorcerers in different clothes next to him accepted tasks and left, talking and laughing. But in Louis’ eyes, they seemed to be in a different world that was filled with color and brightness, while he was surrounded by gloomy mists.

Louis, unwilling to give in, raised his head again, and planned to find a short, low-paying task to deal with the day, so that he could check if there was any suitable new task for him tomorrow.

Suddenly, the green screen bounced, and a new message jumped on it.

“Apprentice Recruitment: The Atom Institution, located on the eighteenth floor of the Allyn magic tower, is in dire need of ten apprentice-level assistants. Duration: Three years. Capability Request: No lower than senior-rank magic apprentices. Payment: Ten arcana points every month, free elementary books on arcana and magic, free-to-use experimental devices. Deadline: July 10.”

“Apprentice-level assistants?” Lowi repeated in confusion, finding it hard to believe the copious payment.

Suddenly, his eyes were frozen when he saw the dark red words below the introduction: “The Atom Institution?”

“The Atom Institution!”

Lowi immediately felt that a fire was burning all the way from his heart to his head, making him unable to think about anything. The Atom Institution, which belonged to Mr. Lucien Evans who proposed the new alchemy, was a sanctuary for every sorcerer who intended to walk on the path of elements and materials, and a marvelous place where new research achievements appeared on a monthly basis. It represented the highest level in atomic studies.

Such a place is recruiting apprentice-level assistants?

What am I waiting for?

Lowi felt that his dream was right before his eyes, shining splendidly. Panting, he hurried to accept the task and took over a form that was passed on to him by the staff.

“Resume?” Lowi had never heard of such a thing before and was somewhat stunned. Thankfully, the introduction on it was quite detailed. He filled it out according to the conditions requested.

“If your resume passes, you will have the first round of written exams in two days, which will be about the fundamentals of elemental arcana and magic.” The instructor repeated the task description in a weird tone, for she had never heard of resume or written exams before, either.

Two days? Can I survive in Allyn for two days? Should I take some other task to live through it?

Lowi was confused, but he soon grew ruthless. Looking at his apprentice robe, he thought to himself, “I can’t be distracted by other tasks but have to be focused on reviewing the fundamentals of arcana and magic... It should be enough for me to survive seven days if I sell this robe to the pawn shop!”

After he made the decision, Louis’ eyes became bright, and he walked out determinedly.

After the instructor saw him off, she shook her head. Then, with passion beaming out of her eyes, she picked out a resume and began filling it out, too.

Hardly had Lowi stepped away when he heard exclamations: “The Atom Institution is hiring apprentice-level assistants?”

“The Atom Institution is hiring?”

“Is it true? Is it true? Let me take a look!”

In the ever-rising voices, the whole Task Zone was seething. Many apprentices were so excited that they were blushing, as if they had seen their bright future.

It made Lowi slightly frown. The competition would be rather intense. Then, he laughed in self-mockery. If there weren’t any intense competition for that, it would mean that he had been dreaming all the time.

As he walked firmly, Lowi encountered his teacher in the magic when he passed by the task platform at the edge. The usually mannered middle-aged man was also waving his hands excitedly like apprentices.

“Mr. Balterley, greetings.” Lowi said politely.

Balterley recognized that it was his student that he often thought highly off. He smiled at Louis, “You’re here for tasks? Go to accept the apprentice assistant task from the Atom Institution! I just took it!”

“Master, aren’t—aren’t you a second-circle sorcerer and a level-two arcanist? This is apprentice assistant!” Lowi asked in shock.

Clenching his fists, Balterley said zealously, “Is that important? As long as I can get into the Atom Institution, what’s the big deal even if I have to be an apprentice as a sorcerer? That’s the cutting edge of the elemental field. Also, I’ll be privileged to hear Mr. Lucien Evans’ tutelage and get in touch with the deepest mysteries of elements and materials.”

Lowi suddenly felt a headache. The competition appeared to be too intense.

However, the fire of dreams and ambitions were burning too wildly to be extinguished, which filled him with expectation and momentum.

.....

After a round of written exams and interviews, Lucien found a frustrated Rock in the Atom Institution.

Regarding that, Lucien asked curiously and correctly, “Rock, what’s up? There’s nobody you’re interested in? Nobody calls to you? As I recall, the institution was almost crushed by crowds recently.”

Rock said regretfully, “Some female apprentices did approach me. Well, a few male apprentices did, too... But I refused all of them. I’m looking for a partner to marry. Do I have the courage to accept those people? Those I was indeed interested in, however, were all self-respective, polite and indifferent. They didn’t give me any chance at all. What’s wrong with this world?”

Lucien burst into laughter and patted Rock’s shoulder. “It’s a good thing to be more social in order to find a partner, but your way is not going to work out. It’s not hard to find a mistress, but it will take you forever for you to find an independent girl who is worth your respect and love. I intended to persuade you to give up a few days ago, but then I thought a lesson would do you good. Alright, drop your other thoughts and complete the second round of written exams and interviews fairly. I'll supervise the final interviews in person."

Rock sighed and complained jokingly, "You're talking as if you were an expert."

"Of course I am. I have a girlfriend." Lucien replied also jokingly.

Chapter 532: Invitation

Chapter 532: Invitation

In a branch of the Congress of Magic on the Solar Islands in the Boundless Ocean...

While the dark picture where a middle-rank sorcerer's head was blown up in public hadn't been entirely erased from Blake's head, nothing could stop him from listening to 'Arcana Voice' and 'News of the World', which was the entertainment all over the islands that was even more popular than parties and balls.

"Good evening, this is the Weekly News Review of Allyn, and I'm your old friend Lark."

Blake felt that he truly had one more friend when he heard the crisp and calm voice every night, one who told him stories late at night and who made him feel familiar even though he had never met her.

'Lark' reviewed the important news piece by piece, and Blake listened attentively. He was now delighted at the progress in research studies and now was worried by the gloomy situation in Holm.

"... Over the past few days, an unprecedented tide has appeared in Allyn. Countless apprentices and sorcerers sent their resumes to the Atom Institution and surged to the eighteenth floor of the Allyn magic tower for written exams and interviews. According to sources, the Atom Institution was crammed by people during the days, and they had only seen such splendor when the grand arcanists participated in a symposium. The people completely blocked the way."

Lark's cold voice was mixed with a smile, especially when she mentioned 'sources'.

"What resume? written exams, and interviews?" Blake said to himself in confusion. 'Atom Institution' raised his strong interest. It should be Mr. Lucien Evans' Atom Institution, right? Did he come up with any paradigm-shifting theoretical system again? No, since apprentices and sorcerers were involved, it should be about something else.”

Lark continued, “For the audience outside of Allyn, you may be unaware of what has happened. So, allow me to briefly review the incident. On July 3, the Atom Institution issued an ‘Apprentice Assemblage Task’, planning to hire ten apprentice-level assistants to help the arcanists in the institution with their experiments.”

“What was most surprising, however, was the way of recruitment that the Atom Institution adopted. You would have to obtain a resume form, on which you would write your name, age, school, assessment and your magic image. Then, after screening, they would select distinguished candidates for interviews...”

Blade was already unable to follow Lark. His brain was humming. The previous announcement was crushing his skull like a surging tide.

“The Atom Institution is short of apprentice-level assistants?”

“If I can enter the Atom Institution and get involved in the cutting-edge studies in the microscopic field, maybe it won’t take long before I can improve both my arcana and my magic to the middle rank!”

“No, no, their interviews must be over...”

In Blake’s eyes, if the Atom Institution wanted apprentice-level assistants, the queue outside of the gate would span across Allyn. Of course, that was exactly what happened. But according to his experience, shouldn’t the magic school recommend elite apprentices to them directly instead of issuing a task openly?

“It is said that Mr. Lucien Evans is a man of integrity and strictness. This must be his idea. The best candidates will be chosen fairly and openly...”

Many magic apprentices who were not distinguished in the magic school, because of fortuitous incidents, were sometimes better than the elite apprentices in terms of arcana and magic abilities. However, due to the gap at the beginning, it was difficult for them to catch up with the latter or get more opportunities.

“This is the shortcoming of being far away from Allyn. How frustrating it is to know things only when they are outdated...” Blake sighed and focused his attention on the news again.

“... It is reported that more than five hundred apprentices submitted their resumes on the first day, and that another eighty official sorcerers and middle-rank sorcerers were willing to join the Atom Institution as apprentices...”

Blake did not mock them, because he had thought the same thing when he heard the news. He was thinking about abandoning the privileges of an official sorcerer and join as an apprentice, even if he would be responsible for the chores.

He heard that Mr. Evans convened a regular meeting every month. He would gain a lot even if he only attended it as a guest.

“... Up until now, the first round of resume screening, written exams and interviews have been over. Mr. Lucien Evans was not involved. Mr. Jerome and Mr. Rock were responsible for the whole process. According to them, they have selected twenty-five eligible candidates, who will participate in the final interview together with the talents selected from the second round of recruitment. Mr. Evans will be in charge of the final interview.”

The second round? Blake almost jumped to his feet. Did that mean that he still had an opportunity?

Lark's crisp voice spread into his ears. “Here, I would like to remind the members in the branches and local magic groups outside of Allyn that today is July 8, and 6 p. m. on July 10 is the deadline of resume submission. The second round of written exams will begin on July 12. If you are interested, please plan for your visit to Allyn.”

“You are all members of the Congress of Magic, and the Congress and the Atom Institution treat you equally. In fact, the second round of recruitment was added by Mr. Evans for you. He said that the sorcerers and apprentices outside of Allyn must not be left forgotten.”

Blake felt rather moved. The sorcerers and apprentices in Allyn could never feel the pain of being forgotten by the Congress. The reason ‘Arcana Voice’ and ‘News of the World’ became the most popular entertainment was not just because they provided a lot of knowledge but also because they offered a bond to make the islanders feel connected to Allyn.

“Thank you, Mr. Evans. Thank you, Congress...”

“... You can ask your friends in Allyn to help you with the resume. I believe most branches and local organizations should have devices for electromagnetism messaging. If you don’t have any friends in Allyn, you are free to contact the Task Zone. This is their contact... Please stay where you are until you receive the invitation for written exams, so that the branches and the local groups will not be paralyzed.” Lark’s voice had never been more pleasant for Blake.

After he finished ‘News of the World’ in excitement, Blake waited for dawn anxiously.

When the sun was high, Blake hurried to the magic tower of his branch. Although it was partly within his expectation, he still saw a surprisingly long queue.

“What a heated scene...”

It was an ineffable picture for Blake, who waited until the afternoon before it was his turn.

Blake meant to contact the staff in the Task Zone. However, a shadow that he always dreamed about suddenly showed up in his heart, and he somehow changed the target of his communication.

“Hello, who is it?” A common female voice came over.

Taking a deep breath, Blake said, “It’s me, Blake. How are you doing, Alfalia?”

"I'm doing fine. Is there anything wrong?" Asked Alfalia.

Weighing his tone, Blake said, "Are you still in the Paphos County? Is it only three hours away from Allyn?"

"It takes two hours and forty minutes on a magic steam train. Blake, do you want me to fill in and submit your resume for you?" Alfalia's voice was filled with a smile.

Blake said in surprise, "How did you know?"

"Because I'm on the magic steam train to Allyn for the Atom Institution." Alfalia chuckled.

Blake scratched his head. "In that case, I'll have to ask for your help."

"Okay." After Alfalia's reply, the two of them fell into a brief silence.

Then, Blake couldn't help but ask, "Are you not worried of running into those things again?"

Alfalia was born into a magic family and inherited a huge fortune, which was why she could use electromagnetism communication items when she was only a second-circle sorcerer. However, with her wealth, her capability and her outstanding looks, she became a target that certain immoral higher-rank sorcerers coveted. She had refused the deal with those people and returned to the Paphos County, her hometown.

Alfalia smiled, "I can always give up if I run into one again. It's not like I can't experiment on my own without the Atom Institution. Besides, Mr. Evans is an honorable man who never had any rumors. I trust his integrity."

Hearing his love's casual but firm words, Blake smiled. That was exactly the Alfalia that he had always loved. Every time he recalled her, her face was rather fuzzy, but her bright, smiling and determined eyes were always clear.

"May you succeed." Said Blake sincerely.

Alfallia smiled, “You, too.”

.....

Inside the Atom Institution, Lucien was discussing superconductivity with a few students, when he saw Rock wobble in palely as if he were about to collapse.

“Mr. Rock, what’s up?” Annick asked concernedly.

Rock whined, “I’m about to die! Resume reviewing, written exams and interviews were all my job, and I needed to complete my own experiments and magic structures. I feel that I’m stepping into a grave, because I see faces everywhere! That jackass Jerome was always accompanying Vera!”

“You were the one who took over the job happily. That’s nobody else’s fault.” Lucien observed sarcastically. Then, he entrusted the experiment to Katrina and Layria, before he returned to the magic tower casually. After all, many experiments were unsuitable to be performed in front of the people of the Atom Institution.

“Master, today’s ‘Holm Weekly’.” Hardly had Lucien greeted Pinocchio when Leo handed over the newspaper.

Lucien took over and read it. The headline was exactly ‘The Queen Has Appointed A New Royal Archbishop’.

Nodding his head, Lucien was not surprised. Natasha had mentioned it the other night. She appreciated Richard’s religious reform but believed that it should be conducted prudently as it would drive the Church mad.

“Sard passed Natasha’s request without any blockage? Is his purpose really so simple?” Lucien brought the newspaper to the library.

At this moment, Pinocchio announced, “Master, a guest named Arthur Doyle has come to visit you.”

Its voice echoed in the tower.

What is it about? Lucien asked Pinocchio to let Arthur in. Then, he saw the round fatty approach him flatteringly, “Lucien, here’s an invitation. Duke James will hold a party in his personal estate tomorrow, and he hopes that you can join. Her Majesty will also visit his manor.”

The fatty had been in a panic all day after the demise of Prince Patrick and tried to approach Duke James. However, after Natasha acceded to the throne, and especially after she celebrated the birthday for Lucien, Arthur had been revived and rejuvenated. He had been strutting cockily, except that he lost his confidence whenever he ran into Lucien.

Is this an opportunity for us to meet? Lucien’s mood was never better. Although they couldn’t do anything when they were surrounded by the nobles, it would still be enough as long as they could meet.

Therefore, Lucien nodded and promised that he would come.

.....

Late at night, inside a private villa...

Looking at Count Barady, Duke York said gloomily, “Her Majesty will visit James’ estate tomorrow. How’s the thing that you mentioned last time going?”

“It should be hopeful.” Count Barady gave a vague reply.

Chapter 533: Abrupt Change

Chapter 533: Abrupt Change

The east of Rentato was known as ‘Land of a Thousand Lakes’. The lakes large and small were as smooth as a mirror, presenting an entertaining view with the exuberant forest around.

Such a beautiful place had naturally been occupied by the royal family and the great nobles. James, Duke of Paphos, had a personal manor right next to one of the gentle lakes. It was truly enjoyable and pacifying.

A four-wheeled wagon, pulled by a dragon scale horse, slowly stopped at the gate of the manor. Arthur, despite being a fatty, rushed to opened the door of the wagon ahead of Lucien and jumped off, before he made the gesture of supporting Lucien to get off.

Lucien shook his head with a smile. He stepped forward and appeared behind Arthur. Then he murmured, “What’s the point of this? You will leave the best impression on Her Majesty as long as you operate the Holm Mineral and Harvest company and the Holm Mineral Union Bank well.”

The shares of Prince Patrick’s ‘investment’, without a doubt, had been inherited by Natasha. Lucien had been making fun of her about that, too. He had tried his best to invent magic items and save more wealth, and finally, he could declare proudly that he would not be scared of the cost for the magic materials that he needed until he became legendary. However, Natasha’s heritage alone had exceeded all his possessions. He felt rather envious.

Arthur turned around and followed Lucien. He replied without blushing, “I respect you from the bottom of my heart, Lucien. The alchemical and magical items you invented gave me unimaginable wealth and allowed me to join Duke James’ circle. So, my previous gesture was absolutely genuine. However, did you mention that Her Majesty was satisfied about the promotion and development of the ‘Holm Mineral and Harvest company’? What about the Holm Mineral Union Bank? Did she say anything?”

“Her Majesty is from a foreign land. She does not know the bank industry, which only exists in the countries around the Storm Strait, very well. So, she hasn’t offered any remark. You should write a report on the history and future of banks for her.” Lucien understood that, in order to promote magical items and influence the people of Holm, Brianne and other countries, he had to start from three aspects, namely the simplification of magic items, the financial support centered at banks, and the manipulation of public opinions.

Of course, that was based on the premise that the Congress of Magic was strong enough.

“No problem.” Said Arthur delightedly. He was so fat that his face was almost bloated, and his eyes had only a thin line left.

At the gate of the manor were two rows of soldiers in red uniforms, informing that Natasha had arrived.

Passing through them, Lucien and Arthur went to the most eye-catching garden of the manor under the guidance of a squire.

The garden was Duke James’ pride. It was claimed to be only second to the royal family’s villa. All kinds of amazing flowers were blooming in the vast garden, letting out intoxicating scent.

At the center of the garden, it was a rather spacious place for an open-air garden, with both a view of the lakes in the front and gorgeous flowers behind.

Hardly had he joined the party when Lucien noticed Natasha. She was wearing black clothes that looked like a hunting suit. Her purple long hair had been tied, and she appeared to be much calmer. It seemed that after days of adaptation, she had finally changed from the Violet Countess into a real queen.

Looking at Natasha with appreciation and love, Lucien felt quite great. The anxiety in his heart for days seemed to have been eased.

He was already satisfied just looking at her quietly.

As if she sensed Lucien's eyes, Natasha turned around and looked back at her.

Her silver pupils seemed to be glittering, and her lips curled. It appeared that she did not know that Duke James and the rest of them invited Lucien, either.

But very soon, Natasha controlled her face and continued talking to the nobles around.

She was wearing silky black gloves that were in the same style with her clothes. She did not take them off when the nobles kissed her hand.

Lucien had switched back to the double-breasted long tuxedo. Now that they had determined their relationship, he was not worried that his constant style would make her tired of him.

After a while, Natasha said with a polite smile at Lucien who approached. "It's been a while, my knight."

It was not until this moment that the other nobles who were relatively weak noticed Lucien's arrival. Their conversations came to an abrupt end. Including Duke James, Duke Russell and Arthur, everybody glanced at them curiously and expectantly, hoping to find certain traces.

Were they really good friends, music partners, or were they something more intimate?

Lucien took off his top hat and fell on one of his knees. He grabbed Natasha's right hand and kissed the back of her hand against the glove like a knight. "Your Majesty, your knight has never left."

Her right hand slightly shivered, as if she recalled something. Lucien, on the other hand, recalled the scene of moonlight that he described earlier, and put on a smile.

After Lucien stood up again, Natasha smiled, "I saw many creative gadgets in Holm. They have filled the kingdom with vigor and hope. That's your effort, Lucien."

Arthur was more or less disappointed at their politeness and their normal conversation. They seemed like simple friends. There was not the tiniest detail that suggested a more intimate relationship. He thought that Lucien would eventually become the queen's husband and Prince Nekso, but the reality was not as beautiful as he imagined.

Duke James and the rest of them were rather disappointed, too, but they also felt quite lucky. They feared that the queen truly fell in love with Lucien Evans, which might raise a civil war if she was determined to marry him despite the Church. That was not their purpose.

They hoped that the queen could keep an intimate relationship with Lucien without being enchanted, and that the balance between the Church and the Congress was maintained.

As for whether or not they were lovers in private, that was not their concern.

Trying to control his mood, Lucien talked with Natasha like a good friend and the queen's knight, occasionally interrupted by her conversation with other nobles. It was just like any regular party.

After twenty minutes, having not found anything, Duke James smiled, "Just now, Her Majesty mentioned creative gadgets in the kingdom. I happen to have some in my place. Why don't I give Your Majesty a tour, where you will hear the introduction from their creator, Mr. Lucien Evans, in person?"

"Okay." Natasha agreed quickly, knowing that Duke James had more to say.

Therefore, Duke James and three other leaders of the liberals, Lucien, Camil and a young man with silver grey eyes went to the main house of the manor with Natasha.

"This is Count David, a ferocious knight of the royal family." Duke James introduced him to Lucien.

Lucien nodded his head. "His Excellency Morris mentioned your father before. He was an excellent sorcerer."

David had the typical look of the Hoffenberg family. His face was contoured shenke, but his silver grey eyes emanated certain coldness. He replied with a smile, "Mr. Evans, thank you for your approval of my father."

He was neither cold nor warm, as he recalled his late father.

Very soon, the few of them entered the main house and stepped on the stairs. As the queen's knight, Lucien naturally stayed behind and 'protected' Natasha with Camil, one on the right and the other on the left.

Right when Duke James and the rest of them were about to turn, Lucien suddenly sensed something soft in his left hand.

"Natasha's hand?" Lucien turned his head in surprise, only to catch her delightful eyes.

Natasha's right hand had taken off the silk glove. The warmth of her palm was a major contrast to the courtesy a moment ago.

Lucien understood her heart. He couldn't help but hold it more tightly. Lucien felt indescribably satisfied by the secret movement. The warm feeling seemed to have made his heart peaceful again.

As they held hands, Natasha looked at the front, but the smile on her face couldn't be covered.

After they passed the corner, they loosened the hold on each other's hands as if it were nothing and followed Duke James to enter the chamber.

Inside the secret chamber, a tray with wines, champaign and 'Sky Blue' on it had been placed.

After checking the drinks, they each picked up a cup and looked at Duke James, waiting for him to speak.

"In fact, I only mean to ask Your Majesty's opinion on the alchemical workshops and the promotion of magic items. Honestly, a lot of our wealth has been invested in it.” Duke James spoke rather straightforwardly, as he felt that he had grasped Natasha’s tendencies.

Natasha kept the solemnity of the queen. “My attitude is the same. All the magic items that benefit the kingdom and the people will be encouraged, and those which are evil and corrupting will be forbidden.”

“You are truly not one of those conservative people, Your Majesty.” Duke Russell said with a smile. “I’m hoping to invest in something, but I don’t know if it could make profits. Mr. Evans, do you have any suggestions?”

“What investment?” Lucien suddenly felt that he was in a business meeting.

Russell sipped the champaign and said, “Radio stations, like ‘Arcana Voice’ or ‘News of the World’, rather than a few simple news programs or music episodes.”

He keenly sensed the value in it, but he did not know how to make money from it.

Natasha looked at Lucien curiously. He seemed to have talked about it before in private.

Lucien smiled. “The main problem is that magic radios are still expensive. Although they have been simplified, only the people above the middle class can afford them. The popularization of the item means that the radio stations wouldn’t have great returns.”

“Do you have any suggestions? Further simplification?” Count Henson was quite interested in it, too.

Lucien looked at them and said thoughtfully, “I suggest that the radio station should also publish newspapers. Whoever subscribes to the newspapers for one year will be given a magic radio. Then, the radios will be popularized soon enough.”

“But there will be heavy losses!” As the Minister of Finance, Count

Henson was very sensitive about losses. One magic radio was much more expensive than a year of subscription.

Lucien looked at Natasha and said, “There will be losses, but it’s a necessary price for promotion. The revenue, however, will come from . I’ll ask my companies to give the radio stations tremendous fees”

“Wouldn’t you lose money?”

Lucien smiled, “ is investment and will pay off later. We can afford the wait.”

Even though he lost money, it would be worthwhile if he could control the public opinion of the radio stations of Holm through .

Duke James was about to talk, when his face was darkened. He crumbled the cup in his hands into pieces. “It’s poisoned!”

It was not until he heard poison that Lucien felt a corrupt, terrifying poison bursting out inside his body, but it was eliminated by the Congus Ring immediately. However, below the poison was a weird curse that made him unable to focus his spiritual power as he were drunk!

Were the wines in the secret chamber all poisoned?

Why did he fail to notice it?

In his anxiety, Lucien looked at Natasha and immediately felt that his heart was heavy, because her face was also dark and her hands were shivering.

Duke James roared, “Who poisoned the wine?”

His voice was so loud that the glass was almost shattered, as he tried to draw the attention of the nobles outside.

He knew very well that, as long as the criminal was not an expert above legendary, they would’ve raised his wariness if they approached him, who was a gold knight, and they poisoned the wines within the range of his consciousness.

That was, of course, if they did not have the cooperation of spies!

Chapter 534: "Poisonous Devil"

Chapter 534: "Poisonous Devil"

Because he was capable of many marvelous magics, Lucien was very confident about the wines he checked, but his confidence turned out to be a fatal mistake today. He had drunk a cup of 'Sky Blue' that was mixed with terrible poisons and weird curses.

No, not just the wine!

Lucien looked at Camil. As a level-eight radiant knight whose responsibility was to protect Natasha, she wouldn't drink or eat anything on such occasions. Still, her face was dark, and her body was quivering uncontrollably. She intended to turn into 'Tide', but the blue ripples disappeared immediately after they surfaced. It was obvious that she had been poisoned and cursed!

Where was the source of the poisons and curses?

Lucien suddenly smelled vague but sweet fragrance of flowers, like that outside, except that it was more sweet and intoxicating.

Something was wrong with the fragrance!

There must be a spy, or something who was manipulated, that brought the item which emitted such fragrance in. When it was mixed with the wines that had also been played tricks on, the wine and the air became unimaginable poisons and curses. No wonder he did not detect anything during the examination!

But it was not the time to look for the spy or the accomplice. Lucien wobbled to Natasha, with everything fuzzy and shaking before him.

Thankfully, Lucien had the Congus Ring which dissolved the poison. He was unlike Camil, James or the rest of them, who were not only dizzy but also weak, even unable to stand on their feet.

Count Henson, who did not activate the strength of a knight, collapsed and fell into 'hangover'.

Lucien's body still had strength. He gradually approached Natasha like a drunk man. If his heavy head and soul still remembered things correctly, 'Sword of Truth', the ultimate bloodline that could cut everything, was immune to curses. Therefore, Natasha should be only poisoned, with strength fading from her body, but her head should still be clear. As long as she put on 'Health Belt' and activated it, the poison in her should be relieved in no time.

The level-eight magic item was also immune to the poisons below legendary!

As for the Congus Ring, even if Lucien wanted to give it to Natasha, she couldn't use it.

Count David, the second weakest of all, collapsed like Count Henson, but he hadn't completely entered 'unconscious' yet, but moved his eyes anxiously.

Power from the curses spread out from his lungs and his stomach and extended upwards, affecting Lucien's brain and soul. It made his head swollen and his heart race. He was unable to cast a single spell or activate any item.

After he staggered to Natasha, Lucien took off the belt and put it on her.

Natasha said in a low voice, as if talking was difficult for her. "I cannot concentrate my will... I can't use any magic item. Go... go now. Their target... should be me..."

As if not hearing anything, Lucien buttoned the Health Belt on the back of her waist, before he said with a numb tongue, "Try to... control yourself... The poison... hasn't been completely activated yet... There should be a chance... to use magic items."

Natasha did not waste time or give up. She tried to get her body under control, while she urged again, "Hurry and leave... You still have strength... Ask for the reinforcement... of the nobles outside..."

At least, Lucien would not die with her.

Then, she would be able to seek the slim chance of survival without concerns.

Applause echoed from the gate. "What a touching couple. I hope that you will stay together after you die."

Lucien raised his head, only to discover a weird, green-haired man at the gate. There were no pupils in his eyes but only the devastating whiteness. His clothes were quite eccentric, too, because he was wearing a black cloak that covered his entire body even though it was a hot day.

The weird man who appeared to be in his thirties bowed and said, "Your Majesty, allow me to introduce myself. I am Primous, 'Poisonous Devil' of the Dark Congress."

'Poisonous Devil' Primous was the expert who ranked 62nd on the Cleansing List, a level-nine dark night, and a descendant of the Demon Lord. He was best known for poisons and curses. While he ranked lower than Lucien, he was definitely stronger than Lucien.

Natasha did not respond to him but tried to focus her attention, and Lucien resisted the power of curses with his spiritual power, too.

Primous, however, did not attack immediately, but chattered on, "You don't know me? That's alright. All you need to know is that I'm here to kill you. It's been a while since the Congress waited for the South Church to declare war on the Congress of Magic. After learning that Your Majesty also chooses balance, the old men sent me here."

He seemed to be affected by his bloodline, or maybe he was confident of his victory, so he appeared rather hysterical.

"As long as I kill Your Majesty, Mr. Lucien Evans, Duke James and the rest of them and pretend that it was done by radical night watchers, the Church and the Congress of Magic will definitely burst into war. Right, I'm good at simulation. I think I'm capable of making the legendary sorcerers and saint cardinals believe that 'Cursed Angel' Grunwell of the night watchers did all this."

Hearing his neurological chatter, both Lucien and Natasha tried to dissolve the power of either the curse or poison in their body, but it seemed that they were stronger and stronger as time went by. Neither of them could stand on their feet anymore.

Primous seemed to be unaware of their efforts, and nor did he care that Duke James and the rest of them could not reply because of lack of strength. He continued on happily, "In order to kill you, I spent tremendous efforts on controlling the servants and gardeners to slightly change the vegetation in the garden. If you were truly a flower lover, Duke James, you would've realized it a long time ago. It's a shame that you are just a show-off. So, when you walked into this chamber with the fragrance of flowers, the previously harmless ingredients in the wine turned violent."

"In order to not alarm you, I did not adopt drastic and fatal poisons and curses but chose weakening and paralyzing ones. They look rather effective and gave me enough time to arrive from beyond the range of your consciousness, Duke James."

His words confirmed Lucien's speculation, and it seemed to have ruled out the possibility of a spy.

However, how could Lucien have trusted a lunatic like him?

"Haha. Do you think that I'm so stupid that I would give you enough time to lift the poisons and curses?" Primous suddenly smiled.

Shocked, Lucien thought of something, but the power of curses that flooded into his head slowed his thinking.

Primous grimaced, "My mix of poisons and curses are named 'Helpless Kiss'. The longer you delay, the less strength you will have. So, in order to be absolutely safe, I let you hear my chatter. I'm happy that you cooperated with me."

As he said, he clapped his hands, "Down! Down! Down!"

Duke Russell and Camil fell first, with desperation and regret in their eyes, followed by Duke James, whose feet could no longer support his body.

“Wow, as expected of the queen and Mr. Lucien Evans. You have lasted so long. Let me guess. The queen’s bloodline can eliminate the power of curse, and Mr. Evans has equipment that provides immunity to the poisons.” Primous warmed his wrist and seemed about to attack.

Lucien stepped forward. His head was more muddled than ever, and he had only one idea, which was to stand before Natasha. However, the rational, systematic thinking that he had formed still gave him a possibility to reverse the outcome. He could allure Primous to approach and attack with his left hand, hoping that the nullifying ability of the hand could dispel the supernatural powers of the level-nine dark knight and hurt him.

Primous chuckled, “It seems that I’ll have a lot of trophies this time. Mr. Evans, you are rarely-seen moving treasury of magic items.”

He took off his cloak and revealed a nightmarish body. That was a body full of ulcers, from which yellow or green mucus was bubbling and corrupting everything.

“So, would you please die?” Primous took action. Lucien could not capture him at all, much less attack him with the left hand.

He was not careless at all after the real attack began but regarded Lucien as an opponent on the same level as him. Therefore, while his melee abilities were not as good as a regular level-nine, it was still not something that Lucien could resist.

Bam. A yellow and green shadow blinked to Lucien’s side and knocked his chest brutally.

The poison that seemed to be killing the air made Lucien’s head even heavier. He raised his left hand but could not keep up with Primous’ speed. His chest suffered excruciating pain.

Without a sound, Lucien disappeared and appeared in the shadow of the gate.

‘Magic Trigger’, the magic he prepared in advance, saved Lucien’s life at the critical moment.

“I almost forgot that you are a sorcerer, Mr. Evans, but I don’t think you can dodge again, can you?” Primous mocked Lucien and rushed at Lucien unbelievably fast.

Lucien managed to lift his left hand and blocked his chest, but Primous disappeared before him and blinked to his back, kicking him right on his back. The yellowish curses and the dark green poisons immediately surged forward.

With a dull noise, the three layers of grey skin that suddenly appeared on Lucien’s body were shattered into pieces, and obvious gaps showed up on the robe of the Immortal Throne. Lucien was blown toward Natasha, vomiting blood, with his back almost broken.

If he hadn’t learnt ‘Magic Order’ a few days ago and preset three ‘Stone Skins’, a four-circle magic, Lucien could’ve been killed directly!

“You’re still alive? That’s why I hate sorcerers most!” Primous grew agitated.

Duke James and the rest of them, while wondering how Lucien avoided Primous’ second attack, tried to focus their will, only to little avail.

Primous suddenly turned into a dark green spear and pierced at Lucien who was still on the ground.

Hardly had Lucien turned his body around with his uncontrollably hands and feet when he saw that. He intended to resist the attack with magic, but he couldn’t focus his spiritual power, which was still under the suppression of the curse.

Am I going to die here?

Suddenly, a shadow appeared before Lucien. A longsword was drawn, and the gaps of void appeared out of nowhere, blocking the spear.

However, the spear was so terrifying that it pierced through her body despite the longsword, sprinkling her hot blood on Lucien's abdomen, chest and face.

"Natasha..." Lucien said subconsciously.

Natasha's face was in abnormal red. The wound on her abdomen couldn't recover due to the poison. As she lost tremendous blood, her feet were obviously shaking, as if she could barely stand on her feet, but her voice was still as firm as before: "A knight should never stay behind."

Chapter 535: Lucien's Ruthlessness

The spear that Primous turned into was blocked by Pale Justice. Sensing the power that was equal to legendary for a Demon Lord, he stepped back. With his festered body, he narrowed his eyes and looked at Natasha who was standing unsteadily, before he declared, one word after another, "Your bloodline has mutated? The more heavily wounded you are, the stronger you will be?"

Natasha did not say anything else but stayed before Lucien holding her longsword. It appeared that her bloodline ability had been suppressed by Primous' poison, too, which discharged her newly-received strength incessantly. So, she was unable to attack but could only focus on defense first.

Since the wound on her abdomen that was corrupted by the poison couldn't be healed, the huge blood loss also added to the weakness of her body.

Primous raised his voice, sounding hysterical and brutal. "Magic Trigger, stimulation-induced defense of magic items, and bloodline ability mutation. Can you two just let me kill you? This is too disgusting. What's the use of your resistance? You would still be killed by me eventually, won't you? Wouldn't it be better to save our time?"

Lucien was like a man who drank three bottles of Reis. His brain was too sluggish for him to come up with any solution, much less performing magic. He could only vaguely sense that the power of force was gathering around his neck through his blood and spreading to his brain. Also, the power of the curse had begun to affect his body functions. Except for his left hand, the rest of his body parts were losing strength.

"No, I have to find a way to get rid of this 'intoxication', or we'll be dead for sure!"

"I cannot wait for reinforcements without trying to save myself, or there's a 99.99% chance that I will die before the reinforcements arrive.”

“Natasha is in great danger!”

Messy ideas popped up in Lucien’s head. He waved his hands helplessly, trying to cling to an inspiration to get him out of trouble.

Primous took out two daggers, which were covered in dark green, decaying liquids that dropped on the ground once and while, darkening and corrupting a whole area.

“You will be punished for your lack of cooperation!” Primous shouted in fury. Then, he launched a storm of attacks at a speed that Lucien could not capture. The area was gradually contaminated by wriggling black, green and yellowish colors. Everybody entering the area would be suppressed by curses, poisons and diseases.

It was the semi-illusory willpower frontier that belonged to a level-nine gold knight.

Fearing ‘Pale Justice’ in Natasha’s hands, Primous did not start a head-on battle. Instead, with the suppression of speed and willpower frontier, he searched for the flaw in Natasha’s sword art and left wounds on her body with the daggers now and then.

While Natasha had the blood power of getting stronger as the wounds grew heavier, she was far weaker than Primous in the first place, and she was affected by the ‘Helpless Kiss’. It was not bad that she could carry out one third of her abilities. Therefore, she could not keep up with Primous at all but could only defend herself with her longsword.

It was good for the first ten seconds. With the flawless defense and Pale Justice’s suppression of evil and devils, Natasha managed to resist the attack of the Poisonous Devil. However, as time went by, the effect of ‘Helpless Kiss’ was more and more obvious. She gradually ran out of her strength, and many flaws appeared in her sword art. Primous took the opportunity to cut her hunting suit, break her skin and leave astounding wounds on her body.

By the stimulation of the wounds, Natasha recovered part of her strength, but her breathing was heavier and heavier. She was like a tightened bow that might be broken at any moment.

Suddenly, Primous circumvented Pale Justice and approached her with his back against her. Then, he knocked her chest with his right elbow.

Crack, crack, crack. The noise of ribs being broken echoed. Natasha vomited red, silver blood. She only had the time to block Primous' upcoming attack, before she was blown backwards into the wall next to Lucien.

After a bam, the wall of the secret chamber covered in the divine power circle was almost broken.

Fearing that he might be hit by the legendary longsword that obviously suppressed devilish bloodlines, Primous did not finish the enemy immediately after he hit them like before but considered his own safety the top priority. He tried not to be touched by Pale Justice. Had it been otherwise, Natasha would've been killed by him.

"You can't stand up again, can you?" Primous shouted excited and bloodthirsty, but then he roared again, "Why—Why are you still standing? Just lie down and let me kill you!"

Lucien watched Natasha struggle to get back on her feet. Her blood, mixed with sweat, dripped on the ground, and her body was full of decaying wounds, but still, she raised her longsword determinedly in a gesture of protection.

"You shall not pass until I die."

Because of the heavy wounds, Natasha did not sound as weak as before, but her actual weakness was not changed at all.

Lucien loathed his helplessness at this moment. Now that he could not use the spiritual power, he was only half a grand knight at most, and he could not participate in a higher-level battle at all.

"I have to get rid of the dilemma!"

“I have to restore the spiritual power!”

“In order to restore spiritual power, I’ll have to lift the curse.”

“How can I lift the curse?”

His head filled with blood, Lucien thought slowly, sensing the power of the curse surging into his head from his neck.

“I announced that you are what I hate most instead of sorcerers! Your mutated blood power is too disgusting!” Primous was more than infuriated, but it did not affect his capability at all but only made him more bloodthirsty and crazy.

His fury and his chaotic blood powers did not make Primous lose his basic judgment. He still attacked stormily with his speed and agility, taking advantage that Natasha had to protect Lucien and that she was short of strength or alacrity.

When the red blood dripped to the ground, Lucien felt he heard the countdown of Natasha’s life. He was grasped by desperation and self-loathing.

However, for Lucien, what came with such desperation was not surrender but stubbornness that was like a conditional reflex. The spirit of not giving in had been melted into his soul ever since he played ‘Symphony of Fate’.

Anxiety, desperation, self-loathing and all the other feelings were gone. Even though Lucien’s head was still numb and sluggish due to ‘intoxication’, it had regained part of his thinking abilities after the negative emotions were gone.

“The power of curse affects the body and the soul by affecting the brain...”

“After it is melted by the body, it will have incessant support. Then, it will enter my head with my neck as the bridge... My spiritual power will be crushed sooner or later before I enter a ‘drunk dream’... Perhaps that’s why Primous said that the longer it was delayed, the better the effect would be...”

Struggling to analyze the procedure of the curse, Lucien found no way to resolve it, because lifting the curse required magic, and he could not perform magic now that he was suppressed by the curse. So, he was in a predicament.

“Is there any other way?” Lucien reviewed his body and realized that only his left hand still had strength.

“Left hand?”

“It is not affected by the curse!”

Lucien’s pupils suddenly widened!

At this moment, Natasha was blown into the wall by Primous in a huge noise again, but the soundproof chamber that was defended by divine power circles made the nobles outside hear nothing.

Sliding from the wall, Natasha held the ground with her left hand and tried to get back on her feet, but her wrist lost strength, and she fell again helplessly.

But Natasha did not give up. She still tried, even though Primous had already walked closer. She did not give up her persistence. If she was going to die either way, she might as well try one more time before her eyes were really closed!

“Wow, get back on your feet! Why don’t you get back on your feet! Let’s see if you can get back on your feet again!” Primous shouted passionately like a lunatic, mocking Natasha’s helpless struggle.

Then, he turned around and looked at Lucien, bowing with his left hand on his chest. “You two can go to hell now!”

After that, he grabbed the two daggers and pierced them at Lucien’s and Natasha’s heads respectively.

Lucien raised his shivering left hand, but the dagger was right before him. Everything seemed to have come to an end.

At this moment, Natasha’s shadow appeared before Lucien again. The wounds on her body were so devastating, and her feet were so unsteady, but some sort of mental power seemed to get her back on her feet again and allowed her to block Primous' daggers with Pale Justice.

Natasha's tied purple long hair had been blown apart. It dispersed behind her like waves, covering her bloodstained face and making it impossible to see her eyes.

The picture left a deep impression on Lucien, but he did not have the time to think about so many things. He simply clenched his left hand.

Primous roared in exasperation, "You can still stand!"

"I will not fall until I am shattered!" Natasha seemed to be shouting with her soul, but her strength had faded so much that even her mutated blood power could not make up for it. Pale Justice was gradually dangling down.

At this moment, Primous' eyes were widened, as he saw Lucien opening his left hand and stabbing it into his own neck behind Natasha. His blood spurted out and sprayed on Natasha's back.

"Is he killing himself?"

The unimaginable, nervous pain almost made Lucien writhe on the ground, but thankfully, he did not have any strength for that.

Holding back the pain, and not pursuing accuracy, Lucien closed his left hand and moved it as if it were trying to twist something. The power of curse which was flooding into his brain vanished the moment it ran into the Silver Moon and the mysterious existence of the World of Souls.

'Helpless Kiss' was level nine by itself, but the poison had already been offset. Naturally, the remaining power of the curse could not resist the Left Hand of God at all!

Black air surged out of Lucien's neck like a snake, dispersing into the air.

His central nerves broken, Lucien could not sense any of his body parts below the head right now, but for a sorcerer, as long as the brain and the soul were still there, everything was there!

His spiritual power surged like the tornado on the ocean. The power of the curse, losing the backup, was soon pressed into a corner and about to be crumbled.

Primous grew wary when he saw the black air gone. Not having the time to finish Natasha, he tried to settle the troublesome sorcerer first.

However, he was not too bothered by it, either. A sorcerer only in the sixth or seventh circle was not necessarily capable of breaking his semi-illusory willpower frontier!

But at his moment, he saw Lucien taking out his left hand and speaking in an obscure accent that did not sound like a human being at all: “Spirit Confinement!”

Chapter 536: Analysis

As the spell was cast, Primous suddenly felt indescribably terrifying magic waves emerging out of nowhere. Illusionary faces suddenly appeared in the dark, green and yellow willpower frontier around him. They lunged at him with their fuzzy, blurry bodies without being affected at all!

“A legendary magic?”

Primous couldn't have been more astounded, but hardly had the idea occurred to him when the ferocious, incomplete souls ignored his defense of poisons and curses and crawled into his body. They entered into his nose and exited from his mouth, before they reentered into his eyes, forming a weird circulation as if they were having a grand ball.

The glamor in his eyes was gone, revealing the dull whiteness. Primous' body seemed to have slightly expanded because of the excessive souls. He stood in wild disbelief like a statue, and his semi-illusionary willpower frontier was instantly gone.

The esoteric spell that did not seem to be cast by the tongue, and the overwhelming magic wells, made Duke James, Duke Russell and other people who could not see the fight both surprised and delighted. If they heard and sensed it correctly, it was a legendary magic! Which Excellency of the Congress of Magic came to their rescue?

No matter who it was, their lives were finally saved!

Therefore, they were more inclined to the Congress of Magic.

After activating the Congus Ring and restricting Primous with 'Spirit Confinement', Lucien immediately felt that his spiritual power was dry and his head was in excruciating pain. The power of the curse that was almost gone seemed to be launching a comeback. However, 'Origin', the Holm crown ring on his right hand, fed his spiritual power that he stored in advance to him.

Having no time to bother anything else, Lucien spread out his spiritual power and took out a bottle of 'Water Song' from his storage bag.

Without any magic waves, the 'Water Song' floated and blew away the cork, pouring itself into Lucien's mouth.

One of the requirements for a sorcerer to advance into the senior rank was that their soul and spiritual power could directly affect reality. That was why Congus and other liches would have spoken and cast spells when they did not have a body. It was based on the privilege that Lucien cast a spell.

In fact, the power of curses differed from poisons in that cutting the central nerves could not stop it. Lucien had planned to stab his left hand into the neck, avoiding the spine and the central nerves, and use the nullifying ability of the hand to block and eliminate the power of curse. However, he did not have such self-control when he was 'intoxicated', and he hurt his spine and central nerves, losing the feelings below his neck.

If it was delayed any longer, his brain would've decayed due to the lack of oxygen. Then, Lucien would have to switch to a new body. Therefore, the moment he tamed Primous, Lucien hurried to recover himself with drugs.

The Water Song flowed into his throat. Emitting watery colors, it twisted and recovered the wound.

Since the spine was not completely broken and the central nerves were not collapsed, such a wound was much easier to treat than broken limbs. For example, Verdi, Natasha's cousin, was cut in the neck by her before, but he was not killed and was even slowly recovering.

Then, Lucien cast 'Remove Curse', the fourth-circle magic, to eliminate the remaining power of curse.

After his wound was recovered, Lucien hurried to take out another bottle of 'Water Song'. Holding Natasha who was still on her feet, he poured the drugs into her mouth and treated her with 'Poison Neutralization' and other magics. He also added the effect of air filtering on himself.

Seeing that the danger was no more and Lucien was safe, Natasha was relieved and lost the momentum. Her willpower was finally crushed by the 'Helpless Kiss', and she collapsed in her arms.

Once one was hit by 'Spirit Confinement', their soul would be caged forever until it was relieved by a corresponding magic.

Even though the magic effect disappeared eventually, the soul would turn into dust if it took too long.

The black curse on her wound was cured by her blood power. The green and yellowish poisons were soon dissolved by Lucien's magic and drugs. The wound began wriggling, erasing the hideous, devastating traces.

Although 'Helpless Kiss' could not be relieved by a common 'Poison Neutralization' and 'Water Song', Natasha's external wounds were basically recovered. Her life was no longer in danger.

"I will gather my willpower and activate the Health Belt. You go to rescue Aunt Camil, Duke James and Duke Russell first." Due to the loss of blood and Helpless Kiss, Natasha was still extremely weak.

Supposedly, after she gathered her willpower with her blood power which made her stronger when she was wounded, the best solution was to break into the pivot of the Health Belt and use it to eliminate the poison. However, Lucien, the owner of the Health Belt, was in danger and unable to direct her to carry out the performance of the belt. So, she had to fight without it, and the Helpless Kiss was still not relieved yet.

"Alright." Without further ado, Lucien planned to wake up James, who was a gold knight, in case more enemies came.

Therefore, Lucien carried Natasha to a wall and let her gather her willpower gradually. By then, as long as she intended to use the Health Belt, he would sense it and could provide guidance.

As he walked to Duke James, Lucien saw that his eyes were still clear. It seemed that his level-nine diminished the effect of ‘Helpless Kiss’. Even without his help, he would’ve gradually recovered after Helpless Kiss passed the most active phase.

After ten seconds, ensuring that his spiritual power was good enough for him to use the Sun Staff, Lucien finally performed a magic to suppress Helpless Kiss. At such a moment, he had to be prepared that everybody but Natasha was a spy.

Duke James was more or less recovered, but he still couldn’t gather his willpower, so he said, “Help me activate the ring on my left little finger.”

On his left little finger was a bright blue ring which, according to Lucien’s senses, had the effect of poison resistance. However, ‘Helpless Kiss’ was much higher than its innate effect, and it had to be activated in order to relieve the poison.

Activating magic items was Lucien’s specialty. Soon, the ring began to emanate a layer of watery light.

The watery light soon found its way into Duke James’ body, dissolving Helpless Kiss. After receiving the help, Duke James roared and pressed the green and dark air out of his skin.

He got rid of Helpless Kiss with the strength of a level-nine gold knight.

Getting back on his feet, Duke James looked so awful as if his whole family had died. For a level-nine gold knight, his own strength was the best safety measure for him. He did not expect that he would almost get killed in a trap today.

Suddenly, his eyes were straightened. “Didn’t one of the masters come?”

He thought that the rescuer cast the legendary magic just now, but there was not a second moving person in the room except Lucien.

Lucien smiled, “Your Excellency, let’s save other people first.”

James looked at Lucien in surprise and suspicion. Could it have been him? When did he enter the eighth circle and boast a legendary item?

It was even more unbelievable than them being assassinated!

However, he concealed his suspicion and surprise soon and gnashed his teeth, “Poisonous Devil... the Dark Congress... Lucien, after you’re done ‘interrogating’ Primous, you must give him to me. I’ll let him regret living in this world.”

It was both because of fear of death as well as the fury of being set up.

“Your Excellency, do you feel ‘Helpless Kiss’ in the air?” Lucien was surrounded by ‘Air Filtering Bubbles’, a magic that temporarily blocked the curses and poisons in the air, but what was odd was that Duke James did not seem affected by Helpless Kiss anymore.

Duke James was also curious. Thinking for a moment, he looked at Primous and said, “Such poisons and curses should be closely concerned with himself. Now that he is caged, the poisons and curses of such a high level couldn’t last after losing his support.”

Lucien raised his eyebrow. His head was clear again after he was detoxicated. After ensuring that everything was alright, he sniffed and walked around Camil, Russell, Henson and David, before he returned to Duke James and said solemnly, “Your Excellency, do you really think this is done by the Dark Congress, and that he is ‘Poisonous Devil’?”

“Is he not?” Duke James was slightly surprised but not entirely unprepared. After all, Primous was the one who said everything. As a murderer, his words were not convincing.

Lucien’s attention had been focused on Natasha. He said in anger, “Duke James, if a gold knight like you can be poisoned so easily, this ‘Primous’ should have achieved tremendous accomplishments, but it is not true.”

“It took several minutes for us to reach the chamber from the garden. There was wind, the sun and the defense of the divine power circle. I cannot imagine what fragrance could have followed us into this place. After all, our garments are all magic items. We would've sensed it if the fragrance was abnormally dense, wouldn't we? Therefore, Primous lied about how he poisoned us!"

"But I did smell fragrance here, and it did become a curse." Duke James temporarily stopped rescuing Russell.

Lucien did not reply but continued, "If the fragrance would turn into a level-nine 'Helpless Kiss' the moment it touches the wine, like Primous said, wouldn't 'Helpless Kiss' have been generated the moment we entered the chamber? But why didn't we detect anything?"

"If I was the only examiner, 'Helpless Kiss' might've been unique and escaped my attention, but you failed to detect it, too, although you are a gold knight, Duke James. That is rather odd."

Duke James narrowed his eyes. "Are you suspecting me?"

"If you are alright, there is another possibility, which is that 'Helpless Kiss' was generated after our examination. That is the only way to trick a gold knight and a senior-rank sorcerer." Lucien looked at Duke James.

"Primous claimed that the level-nine 'Helpless Kiss' was a mix. That should be true. Based on that, we can reach a simple conclusion, which is that the fragrance outside was only meant to confuse our senses and make us unskeptical when we smelled the fragrance in the room. The real criminal, on the other hand, released the 'real fragrance' after we checked the wine and the room to generate 'Helpless Curse'."

"Also, the poisons and curses of such a level must be closely related to Primous' blood power. They cannot last without the preservation of magic items. How could he have measured the time if he did not know when we entered the room?"

"How could it be so easy to assassinate a gold knight, a senior-rank sorcerer, and three radiant knights?"

Hearing Lucien's analysis, Duke James sniffed and identified the scent in the air. Then, with uncontrollable fury beaming out of his face, he strode to Duke and kicked him in his waist.

After a clang, a glass bottle the size of a fingernail rolled out.

It had been opened, emitting sweet and vague fragrance.

"Why did you do this?" Duke James' demand drew Natasha's attention.

Lucien remained silent despite his confusion. Having been the target of assassination before, he was rather prudent about his safety. He was bold enough to join the party without a Transformation Mask for many reasons. Firstly, he believed that the Church would not send night watchers to kill him in a party held by the liberals, which would make the liberals completely inclined to the Congress. It would also dishearten the neutrals among the conservatives.

Secondly, with the Congus Ring, he was not very scared about assassins below legendary.

Thirdly, in the case of the extreme lunatics, he had asked his 'buddy' Alferris to protect him in secret. With its seventh-circle magic capabilities and its nature as a dragon, it was not difficult for Alferris to fool the experts below legendary. It must've detected a strange level-nine knight approaching.

Lucien's head was too numb because of Helpless Kiss a moment ago for him to think about Alferris. Now that he was awake, he was naturally very confused.

If it felt that the enemy was too strong, it should've been easy for Alferris to save him or inform Fernando.

But where was the little crystal dragon?

Hopefully, everything was still fine...

Chapter 537: Cooperation

Chapter 537: Cooperation

In order to trick everyone, David did not seem to have prepared any items against the poisons or curses. He did not carry any drugs that could relieve ‘Helpless Kiss’, either. At this moment, under Duke James’ roar, he could do nothing except to look back at him in desperation and craziness.

To be honest, even an archmage of the Congress might not have equipment or drugs that could nullify the level-nine ‘Helpless Kiss’. It was needless to mention the nobles.

Gold dragon scales surfaced on Duke James’ skin as he released his supreme dominance. Stomping on David’s abdomen, he slightly suppressed his ‘Helpless Kiss’ and restored David’s language ability. “Tell me! Why did you do this?”

David understood that his scheme had been exposed when the special bottle of ‘honey’ rolled out of his belt. Assassinating one’s liege was an unpardonable crime for the nobles. He burst into laughter crazily and hopelessly, “Why did I do this? You should ask yourselves!”

“Did we ask you to assassinate Her Majesty?” Duke James roared angrily like a dragon.

David took a few deep breaths. “What sweet fragrance, just like the intoxicating hope. Ever since I was born, you had been telling me that Prince Patrick might not live a long time and would certainly have no children, and that I would be the one who acceded to the throne.”

“Therefore, I built myself up all the time. I improved my chivalry. I held myself with noble character. I approached you and the Congress of Magic, not letting any flaw from my future ascendancy. I hoped to control Holm and even echo with ‘Sword of Truth’, touching the mysteries of the legendary knights.”

“My whole life was for the throne, but you abandoned me all of a sudden and chose this uncanny queen instead! How long did she live in Holm? Did she ever strive for the throne? I don’t buy it! I want to take back what is mine!”

James was rather embarrassed as David talked crazily. David was a backup candidate that they groomed because of his identity and his tendencies towards the Congress of Magic. But naturally, when Natasha, who was more suitable, appeared, they abandoned him without any hesitation. They did not expect that he was so covetous about the throne that he would bite the people who raised him.

However, as a senior noble, James did not let his embarrassment last for long. He said angrily, “That’s why you conspired with the Dark Congress to kill Her Majesty and us? I get it. He would’ve left you unkilld for some reason, and you would’ve worked with him, blaming this murder on ‘Cursed Angel’ Grunwell. The Church, to appease the nobles who favor the Congress and the neural nobles, and not to divide the kingdom, would’ve chosen you as the king.”

David was dazed. Then he burst into such crazy laughter as if he had heard the funniest joke. Duke James and Lucien both frowned.

He looked at Duke James, almost unable to catch his breath: “You really bought it?”

“You believe everything he said? How naive!”

“Who do you think would be convinced by my story, if you, a gold knight, were killed but I, a mere gold knight, survived?”

“He is not ‘Poisonous Devil’?” Recalling the fake clues that ‘Primous’ made, Lucien observed calmly.

In the meantime, Lucien took out the crystal ball, testing Alferris’ whereabouts.

Because of ‘Helpless Kiss’, David was out of strength as he laughed. He said both weakly and cockily, “If he were really as hysterical and maniac as ‘Poisonous Devil’, how could he have been sent for this mission, and how could he have trapped rational experts like you? ‘Poisonous Devil’ is a lunatic, but I am not one!”

“He intentionally mimicked ‘Poisonous Devil’ and confessed his scheme in order to mislead you into thinking about the Dark Congress.”

“Duke, you’re not wrong about one thing. After he killed Natasha and Lucien, he would’ve broken the divine power defense, pretending that it was an accident, so that the other nobles would notice it. Then, in order not to be killed by the legendary experts, he could only flee in panic after killing a few random nobles who were inclined to the Congress. Therefore, only one of you would’ve died, and the rest would’ve survived with me and revealed the scheme of the Dark Congress. That way, the kingdom would be kept intact.”

The crystal ball became dark, and the Host Stars of Destiny showed up. Lucien was too occupied to ask anything, but Duke James inquired earnestly, “Who is he exactly?”

David snorted, “You still haven’t got it? It is so obvious now!”

It was truly impossible to communicate with a lunatic. Duke James stomped and pressed back David’s voice.

“Who is he?”

David cackled crazily, “Didn’t he mention that he would blame it on ‘Cursed Angel’ Grunwell? You think it was just a random talk? It was just a trick. He was exactly ‘Cursed Angel’ Grunwell, a level-nine gold knight of the same Demon Lord bloodline as ‘Poisonous Devil!’” “Grunwell, the night watchers!” Duke James looked at Grunwell who was standing like a statue in fury. It was a night watcher!

After murdering a baron radically, they were even thinking to kill the bigger nobles!

For a moment, Duke James was full of disgust against the night watchers and the Church. If he did not need them to balance the Congress of Magic, he would’ve advocated banishing the Church from Holm!

Natasha, Russell and Camil looked more or less the same after hearing David's reply. The only difference was that the latter two did not even have the strength to frown.

Noticing Duke James' awful face, David smiled even more delightedly, "Very angry and very desperate about the Church? Then, let me tell you something even more infuriating."

"What is it?" Duke James demanded.

David laughed very happily, "Think about it. Is it easy for me, a noble who was close to the Congress of Magic, to get in touch and conspire with someone who ranked top ten among the night watchers? Could my fury have burst out so soon? Let me tell you. It was all because of the nobles who were inclined to the Church. They triggered the devil in my heart. Hehe. They did not want the kingdom to fall into a civil war. Therefore, they asked Grunwell to pretend to be 'Poisonous Devil' of the Dark Congress. After everything was over and you elected me as the king, you would find that the most conservative nobles also supported your opinion!"

"By then, you would've thought that they were doing it to appease you and to maintain 'solidarity' in order to live through the difficulties!"

Duke James said gloomily, "Who was it? Any noble who attempts to kill their liege must be hanged!"

It would matter if such a thing was done in secret, but if it was revealed, it would be the most severe crime that challenged the entire noble class.

"Count Barady, Duke York, and perhaps President Rex." David replied with a smile, selling them out without any hesitation, and even adding more.

Now that I'm about to die, what's the point of keeping Holm complete and prosperous? You should die. Let a civil war reduce Holm into ruins. That will be the best offering for me!

Duke James couldn't have looked more awful. He declared, one word after another, "I'll ask sorcerers, knights who are adept at interrogation, and the members of the inquisition to question you in turns. I hope you're not lying."

If it was only Count Barady, it would've been easier. However, behind Duke York had Kritonia, a legendary knight, and Rex was the leader of the conservatives. If they were involved in the matter, it would have to be handled with caution. Also, David was not necessarily speaking the truth.

"You won't be disappointed, Duke. Did you ever wonder why the prince died so coincidentally? Haha!" David burst into laughter, not bothering that they saw through his exaggeration in the end. After all, the seed of suspicion had been planted!

Hearing him pointing out the problems about Prince Patrick's death, Duke James looked so awful that his face seemed to be dripping water. Natasha, however, continued focusing her willpower as if she did not hear anything, but coldness did beam out of her silver eyes.

Lucien was less puzzled after learning that it was done by night watchers. They were 'professionals' to eliminate sorcerers and evil forces. Naturally, they had their ways to avoid the detection of the Host Star of Destiny. Also, he was levels lower than the criminal.

At this moment, the Host Star of Destiny of 'Alferris' glittered on the crystal ball, implying that it was unhurt and not far away.

What surprised Lucien, however, was that two clusters of powerful projections of fate lay next to the Host Star of Destiny of the Little Crystal. They were very fuzzy but they did not cover themselves, allowing Lucien to identify them very easily.

"Master? Your Excellency Hathaway?"

What exactly is going on?

.....

In midair, Fernando, the Lord of Storm, stared at the void before him with his red eyes wide open. On his left side was the indifferent Hathaway, and behind him squatted the clever Alferris.

It informed his master the moment it noticed that something was wrong.

“Sard, why did you ask us to watch this? To let me see how my student makes a comeback?” Asked Fernando solemnly.

The air not far away seemed to have been gathered into the shadow of a person, who smiled peacefully, “How would the liberals seek another way of balance, and how would they abandon the Church at the critical moment without any hesitation, if they had not been through life-and-death dangers that made them desperate about the Church first?”

“What do you want exactly?” Fernando squinted.

“Cooperation. I want to cooperate with you.”

Sard’s projection spoke concisely.

Chapter 538: Sard's Plan

Subconsciously, Fernando was about to establish a storm barrier in case other legendary experts were snooping around them, but Sard hurried to say, "Use other spells. I cannot cast my projection into your barrier."

He certainly dared not leave the Radiance Church and talk face to face with the grand arcanists, which would be like feeding himself to the enemy. A saint cardinal was not as unpredictable and unkillable as a legendary sorcerer.

Therefore, Fernando and Hathaway set up multiple magics together to prevent prying. The seemingly empty and peaceful air was full of fatal traps.

After everything was done, Fernando looked at the human-shaped air with his red eyes. "By cooperation, do you mean cooperating with the two of us, or the Congress?"

Hathaway had always been taciturn when somebody else could speak for her. Alferris, on the other hand, had been blocked by Fernando since the beginning, unable to see them or hear their conversation.

It was not because Fernando distrusted it but because it was still too young and might reveal secrets subconsciously. Also, the sense deprivation was a torture for other people but nothing for a dragon. Alferris had already fallen asleep, floating in midair with Fernando's strength.

Sard smiled as warmly as when he was preaching. "The cooperation I want cannot be supported by you two alone. The Congress of Magic is stronger than the Northern Extremists in terms of both the capabilities of their leadership as well as the personnel on the lower levels, but why is it only restrained in the cities such as Allyn, Rentato and Cox? Why can't it control a massive empire as well as its vassal kingdoms and duchies, like the Northern Extremists, who do not need to worry about the Church inside but only need to pay attention to external defenses? This is highly undeserved for the second strongest force in all the dimensions.”

Fernando calmed down and replied loudly, “That’s because we grew from weak to strong, unlike the North Church which was partly capable of resisting the South Church and had the full support of the northern nobles since the very beginning.”

“The Church has set up one big and four small transmission magic circles in Rentato, Cox kukesi and other cities, ensuring that they can reinforce it in time if we intend to remove the branches of the Church on this side of the Storm Strait, transforming a local war into a total war. In such a case, both parties need to calculate the potential losses prudently. However, I believe that, as the Congress develops, the situation will be greatly changed in ten years.”

“Ten years? You mean the legendary advancement made possible by ‘new alchemy’?” Sard asked about the details unhurriedly.

Hathaway interjected, “Yes. The system will be more or less perfected in ten years, and the errors will be rectified.”

“By then, Hathaway will certainly reach the peak of legendary, as well as Raventi, Morris, Donald, Prado and other archmages who have stayed in the ninth circle for a long time will advance into legendary, too.” Fernando declared confidently and exaggeratedly, leaving the impression that he was bragging.

However, he was even more confident than he appeared. He did not show it because he wanted to mislead Sard. Whatever purpose Sard might have, sending him the wrong intelligence might yield amazing results in the future. For the big shots in their level, a conversation was also a competition.

Sard smiled, “Lucien is truly a genius. Ten years later, the Congress of Magic will be able to make the Church waver between losing half of the Grand Cardinals and evacuating from the few countries on the other side of the Storm Strait. His Holiness the pope estimated that it would take sixty years and therefore is not anxious.”

While God’s Arrival was terrifying, it could only be used once. Even if Douglas was killed, what could they use to kill Brook and Hathaway?

By then, as long as the two grand arcanists at the peak of legendary stalled the pope, the other legendary sorcerers of the Congress would definitely make the Grand Cardinals pay gravely. After all, the South Church was surrounded by enemies, and it was impossible to summon all the legendary experts to attack the Congress of Magic, unless certain compromises were made to achieve the cooperation of the North Church and the Dark Congress.

Of course, such a possibility was little to none. The conflicts of heretics could not be mediated. Also, they certainly would not wait and watch the Church, which was the strongest of all, to swallow the Congress of Magic without losing anything. In that case, it would be their turn to be swallowed soon.

“Ten years is not too distant. I wonder how you want to cooperate, Sard.” Fernando asked solemnly.

Just now, he described the Congress’ possible improvement following Hathaway’s opinion, but in fact, with the new alchemy, the mass-energy formula, and the reverse-engineering of ‘fission’ and ‘fusion’, he was confident to reach the peak of legendary in one to two years even though he could not grasp all of them due to the lack of knowledge. Hathaway was the same.

If neutrons were discovered in advance, the advancement of Raventi, Donald and other archmages would be sooner, too. It would be a major mistake to predict the change of the Congress of Magic in a time span of ten years.

Sard said calmly, “I can shorten ten years to one year. After one year, you will control Holm, Brianne and other territories like the North Church controls the Schachran Empire. The frequency of sorcerers being killed will be significantly lowered.”

“It would take the pope one year before God’s Arrival could be used again. Therefore, one year later will be a good point. By then, I will shut the transmission magic circle in Rentato, so that you will not fear reinforcements. It will take at least half an hour to transfer from the Holy City. I believe you are capable enough of pushing the frontline to the Storm Strait in the meantime.”

Storms seemed to be raging in Fernando’s pupils, indicating that he was not calm. While Hathaway was still indifferent, her focused eyes showed her attention, too.

For the Congress of Magic, the Radiance Church had to be removed in order to control this side of the Storm Strait, and the greatest problem for the removal was the super large transmission magic circle inside it. Because of the uniqueness of the divine power barrier, it could not be blocked in advance. However, Sard was implying that he would shut down the lifeline of Holm!

“What do you want from this? What about the Grand Cardinals of the other four parishes and the legendary knights in the countries?” Fernando controlled his anxiety.

Sard chuckled. “You should’ve made some progress on diagnosing the fake gods. I believe you must’ve reported Lucien’s report on Ell’s church, too. Do you not know what I want? I want to establish a church with my own beliefs in order to approach the Almighty Lord.”

“The lands on this side of the Storm Strait is an excellent choice. I will reform the doctrines of the Church and return the interpretation right of the Cannon to the believers. The Saint Truth will be everyone’s Saint Truth. In such a way, my church will be something that you can count on and work with, like the North Church and their nobles.”

“For the legendary knights and nobles, it will be an acceptable balance. Until the South Church is completely destroyed, you cannot abandon them and have to respect them.”

“What I’m doing right now is to make use of the radicals in the Holm parish to transform the opinions of the clergy and to intensify the relationship between the nobles and the Church, so that the liberals will abandon the Church and join my arms when a new balance is available, and the conservatives will make a similar choice after weighing the pros and cons.”

“I’m confident to attract one of the four Grand Cardinals in other parishes. Based on the secrets I obtained from the World of Souls, I’m confident to attract another one or two in a year. The legendary knights will recognize the situation. Now, I already have ‘Heart of Time’. I don’t think you have no legendary knights on your side after such a long time, do you?”

Sard admitted frankly that he got something from the World of Souls. After all, the Congress of Magic must’ve guessed it.

Fernando acknowledged his speculation with silence. A few legendary knights in every country had been attracted to the Congress, but until the situation changed, they would not revolt but would even attack the Congress under the Church’s lead.

“In such a way, the power of God will plummet. Even if you have three Grand Cardinals, that’s still far from the nobles. You would be overwhelmed by them. Are you not worried about that?” Asked Fernando solemnly.

Sard shook his head. “What I want is faith, the truth, and to be closer to the Lord. Everything else is just false. If you would like to cooperate, you have to stress that when you swear before the Origin of the World, and I will also promise that I will shut down the transmission magic circle with the Heart of Faith.”

“This is too important a matter for us to give you an answer immediately. We have to summon the Highest Council for discussion.” Fernando said seriously.

Sard smiled. “Of course.”

Then, the human-shaped air that he gathered was gone.

Hathaway watched it for a while and said in a low voice, “Do you believe what he said?”

“He sounded rather reasonable. It’s worth a shot, too. However, we have to be prepared that he is up to something else.” His hands behind his back, Fernando looked at the Radiance Church in the city.

.....

Inside the secret chamber, James kicked David into a coma after hearing his speech. He turned to Lucien and said, "Lucien, you will check his confession with magic first. I'll ask the neutrals and the Church advocates to check it, too. Rest assured, this is only to get more convincing and authentic proof. We will not compromise or attack randomly until the enemy pays."

"Alright, I'll check it later. 'Cursed Angel' Grunwell, on the other hand, has to be given to me. I lack the materials of a level-nine gold knight to work on the steady inheritance and activation of blood power. You can take away part of the tissues and his identity papers from Grunwell, or the conservatives would deny it." Lucien looked at Grunwell casually.

Duke James also looked at Grunwell. To be used by a sorcerer as experiment materials was much more brutal than to be killed. However, he was interested by something else Lucien said. "Steady inheritance and activation of blood power? Has the Congress made breakthroughs in that regard?"

"Not yet, but I believe there will be." Lucien bragged, giving the nobles hope without specifying how long it would take.

His eyes glowing, James said, "Lucien, you are truly a genius in arcana studies. I hope that you can resolve the conundrum someday. Alright, this room has poisons and curses lingering everywhere. It is bad for Her Majesty and other victims. I'll suppress the 'Helpless Kiss' in Russell and Camil first. The mix of poisons and curses will probably fade away very soon after they take a good rest in the other room."

"You will bring Her Majesty to the guest room. I'll 'process' the spot first before I inform 'Heart of Time'."

Lucien discovered that James was more friendly to him. He was not worried about their relationship when Natasha protected him risking her own life, and he even gave them an opportunity to talk in private. Perhaps, his change of attitude was because of the assassination of the night watchers?

Lucien was about to reply, when his cheeks bounced and he received his master's secret message. Understanding everything, he nodded at Duke James with a weird look and walked to Natasha.

"You still haven't gathered your willpower? I'll suppress the 'Helpless Kiss' with magic first." Lucien held Natasha's shoulder concernedly.

Natasha nodded. "No. Bring me to the guest room. I can use the Health Belt after the willpower is gathered."

Lucien exerted strength and supported her to leave the wall that she leaned against. But he suddenly felt something when he noticed that her feet were unsteady.

Natasha sensed Lucien's pause and looked at him in confusion, but she felt a hand on her leg the moment she turned her head, and she immediately flew up. She waved her arms subconsciously, hoping to catch something, but because of her weak hands, she could only grip Lucien's shoulder in the end.

Calming herself down, Natasha saw Lucien's smiling face as well as the ceiling. It was not until then that she realized that Lucien had swept her off her feet!

Ever since she could remember, counting the incident where Lucien carried her to escape, she had never been hugged by a man in such a way before. Both embarrassed and angered, her bloodstained face emitted suspicious redness.

Lucien felt great after finally leaving the queen swooning. That should be the normal posture!

Natasha's face was slightly red. It was indescribably beautiful even though it was covered in blood. Recalling the female god of war that stood before him a moment ago, Lucien was greatly touched and kissed her in the face.

Sensing the warm touch on her face, Natasha put on a warm smile.

All her embarrassment gone, she said in a low voice, “I’ll hug you in the same way if there’s a chance!”

Chapter 539: Kritonia

Holding Natasha in his arms off her feet, Lucien walked to the guest room at the end of the corridor calmly. With such a posture and such softness in his hands, he was quite satisfied and could not cover his smile even though he could smell nothing but stinky blood and sour poisons.

Natasha, on the other hand, felt rather complicated. Her self-perception and her previous experience both suggested that she was a brave knight, but now that such a brave and firm knight was hugged by Lucien in such a way, she felt indescribably weak and ashamed. However, Lucien was the one who was hugging her. His heartbeat, his smell and his chest were all so familiar and made her feel warm and sweet. Therefore, she was both delighted and embarrassed, and she tried not to reveal her feelings on her face in case Lucien made fun of her.

While she felt uncomfortable and yet she did not want it to end, it did not occur to Natasha that she was also wearing a smile until Lucien stopped at the door of a guest room.

“Duke James’ guest rooms have divine power circles, too?” Lucien was more or less surprised.

Natasha tried to shift her attention from her current awkwardness and looked at the room. “The few guest rooms on this floor are for the entertainment of the royal family and other major nobles. So, the divine power circles are independent from the overall defense of the manor, giving the guests a private, secure space.”

As she explained, she saw that Lucien opened the door with his spiritual power and walked in.

The guest room was rather spacious, with a living room, a bedroom, a library and other facilities such as a piano and a bar. After Lucien closed the door and activated the divine power circle, the whole room was suddenly separated from the manor. Quiet and tranquil, it seemed like a private space that belonged to them.

Natasha knew that Lucien was being cautious. He could not be distracted when he guided her to use the Health Belt. They would be in major trouble if the divine power circle was not activated and an enemy attacked them.

Suddenly, she felt something soft, comfortable on her back and realized that Lucien had put her on the velvet bed and was staring at her attentively with her black eyes.

In a low voice, Lucien said, "Just now, you..."

Before he finished, Natasha interrupted Lucien and smiled, "No thanks are needed between us. It was my faith of protection as a knight and a wife. If it were you, I believe you would've done the same. I was quite shocked when you stabbed your hand into your neck."

Without being shy or retreating, she spoke of the word 'wife' frankly.

While talking, she extended her right hand and grabbed Lucien's, passing the gentle warmth into Lucien's heart.

There was no need to say or do anything. Lucien held Natasha's right hand tightly and sensed the eternal warmth between the two of them. Then, looking at her in the eyes, he lowered his head and kissed her lips.

Natasha blinked and slowly closed her eyes, relishing the kiss and not loosening her right hand.

Everything was slow and gentle, but it was even more exhilarating than passion.

After a while, when their lips were separated, Natasha's eyes were clear again. She said with a smile, "Hurry and suppress 'Helpless Kiss' for me..."

"I'm going to help you suppress 'Helpless Kiss'..." Lucien smiled and said at the same time. Then they both stopped and looked at each other with a smile.

“Hurry. If our recovery is delayed because of romance, and we are killed by subsequent enemies, it will be on the top ten most stupid ways to die in Allyn.” Natasha recognized the situation as keenly as before.

Lucien chuckled, “There shouldn’t be any subsequent enemies.” Had he not received Fernando’s secret message, he would’ve helped Natasha suppress the poisons earlier, but the truth was, it was not easy to come by Her Majesty when she was weak.

Natasha raised her eyebrow. “Granny Hathaway and the Lord of Storm came?”

She believed that Lucien came to the private party with certain preparations. Therefore, she thought of ‘reinforcements’ the moment Lucien said it.

“Let’s talk about the details later. I’ll help you recover first.” Lucien nodded. Considering that Duke James would inform ‘Heart of Time’ to come after processing the spot, he could not stay long. So, he helped Natasha suppress ‘Helpless Kiss’ with magic such as ‘Poison Neutralization’.

Natasha focused her attention and began to gather her willpower. After a minute, a sharp and cold brilliance beamed out of her eyes.

Seeing that, Lucien spread his spiritual power to Natasha through their right hands that were still crossed, guiding her to pass the magic barriers of the Health Belt. Then, he erased his own mark.

Natasha was slightly surprised, but she did not have the time to consider at such a moment. She hurried to leave her own mark in the pivot.

The Health Belt around her waist emitted a gentle glow. As its passive ability was activated, the dark green gas spread out and disappeared.

After a dozen seconds, Natasha waved her left hand and said in complicated feelings. “Being weak is a terrible feeling.”

Then she looked at Lucien. “Why did you erase your mark?”

"I have the Congus Ring with me. The effect of the Health Belt is redundant for me, and you don't have an item that protects you from poisons, diseases and negative energy." Lucien said with a smile.

While the royal family of Holm was rich, and Natasha had a granny who was a grand arcanist, the senior-rank items, especially those with special effects, had always been rare. Therefore, although Natasha had equipment that could prevent poisons, it was not as good as the Health Belt.

Having regained her strength, Natasha cleaned the blood on her and teased him, "What a precious gift. You truly deserve to be called a 'moving treasury', Mr. Evans."

It was what Grunwell said just now.

"You're my wife and my queen. Nothing is more precious than you." Lucien realized that he might be talented at sweet talking after all.

Natasha chuckled and enjoyed what Lucien said, but she intentionally said, "You picked three items from Mr. Rhine's place. Except for the scroll that you used yourself, you offered the other items to me. Your adventure proved to be for nothing."

It was then that Lucien realized that the items he got from Mr. Rhine's treasury had been mostly offered to Natasha. However, it was definitely worthwhile as long as she was happy. Mr. Rhine was really a good man. When could he offer an opportunity to pick another item from his treasury?

"Right, did you have something you want to say?" Natasha was also relieved after knowing that Hathaway was around. She almost forgot to ask.

Lucien cast another spells cautiously in case of snooping. Then, he spoke to Natasha via the telepathic bond. "Sard was the one behind the curtain. He wanted to..."

There was no need to keep it a secret from Natasha. As the queen of Holm, she would be involved in the matter sooner or later. Besides, her tendencies were rather obvious.

“I don’t trust Sard. He has been too mysterious and unpredictable.” Natasha offered her opinion.

Lucien nodded. “Nobody knows what he got from the World of Souls. It’s not easy to infer his real purpose. We have to be prepared that he has great schemes.”

“His Excellency Kritonia was attracted to him... What’s the result of your necropsy?” Natasha asked solemnly.

Lucien thought for a moment and confessed, “The necromancers of the Hand of Paleness knew a lot about cells. Based on their knowledge system, they found out the age of the prince when he passed away. Although there’s an error of about half a year, it is doubtless that the prince’s actual age when he died was two to three years older than the age he should’ve been. You can ask Hathaway for more details.”

The test result was too important to be delivered through electromagnetism messaging. Lucien joined the party and met Natasha partly to forward the message, too.

Natasha listened and sighed in sorrow, “I find Sard even less trustworthy...”

Then, she calmed down and smiled like a real queen. “Rest assured. I will not be impetuous. It takes tricks and plans to crush the enemy in a head-on clash. I’ll cooperate with them until the lands are separated. Then, I will bring Kritonia to trial for his crime. He will have no support.”

After learning the cause of her family member’s death, she made up her mind. Sard couldn’t have done it on his own. The pope and the Grand Cardinal must’ve given their help.

“The Congress and I will be on your side.” Lucien touched Natasha’s hair, which made her slightly uncomfortable. She intentionally changed the subject, “Right, Lucien, I’ll tell you a secret...”

Hearing the secret in the telepathic bond, Lucien smiled. "This is great. I feel relieved."

Pausing for a moment, Lucien walked to the window and observed the nobles who were almost about to riot. "Kritonia will be informed very soon. It's inappropriate for me to meet him. I'll leave now. Don't be scared when you face him. Her Excellency Hathaway is around and observing everything."

"Okay." Natasha suddenly put on a naughty smile. "There should be a few more minutes. Lucien, my strength is not entirely back yet. Help me take off my clothes and put on new ones."

Her hunting suit was transformed from a senior-rank knight suit. She couldn't have resisted Grunwell as long without it, but under the corrosion of curses and poisons, the suit had been completely ruined, with cracks and holes everywhere. Thankfully, she had a few more senior-rank helmets and knight suits after inheriting the throne, so she opened the storage bag and took out a knight suit that had been transformed into a purple long dress, as well as lingerie, silk stockings, etc.

Lucien's heart raced, and he breathed heavily, "There's no time..."

"You are overthinking. I asked you to change my clothes for me exactly because there is no time." Natasha said in a delightful smile, "This is a 'reward' for you hugging me a moment ago."

Lucien's smile was immediately frozen.

.....

In another chamber where Duke James had turned on the divine power circle, Natasha arrived with her purple long hair tied again. The vague redness on her face still hadn't faded away.

At this moment, Duke James directed a grey-haired old man to enter the room. Inside his azure eyes, an ever-surging river of time seemed to be running.

"Your Majesty." Kritonia bowed in a heavy mood. "Duke York must be severely punished for his involvement in the assassination against you, but considering that he merely observed but did not participate in planning, and considering the loyalty of the Kritonia family for hundreds of years, please show him some mercy. The Kritonia and me will protect you even more loyally.”

He had already gained the confession from David. Therefore, he had come to Natasha to plead guilty and seek compromises and exchanges.

Natasha said solemnly, “If I compromise and back off about someone who intends to kill me, wouldn’t it be telling everyone that they are free to kill me because they wouldn’t be punished whether they win or lose? I don’t think I can survive for long in such a case.”

Kritonia was about to talk, only to be stopped by Natasha’s gesture: “So, York and Barady must die!”

“As a punishment of treason, the Barady family, who initiated the assassination, will lose their title and their fief lingdi. As for the Kritonia, since only York was mildly involved in it, he will be punished but his family will be unaffected.”

“Kritonia, what do you think of such a decision? I don’t think there is only one grand knight in your household, is there?”

Easy compromises without principles would only make the compromises worthless.

Chapter 540: The Solemn Queen

Kritonia raised his head, only to see Natasha standing straight intimidatingly against the light, making everyone forget her gender and her beauty.

He narrowed his eyes. Even though he did not release any pressure actively, he was still giving off an oppressive air having been a legendary knight for hundreds of years. Duke James, who was protecting Natasha, couldn't help but move his eyes away, but Natasha looked back at him without wavering.

After ten seconds, Kritonia said in a low voice, "That's an excellent decision, Your Majesty. I agree that anyone that violates the basic order of the nobles shall be punished, but I hope that Your Majesty will allow me to take care of York in person. I do not want him to embarrass the family on the gallows."

"That's understandable." Natasha looked gentler, but the exhaustion no less than that of after a fierce battle with a radiant knight of her level rose in her body. "Also, I would like the shift change of legendary knights to be advanced. I hope that Winston can take your shift as soon as possible, so that I can be familiarized with both of you the two excellencies sooner."

Kritonia understood that it was her conditions of the deal. Also, he knew that Natasha wouldn't trust him for the time being after such an incident. He nodded and said, "I'll swap with Winston and watch over the colonies in the alternate dimensions after I escort you back to the Nekso Palace. I will live up to your trust, Your Majesty."

"You are a legendary hero who founded the kingdom, Your Excellency. I'm confident in you." Natasha encouraged and reassured him. "I'll leave Duke York to you. His heir will be your decision."

Kritonia pressed his chest with his left hand and bowed deeply, "Thank you for your trust, Your Majesty. I'll escort you back to the Nekso Palace first."

Now that the Heart of Time had come, the poisons in Camil, Russell and the rest of them were soon relieved. Kritonia also ‘successfully’ found evidence from ‘Primous’, proving that he was the ‘Cursed Angel’, who ranked fifth among the night watchers.

After she returned to the Nekso Palace, Natasha spoke to James and his partners, “Duke James, would you please invite Duke Solefen to come? Also, block the message and convene the Parliament of Nobles an hour later. Duke Russell, please watch over Count Barady in case he runs off and check to see if York is really dead.”

“Yes, Your Majesty.” Duke James and the rest of them answered sincerely. A distinguished knight was always admirable, especially one who stayed to resist the enemy when she could’ve run away.

.....

Inside the Parliament of Nobles in the Nekso Palace.

Count Barady walked in with Duke Russell gloomily. He merely nodded at the nobles who greeted him warmly, his usual manner gone.

“Russell, can you tell me why Her Majesty is summoning the nobles? As I recall, the one-month mourning period is not over yet. Is she breaking her promise?” Count Barady spoke to Duke Russell.

He knew that Natasha was going to James’ private garden, and that the Duke and Grunwell would take action. Therefore, he had a bad feeling when he was informed that Natasha was convening a meeting of the nobles. However, Duke Russell, a level-eight radiant knight, had come to his house to invite him and was keeping him company. He couldn’t even run even if he wanted to hide or escape, and so he had to come in fear.

He kept telling himself that it was fine. He merely fermented the hatred in David’s heart and introduced Grunwell to him. He never asked him to kill Her Majesty. He couldn’t be blamed for introducing two people to meet each other in a private dinner, right?

Seeing that Duke Rex's eyes moved over, Russell understood that he had fulfilled his responsibility and therefore returned to his seat with a smile.

"Why did you come with Russell? Do you know why the queen convened a meeting? This is in violation of the one-month promise." Rex had a bad feeling, too, as if something horrible had happened.

Count Barady shook his head. "I have no idea. Where is York?"

Duke Rex frowned. "I didn't see him. Isn't he always the earliest? Did something happen to him? In that case, His Excellency Kritonia's fury will burn everything."

Duke York had always come early to the meetings in the Parliament of Nobles to visit 'Heart of Time' first.

Realizing that York did not come, Count Barady looked even more awful, but he also had a plan to save himself.

Since it was a temporary meeting, many nobles who were not in Rentato failed to come. Only two thirds of the members were present.

Sensing that Natasha had arrived, Rex left his seat and walked to the dais up ahead, knocking the mallet.

After the knock, the hall fell quiet.

"Welcome Her Majesty." Rex turned around, his black cape floating.

Natasha walked in slowly in a black long dress, followed by Camil and a team of knights.

The moment they entered the hall, the knights split and 'guarded' the seats in the ground hall.

The one in the lead was a calm gold-haired man. Count Barady recognized that it was John, the knight that Queen Natasha brought from Aalto. The others were the Violent Knights from Aalto and the new knights who pledged loyalty to the queen. More than fifteen of them were grand knights. Plus Camil, they were much stronger than a medium knight group.

Not knowing what happened, the nobles whispered to each other. Everything suggested that something great was going to happen.

Also, they were shocked that the queen had earned the allegiance of so many grand knights and knights in only one month. The Sword of Truth's Knights had been adjusting under Natasha's command and were most trustworthy.

It meant that she already had the strength to defend her crown.

Natasha knocked the mallet, silencing the hall where hundreds of flies seemed to be humming.

Then, she looked around and declared 'furiously': "This morning, I suffered an assassination attempt."

"What?" The nobles exclaimed. It was a taboo to assassinate one's liege in the first place, not to mention killing the queen in no more than one month after she was crowned. That was challenging the order of the nobles.

Rex was stunned first. Recalling York's absence and Barady's absentmindedness as well as their hints, he immediately burst into fury and glared at Count Barady. Idiots! You can go to hell if your evidence has been found!

At this moment, Count Barady calmed down and turned a blind eye to Duke Rex's fury, considering how to minimize his punishment.

Natasha knocked the mallet again and said, "The assassins were Count David and 'Cursed Angel', who ranks top the fifth among the night watchers. Duke James, Duke Russell and Count Henson can prove that. His Excellency Saint Sard can prove the identity of 'Cursed Angel'."

The hall fell silent again. The nobles found it hard to understand why David, who always favored the Congress of Magic, conspired with the night watchers, but they soon realized that it was all because of desire!

“The night watchers dared to assassinate the queen? The Church is more and more outrageous!”

“I believe that such actions must be contained, or it will be our turn soon.”

“Contained? All the Church ever did was to apologize and then to forget their apology! Perhaps our balance strategy is a mistake!”

The nobles discussed angrily, as Natasha expected. The Church could’ve denied Grunwell’s identity, if somebody other than Sard were the Grand Cardinal of the Holm parish.

“Your Majesty, such a crime must be punished! Hang David, burn Grunwell, and ask the Church to compensate!” The nobles, regardless of their sides, offered similar opinions.

Natasha nodded. “They shall be tried fairly, but I’ve summoned the meeting today because Count David confessed that he was instigated by Count Barady with Duke York’s involvement.”

The noise stopped again. All the nobles were shocked save the few who knew about it in advance. Both Duke York and Count Barady were bit shots in the Parliament of Nobles. There would be a major shock now that they were involved. Also, ‘Heart of Time’ was behind Duke York after all.

Thinking about that, they all looked at Count Barady and prayed that it was not true. The kingdom could not afford a civil war.

Rex, on the other hand, glared at Barady in fury. A reckless fool!

Count Barady slowly stood up. “Your Majesty, I deny the accusation against me. I would like to confront David. I never instigated or hinted him to assassinate you. Duke York is as innocent as me. You can ask him, too.”

He associated himself with York, hoping to minimize his penalty with the influence of ‘Heart of Time’. Besides, indeed no evidence of instigation was left.

“I’ve asked someone to invite Duke York.” Said Natasha calmly, which made Count Barady ill at ease. “Your Majesty, I would like David to confront me in front of all nobles.”

Natasha waved her hands, and a knight pushed the shackled David in.

“Hahaha, Barady, you still want to deny it? It was you who fermented hatred in my heart. It was you and York who taught me how to kill the queen.” David laughed crazily, causing a great scene.

Count Barady smiled. The crazier, the better. As long as he linked himself to York, there would be a great chance that he could get away with it. “Would you please tell them how we instigated and allured you?”

David was stunned. Unable to think of any convincing speech, he made up a few lines according to the prior confession.

Barady raised his voice, “Your Majesty, he is lying! We never said such things! I would like a cleric to test the veracity of his words!”

He believed that he never said anything that was punishable. He was confident of himself!

Looking at Natasha sincerely, Count Barady said, “Would you please repeat your acquirement of his confession, Your Majesty? I’m angry about David’s setup.”

He put on a smile.

At this moment, another knight walked in and fell on one of his knees, “Your Majesty, Duke York has killed himself. This is his confession letter, which described Count Barady’s doings in details.”

The hall burst into whispers again. It was a totally unexpected change.

What? York killed himself?

What about the Heart of Time?

Why did he confess?

Count Barady collapsed on his seat, his brain too muddled for him to hear any voices or see anything.

It shouldn't be like this! It shouldn't be like this!

Natasha knocked the mallet and announced calmly, "Based on valid proof, Count Barady is found guilty of treason. He will be hanged, his title and his fief lingdi renounced..."

The nobles listened to Natasha sentence in confusion: "... His fief will be divided into five parts. The largest part will go to the royal family, and the other four parts will be bequeathed to Duke James, Duke Russell, Duke Henson and Countess Camil for their successful prevention of the assassination..."

"... All members of the Barady family will be deprived of their titles. The main members will be exiled to the northland..."

"Duke York confessed before he killed himself, and he was not the mastermind. His family shall not be punished..."

The cold and grave voice echoed, soaking the nobles in sweat. That was a real great noble that was backed by a legendary knight!

In the past, Natasha was merely a talented level-seven knight and a lady with unparalleled beauty in their eyes. But after the verdict, as the Heart of Time backed off and the great nobles collapsed, Natasha had truly evolved into an intimidating queen in their minds!

Rex shook his head at Barady's collapse. Now that the queen boldly convened the meeting, it meant that deals and compromises had already been made in private. Your destiny was already fixed. However you defended yourself, any noble with keen eyes could tell that something was not right when David made the confession. As long as the clerics or the neutral nobles interrogated you, they would get more convincing proof, which might involve other people.

However, he found Barady's dying struggle understandable, too.

.....

After Lucien returned to Allyn, he was summoned by Fernando immediately.

“Considering your ability of inviting dangers, I’ve decided to talk to Douglas and ask him to get the improved ‘Life Hiding’. Think about which body part you can get rid of first.” Fernando spoke straightforwardly.

Lucien looked at himself. His left fingers were certainly not an option, as they would nullify ‘Life Hiding’, and a missing right finger would affect his spell-casting and his piano-playing. Therefore, he said, “The little toe on my left foot.”

Then, Lucien thought of a critical question. “Master, do I need to pay for it?”

“Do you want me to pay for it?” Fernando replied, not in a good mood. He had to make other sacrifices just to let the Hand of Paleness agree to offer the ritual magic.

Chapter 541: Felipe's Surprise

Crows seemed to be flying before Lucien's eyes as he envisioned his bankruptcy. Although he had earned copious revenue from the technological investment in the Mineral and Harvest Company, the Gift from Elements Company, etc. he had devoted all his money to the construction of the magic tower three months ago and could barely make ends meet. He found his way back to the community of 'magnates' from the arcana point rewards for the new alchemy, the supplementary rewards for the light quantum hypothesis, and his annuities, but there was still a major gap between it and an improved ninth-circle ritual magic.

The Congress' favor on materials, drugs and magics was barely useful on the matter. The Hand of Paleness would be showing him enough respect if they did not charge him more.

Therefore, Lucien seriously considered applying for loans from his teacher or the Holm Mineral Union Bank.

Then, his monocle suddenly turned hot.

"Lucien, I just ended the meeting in the Parliament of Nobles. I sentenced Count Barady to death and deprived him of his title..." Said Natasha excitedly. She certainly did not have any mercy on the mastermind who caused such injuries to Lucien and herself.

Holding back the pain of imminent bankruptcy, Lucien smiled, "Any noble who plans to assassinate you in the future will have to think of what became of Count Barady before they act."

Natasha told him what happened in the parliament and her talk with Kritonia. Then, he said, "I've divided Count Barady's fief into five parts. One part is for Aunt Camil as 'compensation for shock', three parts will be used to appease Duke James and his lot, and the last part is supposed to be yours. However, since you cannot appear in public right now, I've collected it in the name of the royal family, but I'll give them to you in private. That's your fair share. You are not allowed to refuse it."

Lucien was immediately shocked. With a smile, he blurted out, “Natasha, I love you.”

It was the most unexpected windfall and more than enough to pay for the improved ‘Life Hiding’. There would even be plenty of money left.

“Huh?” Natasha did not expect such an answer at all. She was somewhat lost.

Lucien did not lie to her and told her the things about the improved Life Hiding.

“I’ll be much more relieved... I didn’t know that you were also a ‘money grubber’. Thankfully, I am a queen and the future duchess.” Natasha chuckled and said, “It’s a pity that a knight has to maintain the solidarity of body, blood, soul and willpower before advancing into legendary. I cannot use such a method as the last life-saving measure. A knight’s path is destined to be an arduous and difficult one.”

The Violet family had one legendary knight, and the Hoffenberg family had one too. Natasha was much more experienced than regular knights about their advancement.

Lucien knew a thing or two about that, too. Had it been otherwise, ‘Body Controller’ Ramiro’s ability of massive proliferation wouldn’t have been his unique skill.

Ending the conversation, Lucien discovered that Fernando was looking at him with a smile. He asked, “What’s up, master?”

Fernando smacked his lips. “How great it is to be young, and how great it is to have a queen as your partner.”

Lucien changed the subject rather awkwardly, “Master, does the improved Life Hiding have to require a limb part?”

It was a unique ritual of the Hand of Paleness, and Lucien was unaware of the details. He only knew that the original version of Life Hiding did require it.

Fernando glared at Life Hiding. "If I knew so many details, I would've developed it myself. All I know is that the original Life Hiding can only use one part of the body. You will stay in Allyn for the next few days. After the ritual of Life Hiding is done, you can go wherever you want."

"Starting from the next month, there will probably be more discussions regarding the Oliver transformation. We need to direct them to discover the relativistic effect. Hopefully, we can present your special theory of relativity to Douglas in two to three months."

"As you wish." Lucien had no objection. The most important task right now was to construct magic models to make himself a fairly strong level-eight sorcerer. His next goal would be 'Magic Reverse', a seventh-circle that he had been dreaming about for a long time.

.....

In his office in the Atom Institution, Lucien was reading the papers that his students reviewed and revising the final comment now and then.

Rock walked in exhaustedly with a journal and dozens of resumes. "Lucien, the second round of interviews is over, and the final interviews will be held in three days. See if there's any problem."

Lucien browsed through the resumes and smiled, "Not bad. There are a couple of middle-rank sorcerers. You check them first and ask the Affair Committee to conduct background checks. I'll test them during the final interviews, too, in case of spies from the Church or other organizations try to sneak in."

Since it was a public recruitment, from the smokingly popular Atom Institution, those spies would've been unqualified if they did not try to sneak in one way or another. Lucien dared not be careless at all.

Rock agreed. "The Church's infiltration is too good. After all, there are many sorcerers in the Congress who are not having a thriving life."

Then, he thought of something and, handing the journal to Lucien, said in a low voice, “Did you know? His Excellency Oliver and Lady Florencia are divorced.”

Lucien picked up the journal, only to discover that it was ‘Allyn Impression’, a journal of gossips. He found the article and shook his head, “In such a case, all the seven grand arcanists of the Congress are now single. How hilarious and heartbreaking.”

After discussing the gossip for a while, Rock rose and walked out in satisfaction. The moment he opened the door, he saw a graceful middle-aged man who was wearing a wig.

“Mr... Mr. Oliver...” Rock’s face turned face, for he had spoken evil of the man a lot just now.

Oliver nodded and passed Rock, closing the door of the office.

“Lucien, this is my play. Check it out.” Oliver glanced at the ‘Allyn Impression’ and said calmly.

Lucien picked up the play and skimmed through it. His lips twitched as he read on, and he almost suspected that Oliver was another buddy from Earth, because it was very similar to Andersen’s The Little Mermaid. Thankfully, the ending was entirely different.

In Oliver’s play, a handsome prince happened upon a mermaid princess on the ocean. The two of them fell in love. The mermaid princess abandoned everything else, swallowed potions to get rid of her tail, and returned to the prince’s country as a beautiful girl. They swore to live together forever, but the prince fell in love with another princess later, which devastated the mermaid and forced her to return to the ocean.

As time went by, the prince recognized his heart and realized that the mermaid girl was the one he loved most. Therefore, he set sail every day and called the mermaid girl’s name, only to get no response. Days passed, and the prince finally died of sorrow. Near his death, his mind made him see the mermaid princess walking toward him, so he put on a sweet smile.

“Very tragic...” Lucien did not know how to comment on it.

Oliver sighed. “Only a tragedy can move a lady and save a marriage.”

Lucien felt a toothache and couldn’t help but observe, “Mr. Oliver, I’m really confused about something. Why did you betray your marriage and hurt Lady Florencia again and again when you were in love with her?”

Oliver said solemnly, “Lucien, you don’t understand. I’m serious about every relationship. I dedicated my soul and my heart to them. My love was as scorching as fire. It was exactly in such love that my inspirations burst out. I achieved many of my results from there.”

“I love every one of them, but I love Florencia most.”

Lucien did not know how to react. After hearing Oliver’s self-analysis, Lucien clapped hands for every lady that left him.

After only several seconds, Lucien overruled his previous decision to adapt the opera for Oliver. If Florencia demeaned herself by forgiving Oliver again, that would be her business, but he shouldn’t be Oliver’s accomplice. His conscience would be guilty if he worked on the opera.

Therefore, weighing his tone, Lucien said, “Mr. Oliver, I’m truly sorry. Her Excellency Hathaway and His Excellency Morris do not want me to write an opera for you, and they...”

Lucien left his sentence unfinished, with a ‘you know what I’m talking about’ look on his face.

Briefly stunned, Oliver heaved a long sigh. “I understand. They are the seniors of the Hoffenberg family. Lucien, I hope that I can cooperate with you on other operas in the future. The best librettos deserve the best musician.”

After seeing Oliver off, Lucien closed the door, not wanting to meddle in the family business at all. After all, Hathaway’s impression of Oliver had been terrible for a long time. She wouldn’t say anything even if Oliver went to ask her.

After pushing it away, Lucien had to learn the creation of operas himself. Thankfully, he had many classics in his head for reference, and he had selected 'The Valkyrie', the second part of 'The Ring of the Nibelung', written by Mr. Wagner.

Of course, in order to make the opera that was based on the folklores in German and north Europe fit for this world and Natasha, Lucien had to make fundamental adaptations, which could almost be called recreation.

.....

The second day after Oliver's visit, Lucien received a message from Fernando and knew that the ritual was good to go.

On the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower, inside an empty hall...

Lucien saw Felipe again, who looked as pale and sick as before.

"This magic is improved based on his studies on cell memories. With his cooperation, my odds of success will be higher." Fernando admitted frankly that he had never performed the improved Life Hiding before, and the Lord of the Undead would certainly supervise the ceremony for Lucian.

Felipe looked at Lucien, finding it hard to believe that his master had failed to kill the guy multiple times and even got killed. However, he would not speak of those things in front of Fernando. Instead, he nodded, "Your magnifying magic based on the nature of light is good, but it's far away from the effect you promised."

His magic level had been improved to the seventh circle, which was rather fast actually but poor compared to Lucien. His arcana level was close to level seven.

Lucien said solemnly, "Improvements have to be made step by step. Rest assured. I will not abandon the studies."

Lucien never had the courage to work on the experiments on the electron diffraction. He planned to wait until he digested the harvests brought by the special theory of relativity and the Silver

Moon.

Then, Lucien asked the question that he cared about, “Felipe, can the improved Life Hiding only use a limb?”

Felipe said coldly, “Hair and teeth do not contain blood and are useless. Don’t try to keep yourself safe without affecting yourself. Are you such a greedy and insane man?”

He never hesitated to mock Lucien when there was a chance.

Lucien frowned. “What about the viscera?”

Felipe sniffed. “They work, but what’s the point? Even the radiant knights cannot sustain themselves a long time when part of their guts are missing. The parts cut by Life Hiding cannot be regrown, not even with Body Transformation. Stop fantasizing about the unrealistic things.”

“So you mean, the viscera do work?” Lucien was relieved. “I request to use my ‘intestine’ in a certain part.”

Felipe looked at Lucien, somewhat stunned, as if he had never seen anyone as stupid before. “Are you sure? I won’t compensate for your losses if the ritual fails.”

“I am sure.” Lucien calculated and realized that he could afford two rituals. Therefore, he might as well have a try.

Half an hour later, Felipe was stunned as he watched Lucien leave with ‘amulet of life’ in a light mood.

“He is absolutely fine when a section of his intestines are gone...”

“He is indeed a monster...”

Chapter 542: Terms of Cooperation

On the 33rd level of the Allyn magic tower, Lucien followed the Lord of Storm to his library.

In the empty corridor, Fernando eyed Lucien thoughtfully, “What intestine did you take out? Why were you not affected at all?”

While he was also good at Necromancy, it was a class where the knowledge of the ancient Magic Empire lingered and therefore had a completely different development from that on Earth. Regarding the inflamed and pathological organs, all that needed to be done was medical skills and magic potions. No surgeries were required at all.

In terms of dissection, the necromancers focused on the relationship between different organs and diseases to develop new magics of curses and diseases, or to lower the requirement of similar magic in the past. As a result, their categorization of internal organs was rather vague. Epityphlon and cecum were both regarded as intestines without being distinguished accurately.

“I have named it epityphlon. I discovered it when I dissected and studied Grunwell’s body recently that even though this section of the intestine was cut off and his recovery ability was suppressed, there was no negative effect at all. That is to say, this part was barely of any use.” Lucien offered a reason that he had decided a long time ago. After all, his teacher knew very well that he recently had a level-nine dark knight as an experiment material.

As for the influence on immunity, it was little to none for a knight.

Fernando croaked, “It is not entirely useless. At least, it can be used as the main material for the improved Life Hiding.”

He showed no objection to Lucien’s dissecting Grunwell but said affirmatively, “It’s high time that you worked on blood powers. That’s a useful supplement for soul studies. Many life-extending rituals in the future will require knowledge in that aspect as the foundation. You wouldn’t want to turn into a lich, would you? Or do you want Natasha to die much earlier than you?”

“A knight cannot be transformed into a lich. They’ll be scourged by negative energy even though they turn into death knights. Therefore, there are few legendary magics that can extend her life. As far as I know, there are no more than five of them with a remarkable effect of more than a thousand years. Without an excellent understanding of Necromancy, you wouldn’t be able to host the rituals even if you are at the peak of legendary. You couldn’t ask for Vicente’s help by then, can you?”

“Isn’t there still you, master? You hosted the ritual of Life Hiding just now.” Lucien remembered it in his heart and complimented his teacher with his mouth.

Fernando replied impatiently, “That little girl has the potential to advance into legendary. When she needs to extend her life, chances are that I will already have perished while I am exploring the truths of the world. Also, the materials that the five legendary magics require are all extremely precious. For example, ‘Blessing of Dragon’, with which my life was lengthened, requires the blood and bones of a primordial dragon as the main materials for the ceremony. At that time, I worked with Hathaway and asked for Douglas’ help before we finally hunted a primordial red dragon. You barely have any chance to get one.”

“A legendary primordial dragon...” Lucien realized that it was terribly difficult to obtain such materials. Every dragon had horrifying physical defense in the first place, and their magic power grew with their age. A legendary primordial dragon would be as good as a legendary sorcerer in the ancient Magic Empire in terms of magic expertise.

More importantly, there were no more than seven primordial dragons that were still living. They were all important elders in the Dark Congress and certainly not counterfeits such as the Dark Dragon Lord.

Fernando ignored Lucien’s shock as if he were a monster but simply went on, “Therefore, if you can’t find suitable materials, you have to find a way to create a new magic ritual, which requires a profound knowledge on Necromancy. Do you think that Hathaway didn't try to extend Patrick's life? But he was too weak both physically and spiritually, and none of the existent rituals could help him greatly. Hathaway was not good at Necromancy and could not create a new ritual based on the actual circumstances... I knew no more than she did, either."

He didn't mention the Lord of the Undead, because Vicente was obviously not going to help Hathaway.

"Got it." Lucien nodded solemnly but was not too anxious. Natasha and he were still young. They should focus on improving their levels and advancing into legendary, and they could consider life extension later.

As he spoke, Lucien asked curiously, "Master, how many years of life can your 'Blessing of Dragon' give you?"

Fernando replied cockily, "Depending on the quality of materials, the host's understanding about the soul and the body, and certain unknown factors, the ritual adds two to five thousand years of life, and it can coexist with other life rituals. At that time, Hathaway and I both extended 4,700 years."

That was close to the best one could expect. No wonder he was so satisfied. Lucien thought to himself and continued asking, "What about the other legendary sorcerers? Those who are not transformed into liches?"

"I don't know much about other people because it's sort of a secret. I only know that Douglas made a deal with the Elves and used 'Nature's Gift' with the fruit of an elvish tree that yields once every ten thousand years, and that Brook hasn't extended his life with any legendary rituals yet." Fernando opened his library.

Brook was no more than two hundred years old. With his legendary expertise and the regular magic rituals, his life could already be lengthened to a thousand years, so he was not desperate to increase his longevity. Fernando, on the other hand, was different. Both Douglas and he were sorcerers who grew up in the ancient Magic Empire. They were already more than a thousand years old.

Hathaway shared the ritual materials by the way because she collaborated with them.

His curiosity satisfied, Lucien smiled, “Master, I’ll return to the magic tower and put the ‘amulet of life’ in the key area for protection.”

While the amulet of life was not as critical as a lich’s phylactery, and he wouldn’t be killed when the item was destroyed, Lucien dare not be careless because he traded half of his possessions for it.

Fernando became solemn and hinted Lucien to walk in.

After Lucien entered in confusion, he closed the library, turned on the magic circle and said, “The Highest Council has passed the motion to cooperate with Sard. They also met him in secret yesterday and signed a magic contract with him respectively.”

“Every one of them? What requests did he propose? What’s his promise?” Lucien mentioned how mysterious and queer Sard was to his teacher before. He turned solemn, too.

Fernando invited Lucien in exactly because he wanted to hear Lucien’s opinion. He spoke frankly, “Every member of the Highest Council signed it. As per Sard’s request, we the sorcerers asked for the fairness of the Lord of Hell, and he swore to the God of Truth with his Heart of Faith, before we signed the contract.”

Generally speaking, ordinary magic contracts did not work on legendary sorcerers. After all, the devils and other mysterious creatures who supervised the magic contracts risked being captured by the legendary sorcerers as experiment materials. They were highly incapable of supervising such contracts and punishing the violators. Therefore, the magic contracts of such a level were mostly supervised by the nine dukes of hell, or sworn to the Origin of Magic.

Because the Origin of Magic was unpredictable, the restraint of the latter contracts had been questioned. Some people’s cognitive worlds collapsed because they violated their vows, but some were as healthy as before. Although it was accepted that they used wordplays in their vows, Sard obviously did not intend to take the risk and therefore demanded the supervision of the Lord of Hell, who was a demigod. His oath based on faith, on the other hand, was an absolutely effective restraint on the clergy.

“The Lord of Hell... Is he going to meddle in this too?” Hearing reference to the terrifying big shot, Lucien couldn’t help but smile bitterly.

Fernando smiled, “If it were before, he might intervene in secret. Schemes are his favorite. However, he was just ambushed by Silver Moon Alterna recently and lost an important projection under your ‘Eternal Blaze’. He might be unwilling to take the risk. The Silver Moon, on the other hand, is basically recovered and watching over us in the sky. He may be unable to defeat Douglas even if he casts a projection here.”

“That great prophet and Angel King are likely to be played by Sard himself to manipulate the radical clerics and night watchers, but he never admitted it.”

‘Watching over us in the sky’ was a common metaphor in the magic world to indicate Alterna’s attention.

“What’s your vow and what’s Sard’s promise?” Lucien asked the key question again.

Fernando nodded slowly, “The contract stipulates that, until Sard breaks his promise or attacks any sorcerer of the Congress of Magic not in self-defense, we cannot attack him. Also, until his new church jeopardizes the Congress, we cannot suppress their development. Furthermore, he will enjoy the priority preaching rights on every colony of our alternate dimension that we will obtain.”

It’s a reasonable summary of Sard’s desire and also seems to imply his sincerity for the cooperation... Lucien thought to himself.

“The promise he made was that today one year later, he would leave the Radiance Church and let the Congress take over the massive transmission magic circles and divine power defenses inside, which is even better than him shutting down the transmission magic circles himself. Also, he will ask the Grand Cardinals of the other four churches to do the same. Those who are not enchanted by him will be ambushed by us under his cooperation.” Fernando looked at Lucien and said, “With your understanding about Sard, is there a problem with this?”

Lucien shook his head. “I only know that he had been keeping my relationship with Natasha a secret to the pope, which befits his purpose right now. I don’t see any loopholes yet, but none of us know what he got from the World of Souls, and we have to be prepared for other changes.”

Fernando did not say anything more and simply reminded Lucien, “Forward the issue to Natasha and ask her not to mention anything about this in front of Sard. She can give connivance and cooperate in secret, but she must not leave any textual or vocal evidence, so that there will still be chances for us to make a comeback.”

“Master, are you suggesting...?” Lucien was more or less surprised.

Fernando nodded solemnly, “Before you calculate your victory, you have to be prepared for an utter defeat.”

The South Church was very powerful. It had 24 legendary experts and one demigod by itself. As for the countries attached to it, even without Holm and other countries beyond the Storm Strait, there were still thirteen legendary knights. It was the well-deserved greatest force. While the Congress of Magic had been flourishing, there was still a major gap between them, and competing with the Church was definitely full of dangers.

“I’m getting nervous because of you, master.” Lucien breathed heavily, “Then, should we postpone the paper on the special theory of relativity for a year? We cannot afford any accidents in such a critical period.”

Fernando shook his head. “Since we did not foresee that Sard would ask for cooperation so soon, we already raised Oliver’s transformation formulas. Even without our guidance, considering the vogue and the progress of arcana studies, some arcanists will discover it on their own in half a year at most. So, it is unnecessary for us to keep it a secret. All we need to do is to tread more lightly.”

Chapter 543: Identification

Halfway through the Month of Fire (July), sweltering air had already swept across Rentato and Allyn, making it impossible for many people to go to sleep. They could only enjoy brief peace under the cool breeze in the morning.

However, in the cool morning, some thirty people, strangely, gave up the chance to sleep, and waited outside of the Allyn magic tower.

They were of different genders and ages. Some were wearing double-breasted suits, some were in the most common magic robes with capes, some were covered in well-cut long dresses, and some were simply donned with a white shirt with a regular waistcoat. The only thing that they had in common was the anxiety and hopefulness on their faces.

Having lost the apprentice's robes which could reduce heat, Lowi had passed a few rough days. Since he was also staying late for studies, his face was pale, and he couldn't have looked more haggard.

He observed his 'competitors' around him, greatly pressured. Of the almost forty people, only ten were apprentices. The others were formal sorcerers and level-one arcanists. Some were even middle-rank sorcerers.

"The fact that I passed the previous exams and interviews suggests that I have shining parts, too. I cannot lose my confidence." Lowi encouraged himself. Then, to relieve his anxiety, he asked the few sorcerers and apprentices nearby, "What do you think Mr. Evans' questions be in his interview? Will it involve the new alchemy?"

One male apprentice, who was mumbling something nervously, turned a deaf ear to him and continued his final preparation. Two sorcerers looked at Lowi and, upon noticing the apprentice badge on his chest, turned their heads away, resuming their own conversation.

A female sorcerer whose round face was like an apple was stunned for a moment. Then she smiled, "I don't know. Mr. Evans was not involved in the previous exams and interviews. The questions given happened to be within my research field. I'm rather nervous right now, because I haven't understood many concepts in the new alchemy. What were the questions for you during the interview?"

She wasn't pretty, but her smile was amiable and made whoever saw it feel warm.

Lowi thought for a moment and repeated the few questions about elements and electromagnetism that Jerome asked him. In the end, he asked, "What about yours?"

"Right, I forgot to introduce myself. I am Erica." The round-faced lady repeated her questions during the interview and exchanged their experiences, speculating what Mr. Evans would focus on asking today.

Seeing that, a few sorcerers and apprentices nearby joined their conversation.

Not far away, Blake smiled at Alfalia, who had the typical features of Holm. "Do you want to go over and listen to them? Their experience may be of use soon."

Alfalia replied with a casual smile, "Alright, but I find it odd that the final interview hosted by Mr. Evans is set at nine in the morning. The Allyn magic tower is only just opening at such a time. For the interviewees, we have to wait outside in advance for the meeting."

"Maybe this strange request is meant to test our punctuality and obedience. After all, we are expected to be apprentice-level assistants, not arcanists with independent research programs." Blake thought for a moment and analyzed carefully.

Looking at the magic tower that rose to the sky, Alfalia nodded softly, "I think so, too. Mr. Evans is definitely not one of those people who enjoy torturing the interviewees. His request must have deeper meanings."

On the eighteenth floor of the Allyn magic tower, Lucien, with Rock, Jerome and his students, stood next to the window and looked at the interviewees down below.

Hearing the scene forwarded by Sprint, Rock smiled at Lucien, “Why do I feel that you do have fun torturing the interviewees?”

While talking, he turned his eyes to the poor students such as Annick. Under the torture of Lucien’s ‘Arcana Build-up School’, while their arcana and magic expertise soared, they had always been gnashing their teeth.

Heidi nodded her head quickly. Her teacher was a ‘devil’ who loved tormenting them with abundant exercises and profound knowledge.

Lucien coughed, “This is to observe their real personality and their ability in daily communication. They are here as apprentice-level assistants. Only if they are good at both aspects can they be melted into the institution sooner and take over the chores for you.”

“Fair enough. Those who are too arrogant to communicate with the lesser minds are unsuitable for the institution.” Jerome agreed with Lucien’s opinion. Then he asked curiously, “Will the assistants we recruit also become your students in the future?”

Sprint and the rest of them immediately focused their eyes on Lucien, wondering about their teacher’s answer.

Lucien shook his head. “Six students are already too many. I have my own magic studies, arcana research and daily life. I can’t teach more students. If you find any of them promising, you can direct them yourselves.”

It was a shared attitude of the senior-rank arcanists, who would rather focus their attention on only a fixed number of students, unless some of the students perished, or they encountered a rarely-seen genius. Also, the students of such high-level arcanists enjoyed their halo in the first place, and their behavior represented their teacher. If there were too many of them, there would also be unnecessary incidents.

Katrina and other students were relieved. Although they were kind in nature, they did not really look forward to new classmates, because it meant that the time their teacher spent on them would be reduced.

Nine o'clock soon came, and Lowi as well as other interviewees entered the magic tower with trepidation, reaching the Atom Institution in the lift.

"You can go in together. Before the final interview, there will be a magic contract for you to sign." Rock was waiting for them outside of the Atom Institution with a very genuine smile, because the troubles would be over very soon. There was no way that he would ever take such a mission again!

"A magic contract? What's that?" Asked a middle-aged, slightly-fat sorcerer in confusion.

Lowi recognized that it was Mr. Issac whom he talked to just now.

Rock replied with a smile that he thought to be charming. "The Atom Institution explores the cutting edge of the elemental field. A lot of secrets are kept here. Therefore, I need everyone to sign a confidentiality agreement. Also, since Evans is a grand-arcanist-to-be and a target that the Church and other forces are desperate to get rid of, the other arcanists of the Atom Institution have unfortunately become collateral targets, too. Therefore, to avoid assassins, the new hires have to sign a relatively rigorous magic contract."

"Rigorous..." Alfalia and the rest of them became solemn. Although they could understand the Atom Institution's decision, rigorousness still made them worried.

Issac frowned. "I hope that the magic contract is not outrageously rigorous."

Rock smiled. "Rest assured. You will not be treated as slaves. Only those with ill intentions will feel uncomfortable."

Lowi couldn't care less about the contract. He only wanted to enter the Atom Institution and study under Mr. Evans. For him, anything was acceptable as long as he did not have to sell his soul or his body.

Under Rock's direction, the interviewees entered the Atom Institution's conference room.

Lowi, Blake, Alfalia and other apprentices and sorcerers, unable to contain their curiosity, peeped respectfully and excitedly at the two sorcerers who were already seated.

That was Mr. Jerome, whom they met before, and... and this should be Mr. Lucien Evans, right?

In Lowi's eyes, it was a young man with a dense black hair and an unbelievably handsome face. However, his black eyes that seemed to contain countless mysteries and his confident, casual smile made everybody completely overlook his face. Lowi had no doubt that he was a formidable sorcerer and a wise arcanist.

"Good morning, Mr. Evans." Led by a few sorcerers who met Lucien before, Lowi and other interviewees greeted him.

Lucien nodded and hinted for them to be seated. Then, with his eyes even deeper, he pointed at the parchment papers on the table and said, "These are the magic contracts you need to sign. They will be guaranteed by the duke of the first level of hell, and violators will be punished by him. Take a look now. We will begin if there isn't any problem."

Hearing Lucien's words, all the sorcerers and apprentices grew nervous for some reason. Then, they picked up the contracts and began to read in silence.

Suddenly, Issac stood up, blushing. "What kind of contract is this? This is purely a one-sided slavery contract!"

"Whoever exposes anything about the Atom Institution or Lucien Evans, intentionally or unintentionally, and in whatever form, will be captured by Agostinho, duke of the first level of hell!"

"... Their mind will be completely opened. Whoever has the thought to hurt Lucien Evans or other arcanists in the Atom Institution will immediately be detected by Agostinho!”

...

“This contract is more than rigorous. We are not regarded as human beings at all. I will not sign it or participate in the interview!”

While he complained in fury, three sorcerers and apprentices followed him and stood up, despising the contract in excitement.

Issac was about to leave, only to discover that Lowi, Blake and the rest of them were looking at him strangely. He was disappointed, “Do you have any backbones? Are you going to sign such a contract?”

Lowi scratched the back of his head and asked in confusion, “Mr. Issac, that’s not the contract that we are reading.”

“What?” Issac was stunned.

Lucien opened his mouth. “Those magic contracts have been processed with ‘Implicit Words’, a eighth-circle magic. Whoever sees it will be grabbed by ten times of their horror, and the content of the contract will change accordingly. What is it that you are scared of?”

“No, no!” Issac and the rest of them shook their heads palely.

Lucien looked at the door of the conference room. “There’s no need to answer my question. Explain it to the Affair Committee. Thompson, thank you for your trouble.”

Thompson walked in and brought away Issac and his fellow complainers.

Rock asked in the telepathic bond curiously, “Why were they scared? Such unequal contracts do not entail any restraint at all.”

“The hint has been started when you told them the arrangement outside. Also, what I said before stressed that Agostinho will guarantee the contracts but neglected the specific consequences. In the meantime, I hinted that we would sign the contracts if there was no problem, not after the interview. Through the multiple hints and my 'Image Creation', they were already convinced of the authenticity of the contracts." Lucien explained briefly. "It's easy to identify a sorcerer who believes in the God of Truth, but it's hard to resist a spy who sells secrets and partners for money and materials."

While Lowi and the remaining interviewees looked at him in shock, Lucien smiled, "Now, read the real contracts first. They are not too harsh. If you are willing to take it, we will begin the interview."

After reading the new contract, Lowi and the rest of them all agreed to sign it if they passed the interview. Then, they looked at Lucien with expectation and anxiety, wondering what his questions would be.

Mr. Evans, please don't ask us about the new alchemy. I don't know anything about it. Lowi and other apprentices begged in their hearts, because they only understood the general model and concepts of the new alchemy.

Lucien smiled rather delightedly, "Everybody, tell me why you want to enter the Atom Institution."

"Then, tell me your shining points and your drawbacks, as well as your plan for your life."

Huh? What is that all about?

Alfalia, Blake and all the other interviewees were bewildered.

Chapter 544: Violin

After the interview, Lowi and other interviewees left the conference room with weird looks. The knowledge in the atomic field and the tricks of control magic circles that they prepared in advance proved to be of absolutely no use. Mr. Evans' questions were unimaginably strange. Did they need to confess their life plan? Wasn't it all about advancing from level one to level two, from level two to level three, and so on?

However, such a simple answer was obviously not going to satisfy Mr. Evans. Therefore, every interviewee added certain parts that they believed to be helpful. For example, Alfalia talked about her goals in her knowledge system, and Blake introduced his plan to return from the Solar Islands to Allyn. Many people also put the Atom Institution in their life plan.

The moment he recalled how he introduced himself early on, and that he somehow added finding his love to his life plan, Lowi felt that his face was burning and dared not look at his fellows, fearing that he would be mocked. For him, it was a most shameful interview.

The other people were more or less the same. Just now, many interviewees told their poor pasts in the spur of the moment, hoping that it would earn sympathy, but now that the interview was over, they only regretted that they could not take off their clothes and cover their heads.

Rock said with a rather sunny smile, "Wait ten minutes here. Lucien will make a decision soon."

Such an usual interview was rather fun for him, especially when the interviewees expressed themselves unskillfully.

Hearing Rock's words, Lowi was no longer embarrassed. As Rock entered the conference room and shut the gate, their hearts beat faster and faster and louder.

Dum. Dum. Dum. Lowi felt that he had to say something, or he would pass out from anxiety. He opened his mouth and asked, "Erica, who do you think Mr. Evans will choose?"

Lowi was scared by himself after he spoke. He never thought that his voice could be that dry and hoarse.

Erica said in a low voice, her nose flapping, "Everything is superfluous right now. We have shown what we have."

Not far away, while Blake was nervous, as a man who advanced into a formal sorcerer on the harsh islands, he remained calm on the surface. He said to Alfalia in a rigid smile, "I think you have a good chance. Your performance was good.'

Alfalia replied with a shallow smile, "Stop talking like that. You'll make me look forward to it more. The more hopeful one is, the more disappointed they tend to be."

She spoke casually, but she clenched her hands at some point.

In the suffocating atmosphere, the gate was opened again. They raised their heads and looked at Mr. Evans both expectantly and anxiously.

Lucien smiled, "You are all very remarkable and full of potential. However, the Atom Institution only needs ten assistants right now. Therefore, I have to make a rather tough pick to select those who better suit our needs. The first candidate, Mr. Balterley."

The middle-aged man, who was Lowi's teacher in school, waved his fists in excitement, but as a second-circle sorcerer, he managed to retain his manners.

"The second candidate, Alfalia." Lucien warm voice found its way into Alfalia's ears.

Not realizing what happened, she raised her head and looked at Lucien in bewilderment, only to see that Lucien nodded at her with a smile.

It was not until then that she realized she had been picked by the Atom Institution. Her blue eyes were suddenly filled with water.

Such a success had been earned fair and square, without bribery of money and materials, without the trading her body and feelings, but solely with her magic and arcana abilities!

For Alfalia, who had to leave Allyn for certain reasons, it was a hard-earned affirmation. She covered her face with her hands, not showing anybody her brief weakness.

Hearing Mr. Evans' announcement and the exclamations around, Lowi became more and more excited. He held his breath subconsciously. Mr. Blake passed, Erica passed, and two apprentices he knew earlier also passed, but why wasn't he chosen?

"The tenth candidate, Lowi."

Lowi felt that stars were floating before his eyes, and he almost tripped over himself. Intense joy and excitement burst out like a volcano, leaving his head swooning and his eyes wet.

"Don't pass out. If you are unwell, I'll consider a refund." Lucien talked with humor that nobody could get.

But in Lowi's eyes, it was as pleasant as an elvish song. He hurried to say, "No, no, Mr. Evans. I'm in perfect health!"

Everything in his eyes became lovely all of a sudden.

After asking Jerome to settle the ten assistants, Lucien left for the Affair Committee, intending to check up on Thompson's interrogation.

"They have confessed. Two are spies of the South Church, one is associated with the North Church, and one was allured by an intelligence worker of the Holy Heilz Empire. They were all promised that they would be heavily rewarded if they sneak into the Atom Institution, and they will be paid for every piece of intelligence they provide about the institution or yourself later." Thompson handed the files to Lucien and asked confusedly, "Why does the Holy Heilz Empire care about you? Isn't the Church the leader in dealing with sorcerers?"

Lucien brushed his eyebrow. He sabotaged Rudolf II's plan in the alternate dimension, and he was obviously connected to the Silver Moon. How could the guy not pay attention to him? But of course, the top secrets of the Highest Council was not for Thompson to know.

Skimming through the files, Lucien's eyes were finally frozen. The image of the night watcher who hired Issac was so familiar.

"Minsk... Juliana..." Lucien recited the two names.

Lucien knew that something was wrong with Amelton when Rhine was projected into the joker's dream. He also learnt the identities and looks of the few night watchers that hung around with the joker.

That wasn't supposed to be a problem. Lucien had met Lend before, and it was perfectly normal for them to be relocated together with Amelton. However, according to Issac, the two night watchers had been meeting him in turns since three years ago, hoping that he could reach Lucien. That is to say, Sard had been preparing for this three years before he became the Grand Cardinal of the Holm parish.

"No wonder he kept the things between Natasha and me a secret. But it was such a long plan. Was he so confident that he could be deployed here?" Lucien was more or less confused. Then he spoke to Thompson, "Tail the two night watchers but do not get rid of them yet."

"Also, ask the magi to protect John's family in secret. Don't let them know, and don't burst into conflicts with the guards that Natasha deploys."

The two night watchers hated his guts. Lucien was worried that they might go out of control at some point.

"Okay." Thompson was more and more polite to Lucien. Not just his positional change thanks to 'new alchemy', the improvement of his magic capabilities alone had already foreshadowed the next legendary sorcerer.

.....

On July 30, Queen Nekso Palace, having been through an assassination sponsored by the conservatives, reached the royal magic tower of Holm and declared that she would have dinner and celebrate her birthday with the seniors of the royal family here, and that she would not return to the Nekso Palace until the next day.

Considering that Duke James and Duke Russell must be furious after the assassination, the conservatives did not object to the plan.

As night fell, Natasha, who was celebrating her birthday with members of the royal family in the magic tower, left under the excuse that she was going to meet Hathaway.

Lifting her dress, she rushed to Lucien's office like a charging knight.

She was about to knock on the door, but the door opened on its own. In the meantime, the pleasant sounds of a piano echoed inside, rippling out beautifully and refreshingly. The whole room was immediately enshrouded in a dreamy and romantic atmosphere.

Natasha closed the door quietly and looked at Lucien whose fingers were bouncing on the piano. He was wearing the black formal attire that he usually wore in Aalto, and his face was gentle and devoted. His eyes that looked back at her now and then were so deep that it could almost attract souls.

Lucien, on the other hand, suddenly felt amazed. Natasha was not wearing a deep-color dress today, as she usually would, or a knight suit and armor. Instead, she was in a white long dress with simple laces, as well as gloves and silk stockings of the same color. Her tied hair and her broad-edged hat made her look like a bride that had just barged in. There was additional pureness and freshness in her violent glamor.

The room was arranged in a similar way to last time. The only exception was the flute, oboe, cello, brass, violin and other musical instruments around the piano, as if the orchestra had been there but was gone all of a sudden, leaving their equipment behind.

Looking at Lucien in the eyes and listening to the delicate music, Natasha found her previous agitation all gone. She approached Lucien with a smile and stopped next to the ground table.

She knew that it was 'A Poem For Natasha', the piano verse that Lucien prepared last time. However, they were so passionate after figuring out what was in each other's hearts last time that they completely forgot about it. When they talked about it later, Lucien postponed it to her birthday.

The notes filled the room like flowing water, rising up and down gently and comforting her mind. The romantic tunes and rhythms echoed in their eyes.

After Lucien was done playing, Natasha clapped her hands and was about to hug her knight.

However, Lucien shook his head with a smile, hinting that there was another episode.

"This is the birthday gift for you."

Lucien picked up the flute and played a rhythm that was different from anything in the past and sounded like a bird song.

When the flute song was just ending, the oboe flew to him on its own and presented the scenery of spring.

Natasha looked at Lucien in confusion. That was a music style she had never heard before. Was it his new creation?

Lucien got the violin in his hands at some point. Staring at Natasha, he played a poetic melody.

As the gentle sound from the violin entered Natasha's ears, her mind seemed to have been hit by something. The music was so beautiful and romantic, and yet it seemed to contain vague sorrow that invited empathy.

It was different from any music that Natasha learnt in the past, but it was so touching and astoundingly beautiful that Lucien seemed to be telling the love in his heart.

The best music had no differences in styles. Looking at Lucien who was playing the violin gracefully, Natasha was captivated by the rhythm.

Chapter 545: One Man's Orchestra

After the gloomy melody, a cello appeared before Lucien, who turned it around delicately and played music that was as profound as a man's voice. The violin, having lost support, simply floated in midair.

Enshrouded in the romantic atmosphere weaved by the conversation of the mellow cello and the soft violin, Natasha recalled her first encounter with Lucien. Because of a Symphony of Fate, the two of them were first connected, and because of their mutual interest in music and Lucien's humor and delightful self-embarrassment now and then, she gradually became his good friend, which allowed her to discover his advantages other than music. He was calm, gentle, smart and fun. There was no pressure to hang around with him, and she could be herself freely.

Those were the days that were as beautiful as the spring of April. Perhaps, it was in their deepening relationship that she gradually forgot Lucien's gender. Their love sprouted for the first time.

In the easy and pleasant melody, musical instruments behind and next to Lucien echoed on their own with his violin.

Those musical instruments seemed to be given their own souls and gathered into the concert of an orchestra. It was also as if many transparent musicians were playing together with Lucien.

Thanks to magic, Lucien's solo performance sounded like a minor orchestra.

The soft violin and the magnificent cello 'stood' together again. The deep feelings and the reluctance to say goodbye surfaced in Natasha's heart clearly. That was the farewell after their life-and-death escape and their support for each other. Lucien was about to leave Aalto for Holm. She believed that they would meet again, and she knew it was in the best interests of Lucien, so she let him go generously, but she still found herself missing him although they hadn't been separated yet.

Perhaps it was at that time, when Lucien carried her through the dark forest determinedly, that their friendship transformed. However, because of the pain that Sylvia brought her and her negligence, she merely regarded their feelings as those between two good friends.

From the brass instrument, a creepy, rigorous melody spread out. Grief, fear, panic, sorrow and other feelings flowed out while the violin was competing with the allegro in the band. Natasha seemed to have sensed Lucien's hesitation and agony after he realized that he fell in love with her. She also recalled her suffering back when she was in the abbey. The sole comfort for her at that time was the letters from Lucien. However, having walked further and further down the path of magic, and having disgraced the Cannon and the Doctrines again and again, he seemed unable to even keep being a good friend to her, a devout believer and the future duchess.

The violin let out resolution and anger. Natasha seemed to have heard Lucien's sigh when he made up his mind, and remembered how she treated Lucien as her best friend just like before, overcoming her psychological barriers. However, the pressure from the Church, the duchy, her father, the Violet family and the citizens cast everything into shadow again. They raged like storms and presaged the possible tragic ending.

In retrospect, Natasha realized that she had regarded Lucien as the most peaceful and gentle part of her mind since then, but her perception was enveloped by the mists of her habits back then.

Lucien continued playing the violin, and the cello began to play itself while nobody was around, as if it were listening to the violin's subtle confession of love. Then, Lucien turned to the cello, and the violin started to play on its own, as if the time had come for the gentlemen to tell his feelings and for the lady to listen.

It reminded Natasha of the beautiful scene when they met again in Holm and finally told each other their feelings towards each other. It was sweet and warm, but the lovely memory did not last when the melody turned hasty and sharp. The situation in Holm, the danger one year later, and her worries for her father who was far away in Orvarit all turned into rapid notes that constituted a grievous scene. The melody that feathered the wonder of love emanated the sorrow that could make souls cry in such an atmosphere.

Natasha had seen such devastation before, but her emotional experience with Sylvia was not as deep. The moment she thought that Lucien and her would end up like this, she felt that the music whose sadness reached her soul was speaking for herself. She clenched her fists and vowed to break all the obstacles.

But what if her father was the obstacle, and it was a helpless choice for Lucien's safety?

Obstacles were not so easy to be broken!

Natasha's face was somewhat twisted while she struggled in her heart. As her sorrow reached the summit, she finally took a step. Any difficulty could possibly be resolved, and giving up meant that they would never see the dawn. At such a moment, she could only press forward and try to resolve the difficulties until she died!

As if moved by her determination, after the intense grief, the flutes played the soft, splendid melody again together with the harp. Natasha seemed to see the view of Mountain Paradise where all pains were gone and only happiness was left. In the end, the violin began to play the thematic melody in solo again.

This time, there was no more vague sorrow, but only comforting beauty.

Such an atmosphere was like two hands that still held each other after all the vicissitudes of life, the warm eyes of understanding after all the difficulties were overcome, and two butterflies that danced with their dreamy wings around each other after breaking away from the thick cocoons that shackled them.

The music stopped, but the melody still lingered, awing everything into silence with its beauty.

"I have never heard such a music style before, but it is also the most beautiful violin melody I have ever heard. Thank you for your birthday gift, and thank 'Lucien Orchestra' for their performance." A long time later, Natasha finally said hoarsely, "I like the final part best. It seems to have sublimed the whole music."

Half a month ago, after much deliberation, Lucien selected The Butterfly Lovers' Violin Concerto ¹, which was composed by Mr. He Zhanhao and Mr. Chen Gang. While it was a tragedy, the 'Turning Into Butterflies' part represented beautiful hope, and he could express his feelings with it after slight adaptation. It was also fit for the conditions between himself and Natasha.

Putting down the violin, Lucien stood and bowed, "I'm honored that you like it."

"I noticed that you used a lot of different tricks when you played the violin. For example, sometimes you only used two strings." Natasha walked to Lucien's side with a smile and pulled him back to the table. Seeing that he was about to explain, she hurried to hint that it was unnecessary and simply went on. "It's not easy to see you play the violin. Its charm is entirely different from that of the piano. However, it is not the time for this right now. The music just now let me scrutinize our relationship in retrospect. I find it hard to hold back my feelings. I only want to have you and feel you."

Lucien smiled, "It's your birthday today. You'll be the queen."

Naughtiness beamed out of Natasha's smile. "Is that so? Excellent. That's what I want, too. Since today is my birthday, I'll take the lead of everything. You can only accept and cannot take any action until I tell you to. Do you understand?"

Lucien was about to reply, when Natasha added, "Rest assured. I won't cross your boundaries. In fact, I tried to transform you into a girl exactly because I wanted to 'care for' you. Your current status will do. There will be even the additional feeling of conquest. Would you like to cooperate with me?"

Lucien smiled. "You are the queen today."

Natasha chuckled, "For me, music is an excellent birthday gift, but there is only one best birthday gift, which is you."

While talking, she picked up a piece of cream from the table and smeared it on Lucien's throat, before she licked it. When Lucien tried to hug her, she stopped him: "Don't move. Follow my commands."

.....

The messy velvet quilts covered their naked bodies, and the air of love filled the room.

Lucien felt lucky that he had changed his bed to a magic bed, which saved him from another collapse experience. Natasha, on the other hand, was like a kid who was occupying her favorite toy. She tied Lucien up with both hands and legs as she breathed steadily sound sleep.

"She had been taking the lead the first couple of hours. She must be exhausted." Lucien's right hand was under Natasha, so he extended his left hand and eased the vague worries on her face.

Suddenly, Natasha opened her eyes and said in a daze, "It's already dawn? I fell asleep."

"Not yet. Sorry for waking you up." Relied Lucien gently.

Natasha put on a brilliant smile. "That's great. I didn't plan to sleep at all. It's probably going to be half or one month later before we meet again. How can we pass the night sleeping? Even random talking is better than that!"

Lucien smiled, "Not a problem. Right, I've been confused about something. Why is Sard not worried that the pope will notice what he is doing?"

Lucien did not find it inappropriate to discuss such matters on such an occasion, and Natasha felt nothing wrong, either. Continuing using Lucien's right hand as her pillow, she said, "Because I am the queen of Holm."

"Huh? What do you mean?" Lucien was puzzled.

Natasha smiled, "That's a secret way that the pope checks the major parishes. After the schism of the North Church, the pope discovered that some northern nobles had detected anomalies a long time ago but they were killed when they tried to report the issue. Henceforth, emperors, kings and duchies have been given ways to directly contact the pope. Once the Grand Cardinal behaves inappropriately, they can report it to the pope.”

She stopped calling the pope as His Holiness.

“Perhaps, other nobles and night watchers can reach out to the Church in secret, too, but the right to talk to the pope should still be a royal prerogative. I certainly would not report to the pope that something wrong is going on in my kingdom, so Sard is not worried at all.”

“That explains a lot...” Lucien nodded. Then he recalled something else. “Sard’s goal is unclear. In case of accidents, give the structure of the divine power circles in the Nekso Palace to me when you have a chance. I’ll try to improve them. Then, you’ll ask Richard to change them accordingly, so that Sard will not control the defense of the Nekso Palace all of a sudden.”

Natasha was stunned, “You are going to improve the divine power circles?”

Wasn’t it supposed to be the clergy’s job?

Lucien smiled, “You forgot what happened before? For a sorcerer, the greatest difficulty to improve the divine power circles is that they may accidentally cut the power source of such circles. After the incidents with Ell and Francis, I am already able to identify the central part that distributes energy and make unrecognizable changes on other parts.”

Besides, he also had ‘Sun’s Corona’ as a reference.

“You’re more and more capable now. I’ll give the structure to you when there’s a chance to.” Natasha teased Lucien.

.....

After another half night’s lingering, Natasha put on her dress and left affectionately when it was dawn.

Lucien, slept for another half day, then returned to Allyn in a pleasant mood but unsteady feet.

“Master, Arcana and Magic have been published in advance. The discussion is rather heated.” The next day, when Lucien walked into the Atom Institution, Heidi and other students greeted him with the journal, asking half in confusion and half in excitement, “But why isn’t your paper published? The guys who are in favor of the wave theory all claim that you... you have recognized the reality.”

Chapter 546: Theater of Destruction

Chapter 546: Theater of Destruction

Looking at the infuriated Heidi, Lucien smiled. “What’s to be angry about? So many arcanists of the elemental school share my opinion. Why do I need to waste my time on a worthless paper? Such a hypothesis which uses the result as the premise, until it is proved by experiments, can only be used for mathematical and methodological reference. Did any arcanist write a rebuttal?”

Annick browsed through the journals and shook his head. “None of the five grand arcanists published any papers. Mr. President and the Lord of Storm, on the other hand, discussed the transformation formulas’ application in the Douglas system under different frames of reference.”

“Mr. President published a paper?” Since he did not review it, it was the first time Lucien heard about it. He took over Annick’s ‘Arcana’ and began to read.

Douglas had obviously noticed Oliver’s paper last month but was not as upset as the senior-rank arcanists, because it only offered a theoretical explanation and the corresponding transformation formulas. No experiment results or phenomena could prove the theory and explain the light-speed experiment. Instead, Douglas was more interested in the transformation formulas, as the transformation formulas in the past were rather inept after the Brook electromagnetic system was established.

Reading Douglas’ paper, Lucien nodded his head. This was the best he could expect. After Mr. President studied the major part of the paper, with his understanding of the electromagnetic system, he would soon recognize something and gain certain preliminary insights. Only in such a case would he not be faced with the special theory of relativity without any psychological or knowledge preparation.

As Lucien read the paper in silence, Heidi murmured, “I know that you are unwilling to demean yourself by discussing such speculative papers, but the arcanists who support the wave theory think otherwise. They believe that you have been hit by the paper and realized your bigotry in the past, and that's why you quietly backed off and did not argue. This is a sign that the wave theory is making a comeback."

By 'comeback', she meant the problem whether or not 'Ether', the medium through which waves were transmitted in the vacuum, existed.

The few students were rather excited about the wave theory advocates' slanders against their teacher. It seemed more insufferable than themselves being humiliated.

"What's their opinion on the photoelectric effect and the Brook scattering experiment?" Lucien was holding 'Arcana' and 'Magic' in his hands. Obviously, the arcanists that they knew and were in touch with couldn't have published any papers in the two journals.

After he blew up a tremendous amount of heads with the light quantum hypothesis and won the Silver Moon Medal, the arcanists who persisted in the wave theory clinging to the classic experiments stayed far away from Lucien in fear. As a result, he could only learn their progress through journals.

Sprint snorted, "They attempted to construct more complicated wave models to explain the photoelectric effect and the scattering experiment, but that's only for discussion and of no actual value. They almost didn't pass the review."

"Then what are you angry about? Besides, can the particle theory explain the classic experiment images?" Lucien smiled, rather amazed by the wave theory supporters' efforts. However, their efforts were destined to be in vain due to the lack of theoretical guidance.

Heidi found her teacher's casualness very perplexing. "But they are vilifying you, aren't they?"

"They'll be slapping my face only when they present detailed experiment results.” Lucien focused his attention on the two journals. He realized that after he proposed the light quantum hypothesis and Mr. Brook proved it, the supporters of the particle theory were soaring in number. Many arcanists had changed their opinion and believed that light could be a very strange particle.

However, since the classic experiments still could not be explained with particles, the supporters of the traditional wave theory, after the intense shock at the beginning, got back on their feet again. On ‘Arcana’ and ‘Magic’ of this issue, Joaquin, Pesor, Tina-Timos and other senior-rank arcanists all expressed their acknowledgment of Oliver’s paper, but they prudently maintained that experiments should be devised according to the theory in order to prove it, and that they should not trust it too much until then. That was a good lesson that they had learnt after Lucien’s consecutive revolutionary papers.

Based on the experience from Earth, Lucien knew that the War between Wave and Particle would be long and involve the mysteries about the nature of this world. Therefore, he did not find it strange at all.

Her teacher’s attitude calmed Heidi down. She asked curiously, “What’s your paper this month, master? I saw you working on it before.”

“An essay on tensor analysis. It has been published in ‘Nature’. You should read it sometime.” Lucien replied, without bothering to raise his head.

Annick, Katrina and other students all looked awful. It had been three years since ‘Nature’ was established, and it was gradually known as ‘the most abstruse journal in history’. Even the advanced arcanists who were adept at mathematics and logic were often too overwhelmed to understand what the papers on it were talking about. The series of papers that their teacher and Mr. Levski worked on in regard to Evans Geometry, in particular, were the best tools to help them go to sleep at night.

Noticing the silence, Lucien raised his head and looked at him with a vague smile, “Only with a good knowledge in mathematics and logic will your future studies on arcana and magic be easier. Do you need to be fortified in that aspect?”

“Haha. Master, I just recalled that I still had an unfinished experiment. I’ll be on my way. Take your time reading your paper. I’ll go find Alfalia.” Smiling, Heidi spoke as she backed to the door.

Alfalia had been assigned to her as her assistant.

With Heidi as their example, the excuses such as arcana experiments and magic analysis and construction surged out of the mouths of the students. After only ten seconds, Annick was the only person left in the office.

Lucien looked at Annick, finding it weird, “Do you not have any unfinished experiment? Or do you really want me to give you more lectures on mathematics and logic?”

Annick scratched his head and said in a low voice, “Master, my plan was to read the journals...”

Lucien lowered his eyes, only to discover that Annick’s journals were in his hands.

Lucien was finally able to read and learn the papers after the steel golem delivered his journals from the Review Board. He realized that, because Oliver’s paper was too dazzling, the journals were filled with discussions about it. Other articles were the achievements in other fields or improvement in magic. The heuristic paper that Annick and Sprint proposed about the contradiction between the theoretical performance of the cyclotron and its actual performance received absolutely no attention.

That’s not going to work. Lucien thought for a moment and took out a piece of paper. Picking up the quill, he wrote: On the Problems in the Application of the Cyclotron.

.....

Inside the ‘Theater of Destruction’, collapsing and perishing stars were everywhere.

In the dark, terrible end of the world, certain brightness spread out gently but firmly. It seemed to be the last symbol of civilization.

As one approached it, they would discover that the shimmer was from a high-rising magic tower that was full of artistic air. Every window was ablaze with lights.

In the library, Oliver, whose magic robe had been changed into a sloppy pajama, was holding his quill haggardly and smoking his tobacco pipe, unable to write a single word for a long time.

His eyes were filled with the zealotry typical of artists. He seemed to have ignited and dedicated all the feelings in his heart to this long poem of love.

Suddenly, the tower guard's pleasant voice echoed, "My lord, Mr. President has come to visit."

Oliver put down his quill, frowning. A 'poet' and 'playwright' whose inspiration was disrupted tended to be agitated. He violently pushed the paper on which the love poem was written to a pile of paper on his desk, clearing an empty space. Then, he took a few deep breaths and resumed calmness on the surface. Finally, he rose and greeted Douglas at the door of his magic tower. In terms of both seniority and prestige, Douglas deserved his full respect.

Soon enough, Oliver led Douglas back to his library. Rubbing his eyebrow, he asked, "Mr. President, is there anything I can help you with? I'm not in the best mood recently, and there's something urgent I need to accomplish. I won't be away from Allyn for now."

It was a subtle refusal of being sent out for missions, which was also a privilege for the grand arcanists.

Douglas smiled. "You can stay in Allyn and study the Douglas. There are no missions that require your help. I'm here mainly to discuss the application of transformation formulas with you. Have you seen my paper on 'Arcana' today?"

He, too, was aware of Oliver's recent divorce, and naturally did not assign any mission to him.

Oliver was more or less relieved. “The transformation formulas? I’m glad to discuss it with you. Fernando and I had so many unresolved problems.”

“You discussed it with Fernando?” Douglas found it strange.

Realizing his mistake, Oliver hurried to explain, “You know that Fernando is adept at many fields. He is a great partner to discuss with. I communicated with him before I submitted the paper.”

Douglas nodded in approval and sat on the opposite side of the desk. “Let’s discuss this problem.”

As if he felt that oral description might be too difficult, he took up another quill on the desk, drew a piece of paper, and was about to write the problem down.

On the paper, however, were a few lines of beautiful and affectionate poetry. Douglas shook his head and apologized, “Did I interrupt your creation?”

While talking, he put the paper of poetry back to where it used to be and drew the pile of paper that was below it at the beginning. He thought that the paper down below was blank.

Still in a trance, Oliver was about to say that it was alright because he already had insights and he could continue his work in a right mood later, but all of a sudden, his eyes widened and he turned around like a wild storm, shouting, “Not that paper!”

Douglas avoided Oliver’s robbing out of instincts and looked at the paper in his hands, feeling it strange, only to catch the title on it that was in a very familiar handwriting.

“On the Electrodynamics of Moving Bodies and Mass-energy Equation”

Oliver’s face immediately turned gloomy. The destruction in the cosmic theater out there seemed even more horrifying and dark.

Chapter 547: Ungullible Douglas

“This paper is based on relativity and the constant speed of light. For that, I stipulate that...”

After he skimmed through the paper, Douglas’s smile was replaced by graveness. He raised his head to look at Oliver, only to discover in surprise that the pile of papers before him, including the poem, the play and the papers, had been obliterated into dust and dispersed into the air.

Failing to take over the front page of the paper in Douglas’ hand, Oliver destroyed all the items on the desk in his anxiety when he tried to clean up the traces!

He was now full of regret. Due to the turmoil in his love life recently, he hadn’t been himself. After he took out the paper and studied it, he forgot to put it back before he started the creation of his long poem. Later, he simply forgot everything and did nothing when he directed Douglas into his library.

I should’ve enhanced myself with ‘Mechanical Mind’ when the tower guard informed me! His facial muscles cramping, Oliver couldn’t have regretted it more.

Douglas looked at Oliver, puzzled. “Why did you destroy it and stop me from reading it? Is there a problem that Lucien inferred equations based on two premises?”

The front page of the paper mainly included two postulates and their respective descriptions.

Oliver looked at the bookshelf and, with a self-mocking smile, spoke convincingly, “They were just the ideas that Lucien and I discussed, nothing more than speculations and fantasies. They are full of flaws and errors, so I would rather nobody else reads them. You know that I am a perfectionist. In both the creation of plays, poetry and paintings and the studies of arcana and magic, I would rather destroy the works if I’m not satisfied than present them to anybody.”

Such words would've been ridiculously funny if they were said by somebody else. However, when they were said by a grand arcanist who was brimming with the vibe of a great artist, together with his long beard and his sad face, they sounded particularly true.

Douglas seemed more or less convinced. He smiled. "Speculations and fantasies are not bad, either. They can give me inspirations. Let me guess what you discussed. Huh, the constant speed of light... The popular paper that explained the light speed experiment recently... Did Lucien infer your transformation formulas based on the two premises?"

Oliver held his head. Could you please not be so smart, Mr. President? "No, not exactly..."

Douglas did not seem to hear him at all. He took out a pile of paper from his storage bag and picked up the quill, starting his deduction based on the two premises on Lucien's paper.

"No..." Oliver stepped forward, trying to stop it, but when he saw Douglas writing busily, he suddenly fell silent. Now that Mr. President had the idea, he could deduce it after he returned even though Oliver stopped him right now. Therefore, he might as well supervise him and see if he could offer any guidance in case of a tragedy.

If things are beyond control... Thinking about that, Oliver activated the highest clearances of the magic tower, so that he could jump out of 'Theater of Destruction' at the critical moment.

He could be heavily wounded at most if the demiplane was destroyed. He could always map and produce another one.

Oliver finally showed some responsibility at such a moment and did not inform Fernando and Lucien to come, in case they were affected, too.

Based on the two premises, and since he already had a goal, Douglas soon deduced a series of formulas, but the more he inferred, the slower he became.

Hum... The Theater of Destruction outside of the magic tower whimpered, and the exploding stars seemed to be collapsing under the attraction of a certain force. Although it was shabby and imperfect, it released the air of destruction that was even more horrifying than the doomsday just now.

Oliver was soaked in cold sweat. It was indeed as expected of an expert at the peak of legendary. He was able to cause the change of stars in a demiplane that was not under his control. Would anything really happen?

After enhancing himself with spells, Oliver ruled out all his feelings and stared at Douglas, his black eyes as frozen as ice.

The floating dust became sluggish, and time seemed to have stopped fleeting. The space in the library was vaguely constricted. Veins bulged on Douglas' hand that was grabbing the quill. His skin turned lackluster, as if he had grown old by decades in just one moment.

Finishing the last stroke, Douglas read the paper silently and gloomily.

"Mr. President?" Oliver called him.

Douglas, as still as a statue, did not reply. When Oliver was about to call again, he raised his head with a bitter smile. "Although I had realized that my motion theories were problematic after Brook established the electromagnetic system, I still feel that my past thousand years of life have been denied watching them get overruled and disrupted ruthlessly."

"No, they are just helpful supplements for your theoretical system." As a famous artist/playboy, Oliver told lies without the slightest awkwardness. "Are you alright?"

He heaved a long sigh of relief. Mr. President's head seemed still intact, and his cognitive world was not frozen."

"There's no need to console me. I know very well what I have inferred. Lucien... Lucien is more dangerous than Brook..." Douglas shook his head with a bitter smile. "What a burden it must've been for Fernando to be his teacher. I feel lucky that I didn't compete for him at the beginning... Thankfully, the paper is still only a hypothetical deduction that is not proved by any experiments or phenomena yet."

"Also, it does not agree with the time error on the artificial planets. According to the deduction, time should be slower, but time is in fact faster..."

Self-obsessed, Douglas asked himself, "What is space and time? Why do they change according to matter? Why are they the functions of speed..."

Oliver was more or less surprised. It seemed that Douglas did not notice the paper that Lucien's students published. That's great! That's great! He would be less shocked later if he spent his time in the world of whys for a while.

Weighing his tones, Oliver expressed his opinion, "In the past, we believe that time and space are absolute, independent, mathematic, but we may have to view it from a different perspective now. If we can figure out the mysteries of time and space, I believe that we won't be too far away from the truth of the world."

He was alluring Douglas, a curious sorcerer, with the bright prospects in the future, hoping that Mr. President would think that it was one step closer to the truth, not that his own system had been disrupted, when he discovered the relativistic, so that his head would not blow up.

Douglas was back to himself from the shock. In an unpredictable voice, he said, "I've accepted a few disruptive theories in a row in only a hundred years. If I hadn't recalled the concepts of relative truth and absolute truth that Lucien mentioned, my cognitive world might've been frozen like Brook. While this paper hasn't been proved it, I did realize some problems during high-speed battles."

Oliver rubbed his forehead, thanking Lucien for finally doing a good deed. He said solemnly, "Lucien said that your motion system is not wrong."

“Huh? Not wrong? Douglas looked at Oliver in confusion.

Oliver nodded carefully, “He said that your motion system is a relative truth, and an approximation of the theory in the low speed. Your path is not wrong; it’s just that you haven’t walked far enough yet.”

As a playwright, it was more than easy for him to make up quotes, but Lucien did use the term ‘low-speed approximation’. As for the rest, they were just ‘descriptors’!

Douglas nodded slowly and accepted the theory. Then he frowned. “Judging from your tone, has it been preliminarily proved by experiments?”

Oliver’s face was immediately frozen. His response could easily betray him when he dealt with a man like Mr. President.

“Not yet. It’s just that Lucien is very confident. You know, his previous success filled him with confidence.” Oliver kept lying and pushing the problem to Lucien, describing him as an egotist.

Douglas stood up. “Alright... My head is a bit messy. I need to go back now. Perhaps, this paper will be the starting point of my future research...”

Instead of waiting for Oliver to reply, he left the magic tower and sighed, “How could Lucien have done that? He wouldn’t have discussed the paper with you without experiments.”

Half overjoyed and half grieved, he felt that his heart was torn apart.

After returning the Land of Truth, Douglas asked the tower guard to bring him Lucien’s papers in the recent issues.

“Tensor analysis... Why isn’t there any?” Douglas knew that what he was doing was dangerous, but his shaking cognitive world made him unable to control himself. He seemed to be reaching the exit of the labyrinth that had trapped him for years. Whether it was a good ending or a bad one, it would be an answer after all. How could he stop?

Not finding anything after a long search, Douglas picked up the issue of Arcana where Oliver published his transformation formulas and perused it. He believed that Lucien must've made preparations before submitting such a revolutionary paper.

Based on his understanding about Lucien and Fernando, Douglas reached the end and suddenly saw two familiar names. "Annick... Sprint... Aren't they Lucien's students?"

Focusing his attention, Douglas began to read the paper carefully. Gradually, he furrowed his brow, and the rug in the magic tower displayed a formula he inferred earlier under the attraction of his spiritual power.

"If we start from the formula where mass increases with speed, there may be an explanation." Douglas calculated nonstop as if something was chasing after him. Obtaining the data in the end, he knew how to change the electrical field now.

He entered the laboratory without running simulations in his cognitive world. Activating the newly-added cyclotron, he adjusted the electric field.

A moment later, the beautiful scenery outside of the magic tower was suddenly enshrouded in darkness. Both space and time seemed to be in chaos.

Douglas left the cyclotron and walked to the window, heaving a deep sigh: "What is time? What is space? What is life?"

The light was restored in the Land of Truth, which seemed undamaged, but Douglas' eyes were still filled with bewilderment. His philosophical opinions in the past hundred years had embraced a drastic change.

"Thankfully, I still have the gravity theory... But what's the source of gravity? Based on what is it generated? How did gravity appear at the very beginning?"

"Does absolute truth mean..."

.....

Lucien did not have the time to submit his heuristic paper yet, when he suddenly received Fernando's message: "Come over now. That stupid idiot Oliver screwed up again!"

Huh? Lucien was stunned and even vaguely heard his teacher roaring at Oliver.

What happened?

Chapter 548: Notorious

“Don’t act as if this is all because of the failure of your love life! It’s because your love life is sh*t that we are caught in such a disaster!”

“Sh*t! Your view about love is pure sh*t! If you truly love Florencia, you wouldn’t have hurt her again and again! You are as filthy and ugly as sh*t!”

By then Lucien reached Fernando’s library on the thirty-third floor of the tower, he could still hear his teacher’s astounding roars. Oliver, on the other hand, kept his body on one side and dared not face the Lord of Storm at all, as miserable as a small boat in a huge storm.

“Master, what happened?” Lucien tried divination while he was on the lift, only to no avail.

It was then that Fernando held back his flying saliva. “This ass*ole whose head has been filled up with libidos and s*it forgot to hide your paper after he read it! He led Douglas into his library just like that!”

His head humming, Lucien asked in shock and concern, “Is Mr. President alright?”

“He’s fine. Douglas’ head did not explode, and his cognitive world was not frozen.” Oliver was wearing a bitter smile, his facial muscles vaguely twitching.

Lucien’s heart fell back to where it was. “That’s good. It fixed the problem that we had been worried about. I wonder if Mr. President could find a path to advance into a demigod.

Fernando glared at Oliver. “Why didn’t you finish? Douglas only read the postulates of your paper and inferred the rest of the contents on his own. He hasn’t discovered the relativistic effect yet. If he happens upon it when he reads the journals and runs experiments, Oliver, you will be the most glorious saint of the Church!”

"I don't think anything will happen. Mr. President left in a steady mood. Also, he had armed his head with Lucien's philosophical notions about absolute truth and relative truth. I believe that, even if he reads the papers and does the experiments, he will accept them after the initial shock." Oliver was rather optimistic about it. Or rather, there was nothing he could do except be optimistic right now.

Fernando contained his fury. "Oliver, one day you will die from your messy love life! Let's go to the Land of Truth first, which I hope still exists..."

The demiplanes of the seven grand arcanists and the ten legendary arcanists were all connected to the Allyn magic tower. Therefore, Fernando opened the gate of the space.

Seeing that the Land of Truth was as beautiful as before, and the lake was rippling in glimmers under the gentle breeze, Fernando felt much less apprehensive. He glared at Oliver and said, "You are quite lucky."

Led by the puppet, the three of them passed the long corridor and reached Douglas' library, only to discover that he was staring at the window.

"Douglas, I'm told that you read Lucien's paper. What's your opinion?" Fernando grabbed Lucien for this visit exactly as an excuse.

Douglas was still wearing a black tailcoat, but the bow-tie had been loosened as if he tried to make it easier for him to breathe. He turned around and looked at the three of them gravely. "In fact, you may be late. I have already done the experiments with the cyclotron."

"Your cognitive world is broken and solidified?" Fernando could deal with such a result.

Since Douglas was still standing, the worst consequence couldn't have been too terrible.

Douglas shook his head, his weary face filled with confusion.

“Thankfully, I was more or less mentally prepared. I ran into similar problems in the past, and I thought of Lucien’s ideas about absolute truth and relative truth. Finally, I constructed the framework of the cognitive world from a higher level and included my previous knowledge in it. Although it was shaken and damaged, my cognitive world is not broken and solidified yet.”

Lucien clicked his tongue in shock. It was indeed as expected of an extraordinary person who built the Congress of Magic from scratch. Few of his peers, juniors and students, after the development of arcana, the theoretical disruptions and the assassinations of the Church, were still alive. He could be called legendary in every aspect. If it were Lucien, he might not have such an open mind to accept it. Chances were that his cognitive world would’ve already been broken and solidified.

“It seems that you can advance further.” Fernando and Oliver’s previous concerns were finally gone.

Douglas shook his head in a bitter smile. “Not yet. I was lucky this time because the greatest shock from Lucien’s paper was not the disruption of the motion system but the new understanding of time and space.”

“During the previous studies and battles, I already had similar ideas about motion, except that I was too bound by my obsolete knowledge to overthrow my own thoughts. However, the understanding of time and space that was beyond imagination truly disrupted my knowledge. The world that was rather clear to me was suddenly blurred. Thankfully, I could tell that your exploration in time and space was still preliminary and flawed. That’s why I could manage to bear it.”

Lucien smiled, “It’s indeed not easy to accept or understand a relativistic time and space. I hope that Mr. President can explore the mysteries of time and space together with me in the future.”

“Wait until this paper is digested.” Douglas smiled gently, his clear eyes more or less rippled. “What is time, and what is space? Those questions are bothering me.”

“You will probably advance into a demigod after you digest Lucien’s paper.” Fernando intentionally changed the subject in case he was mired in the world of whys.

Douglas hinted for them to sit and smiled, “It’s barely possible. The change in motion system can slightly improve my strength, but it is only because casting spells will be easier. In order to advance into a demigod, I have to fully understand the changes of time and space, or to grasp gravity on a much deeper level. It’s like Brook had to truly recognize electromagnetic waves and grasp the electromagnetic power in order to reshape his cognitive world. Only things connected to the origin can help a person ascend into a demigod.”

He had spent long enough at the peak of legendary, and he had profound wisdom. Even though he hadn’t found a right path of advancement, he had indeed found something.

After that, he did not continue the topic but smiled at Lucien. “I inferred Oliver’s transformation formulas, but why did I fail to get the mass-energy equation in your paper?”

Lucien knew that they had come too soon. Otherwise, with Mr. President’s wisdom and arcana expertise, he could’ve figured it out very soon. So, Lucien asked the puppet to bring paper and pen and inferred on the spot.

“Mass, energy... No wonder your atomic fusion could be so powerful.” Douglas observed the formula with his eyes glittering. “Although many key models haven’t been explained yet, I believe it will take much shorter time for me to construct ‘Eternal Blaze’.”

He had been trying to construct it with his spiritual power.

As he spoke, he began throwing out questions again. “Why can energy and mass be turned into each other? What is the nature of matter...”

Fernando sniffed, “Douglas, now that you’ve accepted Lucien’s paper, let’s discuss the things about Sard and be prepared that he circumvents his promise in other ways. Lucien has offered a plan.”

Douglas calmed down and smiled, "I like plans. Nobody is smart and powerful enough to calculate everything. The key is to gather information and simulate all possible scenarios in advance. That's exactly a sorcerers' strong suit."

The four of them discussed for a long time. When he saw Lucien, Fernando and Oliver off, Douglas smiled, "I look forward to the day you start studying gravity, Lucien."

"I hope that I can have your guidance when the day comes, Mr. President." Replied Lucien modestly.

Looking at their back while they left, Douglas suddenly sighed, "I'm confused about gravity myself. Where does it come from? How is it generated..."

.....

One day in April, 824, inside the Allyn branch of the Moonson League.

Two senior-rank sorcerers of electromagnetics happened upon each other and therefore discussed the latest trend of arcana studies.

"Annhora, is there still no rebuttal paper from Lucien Evans regarding the Oliver transformation?" One senior-rank sorcerer asked Annhora, who was a member of the Arcana Review Board.

Annhora was wearing a white wig and looked more like a noble than a sorcerer. He replied with a bitter smile, "No. In the past eight months, except for the few papers on the new alchemy and the cyclotron, all his results are about tensor analysis and Evans Geometry. He wrote ten papers independently and worked with Levski on another six. Together with the contributions of Levski, Neeshka, Milina and Samantha, a new mathematical system is taking shape."

"But I don't understand the mathematics at all." An old middle-rank arcanist was quite upset. "Also, what we are most concerned about is his opinion on the Oliver transformation..."

Another seventh-circle sorcerer sighed. "Exactly. We know that the Oliver transformation is only mathematically applicable for now, and that it cannot prove the existence of 'Ether', but it can explain the light speed experiment with the Ether theory. It is by far the most perfect hypothesis, and we are all willing to support it. But... But why is Lucien Evans not publishing any paper in that regard? I'll always be ill at ease before I learn his opinion."

Annhora nodded solemnly, "Every time I recall the gore he caused and the disruptive theories he proposed, I find it impossible to trust Mr. Oliver's paper until he offers his opinion. I'm always looking forward to something with worry. It's like I can't be reassured in a thunderstorm until the raindrops do fall."

"I always told other people that Lucien Evans dares not discuss the problem because he recognized his mistake, but I cannot sleep tight at night without his opinion. Sometimes I even have nightmares." The old middle-rank arcanist said in agitation.

The nightmare where brains and blood litter the ground still freaked him out.

Annhora was about to reply, when his pocket suddenly beeped. He immediately took out a fine-looking box and pressed a button on it. "Hello? Mr. Oliver? I'm on my way!"

It's a mobile communication item that the Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company recently developed. It had a lower requirement and would not conflict with other magic items.

Seeing off his partners, Annhora reached Oliver's office on the thirty-fourth floor of the Allyn magic tower, only to discover that a familiar arcanist was already seated there, and Mr. Oliver hadn't come out from his inner library yet.

"Mariana, why has Mr. Oliver summoned us?" Annhora asked the middle-aged lady who had shiny black hair.

Mariana, holding a broad-edged hat in his hands, were equally puzzled. "I have no idea."

At this moment, Oliver walked out with two papers in his hands.

“Mariana, Annhora, no formalities are needed. I asked you to come here because there’s papers for you to review. It should be acceptable for the members of electromagnetics to review it. Take a look at it first. If everything is alright, I’ll give it to the Sorcerer Administrative Department and ask the alchemical life in the Arcana Review Board to assign it to you.”

Mariana and Annhora, both having a premonition, asked simultaneously, “Whose paper is it?”

Oliver rubbed his fingers. “Lucien Evans.”

Boom. Annhora felt that a thunder rumbled in his head. He asked with a pale face, “Mr. Oliver, can I refuse it?”

While talking, he secretly observed Mariana’s head, only to discover that Mariana was also observing him, with her eyes also focused on his head.

Chapter 549: Remark

Chapter 549: Remark

Oliver was rather amused by their reactions. He smiled, “Rest assured. Your head should still be intact after you read it, which is both my estimation and the prophecy of astrology.”

Mariana was still unrelieved. “Mr. Oliver, you know that Mr. Evans’ papers can be quite disruptive and... destructive. Also, you have summoned us in advance for the review. In my heart, I feel that a terrible devil has been projected into my cognitive world, and that my head will explode after one moment of carelessness. Could you tell me why you made such an estimation and why you chose us?”

Coughing to hold back his laughter, Oliver had an even deeper understanding about Lucien’s image in the eyes of most arcanists. His name obviously sounded more distressing than the Lord of Hell and the Will of Abyss, particularly when his name was associated with a paper. Such an irregular review procedure was exactly like Brook before.

“I chose you for the review because, based on your papers in journals such as ‘Magic’ and ‘Electromagnetism’ in the past three months, you already had a rough idea and started researching it. Therefore, your cognitive world will certainly not be broken.” Oliver spoke of the real reason.

Of course, he did examine their fates with astrology in advance.

“We had a rough idea?” Annhora recalled in suspicion and soon remembered something. “Do you mean the studies on your transformation formulas and the deeper understanding about the relationship between time and space?”

Oliver nodded softly. “That’s right. I believe you will earn a lot after reading this paper.”

Not entirely convinced, and taking over the paper with shivering hands, Annhora and Mariana both saw the title of the paper: On the Electrodynamics of Moving Bodies and Mass-energy Equation.

Huh. The title does not look very disruptive, does it?

Therefore, the two of them began to read carefully, with quills and blank paper next to them for them to calculate with.

As he read on, Annhora's left hand, not occupied by the quill, scratched his hair subconsciously and turned his white wig wryly. He seemed both interested and overwhelmed by the research, and his head was swooning.

Mariana, on the other hand, bit her lip as she often did when she was still a little girl. She mumbled, "Time? Space? How can they be like this?"

His fingers crossed, Oliver looked at them peacefully on the surface, but his eyes were rather solemn because of their reaction. After eight months of preparation, there shouldn't be another incident of massive brain explosions, right?

Also, the view on time and space in the theory of relativity was not perfect yet. They should be able to see the problems. Their worldview might be messed up, but their cognition wouldn't collapse for now.

After a long time, Annhora suddenly raised his head and said both frantically and confusedly, "I find it hard to believe that time is the speed's function, but it is such a charming thought. Also... Also, there are a lot of problems."

"As Lucien said himself, this is just a preliminary, inconclusive paper that hasn't introduced many things beyond the inertial frame of reference. There are also many unanswered problems. However, I think that the view on time and space is very interesting." Said Oliver with a smile. For a man of liberal arts, such a view of time and space better fitted his appetite.

"This paper completely renews our understanding of time and space. Had it not been for the consideration in the past months, perhaps my cognitive world would've been broken and solidified because the chaos. Well, Mr. Oliver, Mr. Evans must've proposed the paper several months ago, right? The discussion since then was meant to psychologically and intellectually prepare us?" Annhora suddenly realized what happened.

Oliver nodded. "Yes, it was written before my transformation formulas were published. This paper made groundbreaking contributions to the macroscopic and high-speed studies. Perhaps that was part of the reason why some planets are still undiscovered. I believe you can see its worth as well as its imperfect parts."

"Yes. I believe that most of the senior-rank arcanists in the school of electromagnetics and the school of Light-darkness can accept the paper, however reluctantly. It is based on the classic electromagnetic theory and extrapolates it by sweeping the obsolete ideas in it." Annhora said in approval.

Mariana, next to him, murmured to herself in bewilderment, "But what about Ether?"

Annhora frowned. It was not until then that he discovered that, based on the paper, Ether was no longer of any use. It had quietly withdrawn from the stage of history. The foundation of the wave theory probably needed rectifying.

Hearing Mariana's words, Oliver said with a bitter smile, "Ether, waves and particles, we've been arguing about them for nobody knows how many years, but it is more and more difficult to understand them as time goes on."

"It's like two groups of knights in a battle. Both parties are fighting vehemently, but neither of them can crush the enemy and secure the final triumph." Mariana was back to herself. "Mr. Oliver, this paper needs to be proved by experiment phenomena and results in order to be aptly assessed."

Oliver took out another paper and unfolded it before them. "This is Lucien's paper on how to improve the cyclotron, where the relativistic effect has been observed. Also, I have certain problems regarding artificial planets here that involve the changes of time and space.

Oliver only dared to present the paper after seeing that the previous paper was still acceptable.

After reading the paper, Annhora knocked his head hard, “If I had focused more attention on the discussion of this problem in that issue of ‘Arcana’, it probably wouldn’t have taken so long, and I could’ve inferred Mr. Evans’ paper in a couple of months.”

“It means that Mr. Evans’ ideas and direction are right, although the paper is not perfect yet.” Mariana also offered her input and then praised the mass-energy formula.

After the new alchemy was proposed, they began addressing Lucien as Mr. Evans instead of Member Evans, but its meaning was entirely different.

When he returned to his office in the Arcana Review Board, Annhora soon received the paper assigned by the alchemical life. Without further reading, he simply wrote his comment with the quill:

“This is a sublimation on Mr. President’s motion system. It fixes the limitations that the motion system was only accurate in low speed and extrapolates the concept of motion to a macroscopic and high-speed scale. It has also preliminarily resolved many problems in the melting of electric and magnetic theories, giving us the hope of establishing a unified theory in arcana.

“Also, based on Mr. Evans’ proposition that we should infer from as few hypotheses as possible, we discover, to our surprise, that our understanding about time and space seems to have reached a marvelous and chaotic intersection. It is entirely different from the time and space we knew in the past. Not only does the paper disrupt the structure of time and space in our cognitive world, but it also disrupts our concepts in daily life that are founded on absolute time and space. It makes me more bewildered than ever, and I’m even starting to question the value of my life.”

“It’s hard to believe that time slows down, and space constricts, as speed increases. It is in violation of our intuitive perception and our imagination based on that, but the formulas presented by the paper seem convincing enough and closer to the origin of the world. Also, Mr. Evans has already noticed the theoretical effect of increased mass caused by accelerated speed during an experiment with the cyclotron. At this moment, a hallowed gate in my heart seems to have collapsed, but from the ashes rises a brand-new one.”

“Although the system of relativity that Mr. Evans established is not perfect, and the problem that it is only limited to the inertial frame of reference but not universally applicable remains unresolved, the value of this paper is unquestionable. The mass-energy formula that mark the relationship between mass and energy, in particular, are full of mathematical and magical beauty. It is concise, powerful, and contains unimaginably profound mysteries, just like the poetic Brook formulas. Whoever is not shocked and attracted by them does not have any talents in arcana!”

“Mass and energy, time and space, they are the wonders of this world. Perhaps, we can obtain extremely powerful strength from it. In light of that, here is my assessment on Mr. Evans’ paper: This paper, after perfected, will change the paradigm and give us a wiser understanding about time and space, mass and energy. Also, it is doubtless that a relativistic system will be founded on this paper. Therefore, I suggest a reward of 3,000 arcana credits and 80,000 arcana points.”

Because there were still a lot of insidious problems, and a system was not established yet, Annhora did not offer a remark and reward as impressive as what was given for the new alchemy before, and nor did the Congress grant Lucien the title of grand arcanist. However, Mariana, who had made a similar remark, felt suffocated, because it meant that Lucien Evans seemed to be growing into a real grand arcanist based on either the new alchemy or the special theory of relativity!

.....

On the thirty-third floor of Allyn magic tower...

“It took them eight months before they understood the prelude of the theory of relativity. Those guys are dumber than I thought!” Fernando’s estimation at the beginning was half a year at most.

Lucien, on his opposite, smiled and said, "It is not an easy conversation to break one's own conceptions. However, after such a long time of preparation, probably none of the senior-rank arcanists will have brain explosions."

If another massive brain explosions took place, Lucien would feel that he had picked up an innate magic of clearing everybody on the street wherever he went.

"With the credit reward, your arcana level should be able to improve to level eight, right?" Asked Fernando casually, who did not really care about it.

The higher the level is, the more difficult object enchantment would be. The effects of arcana and magic badges could not be further improved.

Lucien nodded. "The feedback from the new alchemy over the past eight months is truly terrifying. The paper, the innovations on the materials, and the lowered difficulty to craft magic items all brought me abundant revenues. Plus the credit reward, I may be able to upgrade into level eight in another two to three months."

In particular, the discovery of the splitting of spectral lines under strong magnetic field and the theoretical explanation on the new alchemy brought him the Jurisian Silver Moon Medal in the electromagnetic field. It also made Lucien's cognitive world more stable and accelerated his studies on eighth-circle and seventh-circle magics. Up until so far, he had learnt nine of them in each category.

"'Arcana' will be issued tomorrow. If there are no major events, we can focus on the preparation for July." Fernando looked at the window and said solemnly. The upcoming battle would decide the Congress of Magic's fate in the near future.

Chapter 550: Sorrow and Joy

On the first day of the Month of Flowers, inside the Allyn branch of the Moonson League...

Jurisian, in the attire of a battle sorcerer, with a six-star arcana badge, a five-circle magic badge and a badge of crescent moon on his chest, slowly walked into the hall.

“Good morning, Mr. Jurisian.” The few middle-rank arcanists who just got down from the stars greeted Jurisian respectfully the moment they saw him.

Since the Influence Factor was introduced, it was not rare for the arcana level to surpass the magic level, but the senior-rank arcanists were still rare. An insurmountable barrier that many people couldn't cross in their lifetime seemed to lie between level five and level six. With his discovery of the splitting of spectral lines under strong magnetic field and his theoretical explanation four months ago, Jurisian proved the prophecy in the new alchemy and finally earned six silver stars. Had it not been for the fact that his cognitive world was still not substantiated yet, he would've advanced into the sixth circle and become a senior rank.

Jurisian had always been amiable when he was not on a mission. He replied in a smile, “Good morning, are you waiting for today's ‘Arcana’, too?”

“Yes. Debates have remained unabated about Mr. Oliver's transformation formulas recently. We can't wait to see the latest explanation and application. Perhaps somebody has already proved it with experiments.” Bobby, the middle-rank arcanist in the lead, was a tall, muscular man, with narrow and long eyes.

Jurisian chuckled, “Me too, but I'm more worried that I might see Evans' paper on that someday.”

Upon hearing that, the fairly large number of arcanists in the hall suddenly fell silent. The name had been haunting them like a nightmare. They could never trust Mr. Oliver's paper as well as the papers of other arcanists too deeply until he offered his opinion on the transformation formulas. Waiting and being scared seemed to have become their habit.

After more than ten seconds, Bobby was back to himself, he was about to reply to Jurisian, when a few receptionists carried the journals including 'Arcana' and 'Magic' out and placed them on the counter. So, he dropped the subject and said, "Mr. Jurisian, the papers are here. After you."

Seeing that Bobby was right before the counter, Jurisian shook his head and said jokingly, "Let's respect the queue. You can check if there is Evans' paper first so that the rest of us can be prepared."

He intended to refuse Bobby's generosity subtly and humorously, but after he spoke, all the arcanists who were squeezing forward to purchase the journals stopped.

Their eyes were focused on Bobby, as if they agreed with Jurisian's proposition that he should check if there was Lucien Evans' paper first, and what it was about if there indeed was.

Bobby did not think much at the beginning, but when so many people gazed at him, he immediately recalled the magnificent accomplishments of the Headcrusher. His forehead immediately beaded with sweat, but the arcanists behind him gave him so much pressure that he still picked up a copy of 'Arcana' after a long hesitation.

Realizing that his joke seemed to have been misinterpreted under the special circumstances, Jurisian stepped forward and planned to stop Bobby so that he could 'examine' it himself.

Suddenly, Bobby blurted out, "There is Mr. Evans' paper!"

His voice was uncontrollably high, and it was obviously shaking. The whispers in the hall were entirely gone. The place seemed to have been frozen in time.

"What paper?" Asked Jurisian subconsciously.

Bobby breathed in relief. "It's about the electrodynamics of moving bodies and the mass-energy equation. It sounds like research on the motion theories in electromagnetics and doesn't appear to be disruptive."

After he was reassured, he simply read the paper that was put on the first page of the journal on the counter in his curiosity. The other arcanists, cleverly, did not interrupt him but focused their eyes on his head. Jurisian, on the other hand, was deep in thought because of the ambiguous title.

After a while, Bobby's facial muscles began to twist, and his sweat was dripping from his cheeks. Then, he raised his left hand and pressed his head, as if he were in agony. His eyes were chaotic and confused.

The hall was caught in a weird silence again. Murmuring something, Bobby turned around, only to discover that all the arcanists around him including Jurisian, regardless of their rank, had retreated to at least ten meters away from him. He was surrounded by emptiness, as if a devil had just taken a bite here.

"What are you doing?" Asked Bobby, puzzled.

All the arcanists eyed him weirdly. Jurisian coughed and said, "We saw that you were in pain and therefore gave you a peaceful environment for you to recover. What is this paper about?"

"Oh? You were afraid that my cognition would collapse and my brain would explode?" Bobby realized what happened and smiled, "How is it possible? Mr. Evans' paper infers Mr. Oliver's transformation formulas based on two hypotheses. There's nothing disruptive."

Upon hearing that, Jurisian and the rest of them took another three steps back. "What? It's an explanation about the Oliver transformation?"

"Then why were you pressing your head so painfully?"

Bobby looked at his feet rather in embarrassment. "I could understand the formulas in it, but the descriptions about time, space, mass and energy were too bewildering for me. I couldn't think them through and just knocked my head to see if I could get any inspiration."

Hu. Everybody's breath of relief almost gathered into a wind. So, the guy was only thinking hard because he could not understand it. Their worry was for naught.

Knowing that it was Evans' explanation that they had 'long expected', the middle-rank arcanists of the Moonsong League were finally calmed down, but none of them dared to read it carefully.

After a while, thinking that nothing happened to Bobby, Jurisian summoned his courage and read Lucien's paper by the counter.

As time went by, Jurisian became more and more grave. His muscles were tightened, and he was gritting his teeth. His shiny forehead was brimming with cold sweat, his eyes were filled with confusion and shock, and he kept murmuring space and time, mass and energy to himself.

Also, what was most weird that uncanny changes seemed to be happening around him, as if the rays of light were brighter.

Bobby immediately understood their previous fear after seeing Jurisian's status. He hurried to rush into the crowd, while the other arcanists clenched their fists and stared at Jurisian's head in fear.

After a long time, Jurisian suddenly 'screamed', and the uptight arcanists immediately backed off in a flurry, and the hall was in a mess.

After they retreated further and were braced for a headless body, they discovered, however, that Jurisian was standing joyfully, utterly refreshed.

"Mr. Jurisian, are you alright?" Bobby emboldened himself to ask.

Jurisian laughed in wild joy. "While the paper is not exactly perfect, it is a major shock for me and has settled certain problems that bothered me. Therefore, my cognitive world half substantiated just now!"

With his spiritual power that was more than sufficient and his control over magic, it meant that he would become a sixth-circle sorcerer soon.

“Really? Congratulations on you becoming a senior-rank sorcerer in advance. But why did you scream, Mr. Jurisian? We thought that your brain was going to explode...” Said Bobby frankly.

Jurisian replied in a chuckle, “I was ecstatic, so I wanted you to share my joy.”

Witnessing that Jurisian broke the greatest obstacle to the senior rank, the middle-rank arcanists in the hall had no time to condemn his mischief but all surged to the counter to buy ‘Arcana’, hoping that a similar ‘miracle’ could happen to themselves, too.

After a long time, only a few of the dozens of middle-rank arcanists were deep in thought, as if they were both enlightened and confused. The rest of them were just like Bobby. They could understand the deductions, but they couldn’t grasp their specific meaning. They were all at a loss.

However, they all realized that the paper seemed to have overthrown President Douglas’ motion system. Their cognitive world that was founded on that was shaken as a result. Thankfully, Lucien arduously explained that the previous motion system was a low-speed approximation of the new theory in the latter half of his paper with abundant examples, which stabilized their cognitive world again. It was not a disruption but a sublimation!

Even so, the fact that their knowledge was incomplete and unsolid still made them more bewildered than ever.

Right then, a hawk-nosed man walked in, with the badges of a seventh-circle arcanist and a seventh-circle sorcerer on his chest.

Noticing the queer behavior of his fellow arcanists, he broached a few questions.

After hearing their reply, he frowned and picked up a copy of ‘Arcana’ to read the article. As he read on, he observed in disgust, “Absurd! How can time and space be like this! This is in utter violation of observation and imagination! Has Lucien Evans’ head been muddled because of his impractical mathematic studies?”

“Also, there are still many loopholes in it!”

While talking, he went upstairs with the journal, planning to lambaste it.

“Mr. Alvaro, it’s mine...” The middle-rank arcanist whose journal was taken away eventually gave up trying, because he knew that Mr. Alvaro was a seasoned arcanist who had unimaginable persistence in the three laws of the Force Field, the motion system and the absolute time and space.

.....

Inside the royal magic tower of Holm...

Looking at his teacher mumbling the words such as ‘mass’, ‘energy’, ‘time’ and ‘space’ before him, K suddenly felt indescribable fear and focused his eyes on the ‘Arcana’ in his hands.

Suddenly, Larry breathed heavily and clenched his fists hard. He announced with his eyes glittering, “If perfected, it is going to be a paper that changes the era!”

“Master?” K asked carefully. He was already a level-four arcanist and a fourth-circle sorcerer.

There was no telling the look on Larry’s face, which was covered in his furry, yellow beard, but he spoke in apparent joy, “My cognitive world has half substantiated.”

.....

On the thirteenth floor of the Allyn magic tower...

Lucien sat in the office of the Affair Committee, waiting for Thompson to confirm that none of the sorcerers had cognitive world meltdowns.

“None so far.” Thompson walked in. “That’s because you haven’t presented the improvements on the experiments with the cyclotron yet. Also, after more than eight months of discussions, most arcanists should be mentally and intellectually prepared.”

“However, a few senior-rank senior-ranks of the school of force field did have intense reactions.”

Lucien said helplessly, “I hope that only their cognitive world was broken and solidified. Or maybe, they can indeed find the mistakes in the paper and propose new opinions.”

Thompson was not bothered but consoled him, “Something good also happened. Today, at least six fifth-circle sorcerers’ cognitive world half substantiated because of your paper. Four of them are from the school of electromagnetics and the school of Light-darkness, including Jurisian you know. Two are elemental sorcerers, one of them being Larry. At least in the short run, the good influence of your paper outweighs the bad influence.”

“As far as I know, such scenes only happened when ‘Mathematical Principles of Magical Philosophy’ and the Brook formulas were proposed. Of course, their influences were even greater. Some people’s cognitive worlds even substantiated on the spot.”

Chapter 551: Tide of Time

After returning to the Atom Institution, Lucien was warmly welcomed by Heidi and other students.

“Master, how spectacular of you! You included the Oliver transformation into your system and completely abolished ‘Ether’!” Said Katrina in excitement. Her teacher had been silent for eight months because he was preparing for such a groundbreaking paper!

Heidi complained, “Master, why didn’t you say anything? In the past eight months, we were frequently mocked by the sorcerers of the sorcerer of electromagnetism and the school of Light-darkness.”

Because their teacher was the one who proposed it, and the theory stressed that Douglas’ motion system was its low-speed approximation, Layria and the other students accepted it without much resistance. Of course, about the new view on time and space, they were still at a loss due to their insufficient arcana knowledge, but they were not too overwhelmed.

Outside of them, Lazar and Rogerio smiled at Lucien, their hands in their pockets, and Jerome was holding a copy of ‘Arcana’ in his hands, as if he were waiting to ask questions. Alfalia, Lowi and the other assistants were further away. They were also excited because they indirectly witnessed a paper that could send someone to the throne of grand arcanist as well as a shocking part of history.

There was also the envy for Heidi, Annick and other students in them. As Mr. Evans’ students, those people could celebrate it around him happily, while they could only stand far away.

“How could I bring out such a paper all of a sudden? Did you not see the months of preparation?” Lucien intentionally pointed it out, so that his students and friends could think more instead of jumping to any conclusions when they encountered other papers in the future.

Sprint had contracted Annick’s head-scratching habit at some point. The arrogance on his face was gone, and only the most sincere admiration was left. “Master, I don’t understand much of your paper, but the formula where mass grows with speed seems able to explain the inconsistency between the theoretical performance and the actual performance of the cyclotron, right? Just now, Annick and I adjusted the frequency of the electric field after calculation, and we did obtain particles of higher energy than before! Was your paper inspired by the problem?”

Heidi, Alfalia and everybody else pricked their ears, because ‘Allyn Impression’ had offered a high reward for the stories behind the special theory of relativity. However, they were also aware that they must be approved by Lucien before they told anybody else about the matter.

“As a matter of fact, after grasping the classic electromagnetic theories, I had been trying to melt Mr. President motion system into it, but a lot of problems occurred. In the end, the light speed experiment gave me an inspiration. After certain intermediate phases that were similar to the Oliver transformation, I inferred those formulas naturally with as few hypotheses as possible. The relativistic effect that you discovered provided a powerful proof for my theory.” Lucien spoke of the excuse that he thought of a long time ago.

Annick was enlightened. “At that time, you already speculated mass changes in your explanation. Heidi said that it was impossible!”

The freckles on Heidi’s face had mostly gone. Blushing, she glared at Annick in anger and embarrassment. “How could I have known that? That’s a field only the senior-rank arcanists understand!”

“However, as my students, you should know what will happen next.” Said Lucien with a smile.

However, the elegant and reassuring smile, in Heidi’s eyes, was as terrifying as the look of the most brutal devil. Their master was obviously hinting that they needed to understand and grasp the special theory of relativity, which meant classes and classes, exercises and exercises!

Looking at the students who seemed to have just been hit by hail,

Lucien smiled, "The sooner you grasp the basic transformations and the view on time and space, the easier it will be for you to shape your cognitive world from a higher level without being affected by obsolete theories. However, I need to specify in advance that the theory about time and space is still incomplete. You need to bear in mind that other theories may be introduced in the future to modify the current theory."

The students, whom he had been grooming since childhood, were most suitable for new theories because they hadn't understood the old arcana theories well enough. In another couple of years, it would take more time to transform them. They might even be shackled by the obsolete opinions and could not make any creative achievement.

Nodding her head, Heidi calmed down and asked curiously, "Master, are you going to submit the relativistic effect that Annick discovered next time? Many sorcerers in the school of electromagnetics and the school of Light-darkness that I know complain that it is only a hypothetical theory when they cannot fully understand your paper. Hehe, their tongues won't be tough again after they see the evidence!"

Sprint secretly thought to himself that it remained to be seen whether or not they still had a tongue at all.

Lucien did not reply to her but spoke to everyone, "There are still imperfect parts in the paper. You can join the discussion on it later. Let's work together to improve it."

.....

At the beginning of the Month of Passion, on the fifteenth floor of the Allyn magic tower...

Inside an office of the Arcana Review Board, the few members of the Hand of Paleness gathered.

As an authority on cell memories, Felipe was admitted by the Board without a question after he became a level-seven arcanist. His hands in the pockets of his black cloak, he asked the members of the school of necromancy including Pesor and Tina-Timos while leaning against the wall, “I wonder how Evans will respond to the article ‘On the Mistakes and Paradoxes in the Theory of Relativity’.”

“Alvaro submitted the paper only two days ago. It was very insightful. I don’t think Lucien Evans had any time to come up with a reply. We probably have to wait until next month.” After the shock of light quantum and Brook’s experiments, Pesor had been confused about both the wave theory of light and the particle theory, so he did not show much reaction to Lucien’s paper. If ‘Ether’ was gone, so be it. As for the disruption of the motion system, Lucien had made it clear that it was sublimation and a more comprehensive, unlimited explanation, so he also accepted it without much resistance. After all, for a sorcerer of the school of necromancy, that was not important.

Tina-Timos, on the other hand, frowned. “I heard that Lucien Evans submitted a paper yesterday, but it probably hasn’t been included in the arcana library yet. Although I’m in favor of Alvaro’s opinion, I can only stay neutral until I see Lucien’s response.”

She witnessed the ‘brainstorm’ last year in person.

“He is now a real authority. In the fields he is good at, other people will never feel secure until he replies.” Felipe looked at the badge on his chest. Seven black circles and seven silver stars did not seem far away from Lucien’s allegedly eight silver stars and eight black circles, but for other arcanists, Lucien could already compare to the few grand arcanists and was as notorious as the Lord of Hell. This was not about his level.

Also, he was very close to becoming a grand arcanist. If he perfected or proved either of the two theories, he would immediately be given the ultimate title in arcana and construct his own legendary class.

While they were talking, the latest issue of ‘Arcana’ was sent in. Felipe stood straight and grabbed one copy. Turning to the table of contents, he saw that the first article was not ‘On the Mistakes and Paradoxes in the Theory of Relativity’, or the grand arcanists and legendary sorcerers’ discussion about the special theory of relativity, but ‘An Analysis and Improvement on the Inconsistency of the Actual and Theoretical Performance of the Cyclotron and a Discussion on the Relativistic Effect’, authored by one Lucien Evans X.

Reading the paper and frowning, Tina-Timos heaved a long sigh. “I don’t think that Alvaro can wait for Lucien’s official reply in the next month.”

Pesor put on a bitter smile, and Felipe clenched his fists hard in his pockets, feeling that their gap was now even greater.

He was not close to the Demigod-lich who was his teacher, but he wouldn’t mind avenging his teacher if there was a chance. However, the reality was simply too cruel.

.....

In the Allyn branch of the Moonsong League, the tower guard took emergency measures after sensing the anomaly in the laboratory.

As a member of the Punishment Department of the Congress, Jurisian arrived at the spot as soon as possible. He saw the headless body in front of the cyclotron, as well as the red-and-white ‘flowers’ that stained the wall, the experiment table and the floor.

“Mr. Alvaro...” Jurisian guessed the identity of the corpse without looking at his badge. He should be the only senior-rank sorcerer whose cognitive world collapsed.

The arcanists who followed him all fell silent.

Right then, Jurisian suddenly had the feeling that space was rippling before him. Then, everything was back to normal, and a laboratory nearby was opened.

Antunes, an eighth-circle arcanist who had lingered for years, walked out with a smile and was slightly stunned by the situation here.

Jurisian understood something. He covered his forehead with his right hand and said, “Congratulates on the substantiation of Mr.

Antunes's cognitive world. You are about to become an archmage."

Antunes nodded and brushed his grey hair. Having complicated feelings, he said, "Bury Alvaro..."

The tide of time was unstoppable. He could only sigh that Alvaro had been eliminated and feel lucky that he followed the trend.

.....

At the beginning of the Month of Fire, every arcanist was waiting for the latest issue of 'Arcana', which purportedly included Mr. Evans' replies to certain questions about the special theory of relativity.

Louise, with her white wolf, got the seventh issue of Arcana of year 824 and saw the title that was more peculiar than she thought: Answers to Certain Questions and the '3 + 1' Dimensional Narration on the Special Theory of Relativity and the Oliver Transformation'.

The paper answered many questions from last month systematically and comprehensively. Admitting that the issues regarding the non-inertial frames of reference hadn't been resolved, it had fixed other parts that were believed to be mistakes and paradoxes. The changing frames of reference and the unintuitive narrations were too dizzying.

"This almost marks the real establishment of the special theory of relativity. When the inertial frame of reference is extrapolated into the universal reference system, Mr. Evans will be acknowledged as a grand arcanist." A level-five arcanist, who could manage to understand the paper, said next to Louise.

His partner nodded in agreement, "However, I think many arcanists who cannot understand the explanations will continue to raise similar doubts. Well, what's the point of the '3 + 1' dimensional narration on the special theory of relativity that Mr. Evans wrote in the end? Just another math model from a different perspective?"

"The three-dimensional axes plus an axis of time agree with our general perception, but of course, the mathematical transformations are rather complicated. Perhaps, Mr. Evans wanted more people to understand him..." The level-five arcanist was also puzzled.

Louise tried to read the paper. She thought to herself, "Mr. Evans certainly wouldn't do any meaningless things."

.....

Inside the Atom Institution, Lucien was reading 'Arcana', when Thompson 'called' him.

"Lucien, Juliana and Minsk, whom you proposed that we should monitor closely, suddenly went missing." Said Thompson in a low voice.

Lucien was rather surprised. The time of action was about to come. What was the incident about?

Chapter 552: Prelude

“How did they go missing?” Lucien calmed himself down and asked.

Thompson browsed through the reports in his hands for final confirmation, and the noise of paper being turned entered Lucien’s ears. “They were monitored by a senior-rank battle sorcerer and two middle-rank sorcerers. It was discovered that they entered a small church on the west side of Rentato but never left.”

“The senior-rank sorcerer thought that it was just a regular case of Sard’s marginalization on the radical clerics and night watchers and did not think too much. Today, when he saw neither Juliana or Minsk, he was puzzled and entered the church as a mouse, but nobody was inside.”

This place was the Kingdom of Holm, where sorcerers were multiple times more than clerics. That was why Thompson was extravagant enough to deploy a senior-rank sorcerer for surveillance.

“Did they notice the followers and use the church to escape?” Lucien thought of another possibility.

Thompson knocked the table softly. “That’s possible, but the odds can’t be high, because the same surveillance had been conducted in the past several months, during which time they showed no sign that they detected any anomaly. Also, they were acting the same as usual yesterday as they did before.

“What about the clerics and night watchers that have been marginalized by Sard?” Lucien expanded the range.

Thompson chuckled and said gravely, “If they also went missing, I would’ve reported it to the Highest Council because it would suggest that something was wrong with Sard and our plan had to be changed. However, only the two of them are confirmed to be missing.”

Lucien brushed his eyebrow. “There are twelve days to go until our operation. Let's try to find them without raising Sard's attention."

Thompson did not object to Lucien's advice or reminder. Everybody in the Congress of Magic was guessing when he would become a grand arcanist and enter the Highest Council. Also, his permission was already above the Affair Committee and on par with that of the ninth-circle archmages such as Raventi.

"The extremists are rather steady despite their anger. Sard, as 'the great prophet', is truly good at enchanting people." Thompson briefly described it. As a member of the Affair Committee, the Lord of Storm's student and a senior-rank sorcerer whose faith had been tested, he knew about the cooperation but was unaware of the specific plans.

Lucien played with his quill, not sure what secrets were lying deeper in the matter, but in any case, Minsk and Juliana were the night watchers who hated him most, both for 'public justice' and personal grudge. They could resort to any methods. Therefore, he asked Thompson to increase the protection for Joel's family.

After the communication, Lucien looked at Arcana before him but failed to concentrate his attention after a long time because of anxiety. The upcoming operation was too much pressure for anyone who was aware of the matter. Even though he was good at keeping calm, he still felt highly concerned now that he was faced with unknown dangers and changes. Of course, more important, he was not alone now, and he needed to consider more. He had his love, his teacher, his students, his friends and his family. There would be dire consequences if the plan failed.

"I need to remind my teacher and inform him of that plan." Lucien knew that Thompson would report it to Fernando but still decided to go to the Thunder Hell in person.

He was about to leave his office, when Chelly knocked on the door and entered. She asked uneasily and gloomily, "Master, do you have a minute?"

"What is it?" Lucien asked back peacefully.

Chelly shyly sat on the chair in front of Lucien's desk and crossed her hands. "Master, I have a boyfriend named Jacques. You should know him, right? You signed a magic contract with him before."

"I do. Is he here to claim the drug to activate his blood power?" Lucien nodded his head.

Chelly said with a smile of embarrassment. "He was very talented and could've turned into a knight on his own, but after signing the magic contract, he found it impossible to significantly increase his willpower. His efforts did not pay off after years of work. So, he plans to use the contract as a last resort."

"If he uses the contract, there will be no turning back or hope for him." Having found the love of his life, Lucien was rather sympathetic with Chelly and her boyfriend.

Blushing, Chelly said, "That's why I want to ask for your help, master. I've saved a lot of arcana points in the past few years. My father also gave me abundant Thales and materials. Plus the wealth that Jacques earned through mercenary missions, they should be enough to buy the 'Origin of Blood' of a senior-rank vampire, but I do not have permission to do so."

"That's easy. Also, we signed a magic contract before. I'll buy it for you when I come back later." Said Lucien gently.

Chelly took a long breath in relief. She had been too gentle and proud to ask for it, although it had been on her mind for a while. Now that she got a satisfactory reply after she finally summoned her courage to ask, she was naturally excited. "Thank you very much, master."

Lucien smiled. "Is he going to complete the ceremony himself after he buys the Origin of Blood. Speaking of which, Jacques is not bad at all. He earned his money through mercenary missions instead of only counting on you."

"The ceremony is not complicated. I don't want to add to your trouble, master. I'll go to the Task Zone to issue a task and invite a sorcerer of the school of necromancy to host it." When mentioning Jacques, she put on a happy and warm smile without her knowing it. "He used to be a flamboyant knight, but he is much more reliable now.'

When she studied under Lucien, she had been hanging around with the most distinguished gentlemen, so she had a new understanding about the old Jacques. Thankfully, he had changed a lot, and that was why their relationship continued.

Lucien did not say anything yet, when Chelly began to praise and complain about Jacques. "The last mercenary mission he took was rather dangerous. It's the investigation on a cult. He did not activate his blood power and almost died inside."

"A cult?" Lucien was rather sensitive about the word.

Chelly nodded. "Although it's a cult, it's deeply connected to the Church. It's an organization founded by certain radical, bottom-class clerics in private. They seem to worship the angel king and have deviated from the doctrine that they could only follow the Lord."

After living several years of magic life, her faith was almost gone, but she still habitually said 'Lord'.

Lucien frowned again. "The angel king..." What does Sard want? Is he thinking to cross the Storm Strait and unite the faith of the Church later?

Hearing Chelly tell the full story, Lucien thought for a moment and said, "As the Church and the Congress gradually get the colonies in the new alternate dimensions under control, Holm will definitely be more and more dangerous. You should remind your father to be prepared in case of a total war."

"Yes, my father has been preparing for that since the family reached the agreement with the Congress." Chelly did not overthink.

After seeing Chelly off, Lucien reached the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower, planning to go to the Thunder Hell through the fixed transmission magic circle, only to discover that his teacher was in the library.

“You’re here.” Fernando seemed to have foreseen Lucien’s arrival.

Lucien nodded. “I learnt about certain anomalies from Thompson.”

“He told it to me, too, but there aren’t other discoveries yet.” A map of Rentato was placed before Fernando. “This map marks the marginalized extremists, the areas that different nobles are in, and the few parts of the divine power circle in Rentato.”

It was the confidential map obtained from Hathaway.

Lucien walked to his teacher and observed the map. He discovered that the extremists had indeed been marginalized by Sard. From the west side, the closer it was to the Radiance Church on the southeast and the Nekso Palace on the northeast, the fewer radical clerics and night watchers there were. In the district where the Radiance Church was at, there was even none of them. Even Stone’s Knights of Grail had been relocated to the abbey on the northwest. It seemed that they were all set for the Congress of Magic to attack.

“Something doesn’t feel right.” Lucien looked at the map and said, but he couldn’t tell exactly what was wrong. Even astrology could not give him an answer.

Fernando frowned. “This is distressingly smooth. Lucien, Hull-Chulia will take care of the parishes on the north coastline, Erica will control the Duchy of Calais, Vicente will go to the Kingdom of Colette, and Brook will finish the Brianne parish, which hasn’t been attracted by Sard, in person with Holt’s cooperation.”

Hull-Chulia was the ‘Monarch of Fate’, the other legendary sorcerer in Cabin of Palmeira. He had a deep control over the north. Erica was the Master of Transformation and the historian in the Family of Sorcerers, which was headquartered in the Duchy of Calais and deeply associated with the local noble. Therefore, she was the most appropriate attacker. By the same logic, it was not hard to notice the closeness of the Duchy of Calais and the Hand of Paleness by the fact that the Immortal Throne prize was co-awarded by them.

The Moonsong League was headquartered in the Brianne kingdom. There shouldn't be a problem if Brook acted in person with the cooperation of Chelsea Holt, the Moon Scholar.

"We have to banish the clerics and control the parishes as soon as possible, so that the nobles in the few countries cannot vacillate anymore, or the situation will escalate because of their legendary knights and the Grand Cardinals." Said Lucien in a low voice.

Fernando nodded his head. "Speed is what matters most in our plan. Hathaway and I will take care of the Holm parish, Douglas will supervise the battle from Allyn, and the other grand arcanists and legendary sorcerers, as backups, will be ready to join different battlefields at any moment."

"By then, you will not stay in Allyn. I will drop you somewhere near the Nekso Palace. That's the place of balance for the multiple powers of the divine barrier, and it is very easy to be opened. If the situation turns very horrible, you will bring Natasha away taking advantage of the chaos. While Allyn is safe, it will be the enemy's primary target should anything go wrong. You are our Secret, and Nekso Palace has the Sword of Truth. It's not easy for you to be tracked if you act alone. You can hide in the depths of the ocean. When you become a legendary sorcerer, you will be the fire that reignite the Congress."

"This is the scroll of 'Night Travel' that I asked for from Stanis... He has connections in the Dark Congress and got it from a vampire prince. It can help you break the space anchors and barriers."

Listening to his master's plan about the worst scenario, Lucien suddenly felt that the air around him was depressing.

Chapter 553: Everything Goes Well

Taking over the scroll of 'Night Travel', Lucien intended to keep his smile, only to discover that his face was too rigid to do so. "Master, it can't be that bad. Even if Sard breaks his promise and the pope arrives and performs God's Arrival, he can only kill one legendary expert at the peak of legendary at most. Since they also need to resist the North Church and the Dark Congress, it's already not bad if they can deploy twenty legendary experts, and we have just as many experts in the Congress."

"If the situation escalates, you would have to take the five saint cardinals including Sard and the seven legendary knights in Holm, Colette, Brianne and Colette into account, too. That means almost thirty legendary experts in total. Together with the pope who's a demigod, I estimate that few legendary sorcerers can survive a head-on clash with them." Fernando would rather be prepared for the worst.

Then, he looked at Lucien with a smile in his red eyes. "Don't underestimate the pope. He is still one of the demigods even without God's Arrival. Except for the experts like Douglas, Dracula and Brook, who have been at the peak of legendary for many years, the other legendary sorcerers might not be able to take one hit from him."

As he spoke, Fernando, who had always been either shameless or grave and agitated, sighed with mixed feelings, "Also, God's Arrival is too terrifying. After it locks onto the expert at the peak of legendary, they will be killed instantly, no matter if they are by themselves or gathered together. In order to improve 'Eternal Blaze' to a similar level, Douglas will have to advance into a demigod. That's why the Congress decided to cooperate with Sard despite the risks before the pope's God's Arrival is recovered."

"Otherwise, who's going to block God's Arrival in ten years? I don't think me, Hathaway, Douglas or Brook has the honorable personality to sacrifice oneself for everybody else, but if we join our hands, we will all be killed. On the other hand, for the seven legendary knights, whether or not the pope has God's Arrival has a strong influence on their final decision."

"Once they are totally inclined to us, it will be the pope's turn to weigh the pros and cons. After all, the most available forces of the South Church will only be equal to ours by then, and it will no longer have the overwhelming advantage. The pope has to consider the possibility of a brutal victory where he is exhausted after using God's Arrival and half of the saint cardinals and sacred knights are killed. That would be in the best interests of the Dark Congress and the North Church."

Lucien nodded and understood that Congress' strategy was to create a favorable situation so that the seven legendary knights would be turned to their side. Then, even though the pope's God's Arrival was recovered, he would have to face the scenario where a third party would take advantage of the lose-lose war.

"Natasha and I have settled on some things. Together with Sard's stimulation, we should be confident in making the nobles completely inclined to us, and the nobles' tendency will definitely influence the legendary knights' decision. Master, how about this..." Lucien proposed a suggestion, which had been prepared in advance, too.

Fernando nodded solemnly, "Whatever its final result is, it will do as long as it increases our leverage. Of the seven legendary knights, five have been more or less inclined to us. Until the situation is clear, they probably wouldn't refuse to communicate with us even if they decide to sit on the fence first. I'll talk to them."

Then, the two of them inferred Sard's actions and plans for different purposes as well as the corresponding countermeasures.

"If that's Sard's purpose, I'll let you know as soon as possible. Let's hope that your countermeasure proves useful. Also, since you are near the Nekso Palace, you should try to help Natasha with the control of the divine power circles in the whole city. That's a critical step to prevent accidents. Morris and other sorcerers of the royal family of Holm will work with you." The Lord of Storm told him. Deploying Lucien to the place was not just because it was easier for him to escape, but also because of his special relationship with Natasha, who could cooperate with him without concerns.

While the overall defense of Rentato was not as good as the Radiance Church and the Nekso Palace, it was still better than that of Aalto. After it was activated, the controller would gain a major advantage. The facilities that controlled the defense, on the other hand, were separated into two relatively independent parts, one in the Radiance Church and the other in the Nekso Palace. The former would be taken over by the Congress after Sard left the Radiance Church, and the latter depended on Natasha.

Without saying anything else, Lucien nodded solemnly and then asked in curiosity. “Master, why didn’t we seek the cooperation of other forces?”

“Such a plan must be kept highly confidential. If we asked for the cooperation of the North Church or the Dark Congress, the intelligence might’ve been leaked, and the Church might’ve noticed it. Also, they wouldn’t have many choices. They would either wait to take advantage of us after we fail, or attack the territory of the Church when the defenders are summoned elsewhere. It’s impossible that they would join the battlefield recklessly. What we are seizing is exactly the gap. We are going to threaten the Church to back off from a total war.” Fernando explained, “As for the other allies, those who are willing to come will come after noticing the changes, and those who are unwilling to will not come even if we asked them in advance.”

Even within the Congress of Magic, only the members of the Highest Council and the few sorcerers with high permission such as Lucien were aware of the details. Most of the arcanists and apprentices had no idea that something great was going to take place soon at all. Natasha, on the other side, told nobody of the matter but merely directed the nobles to further misunderstand the Church and look forward to a new balance.

.....

At noon on the fourteenth of the Month of Fire...

On the thirty-fifth floor of the Allyn magic tower, voices echoed nonstop:

“It’s confirmed that Benedict II is preaching in the Holy City and is never away.”

“It’s confirmed that Saints Melmax, Anasta and Maria are around the pope and are never away.”

“It’s confirmed that Auden, leader of the ascetics, is preaching in the new alternate dimension and is never away.”

“It’s confirmed that Varantine, leader of the ascetics, entered a confessional in the Holy City and is never away.”

“It’s confirmed that Vaharall, the Adjudicator, is at the headquarters of the inquisition and is never away.”

...

The intelligence confirmations came in one piece after another, allowing the Highest Council and the sorcerers in the operation such as Lucien to get the situation under control.

“Unable to confirm the whereabouts of Saint Anthony, a giant of the inquisition and a night watcher, and Brentis, the Original Fire who ranks top among the night watchers.”

“Unable to confirm...”

The intelligence was not just about the South Church but also about the North Church as well as the experts of the Dark Mountain Range. The spies that the Congress of Magic sent out all those years had finally proved their value.

After analyzing the intelligence and confirming the situation, Douglas stood up from his seat and walked to the front of the conference room of the Highest Council, before he announced gravely and solemnly: “The operation now begins. Pay attention to your safety!”

“Arcana Above!” Lucien and the rest of them placed their right hand on their forehead.

.....

At Cocus, the capital of the Duchy of Calais...

Erica, the ‘Master of Transformation’ who had linen-colored short hair, walked out of her black magic tower that looked like an observatory, with the intense vibe of history around her. She was one of the few sorcerers in the Highest Council with ancient heritage. Sometimes, she called herself a historian.

Calculating the time, she walked to the Grand Church of Cocus with a few archmages and senior-rank sorcerers. At this moment, two dragon scale horses galloped by, and the riders shouted intentionally, “His Excellency Yourcenar demands an emergency meeting of nobles.”

Yourcenar was ‘Song of Dusk’, a legendary knight of the Duchy of Calais.

Erica understood that it was part of the plan. Yourcenar wouldn’t do anything until the situation was completely clear.

After only several minutes, Erica and her partners, who seemed rather slow, had already reached the gate of the Grand Church of Cocus which was on the other side of the city. A middle-aged cleric in a white soft hat was staring at her peacefully.

“Torrens, are you ready for delivery?” Erica asked Torrens, the Grand Cardinal of the Calais parish, known as ‘Angel of Wisdom’.

Torrens replied in a smile, “The red robes have been sent by me to inspect the counties. There are only some bishops and reverends inside. Also, the divine power circle has been shut down.”

Erica did not enter recklessly but hinted for an archmage next to her, asking him to summon two senior-rank devils to control the pivots of the divine power circle and the transmission magic circle.

When nothing went wrong, the few archmages and sorcerers all went in and controlled different areas, and Erica stayed in the square, confronting Torrens in silence while waiting for the progress in Rentato.

.....

At Salyvaor, capital of the Kingdom of Brianne...

Brook, the half-old gentleman who was wearing a white wig and a double-breasted suit with a short black staff in his right hand, walked onto the stairs outside of the Grand Church of Brewston together with Chelsea Holt, a short, silver-haired lady. They walked into it without any tricks.

He was confident enough to kill 'Beaver', the 'Astral Light', inside even though all the divine power circles were activated.

When he was about to walk into the Church, he looked back at the palace where the king of Brianne was at and said in a low voice, "I hope that Bedrenka and Basor do not make any injudicious decision."

Bedrenka, 'Hammer of the Void' and Basor, 'Knight of Disasters', were the legendary knights of the Kingdom of Brianne.

"They would only make a decision when the situation is clear." Holt, the Moon Scholar who had lived here for a long time, replied with a smile.

Brook nodded and ambled into the church without further ado. He sat on a seat on the third row before the cross and contemplated like the most pious believer while waiting for the moment to come. The red robe preaching on the podium had no idea that a terrible monster who ranked eighth on the Cleansing List was right before him.

.....

Hull-Chulia in the north coastline and Vicente in Colette experienced more or less the same as Erica did. They took over the grand churches and controlled the teleportation points easily. The legendary knights in the few regions all demanded an emergency meeting of nobles like Yourcenar did.

In Rentato, outside of the Radiance Church...

Fernando, who temporarily had the help of 'Absolute Defense' Ataman, a legendary sorcerer, waited for the arrival of Sard with more than ten archmages and senior-rank sorcerers.

They did not wait long when Sard, who appeared to be an ordinary old man, left the Radiance Church easily just like he promised.

Chapter 554: God's Guard

The white robe of a regular cleric on his body, and his slightly dirty eyes, made Sard look no different from any old man who was basking in the sun on the streets in Rentato, although the atmosphere around him was indeed profound and gloomy.

He looked around at the empty square of the church and chuckled, "I was worrying that you did not dare to come, Lord of Storm."

With the vibe of a storm, Fernando snorted, "Why would I not dare come? Would the Church wait and watch while we grow all the while doing nothing? I bet that no waiting is needed at all. The moment the pope's God's Arrival is recovered next year, he will launch a total war against us. Therefore, we might as well take the initiative in the battle."

Because of the rapid development in the past hundred years and the achievements that disrupted the Cannon and the Doctrines now and then, the Congress of Magic had become a major target that the Church struck and suppressed. It was impossible for the Congress to grow in secret while taking advantage of the confrontation of the South Church and the North Church.

When one force was developed to a certain level, it was inevitable to have a war with the previous dominator in order to get room, for further development.

The Congress of Magic had been provoking the Church over the past ten years exactly because they intended to fight a controllable local war when the enemy was not prepared.

When the pope was distracted by the North Church and the Dark Congress and not ready for a general mobilization or a negotiation, the Highest Council was confident to control the loss of legendary sorcerers. Then, they would be certain to win the seven legendary knights over. However, the pope had been rationally suppressing the radical tide within the Church while he made preparations one step after another.

In such a case, the Congress of Magic was under tremendous pressure. Had it not been for the consequences from the incident of the scarlet moon, it was possible that the Congress of Magic would've been beleaguered by the Church. That was why Douglas risked tricking the pope's God's Arrival with the artificial planet experiment. It improved the situation and bought more time for their preparation. Even without Sard's attempt of cooperation, the Congress would have tried to raise a war this year or at the beginning of next year.

As for Sard's claim that the pope estimated that the Congress would only be uncontrollable after sixty years and therefore a total war would burst out in ten to twenty years, Fernando and the other members of the Highest Council did not believe it at all. The pope and the Grand Cardinals were not blind. They couldn't have neglected the rapid expansion of arcana theories in the past few years and stuck to their previous estimation. Also, more important, the pope had already announced a total war because of the new alchemy before the new alternate dimension was discovered, except that the war was later delayed by the search for the demigod.

Therefore, Douglas and other grand arcanists had reason to believe that, now that the situation in the new alternate dimension was gradually stabilized, the pope would focus on removing the Congress of Magic after his God's Arrival was recovered. Perhaps at this moment next year, they would be embracing a total war where the Church was fully prepared. With that in mind, they might as well ferment changes and create a more favorable situation to avoid the dreadful scenario where one legendary expert had to be sacrificed to waste God's Arrival as cannon fodder. None of the experts at the peak of legendary were willing to die. It would raise an internal division of the Congress.

Sard's cooperation provided an opportunity. It was also fit for the Congress' idea to activate the plan this year or at the beginning of next year.

Therefore, the Congress' most detailed plan regarding the operation was about the sudden arrival of the pope with a dozen Grand Cardinals.

Sard smiled. “As expected of the young and vigorous Congress of Magic. The Church has been decayed after a thousand years and can only be revived with fire and blood. Go in now. The barrier of divine power has been shut down. Even the neutral clerics have been sent to Richard by me. Few members are left inside, including Vera Amelton, who will supervise the battle on behalf of me.”

He demanded that the other parts of the Radiance Church except for the transmission magic circle be kept intact for his future usage.

His petty and desirable attitude seemed indicative of his sincerity in the cooperation.

Without the barrier of divine power, Fernando’s spiritual field enshrouded the Radiance Church without any trouble. However, he was prudent enough to ask Donald, the chairman of the Will of Elements, and Thompson, his student to walk in and control the barrier of divine power as well as the massive transmission magic circle first.

The archmages and senior-rank sorcerers soon got the Radiance Church under control. The clerics who watched their actions felt rather complicated.

Although they were more inclined to the Congress of Magic, and they had the idea of change like the North Church under Sard’s enchantment, they still felt at a loss as they watched the Radiance Church, the symbol of the Saint Truth’s control on this side of the Storm Strait, fall into the control of the sorcerers. Their eyes were reddening.

Was it the end of an era?

The massive transmission magic circles were too solid to be destroyed by the archmages. So, Fernando walked towards the Radiance Church in his red magic robe.

At this moment, Sard smiled. “I’ll leave Rentato to relieve your concerns. After you completely control this land, I will come back and be crowned as the Radiance Archbishop.”

Fernando looked at him with his stormy eyes. Without saying anything, he walked by him, followed by 'Absolute Defense' Ataman.

Sard chuckled and walked out of the church square in a seemingly slow but actually fast way.

'Allyn' had flown to the sky of Rentato at some point. All the rails were retreated, turning it into a battle fortress.

Supervising on the thirty-fifth floor of the pivotal magic tower, Douglas said, "Atlant, keep an eye on Sard."

The Eye of Curse nodded and opened his closed eyes, in which a bizarrely intoxicating world seemed to be hidden.

The east of the city was the district of nobles. Both the Nekso Palace and the Radiance Church were here. It had a beautiful landscape and a low population.

Before Sard was out, a rider rushed on the broad, unpopulated street quickly on a dragon scale horse. The sun was too fierce at noon, and he barely met anybody before he reached Duke James' villa.

"Her Majesty demands an emergency meeting of nobles?" Asked James in confusion. Also, the time requirement was so strict that only the nobles in Rentato could participate. Those in other places did not have the time to come back at all.

After confirming the authenticity of the command, Duke James left for the Nekso Palace full of questions.

In a remote corner at the northwest of the Nekso Palace, Lucien waited for orders behind a sycamore, hoping that nothing would go wrong.

"Lucien, don't be nervous." Morris flew over with the sorcerers of the royal family of Holm and greeted Lucien on the ground, before they flew in another direction of the Nekso Palace as defenders.

"Mr. Morris, my name is Don't Be Nervous." Watching them going away, Lucien replied with his cold humor. When he looked at the spacious villas of nobles next to the street, he couldn't help but recall Joel's family, who had been sent to defend a manor at the suburb under Natasha's arrangement in case they were affected by the warfare.

Juliana and Minsk's missing still made Lucien ill at ease.

"I hope that Plan E wouldn't be adopted... It will be best if Plan C is not used, either..." Lucien secretly prayed.

Outside of the Rentato abbey on the west of the city, Hathaway, in a dark red magic robe, stood in the shadow of a tree in silence, waiting for Fernando to destroy the massive transmission magic circles. Then, she would attack and eliminate the entirety of the Knights of the Grail as well as part of the radical clerics in the abbey.

As for Divine Knight Stone, who was only a level-one legendary expert, she was neither careless about him nor too bothered.

.....

On the thirty-fifth floor in the Allyn magic tower, the intelligence from various places were sent back.

"Erica has controlled the Grand Church of Cocus."

"Vicente has controlled the Grand Church of Blanes."

"Hull-Chulia controlled the Church of North Light."

"Brook and Holt are waiting for the order to attack."

"Confirmed. The pope is still preaching..."

"Confirmed. The few saints are still around him..."

Douglas stood in the front peacefully, not too anxious. Having founded the Congress of Magic and developed it under the extremely unfavorable circumstances, he had seen far too many dangers. No matter how terrible the situation was this time, could it have been worse than when the Congress of Magic was just established?

At that time, some sorcerers were purged by the Church every day, and the organization might collapse any moment!

Suddenly, Atlant said in a gloomy voice, “Sard disappeared...”

Under the watch of the Eye of Curse, Sard vanished into thin air after he left the district of nobles!

Looking at Oliver and the rest of them, Douglas said peacefully, “Inform Brook and Hull-Chulia to attack. Send the few Grand Cardinals to Mountain Paradise or seal and banish them before the legendary knights notice anything wrong. Also, tell Brook that he will return as a reinforcement the moment the battle is over.”

“Hathaway will swap with Davey.”

“We will help Fernando together!”

As the orders were sent, Hathaway disappeared and arrived at the Allyn magic tower. Davey, the ‘Innovator’, took over her mission to stop Stone.

Inside the Radiance Church, the massive transmission magic circles were covered in the holy light.

Standing far away in the atrium, Fernando was about to destroy it with ‘Thunderstorm’.

At this moment, Vera Amelton, who had been supervising the battle from another direction, suddenly put on a smile of sincere delight. Holy light burst out from her body, and her facial muscles twisted and wriggled, turning her into a handsome man that was more beautiful than girls.

The man had long gold hair and a sacred face. White wings were unfolded on his back quickly. One pair, two pairs, three pairs... four pairs... eighteen pairs in total!

He knelt on the ground devoutly, and spots of light were glimmering among his wings. Behind him, the projection of a seven-floored Mountain Paradise was vaguely appearing, with singing holy spirits and angels, six seraphs and the infinite brilliance on the highest floor.

However, this project was much more blurred than the projection of God's Arrival. Also, on the highest floor, the gigantic angel who held the Cannon next to the feet of the God of Truth was gone!

"Whoever prays in your name shall not be harmed."

The man began to pray in a low voice. His body was rapidly obscured, contaminating everything around him with the ripples that did not seem to belong to this world. The ripples quickly spread out and enshrouded the massive transmission magic circles.

Fernando's red pupils slightly constricted: "Mecantron, the Angel King!"

Instead of attacking the massive transmission magic circles in a hurry, he sent a signal calmly:

"Plan C."

Chapter 555: Paradise On Earth

After the Lord of Storm sent the signal, a black storm that seemed to be the end of the world suddenly burst out with the massive transmission magic circles as the center, collapsing the pillars and the dome of the Radiance Church that had been strengthened by the divine power.

The buildings on the left were melted like glass, and those on the right were frozen into ice. They were translucent and emitting brilliant colors. Then, coldness and heat were switched, turning all of them into powder or gas.

In the meantime, silver lightning struck the massive transmission magic circles in ear splitting sounds like giant serpents. Every lightning strike carried the terrifying air of destruction. The magnificent electromagnetic power twisted everything around. The wind and the thunder let out roars that astounded the mind.

It was ‘Furious Storm’, the fundamental magic of Fernando’s legendary class!

However, ‘God’s Guard’ that Mecantron had cast with the projection of Mountain Paradise seemed to have kept himself and the massive transmission magic circles in the dream land that only the holy spirits and angels could reach. It was the sanctuary where the God of Truth was going to save the world!

The destructive storm, lightning, heat and frigidness, when imposed on ‘God’s Guard’, penetrated through it without causing any interferences. The ripples that did not belong to this world were still spreading out in blur.

It was indeed as expected of ‘God’s Guard’ and ‘The Angel King’, the highest angel that had ever arrived and the being at the peak of legendary!

Also, he seemed to have arrived in person this time!

The Congress of Magic and Lucien had thought that Sard had been manipulating the extremists, who were claimed to be enchanted by the great prophet and the reincarnation of the Angel King. Therefore, they had been most cautious of him. It never occurred to them that the Angel King, known as 'God of Truth Jr.', was indeed involved.

Perhaps, he was the big shot behind Sard?

Then, what was their relationship with the pope and the other Grand Cardinals? Was it a trap that they set up together, or was it meant to take advantage of both sides?

Fernando thought quickly while continuing his legendary magic. He pondered over Mecatron and Sard's purpose and was prepared to change the plan.

Without the protection of the barrier of divine power, the Radiance Church was reduced into remains under 'Furious Storm'. Donald, Thompson and the other archmages and senior-rank sorcerers, as well as part of the clerics who were inclined to the Congress, hurried to withdraw. This was a battlefield that belonged to the legendary. They could not participate at all.

Such a change turned the worries in their heart into actual anxiety. At this moment, a peaceful and steady voice echoed from midair. "Fall back to Allyn. The other people will attack with me. While God's Guard is the ultimate of defensive spells and claims to be immune to all damage, it does have an upper bound that it can bear. We can easily break it if we join our hands!"

The man who stood and supported the Congress for hundreds of years came. His familiar and gentle voice pacified Thompson and other sorcerers, who were assured that everything was still under control. The Congress would never suffer a destructive strike as long as Mr. President was alive!

In the sky, Douglas floated on one side, with light glowing in his hands as if a new sun was about to rise, while the other legendary sorcerers stood separately on other directions, in case God's Arrival killed them all at once.

The Element Designator, the Hand of Annihilation, the Witch of Iceland, the Prophet, the Eye of Curse, the Light of Stars, the Sun King, the Alchemy Master... Seeing that the eleven legendary sorcerers of the Congress of Magic had been gathered here, Donald and the rest of them were even more reassured. They flew into Allyn whose locks had been opened.

Allyn had been surrounded by brilliant 'stars'. The City in the Sky that had one of the best locks could be used as an level-three legendary expert at the critical moment. However, its power was not enough to support it for long, unless the 'perpetual furnace', the magnetic-restrained nuclear fusion reactor that Lucien designed, could become a reality.

.....

In the Rentato abbey...

Arthur, tough and aggressive, stood before the radical cardinals, bishops and reverends and declared piously and zealously, "It's time for us to sacrifice ourselves!"

"Only Truth lives forever!" Those cardinals, bishops and reverends kneeled before the cross and began to pray.

Arthur turned around and crossed his arms before his chest. He then lay down on the ground and chanted:

"You are one, and everyone."

"You are the beginning, and the end."

"You are the creator, and master."

"... Your kingdom come, your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven."

The other cardinals recited after him:

"... Your kingdom come, your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven."

Holy light spread out from their bodies gently, dyeing them with bright and clean colors, as if wings were surfacing on their backs. The holy light was connected and expanded into an ocean that surged towards the east of Rentato.

Stone was both surprised and confused at the situation of the Knights of Grail. He asked gravely: "Paradise on Earth?"

It was a divine barrier that was only second to God's Guard and was on par with God's Guard. It could transform the land within a certain range into a 'paradise on earth'. However, it could only be used at a horrifying price. More than twenty cardinals, an equal number of angels, a hundred cardinals and a thousand reverends had to be sacrificed. The ritual also had to be hosted by the experts in the level of seraph.

With the Rentato abbey as the starting point, the ocean of holy light flowed towards the district of nobles on the east of the city quickly. In the next moment, the churches where the radical clerics gathered also yielded holy light. One node after another, the whole area was illuminated.

If somebody were to observe the ground from Allyn in the sky, they would discover that the most massive spots of light were on the east of Rentato, as if many holy spirits and reverends were singing and praying. The more it was to the east, the fewer such light spots there were but the brighter they were. It could be seen with the naked eye that they were divided into six floors.

When the holy light was gathered, it reverberated with the overall divine power array of Rentato. The light was more and more dazzling, until it was connected to the Angel King who performed God's Guard.

"You are one, and everyone..."

"... Your kingdom come, your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven."

The enormous, hallowed prayers echoed in the entire Rentato, and the holy light began to twist.

In the sky, Thompson discovered, to his shock, that from the west to the east of the city, the projection of the first floor of Mountain Paradise, the projection of the second floor and so on had appeared. It seemed that paradise had arrived on earth!

Douglas, Fernando and the rest of them felt that they were immersed in the ocean of holy light, and that their spiritual power became inert. Also, they seemed to be separated from the real world. Until they broke 'Paradise on Earth', Rentato could not be damaged at all.

However, 'Paradise on Earth' could only weaken the legendary experts to some extent. The higher level they were in, the less affected they would be. Douglas was soon back to himself and was ready to launch his magic.

At this moment, the massive transmission magic circles suddenly glowed, and thirteen shadows appeared inside.

"Melmax, Anasta, Maria, Augusta, Anthony, Varantine, Arzaro, Astira, Vaharall..."

Five saints, eight saint cardinals or divine knights, and the Angel King, the number and strength of the Church's side immediately surpassed those of the Congress of Magic.

Fernando, however, slightly sighed in relief and dropped the idea of activating 'Plan D'. The fact that only thirteen Grand Cardinals came meant that the pope was caught unprepared, too, and failed to mobilize even more forces in the emergency. It suggested that Sard and the Angel King were not on the same boat as the pope. Even the pope was one of their targets in their scheme.

Therefore, as long as the sorcerers suppressed the attack before more reinforcements came, they would still be able to turn things around. Then, everything would be much easier!

.....

When 'Plan C' entered his ear from his monocle, Lucien immediately dropped his previous fear and worries, not considering the danger of this plan anymore.

After activating Advanced Acceleration, he turned into a blurred shadow and rushed towards the Nekso Palace to help Nekso Palace control the overall barrier of divine power of Rentato city.

However, Lucien was not in too much of a hurry, as if he were waiting for something before he entered the Nekso Palace.

Hardly had he run for a few steps when the holy light of 'Paradise on Earth' drowned Lucien. The suffocatingly dense brilliance slowed down his spiritual power, and his magic strength seemed to be lowered by one level.

Not far away, a coachman observed everything in bewilderment. He extended his hands and tried to touch the ocean of holy light, only to pass through it directly.

It gave both him and his horse a shock. His horse began to rush at Lucien.

Subconsciously, Lucien cast a 'Deferment' to stop it, but the coachman and the dragon scale horse were not influenced at all. They passed through Lucien's body as if he were nothing more than an illusion, without causing the slightest collision!

"This is..." Looking at the twisted buildings and trees around, Lucien suddenly had the feeling that the World of Souls had arrived. They overlapped with the real world without affecting the people and objects in the real world in exactly the same way, except that one of them was silent and frozen, and the other was pure and fervent.

But why was he trapped in it when the coachman was still in the 'original Rentato'?

"Because only the people who wield supernatural abilities will be pulled into 'Paradise on Earth'. If you dispel your magic, you will return to reality slowly." A hoarse voice came from the front, and a woman whose face was full of hatred walked out from the back of a building twisted in the holy light. "But I won't give you the opportunity to return. The blood of four captains and more than twenty partners will be paid off today.”

“Captains, do you see this?”

Four pure wings grow from her back and perfectly coexisted with the holy light around. However, her strength was highly unstable. It seemed that it would be beyond her control very soon.

“Juliana?” Asked Lucien in a low voice.

“There’s also me, Mr. Professor, your old friend.” On the other side, Minsk, the ‘Red Dragon’ wearing a white tuxedo, also walked out, with the same four angelic wings on the back.

He chuckled. “In the glory of Paradise on Earth, your magic strength is suppressed, and your legendary ring is no longer usable. We will serve you well and make you regret everything you have done.”

“Right, Grand Cardinal Sard wants your Sun’s Corona, the badge that contains the final coordinates of Maskelyne and his fellows.”

Juliana also smiled and said, “After we kill you, your beloved queen won’t live long, and we will send your Uncle Joel and Aunt Alisa to hell to join your company soon. They will tell you how they were killed in tears. Minsk, be wary of his left hand, which can nullify curses. Do not use the divine powers in the curse category.”

“Nullify curses?” Lucien looked at high left hand. Where did they obtain their intelligence?

Chapter 556: Target

Not caring whether they were intentionally easing his wariness or they were fooled by false intelligence, Lucien simply cast ‘Baler’s Transformation’. His muscles slightly bulged, and his body was covered in vague moonlight, further highlighting the shimmers on his silvery and grey left hand.

Before they went missing, they were only night watchers in the level of bishop and knight. They could not bear the arrival of a supreme angel in any case, whose enormous strength would’ve torn them apart. Therefore, the angels from whom they borrowed strength should be the medium ones, which could be proved by the number of wings on their back. In such a way, their current strength was in the senior rank at best. Even though they were enhanced by the barrier of ‘Paradise on Earth’, they couldn’t be in level nine.

Turning to vague moonlight, Lucien lunged at them in countless shadows. He was so fast that they couldn’t tell which of the shadows was his real self.

The wings on Minsk’s back glittered, and he was covered in crimson scales. Both his eyes emitted gold brilliance, releasing the intimidation of a top creature. He spurted out a thick red pillar that consumed all the shadows. The high temperature even slightly twisted the holy light.

From Juliana’s body, silver longswords with sacred eyes on them suddenly popped up.

They swirled around Juliana, protecting her in the center. Anything that attempted to pass them would be minced into pieces.

It was ‘Edge Barrier’, the most effective defense against knights in level-six divine powers. The blurred moonlight was cut into pieces by them.

Right then, Juliana’s angelic wings were unfolded beyond her control, summoning a pillar of holy light that struck one of the shadows.

Juliana's eyes were suddenly widened, as she discovered that Lucien raised his left and resisted the light outburst that was thicker than his body. What was most unbelievable was that the pillar of light was shattered and melted into 'Paradise on Earth' around.

Hardly had such shock appeared in Juliana's head when she saw Lucien punch the barrier of swords with his left fist.

The silver longswords were revolving and cutting, but they collapsed the moment they touched Lucien's left hand.

Without meeting any hindrance, the left hand punched Juliana's face when she did not have the time to cast any other divine powers.

Crack, crack, crack. Juliana's right face collapsed deeply, spurting out red and white stuff that stained the ground. The defenses and enhancements she cast on herself were utterly useless.

A cluster of pure brilliance dashed out of Juliana's body, trying to flee, only to be extinguished by another punch from his left hand.

Juliana fell backwards, with fear, panic and unresolvable hatred in her widened, frozen eyes.

It was only at this moment that 'Red Dragon' Minsk approached Lucien's back.

Seeing Juliana's miserable outcome, he was grabbed by both hatred and fear, wondering whether he should continue attacking or flee with 'Paradise on Earth'.

After a brief hesitation, he chose to retreat. He would always have opportunities of revenge after the great Angel King and Grand Cardinal Sard succeeded. Only if he kept himself alive could he torture the professor's wife, students, friends and family so that the professor would ask to be killed!

When he turned around, he found that a long, powerful hand pressed at him, so he opened his mouth and spurted out the dragon breath again.

The fire with a horrifying temperature burnt everything, but it died out like a regular candle under Lucien's left hand.

The left hand grasped Minsk's head quickly, and the solid crimson scales seemed to have encountered the most dreadful enemy and ebbed on their own.

Without any hesitation, Lucien exerted his strength. After a crack, Minsk's neck was twisted into two parts.

While his consciousness was fading, Minsk was filled with regrets:

“His left hand does not just nullify curses!”

After the light in Minsk's body was also destroyed, Lucien searched their bodies but found nothing useful.

“Under the enhancement of ‘Paradise on Earth’, two level-five night watchers carried out the strength of level eights. That's terrifying. However, if the pivot in the Nekso Palace that controls the city barrier is on our side, the influence should be weakened.” Lucien drew a conclusion.

The Nekso Palace had two cores of divine powers. One was for internal defense, so that the queen would not be instantly killed by legendary experts. The other was for external defense, which controls the barrier of divine power citywide. If the core in the Radiance Church had been destroyed, this would be the only pivot that could affect the barrier. It was his mission to grasp the pivot with Natasha and Morris.

When he was about to approach the Nekso Palace, Lucien suddenly stopped, as if he was waiting for something. Because his magic ceased, he gradually exited from Paradise on Earth and returned to the normal Rentato.

.....

In the Grand Church of Brewston in Salyvaor, capital of Brianne...

Since there were only two praying believers, the preaching cardinal was more or less sloppy. Suddenly, he saw a gentleman standing up and walking to the back of the church with his black staff.

“You can’t...” The cardinal tried to stop him, only to discover that his fingers were abnormally twisted, and that his guts, muscles, veins and brains were stretched to different directions by the black, terrible magnetic field.

Without a sound, he was split into countless pieces, where tiny light of electricity was glittering.

After one step, Brook passed the atrium, and the projection of the ‘Kingdom of Electromagnetism’ appeared around him, enshrouding Beaver’s residence.

In shock, Beaver blurted out, “Brook?”

It was beyond his expectation that the Emperor of Control would ambush him. Was the man not scared of a total war?

Inside a palace, a stout knight floated in midair and looked at the Grand Church of Brewston far away, only to discover that devils seemed to be arising inside the building that was defended by divine power. Now and then, silver lightning burst out and struck the sky, as if the sky and the earth had been reversed.

“Brook still has other magics. Beaver can’t survive long. Are we not going to rescue him, Bedrenka?” A muscular knight who looked like a giant bear asked.

Bedrenka, ‘Hammer of the Void’, chuckled. “If Brook does not restrain the range of his magic, we can only turn on the divine barrier of the whole city to prevent Salyvaor from being demolished. Beaver is not even a saint, and he is unprepared. How can he deal with the man? Not to mention that Holt is helping Brook. We should wait and see what happens in Rentato. I do not want to face Brook.”

“Things are already happening. Poor Beaver. Even if he turns on the transmission magic circle, there won't be any reinforcements. If I were him, I would start running as fast and far away as possible." Basor, 'Knight of Disasters', said coldly, "I'll suppress the nobles and other clerics until the thing that Fernando talked about begins. If it is unconvincing, we'll..."

Bedrenka was about to answer, when his pupils constricted violently. He turned on the divine barrier, covering the city in pure holy light.

After a boom, the Grand Church of Brewston exploded, and the surging flames and light swept across the whole city.

The divine barrier was shattered after a few seconds. The empty land near the church became giant pits.

"The district of nobles would've been destroyed if I were one second late..." Said Bedrenka, feeling lucky. "It's good that we didn't try to stop Brook."

A man at the peak of legendary and on the top ten of the Cleansing List was definitely not a joke.

.....

Yourcenar, 'Song of Dusk', stopped after forcing Erica and Torrens to move their battlefield out of Cocus, helping neither the Church nor the Congress.

After years of persuasion from the Congress, and under the promise that his life would be extended by three hundred years, he made the decision to wait until further changes.

Watching Erica, who had turned into a rainbow dragon, and Torrens, who revealed his image as the Angel of Wisdom, Yourcenar sighed, "It would've been great to just keep the previous situation. Fernando, let's see how you are going to convince me."

Similar things happened in the Kingdom of Colette and the northern coastline. The only difference was that 'Burning Lady' had been waiting on the north coastline, and Colette's 'Life Reaper' was awed by Vicente, the Lord of the Undead. After all, he was not a saint, and the legendary sorcerers of necromancy was best known for their many 'helpers'.

.....

Outside of the Nekso Palace, Sard gradually showed up.

He was still at first while he watched the Radiance Church. It was not until the massive transmission magic circles glowed that he walked out of the holy light of 'Paradise on Earth'. He couldn't help but put on a smile as he walked to the Nekso Palace:

"It's time!"

"His Holiness should've arrived with the Grand Cardinals. Faced with Douglas and the 'helpful' Angel King, he would either fail or perform God's Arrival at the cost of all his remaining life."

He had only one purpose since the beginning, which was to make the total war burst out before the pope's God's Arrival was restored, and to make the pope die in advance with the help of the Congress of Magic. He was not worried that the Congress of Magic would not cooperate with him, because starting the war early was in their favor, too.

"After the pope perishes and the enemy is slain, it will be the time for me to save the Church with the seven legendary knights. With such contributions and what I have grasped, I will ascend to the throne of pope without any question and truly grasp that secret." Sard walked to the gate of the Nekso Palace. He was not hoping that the Congress of Magic would be destroyed, but he was certain that some of the legendary sorcerers would be killed, which would help the situation to arrive at a new balance.

He smiled, "So, Douglas, Brook and Fernando, work hard and kill Anasta, Maria, Beaver and the rest of them who are loyal to His Holiness. You will have my thanks."

When the day comes, without the few Grand Cardinals that the pope groomed as his heirs, and without the radical red robes and night watchers, it was impossible for his scheme to be exposed.

Who would believe the rumor from the surviving legendary sorcerers?

“Lucien’s left hand does not just nullify curses. It is rather strange. However, Juliana and Minsk should be able to stall him for a while in Paradise on Earth. After I have the time, I’ll take over Maskelyne’s Sun’s Corona.” He did not seem to think that Juliana and Minsk could return alive. Or rather, he did not want them to survive.

“Until then, let’s start gathering the seven legendary knights from the Nekso Palace.”

“Also, I have to find a ‘culprit’ for the easy conquest of the Radiance Church. After I kill her and get the Sword of Truth, everything will be safe.”

Sard knew very well that the legendary sorcerers were exceptional when it came to how to keep themselves alive. For the clerics, they only had few divine powers, including God’s Arrival and Light of Judgment, that could eliminate the sorcerers’ souls and phylacteries. Things would be much easier after he got the Sword of Truth.

“It is time to butcher the livestock that has been fattened.”

While talking, he extended his right hand and pressed the divine defense of the Nekso Palace. The six angelic wings on his back were unfolded slowly.

Different from the common clerics, his wings of light were stretched and graceful, and the light was sacred and boundless.

In the next, he seemed to be melted into the holy light. He walked through the divine defense without any trouble.

Chapter 557: Nonsense?

In Paradise on Earth, not far away from the projection of the Radiance Church...

Led by Saint Melmax, captain of the Temple Knights, the thirteen Grand Cardinals reached Rentato through the massive transmission magic circles.

Because of the supernal attraction in the transmission magic circles, they had been pulled into Paradise on Earth together and felt that their strength had more or less increased. The level-one legendary saint cardinals were improved by about sixty percent.

When the massive transmission magic circles were activated, Mecantron, the Angel King, reported the general situation, claiming that Natasha tricked Sard away and Richard, as a spy, turned off the defense in the Radiance Church. As the fundamental point that supported the Church's control in the area, the church was always guarded by divine power. No enemy could've approached it without causing alarm.

Losing the defense of divine power, the Radiance Church naturally fell into the control of the Congress of Magic quickly. Thankfully, a certain pious cardinal summoned 'Angel King' at the cost of his life. Seeing the emergency, the Angel King preserved the massive transmission magic circles with his unique 'God's Guard'. Therefore, Melmax and his fellows were not entirely unclear of the situation after they were teleported.

The ripples and blurs that did not seem to belong to this world soon vanished. Mecantron and the Grand Cardinals quickly dispersed in case the legendary sorcerers fired upon them.

A natural and harmonious scenery appeared when Douglas' 'Land of Truth' arrived. The brilliant and magnificent stars shone in the sky, twisting the whole space with the enormous gravity.

The thirty-six wings behind Mecantron stretched out, and the projection of Mountain Paradise behind him suppressed 'Gravity Cage’.

Mecantron spoke in a low voice, “Light of Judgment.”

On his wings and from the projection of Mountain Paradise, orderly and solemn brilliance burst out at the same time as if everything was being weighed.

Sinners, accept the fairest trial!

The darkness was gone. The chaos and extraordinary forces were gone. The Light of Judgment ruled everything like a sharp sword. With the assistance of ‘Paradise on Earth’, even Fernando who was far away felt deeply remorseful.

Douglas did not fear Mecantron at all. Unless he ran into the enemy on Mountain Paradise, the guy would only be at the peak of legendary even if he arrived in person. As a sorcerer, he was confident to deal with any enemy at such a level.

“Spacial Providence.”

The space was twisted, and Mecantron’s ‘Light of Judgment’ was diminished.

The dispersing force raised a furious storm on the ocean of holy light. It seemed that it was going to be destroyed before long!

Seeing that they had advantage both in number and strength, Melmax did not help the Angel King to fight the Emperor of Arcana. Instead, he prepared to concentrate the forces and eliminate the evil sorcerers one by one!

At this moment, Fernando stood before him. Half of the ocean of holy light in Rentato was suddenly darkened, like an ocean with an imminent storm. The terrifying magnetic field had covered everything.

In the sky, the dark, lead clouds gathered, and world-destroying lightning struck Melmax. The terrible heat and the coldness that was close to absolute zero replaced each other around him, shaking everything.

“He has advanced into the peak of legendary?”

Faced with such dominance, Melmax became solemn and dropped the idea of helping anybody else.

Entirely covered in the silver sacred armor, he raised the longsword in his hand.

The longsword that was glowing in sacred brilliant seemed to be suppressing all evils. Under the sword, any unholy creature would be completely eliminated.

The longsword, named after Melmax, was one of the only thirteen level-four legendary items!

The heat and the coldness disappeared around Melmax, but the ice and the burns on his armor implied that it was not as easy as it seemed.

“Die now, evil!”

With the blood power of ‘Morning’, a sun rose behind him, driving away the depression of the upcoming storm and eclipsing the lightning.

The Church had twelve Grand Cardinals left, four of whom were saints: Anasta, Maria, Augusta and Anthony. However, the Congress of Magic only had three grand arcanists, six legendary sorcerers and one city in the sky. It seemed to be losing.

Oliver, the Hand of Annihilation, was fighting Saint Anthony, the ‘Night Watcher’. Hellen, the Witch of Iceland, blocked Saint Maria. The Eye of Curse, the Prophet, the Light of Stars, the Sun King, Absolute Defense and Alchemy Master were fighting six saint cardinals and divine knights in different directions. They were far away from each other for fear that the pope would come and kill them all at the cost of his own life.

The legendary battle shook ‘Paradise on Earth’ violently, which seemed to be collapsing.

The other two saints, Anasta and Augusta, after communicating with Varantine, decided that Saint Anasta would keep Hathaway occupied and Astira would resist Allyn, while Augusta joined hands with Varantine to deal with the Light of Stars who was the weakest of all, ensuring that the final attack was one of the divine powers like 'Light of Judgment'.

Suddenly, an indifferent voice echoed: "Luxury Cracking."

Crack. Crack. Crack. Crack. The divine items and effects on the four Grand Cardinals were broken and gone, the energy barriers splitting.

After a bam, the charm of 'Wind King' on Astira, the weakest saint cardinal of all, was blown into pieces, and tremendous wind gushed out.

His eyes were immediately bloodshot. It was the only legendary item he had!

Cracking (Advanced), the ninth-circle magic, had a one percent possibility of shattering legendary items, and Luxury Cracking, its advanced version, had the odds of ten percent at most. How could he be so unlucky?

Anasta grew solemn:

"She has also advanced into the peak of legendary!"

"Her strength overpowers yours. That's how it happened. No wonder the Congress of Magic was bold enough to start a war!"

Hathaway's 'Element Paradise' arrived and stalled the two saints. However, she had only just advanced, and it was still troublesome for her to deal with two level-three saint cardinals.

Varantine, who was not attacked, was about to join the battle against the Light of Stars, when he discovered that he was caught in a foggy world. Raventi and other archmages had controlled Allyn to descend and increase the range of the fog, locking him inside.

Astira and Arzaro worked together to deal with the Light of Stars, but the sorcerer had many amazing spells. They couldn't finish him any time soon.

Raventi and the rest of them waited for Brook, the Emperor of Control, to return anxiously. As an expert at the peak of legendary for years, he would be an important leverage to crush the Church's troops.

Melmax, who had forced the Lord of Storm to the defensive, was protecting the massive transmission magic circles from being sabotaged. By the time the pope mobilized other available Grand Cardinals and legendary knights, the Congress' plan would fail. Also, it was possible that the pope would arrive in advance instead of waiting for everybody else.

Because they were not used for now, the massive transmission magic circles gradually exited from the ocean of holy light. Nobody could hit it before 'Paradise on Earth' was broken, which disrupted Hathaway's plan to suppress the two saints with weird spells first before she found an opportunity to break the transmission magic circles.

.....

After Sard entered the Nekso Palace, his seraphic wings flapped and supported him to pass the barriers, allowing him to reach the central area of the Nekso Palace that was protected by the internal defense.

In the next moment, he changed without any hesitation: "Light of Judgment!"

Different from what Mecantron performed, a seven-floored Mountain Paradise surfaced in his eyes, congregating into a decisive, unquestionable light.

You are guilty when I say you are guilty!

Under the light, the internal defense cracked and did not seem able to last. Also, Sard's faith senses had blocked the surroundings. Once Natasha attempted to flee, he would immediately notice it. Besides, he had blocked outbound teleportation with space anchors, in case

Natasha had the scrolls such as ‘Chaos Teleportation’ or ‘Portal to Alternate Realm’ from the Congress of Magic.

Outside of the Nekso Palace, a thirty-year-old man who had a mustache was shocked and about to stop Sard.

But right then, a tall old man appeared before him. His hair seemed even greyer than before.

“Winston, let’s observe for a while longer before we decide whether to follow the Church or the Congress.” Said Kritonia briefly.

Winston frowned, “What about Her Majesty?”

“Without Her Majesty, there will still be other kings. There’s no need to take the risk recklessly.” Said Kritonia indifferently. “You should know her relationship with the Congress of Magic very well. If you save her, it will mean that you have taken the side of the Congress. Are you sure about that?”

Winston was silent.

Boom. The internal defense finally started collapsing after enduring for more than ten seconds. Sard stepped into Natasha’s palace.

Natasha had already put on the Armor of Holm, whose silver color added to the air of slaughter in her. A silver grey longsword was placed before her, with no decorations on it at all.

The moment she saw Sard, she shouted angrily, “Grand Cardinal Sard, you...”

Sard did not waste any time in talking. He launched another Light of Judgment, not giving her any hope of resurrection.

Under the Light of Judgment, the first half of the palace was obliterated, but Natasha suddenly picked the sword and raised it before her. With determination in her eyes, she slashed it at the Light of Judgment without backing off.

After a crack, the Light of Judgment was dispersed, and the longsword glowed dazzlingly.

Level eight? No, a level-nine gold knight!

Sard was told before that the Sword of Truth contained the secrets for this bloodline to advance into legendary. Whoever grasped it and understood how it worked would have the hope to be a legendary knight. It was obvious that Natasha had reached level eight at least a year ago and grasped the Sword of Truth, which upgraded her to level nine!

“Sard, this is all part of your scheme! You want His Holiness to fight the Congress of Magic in advance, so that he will die of exhaustion after performing God’s Arrival, right? You want to be the next pope!” Natasha stared at Sard, her back slightly hunched like a leopard that was about to lunge forward.

Sard snorted. “What can you do even if you know that? Don’t presume that you can block a real legendary expert with the Sword of Truth. How is your useless speech going to help you?”

While talking, he split into four shadows and cast different divine powers from different directions, including ‘Light of Judgment’, ‘Vengeful Storm’, ‘Energy Drain’ and ‘Earthquake’, trying to kill Natasha as quickly as possible.

“Is it useless?” Natasha chuckled.

“Is it useless?”

At the same time, a gentle voice echoed, and a white-haired old man, with a holy crown, slowly appeared with a gold staff. He seemed to have directly torn the space.

Sard’s divine powers, on the other hand, collapsed on their own under his voice.

Sard’s pupils constricted violently: “Your Holiness!”

According to Plan C, if Sard circumvented his promise in other ways, Natasha would contact Benedict II through her secret channel immediately!

If they were complicit, Plan D would be adopted. They would play all the trump cards they prepared and see if they could turn things around. If the pope had been tricked but did not trust Natasha, Plan D would also be adopted. If the pope chose to wait, they would determine Sard's whereabouts as soon as possible and reveal the teleportation point that Lucien modified for Natasha's escape to the pope, so that the demigod could observe the situation or even arrive in person through the point!

It was like a Portal to Alternate Realm that had been long deployed, except that it could not break Sard's space anchors without enough power!

Chapter 558: Diplomacy

Blinded by greed, and corrupted by devils, Sard, you have betrayed the teaching of the Lord, and you shall suffer for all eternity because of it.” Said Benedict II solemnly. There was an amazing pace in his rhythm, as if his voice could wake up one’s conscience and make them repent in tears.

He was just as peaceful and calm as before, as if he would baptize and pardon Sard again as long as Sard lowered his head in regret.

Sard, however, knew very well that the attitude was normal in other times, but right now, it suggested that the pope had made up his mind. Rebels were ten thousand times more terrible than heretics, and the rebels who intended to steal his power and murder him were a million times so. Such people must be crushed without any mercy!

There was absolutely no possibility for peace. The reason why the pope spoke with a mixture of language and divine power was to ease his wariness. He had yet to figure out Sard’s secrets and supporters yet.

Sard raised his head, his panic a moment ago entirely gone. His beard and his hair stretched out, making him look like a real saint who was going to be sacrificed for the glory of the Lord. He berated, “The popes have stolen the power and honor of the Lord and falsely claimed to be the spokespersons and embodiments of the Lord on earth, whose rank is closest to the Lord! They are the greatest heretics! I’ve heard the teaching of the Lord and won the support of the Angel King, and I’m going to eliminate the greatest devil that is you today!”

“It seems that your mind has truly been blinded by your so-called secrets.” Benedict II raised his staff.

While they were talking, Natasha had seized every moment to conceal the supernatural abilities in her, leaving Paradise on Earth quietly and solemnly. Although she had ‘Sword of Truth’, a level-three legendary item, she did not have any confidence to survive the battle between the pope and Sard. She only wished that Paradise on Earth could resist their first wave of attacks.

Sard did not say anything else. His vibe changed, and something else hallowed and supreme appeared in his body, allowing him to get rid of Benedict II's lock and blink to the sky.

That performance was definitely the peak of legendary!

“The devil who steals the power of the Lord, accept your trial!”

Holding his staff, Benedict II tore apart the space and followed Sard to the clouds on his opposite side.

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

“You are the creator, and master.”

As he chanted the quotes from the Cannon, Sard seemed to be in a different world. Overwhelming, sacred brilliance flowed out of his body while he eyed everything from the high sky.

All the believers in Rentato were somehow moved to tears of joy at the same time. They followed him to pray:

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

...

The ocean of light in Paradise on Earth settled, and the tides that were shaking in the battle of legends calmed down. Gentle, pacifying hymns spread out:

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

...

On Sard's face, wrinkles appeared at a visible speed. His skin became lackluster, making him look like a dry corpse. He raised his right hand, and the projection of the seven-floored Mountain Paradise appeared in the sky, eclipsing the sun with its holy brilliance. The wonderful, pleasant songs and praises echoed at the same time, and infinite light began to gather on the infinite cluster of light on the seventh floor.

The familiar scene undoubtedly suggested one thing, which was that Sard was also capable of...

“God's Arrival!”

As a qualified schemer, his own strength was always the foundation of all plans!

“So, you accepted his strength and got in touch with that secret, too. You took even one more step further than the heretic in the north. No wonder you are bold enough to try to claim the throne. But are you not worried that you will run out of your life force and die?” The pope suddenly said in the most primitive way, both somewhat surprised and feeling that it was within his expectations. “Did you enchant the Angel King, or were you enchanted by him? What did you run into in the World of Souls?”

Sard looked at Benedict II with his eyes that had turned dirty again. “I may not necessarily die if I use God's Arrival, but I'll be dead for sure if I am captured by you. There can only be one person in this world who can know the secret. As for what I ran into, you can interrogate me after you catch me.”

Their communication was on the mental level, and it was accomplished in only one moment.

Benedict II smiled and raised the staff in his hand again. The sacred brilliance that was even more overwhelming, supreme and majestic spread out and enshrouded him, while he chanted piously and quickly:

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

“You are the creator, and master.”

The believers in Rentato, in the entire Holm parish and in the Holy City, as well as all of the clerics in the few places, were even more moved and delighted. They joined the prayer:

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

...

Benedict II's deep eyes seemed to contain countless brilliant stars that were connected into a cross. Behind him, the projection of Mountain Paradise arrived in hymns and light. It was even clearer than Sard's. Also, it severely disrupted Sard's God's Arrival. It took Sard a long time to stabilize it again.

“You...” Sard was slightly stunned that Benedict II did not have any worries that he was about to die after his vitality was consumed in the spell. Also, this God's Arrival seemed no different from usual.

Benedict II's lips curled into a mocking smile. “Do you think I haven't studied the secret at all after grasping it for so many years?”

“As for death, it is actually not that horrible.”

He was also rapidly aging, but much less severely than Sard did.

“Heretic, accept the trial of the Lord!” Holy light gathered and surged into the seventh floor on Mountain Paradise above Benedict II. In the next, infinite ivory brilliance drowned the sky.

Sard, on the other hand, also cast his God's Arrival:

“The devil who steals the power of the Lord, accept your trial!”

In the sky, there was absolutely nothing except for the ivory holy light.

It was God's Arrival against God's Arrival!

.....

Outside of Rentato, in the backup contact squad of the Congress of Magic that was not covered by Paradise on Earth...

They activated electromagnetism messaging, connected the artificial planets, and sent intelligence to faraway.

Deep inside the Dark Mountain Range, Stanis, under the cooperation of Grand Duke of Orvarit, brought him away from Aalto and threw him into the magic tower successfully. Then, he opened the Portal to Alternate Realm that was prepared in advance and reached a place that was crammed with volcanoes.

He walked straightforwardly into a palace among the volcanoes. Danisos, the ancient dragon of time who guarded the place, spoke solemnly, "Stanis, where are you doing here? Do you want to join us?"

"Danisos, we can talk about that later. I'm here to inform you of a piece of intelligence. The Church and the Congress of Magic are now at war. The pope, Melmax and the other twelve Grand Cardinals are fighting above Rentato. The Angel King has arrived in person, too."

After a brief silence, Danisos said with deep hatred, "Has he?"

His wife was Aflora, who was killed by the pope with God's Arrival. Through the connections with the werewolf prince, the Demogorgon of Eyes and the sorcerers of ancient heritage, the Congress of Magic had 'adjusted' the order of the guards of the headquarters of the Dark Congress, so that he would 'happen' to be here.

If they had asked for the Dark Congress' help in advance, since many legendary experts in it were also hostile to the Congress of Magic, they might have achieved the opposite of what they sought. Therefore, they might as well attract a top legendary ancient dragon of time first without giving him much time to consider!

“But I think Dracula and the rest of them would rather wait until both the Church and the Congress of Magic suffer heavy losses in their battle.” That was exactly the consequence of the lack of chain of command in the Dark Congress. God’s Arrival was the gravest deterrence.

Stanis smiled. “That’s an excellent idea, but why don’t you have some desserts before the main course? Many places of the Church are now undefended. You will have substantial achievements if you kill one or two saint cardinals or legendary knights.”

Holding back his hatred, Danisos said, “I’ll inform Dracula and Rhine.”

After a while, he said confusedly, “Rhine is gone again...”

.....

Looking at the high sky beyond ‘Paradise on Earth’, and watching the light which seemed to be an ocean that had assumed the sky’s palace, Lucien was rather intimidated. Sard was capable of God’s Arrival, too?

That was beyond all of his expectations!

In the next moment, Lucien stopped worrying about anything but went to Natasha’s palace straightforwardly after passing the external defense of divine power. He didn’t enter a moment ago exactly because he was worried that the pope would wipe him out casually during his arrival.

Since he modified it in person, Lucien was well aware of the weaknesses of the external defense. He saw Natasha, who just withdrew from ‘Paradise on Earth’, rather easily.

Despite her bravery and determination, her right hand that was holding the Sword of Truth was still shivering. She had taken the greatest risks in Plan C!

If the pope was not convinced, she would’ve lost the best opportunity to escape after Sard arrived. If the pope were suspicious that there was something wrong with her, he could’ve killed her easily. If nothing went wrong at the beginning, but the blast of their battle was stronger than estimated, making it impossible for her to resist or escape with the Sword of Truth, she would've been killed, too. It was simply too dangerous.

However, how could one cherish one's life in a great cause? Victories without risks could only happen when there were overwhelming advantages. Also, Lucien had wasted a legendary item for her. In that case, why shouldn't she confront the danger like a real knight?

Calming herself down, Natasha said, "I'm fine. Now, I'll summon the nobles for a meeting and influence the decision of the legendary knights, and you will go and control the pivot of the divine barrier of Rentato. Winston will stop Kritonia. He won't help me but also won't resist you, or it will be a sign that he is completely inclined to the Church."

Because of the legendary battle, the nobles who had come were too scared to leave. The Nekso Palace, with the defense of divine power, was the safest spot in the whole Rentato city. Of course, they had been trying to escape out of the city. However, unaware of the mysteries of 'Paradise on Earth', the harder they worked, the more impossible it was for them to achieve their purpose.

"Alright." Lucien did not waste any time in talking. Now was not the best opportunity for romance. He turned around and nodded at a silver-haired man who roamed out of a palace nearby. "Thank you in advance, Mr. Rhine."

The handsome man in a black shirt and a red coat was exactly Rhine, the Silver-eyed Count. He chuckled, "According to my promise, I'll let you pick a legendary item after I'm freed. Now that you are willing to abandon the opportunity in exchange for my protection to keep Natasha safe for a while, I certainly don't have a problem with that. I don't have many legendary items."

He could use the power of the Silver Moon. Unless the pope was determined to kill him at the cost of his own life, there was a great chance that he could bring Natasha away.

“However, you didn’t tell me the details earlier. If I had known that the enemy would be Sard...”

Rhine raised his head. Looking at the terrible God’s Arrivals in the sky, he chuckled:

“I have always been a petty man.”

Chapter 559: Dilemma

In the Nekso Palace, at the periphery of the Parliament of Nobles, Richard was waiting with a hundred main supporters for the religious reform.

When two God's Arrivals appeared in the sky and attacked each other, those cardinals and bishops were more confused than ever. They mumbled similar exclamations: "How is this possible?"

"Which of them is the heretic?"

"One of them has to be a heretic, right? Then, why can a heretic use God's Arrival, too?"

"My Lord, is this your test for us?"

God's Arrival, a unique, supreme divine power that solely belong to the pope, proved his identity as the spokesperson of the God of Truth on earth. It was the firmest confidence for the clerics. Even the heretic reverends and cardinals in the north would fall silent when talking about the problem. although the pontiffs had God's Grace, it was not nearly as good as God's Arrival, which could injure and defeat the Silver Moon and the Lord of Hell.

But today, Sard, a saint who had betrayed His Holiness, was also using God's Arrival. Did it mean that it was not the Lord's special grace but a regular divine power that everybody could grasp?

If Sard was capable of 'God's Arrival' because of the Lord's grace, then which of them was the Lord's spokesperson on earth? When two of blessed believers destroyed each other with God's Arrival, which of them was the heretic? Why would the Lord allow that?

Chaos and confusion surged in their hearts, and their faith seemed to be shaking. If they were swallowed by the holy light, the Congress of Magic would definitely grant a prize of special contribution to the pope and Sard for their remarkable work in destroying the faith of the clerics.

At this moment, Lucien questions echoed in Richard's head.

"God loves the people but loves the shepard more? God loves the people but is unwilling to communicate with everybody's mind directly? When you pray, God's solemnity is different in your home and in the church? You can only receive divine powers under the guidance of the clerics?"

"If the pope is indeed the only speaker of God, why did he keep misreading Cannon? Why did he make so many changes to the Doctrines?"

"Both the pop and the Church are the barriers between the believers and God. Whether or not you have the divine power, you should be equal in front of the Lord."

At some point, he spoke what was in his mind by quoting the Cannon.

The neutral clerics looked at him in confusion at first, but as they listened on, they recalled the doctrines that Richard introduced – to return the right of interpreting the Cannon to every believer!

"Is this the purpose of the Lord's test?"

"This is the real Paradise on Earth that the Lord wants to create! A heaven where everybody can be saved with a devout mind regardless of their age, gender and wealth!"

Their faces became peaceful. In the end, they all shouted after Richard:

"We should make those get out of the way who keep talking about faith and belief but are in fact blaspheming God's will."

"Say farewell to those monopolists who are sucking power and wealth from common people's pure faith!"

"Between Lord and believers, there should be no barriers made by any; there should only be faith, and the faithful demeanor!"

As they shouted out, ivory, gentle holy light spread out from countless clerics. The God of Truth seemed delighted that they finally understood the true meaning of 'Paradise on Earth'!

Having thrown the mental burden, Richard delightfully felt that he was closer to the Lord. His divine power finally surpassed the threshold that advanced into level nine.

Around him, many clerics had been improved by one level, too.

"This is the Lord's grace. He's happy about our choice." Said Richard joyfully.

Another cardinal smiled, "Bishop Richard, after your religious reform is achieved, you may become a saint cardinal."

"Our work is not for reward but because of our faith." Richard waved his hands.

Then, he saw Natasha, with a silver armor and a gold crown, striding in magnificently when the legendary battle outside was shaking the Nekso Palace now and then.

When she passed Richard, Natasha nodded slowly and drew a cross on her chest. "The Lord will always be in our hearts."

Her tied purple hair moved with her hair, making other people worry that her crown might fall.

"Only Truth lives forever." Richard understood that they had Natasha's support and bowed back at her with the clerics.

Natasha did not say anything else. The nobles in the Parliament of Nobles must've seen the clergy's shift. Their faith would be shaken, too!

Inside the Parliament of Nobles, Duke James, Duke Russell and Count Henson looked at the high sky gloomily. The ocean of light and the world-destroying vibe could compare to the shock of 'God's Arrival versus God's Arrival'.

Even though they were inclined to the Congress, their faith had been melted into their blood and their heart. The God of Truth was the unquestionable one true god, except that God created and tolerated everything and did not discriminate against the normal sorcerers.

But now, the self-consistency shook their faith violently. Perhaps, the Lord simply granted the divine powers according to certain rules without caring about anything else like the sorcerers described. Even the schism and the battle of ‘God’s Arrival versus God’s Arrival’ were nothing!

The shift of the clerics including Richard gave them another explanation to the phenomenon. They calmed down and were deep in thought.

“I didn’t know that Sard was capable of God’s Arrival, too...” Duke James spoke to his partner.

Russell replied in a bitter smile, “His Holiness didn’t, either. That’s why he had to use God’s Arrival to resist.”

Without any redundant words and analysis, they understood what each other meant.

Rex, Solefen and other conservatives were even more befuddled, not even knowing what was the Lord, the Pope or the Church.

They were mumbling the same as the clerics, dazzled and overwhelmed.

At this moment, Natasha walked in, followed with Camil. It was the first time she had entered the Parliament of Nobles with the silver Armor of Holm and the crown of Holm. The nobles found someone they could count on and were gradually relaxed.

The Sword of Truth in her right hand made Rex, Solefen, James and other nobles surprised that the queen hid her capabilities!

Now that the Sword of Truth had arrived, the last concerns in their heart were gone.

Ignoring the terrible scene outside where magic and divine powers were flying, Natasha said in a low voice: “The emergency meeting of nobles commences now.”

Thank you, Pope and Sard. You have added more leverage to my persuasion!

A strange magic item was placed on the podium. It recorded Natasha’s voice and let the sound spread beyond ‘Paradise on Earth’ through a metal tube. Since such a transmission was not supernatural, it left ‘Paradise on Earth’ and reached a manor in the suburbs.

The sorcerers hurried to broadcast the ‘live meeting’ to the Parliaments of Nobles in the Kingdom of Colette, the Kingdom of Brianne, the Duchy of Calais and the north coastline.

.....

After the legendary battle began, everybody flew to the sky. Had it not been for the restraint of ‘Paradise on Earth’, they would have flown to ten thousand meters high like Benedict II and Sard did.

After the air of God’s Arrival against God’s Arrival came, Saint Melmax was more than puzzled and shocked. Then, he felt great pressure.

“Sard is a traitor? He’s capable of God’s Arrival?”

“His His Holiness burnt the remainder of his life to use God’s Arrival...”

“What exactly happened?”

“Sard is indeed brutal. He intentionally fought His Holiness in the high sky. This is to shake the foundation of the Church’s faith! Even if he dies, the Church will be mired in a swamp.”

Of course, Melmax also knew that Sard’s other purpose was to prevent Rentato and Paradise on Earth from being destroyed.

He used ‘Paradise on Earth’ to block the legendary battle partly to protect the believers of Rentato. Otherwise, the whole Rentato would’ve been destroyed just now.

The competition of God's Arrivals twisted time and space. Benedict II and Sard were briefly gone.

Melmax, prepared that His Holiness could not join the battle for now, began to observe the battlefield:

Douglas was on the winning side in the battle against the Angel King. Even the regular magics were as good as legendary magics in his hands. However, the Angel King, with 'God's Guard', had the best defense and kept the enemy occupied. The Emperor of Arcana was unable to prepare more powerful legendary magics.

Hathaway was gradually familiarized with the strength of the peak of legendary. She began to suppress the two saints. As for Oliver and Hellen, they were on par with the enemies.

However, in other places, due to the suppression of 'Paradise on Earth', the saint cardinals and the divine knights of the Church were on the winning side. The Light of Stars, in particular, only survived under Astira and Arzaro's attacks with his legendary items and weird magics, but his death seemed already underway.

The Lord of Storm was also suppressed by him. Although he couldn't finish the guy for the time being, he could still protect the massive transmission magic circles.

They still had the advantage in the battle!

Thinking about that, Melmax looked at the massive transmission magic circles. As long as a few saints or legendary knights came, the seven legendary knights on this side of the Storm Straits would know what to do!

As long as the sign of failure showed up, it would be as unstoppable as a flood!

If Brook returned in advance, it would be more troublesome. More reinforcements would be needed, which would give the Dark Congress and the northern heretics a chance. Of course, if His Holiness returned first, chances were that half of the legendary sorcerers would be wiped out first!

“But why has Fernando never used his ‘Eye of Storm’?” Thought Melmax in confusion.

The Church knew very well that the Lord of Storm had two legendary items, one being ‘Robe of Dominance’ and the other being ‘Eye of Storm’. Since his life was not in danger, it was hard to tell if he was wearing the former, but the latter was a marvelous weapon for attacking. Why did he not use it when he was obviously suppressed?

.....

Inside the Nekso Palace...

When he walked to the control pivot, Lucien did not encounter Kritonia. It seemed that Winston had indeed stopped him. Otherwise, he would have to ask for Rhine’s help. While Rhine was already nowhere to be seen, Lucien believed that he was around waiting for an opportunity. If Sard had left any other plans, he wouldn’t mind sabotaging them by the way. Or rather, it was what he desired to do right now.

The control pivot was right before his eyes, when a silver sword with the terrifying gaps of void emerged out of nowhere and slashed at Lucien.

Under the sword, Lucien’s body was torn in half directly, but they vanished like foam.

“Gordon, the Torn Sword...” Not far away, Lucien popped up and saw the man with silver eyes who attacked him just now.

Gordon also said in a low voice, “Seventh-circle magic, Simulacrum...”

The magic could create a real illusion that was half the level of the caster. The illusion had senses, voice, smell, overlapping fate and could perform magic.

Chapter 560: Livestream

Hardly had Gordon finished his remark when Lucien performed ‘Simulacrum’ and suddenly split into two halves. Then, another two shadows emerged from the two Luciens. Four Luciens surrounded him, far away from each other. That was Lucien’s real self and ‘simulation’ both casting ‘Mirror Shadow’.

It was truly difficult to fight a sorcerer. Not having any item to cast magic or divine powers, Gordon could only grit his teeth and attack with the intuitions of a knight. Also, a radiant knight of his level had plenty of methods and area attacks.

But before he lunged out, he suddenly heard Lucien talking in a low voice:

“I need reinforcement.”

As he talked, his monocle glimmered.

Reinforcement?

Gordon’s heart was heavy. Were there other archmages or senior-rank sorcerers around? He was suspicious that Lucien was only bluffing, but he was in Rentato, and Allyn was nearby. This place had the highest density of sorcerers in the entire world. The Congress of Magic couldn’t be short of hands in their operation.

Recalling Grand Cardinal Sard who was confronting the pope, Gordon suddenly lost his fighting will. He subtly changed the direction of his attack and flew sideways.

The moment he flew out, the colors around him faded away, leaving only the lifeless black and grey. He was frozen in midair like a bug inside amber.

It was ‘Time Stop’, a ninth-circle magic!

Morris appeared from the midair. Since things were going rather well, and there was even a splendid scene of ‘God’s Arrival against God's Arrival' – which could be appreciated as a classic opera since he was not part of it after all – Morris was in a rather good. He smiled at Lucien and asked, "How did you know that I was around?"

"The pope and Sard were high in the sky, so I figured that the members of the royal family of Holm were probably around." Lucien certainly wouldn't confess that he was just bluffing Gordon.

Although Lucien had no doubt that Morris and other senior-rank sorcerers would come to help him in thirty seconds after he called for reinforcement, he did not think that they could come immediately. However, if Gordon could be scared away, thirty seconds of his time could be saved. If Gordon was not scared away, he still had the strength of the seventh circle after being suppressed, and he could still last half a minute with his left hand.

Even though Gordon reached level-nine gold knight because of 'Angel Arrival' and 'Paradise on Earth', Lucien believed that his magic could help him resist for at least one minute. It was needless to say that he had 'Orb of Ultimate Destruction', a ninth-circle scroll, and two tubes of 'solidified helium' that could perform Snow Goddess' Whip.

He did not expect that Morris would come so fast. It seemed that his primary target was the control pivot of the divine barrier, too.

Seeing that light was blooming inside Gordon's body and weakening the effect of 'Time Stop', Morris spoke to Lucien, "You will go to the control pivot. Let me take care of him. He's a member of the royal family of Holm after all. It will be more acceptable if he dies in my hands."

Without any hesitation, four Luciens rushed at the control pivot, appreciating the thoroughness of the plan. Otherwise, it wouldn't have been as easy for him to suppress Gordon.

Of course, Lucien also knew that Sard couldn't have arranged for Gordon to defend the control pivot. Instead, Gordon should be a candidate to be the new king after he killed Natasha. It should've been Kritonia, 'Heart of Time', who appeared here!

However, now that Sard was confronting the pope, how 'loyal' was Kritonia to him? Not to mention that Winston, 'Night Walker', would stop him.

In a palace not far away, Winston stood next to the window and seemed relaxed. He spoke to Kritonia, "Sard is confronting the pope. Even though he has God's Arrival as his trump card, the best outcome for him is to die together with the enemy. Your Excellency Kritonia, are you going to attack me?" Since Kritonia was the legendary hero who contributed to the establishment of the Kingdom of Holm, Winston, who only became a legend in recent hundred years, was quite respectful.

"Even if you want to change sides and clear your suspicion as a heretic by contributions, you should wait and see how capable His Holiness is after exhausting himself to perform God's Arrival."

It was about the same as what Kritonia said to Winston earlier. He looked outside in silence, watching Lucien crack the defense outside of the control pivot. The modification in this place involved the legendary knights who defended it. Fearing that it might alarm Sard, Lucien did not work on it, but thankfully, Natasha gave him the structure of the entire divine power circle. It would only take him less than one minute to finish the work.

In the next moment, Kritonia sighed and turned around, walking into the room.

Smiling, Winston looked at Lucien again, thinking if he should give him a hand to save each other time.

Suddenly, he found everything around him slowed down, as if he had fallen into a swamp.

A sword slashed by, but it did not hit Winston, who emerged from the darkness nearby, like the shadow of the night.

"Mr. Kritonia, you..." Looking at Kritonia, Winston hesitated. Thankfully, he kept his usual wariness.

Kritonia sighed. "There's no turning back after certain things are started.”

“Although I haven’t found a way to advance into the third rank, I should still be able to resist you for a fairly long time. Are you sure you don’t want to wait?” Winston believed that the situation outside would be beyond control even if Kritonia could defeat himself, so he tried the last persuasion.

Unless it was absolutely necessary, he was unwilling to fight ‘Heart of Time’ who was much stronger than himself.

Kritonia shook his head. “You and I are both knights. We understand each other’s determination well. I know that hope is slim, but I have to try to seize it instead of waiting for an outcome. Even if I die, I will die on a battlefield!”

An intense battle began between them, and both of them were pulled into ‘Paradise on Earth’.

Because the battle of legendary knights required more space, they soon broke the defense of divine powers and fought in midair.

.....

Wearing the silver armor and the gold crown, Natasha stabbed the Sword of Truth on the dais before her and glanced around the hall, before she announced solemnly and loudly:

“A war has broken out between the Church and the Congress of Magic. It’s time to make a decision.”

“Are we going to follow the Church to eradicate the evils, or are we going to help the Congress of Magic to banish the radical believers and return the faith to the Lord?”

“If we choose the former, the Congress of Magic will probably escape into the ocean after suffering certain losses. By then, we will be the frontline that confronts the Congress of Magic. I believe that the Church will have to count on us. Together with the northern heretics, a new balance will be reached.”

“If we choose the latter, the Congress of Magic will also have to depend on us and the neutral believers to resist the Church. There will also be a new balance. We don't need to worry about the assassinations of night watchers anymore. Peace will be restored."

"The key to victory is in our hands. What's your decision?"

Natasha halted, and all the nobles understood what the queen meant. The terrible battle outside also reminded them that everything was real.

Also, they knew that, whichever side they chose, their interests would be ensured as long as the side won. So, all they needed to do was not to stand on the losing side.

At this moment, Duke Rex stood and said in a low voice, "Your Majesty, we are all the subjects of the Lord, and our faith is unquestionable. If a new balance is going to be restored and our interests can be ensured either way, why do we not choose the Church, and why do we have to hang around with the evil sorcerers?"

More than half of the conservative nodded. It was exactly what was on their mind. Even many of the liberals would abandon the sorcerers without any hesitation in emergencies, although they could cooperate with the sorcerers to make money.

The hall immediately fell quiet. Duke James clenched his fists and stood up, "Objection! If we follow the Church, will you not be scared of the assassinations from the radical night watchers? Will they tolerate alchemical workshops, telephones, magic crystal maps or radios? Do you want to live as the bumpkins you used to be?"

Although Natasha didn't talk to him before, Duke James' cooperation with the Congress of Magic was too deep for him to get away with it. Also, he knew the queen's real tendency. Therefore, he made a decision rather quickly.

Natasha nodded in satisfaction. It was as expected of the hardcore liberal, who was thought to be trustworthy by both the Congress of Magic and Lucien.

After Duke James' announcement, many liberals expressed their stance. However, they also cleverly implied that they would respect and accept the final decision.

To save time, Natasha pressed his right hand and ended the argument:

"Let me say a few words."

.....

Yourcenar, 'Song of Dusk', stood inside the Parliament of Nobles and listened to the 'livestream' of the meeting in Holm with the king and the nobles. He listened to Natasha's introduction and analyzed the two choices.

"If this is all, we still can't be convinced, and we have to keep observing." Yourcenar spoke to other nobles.

Any noble with a regular head could've come up with the two new balances. For the nobles who were already used to balance, the most important thing was to stand on the victors' side.

A noble nearby nodded and said, "I find clerics more trustworthy than sorcerers. Those sorcerers of ancient heritage have left too horrible an impression on me. I won't choose them unless there are irresistible returns.

In Brianne, Colette, and the north coastline, the Hammer of the Void, the Knight of Disasters, the Burning Lady and the Life Reaper expressed similar opinions.

The Hammer of the Void and the Knight of Disasters, on the other hand, were also observing the situation outside. Brook had finished Beaver and returned to the magic tower of the Moonsong League with Holt, going back to Allyn via the Portal to Alternate Realm deployed earlier.

They were important leverage that could affect the situation!

"Cannot localize Allyn..." Brook frowned. Through prophetic magic, he understood that Allyn was enshrouded by some kind of barrier and therefore decided to return to the suburb of Rentato through Space Jump.

Because Brianne and Holm were not far away from each other, and it would take Brook only several minutes if he were to fly in full speed, Space Jump would only take less than twenty seconds.

.....

Above the remains of the Radiance Church, Fernando, who was suppressed, and Hathaway and Douglas, who were suppressing the enemy, communicated. It was time! They had to seize the opportunity before the pope returned!

Chapter 561: Shameless Sorcerers

The one who was fighting against Oliver, the Hand of Annihilation, was a third rank divine knight named Saint Anthony who owned the bloodline called Light. He noticed that, under the increasing power of Paradise on Earth, the grand arcanist's legendary spells, including Annihilation Ball and Cage of Destruction, were becoming weaker and weaker as the oppressive power on Oliver had increased. Therefore, Oliver was slowly moving towards Hathaway, the Lord of Elements, who had gained an edge fighting the two saints.

Saint Anthony knew that, through the power of Paradise on Earth, Saint Anasta and Saint Augusta were by no means Hathaway's rivals, as most of their divine items, except those top ones, and even parts of their bodies had all been completely destroyed or at least severely damaged by Luxury Cracking and Elements Resolve – The fight had cost them an arm and a leg. If it had not been for the holy light covering them, they would be shamefully fighting naked right now in front of the followers in Rentato.

Saint Anthony knew that once Oliver went to Hathaway, his edge would be gone.

Anthony had to stop Oliver, but he was afraid of the power of Luxury Cracking and Elements Resolve. It was true that once the grand arcanists gathered together, the Pope could perhaps be able to kill all of them with one strike, however, Anthony knew that he was totally unable to bear the cracking spells. Facing those spells, only few divine spells could resist the power, including the legendary one called Blessed Realm, but he was a divine knight, and he was not able to use it.

Comparatively speaking, Oliver was obviously much more “adorable” as an enemy as he could not cast Luxury Cracking. Anthony was able to barely bear the power of the ninth circle spell, Cracking (Advanced), on his own with his magic resistance.

At this time, Anthony had noticed that, on the other side, Hellen, the Witch of Iceland, was also approaching Hathaway. Meanwhile, Saint Melmax was pushing the Lord of Storm to move towards Hathaway as well to make the sorcerers gather together.

Anthony thought to himself that since Saint Melmax had been a top legendary for many years. Although he might not yet be as powerful as Douglas, defeating Fernando should just be a matter of time. If he could stay closer to Melmax, Melmax will be able to help them defeat the sorcerers earlier than expected. Also, as all of the sorcerers were now getting closer to each other, Hathaway might be prevented from using Luxury Cracking, as it was a range spell unable to tell enemies. Even if they could not defeat the sorcerers instantly, they would be able to control the situation and wait for the Pope's arrival.

His plan changed, Anthony slowed down his attack and let Oliver get closer to Hathaway.

Four grand arcanists against five saints, the wild war started.

Anthony got the blessing power from Saint Anasta and Saint Maria, so his strength, speed, force, and defence level had been further improved.

Although magic spells were much more spontaneous and unpredictable than divine power, when it came to giving blessing effects, magic spells were nowhere close to divine power. Therefore, the side with a saint cardinal always benefited greatly in a team fight. Both Anthony and Melmax were exerting their power, Light and Morning, to the extreme. The whole area had been lit up. The four grand arcanists were badly disadvantaged.

To Oliver and Hellen, however, the situation had been temporarily eased thanks to the support from Hathaway. However, this had increased the burden on Fernando and Hathaway who were now controlling the situation with great effort.

Fernando's eyes lit up with bolts of lightning and storm. He shouted,

“Storm Barrier!”

The area of the thunder hell suddenly expanded. It sucked the five saints in where there was devastating black storms, thick bolts of lightning, extreme high temperatures and freezing ice and snow.

Under the storm, meanwhile, the space suddenly fell into utter darkness. The horrible power of strong magnetic field had made the space distorted and the fierce wind was blowing like bitter howling – all to prevent the five saints from leaving. Meanwhile, Oliver, Hellen, and Hathaway were flying upwards.

This legendary spell was one of the two most fundamental spells derived from his demiplane!

“What are they doing? Is Fernando trying to kill himself?” Melmax was slightly shocked. Within ten seconds, he and the five saints would be able to kill Fernando completely as he had been left alone using Light of Judgment!

Out of the battlefield, Oliver and Hellen were standing in the air opposite towards each other, casting the short spell,

“Space Shackle.”

Silently, out of the darkness distorted by the great magnetic field, the space started freezing like transparent crystal.

Hathaway was standing a bit higher than Oliver and Hellen. Her cold, silver-grey eyes looked down upon the darkness below without any emotions.

“You break the barrier! Anasta help me kill Fernando!” Melmax sensed something dangerous, and he made the decision immediately.

.....

Inside the Parliament of Nobles in the Nekso Palace.

All the nobles had stopped talking, waiting for Her Majesty’s speech.

Natasha’s clear voice now sounded deeper, delivering the dignity and prestige of a queen.

“I, Natasha Violet, the queen of Holm Kingdom, the Lord of the Sword of Truth’s Knights, the Lord of Verdict Knights, the Lord of Saint Cross Knights, have decided to cooperate with the Congress of Magic to abandon the radical Church and respect the moderates as the belief of the kingdom!”

Leaving no space for negotiation, Natasha’s decisive tone made many noble members start to feel hesitant. They habitually followed the majesty, and leaning towards the Congress of Magic would do them no harm. A new balance would be able to take shape.

By now, many of the liberals had made their decision: They would follow Natasha.

Meanwhile, Natasha kept going on,

“I don’t want my people to worry day and night that they might be killed by a radical night watcher at any time!”

“I don’t want my people to lose their energy and wealth because their mind is trapped by the Church. Each one of us has the right to interpret Cannon on our own, and each of us shall be able to directly connect to Lord when we pray!”

“I don’t want the Kingdom of Holm to return to the most uncultured, primitive, and darkest period of time. We human beings should, and are totally entitled to enjoy a better life, by illuminating the places we live using magic crystal lights, by making the kingdom smaller when we call each other, when we listen to the radio. Look around, we’re using alchemical items, and the path in front of us has already joined that of the congress!”

“What is your choice, my people?”

All of the nobles remained silent. They were struggling, deep in their minds.

Meanwhile, those nobles who were listening to Natasha’s speech in Colette, Brianne, Colette, and the rest of the kingdoms were still having difficulty making their decision. They had indeed benefited a lot from the alchemical items in their much more luxurious life, and it was absolutely horrible for them to go back to their previous life. On the other hand, they had never been through the fear of an assassination given by a night watcher, nor were they worrying about offending the majesty – they all had their own king or queen or a lord.

Bedrenka, Hammer of the Void, and Basor, Knight of Disasters, exchanged a look between each other and both slightly shook their heads. Something was still missing in Natasha's speech, something that was powerful enough to persuade most nobles.

In Nekso Palace, Duke Rex, the president of the parliament, first stepped out and said it out loud, "I am against it!"

"Before all nobles reached their agreement, Your Majesty should not make the final decision first!"

"At this moment, the decision is a matter of life and death. A lord who goes against the will of most nobles is a betrayer, and is thus no longer suitable for being a lord!"

Rex was denying the decision-making power of the queen. And he wouldn't stop here,

"The Pope might be coming back very soon. Are we gonna rush so bad to make our decision?"

"You want to fall into hell and forever look up at Mountain Paradise?"

His words instantly won the support of at least one third of the nobles present, while the rest of them remained silent as they were still waiting for the offer.

Duke James stood up to defend, "Look at the outside world, look at Richard. They are still able to use divine power. This means that this is the will of God!"

Seeing that the liberals and the conservatives were starting to argue again, Natasha lifted her arm and stopped the noise,

“I’m not finished yet.”

.....

After casting Storm Barrier, Fernando started casting again,

“Simulacrum.”

Instantly, he divided himself into six and stopped the five saints from chasing the rest of the grand arcanists.

“Light of Judgment!”

“Miracle!”

“Expel Evil!”

It did not cost the saints much effort to eliminate three of them and then they started breaking the barrier. Meanwhile, Melmax and Anasta got rid of the rest three. Fernando was now completely disadvantaged.

In the sky, the bottom of Allyn suddenly split and a huge, dazzling energy ball fell from it. The light covered something watery inside, but the power coming out of it was beyond dreadful.

Once losing the light ball, the mythal of Allyn suddenly became much dimmer, and it was now even having a difficult time flying.

Varantine seized the chance and set himself free, however, a cold female voice came at this time,

“Silent Blue.”

The air and the holy light he was in got frozen, even including time. Everything had fallen into the cold, silent color of blue.

It was Hellen, Witch of Iceland, who used her legendary spell and trapped Varantine, and she then returned to focus on the barrier. She knew that it would not take Varantine long to get out, and also that she could not hurt Varantine in the trap by any chance, but all she needed was that bit of time!

As the watery ball fell, Hathaway's face, which was glamorously-featured but hardly had any facial expressions, rarely put on the look showing some slight thrill. She started casting the long spell,

"The secret from inside of atoms..."

It sounded like the ethereal voice was hymning, but in Melmax's ears, the voice was more than horrific than anything. He hurriedly turned himself into a flash of morning light and rushed at Fernando together with the sword in his hand.

He had to finish the fight as soon as possible. Meanwhile, Anasta did the same thing by casting Light of Judgment.

The three saints finally broke the distorted magnetic field outside of the barrier, but not yet with the space shackle. At this time, two voices came,

"Annihilation Ball."

"Snow Goddess's Anger!"

The black magic ball and the freezing snow and ice stopped them from reaching Fernando.

On the other side, facing Melmax's attack, Fernando did not do anything to defend himself, but keep casting the spell,

"Abrupt Magic Reverse!"

A mirror drawn with sophisticated patterns suddenly appeared in front of him. Behind the mirror, it seemed that there was another world. The spell, Light of Judgment, hit on the mirror but directly reflected back, which almost hit Anasta himself.

Abrupt Magic Reverse was the legendary version of the seventh circle spell, Magic Reverse, which could reflect a single-target spell five times.

However, the mirror could not stop Melmax. The divine power fiercely hacked at Fernando from the other side.

Magic Order, Spell Sequencer, Spell Trigger... A series of defense spells were activated. Fernando disappeared from where he was and then showed up on the opposite side.

It was never easy to kill a sorcerer!

Hathaway's casting had come to the end. The light ball was now very close to the storm barrier and the destructive power within was growing stronger and stronger.

Seventeen legendary sorcerers had been contributing to this light ball in the past entire year! The ball was their material for casting this ultimate spell!

They had reduced the quantity of the material as the full power of the spell would have been too intense for time and space to bear! If that was the case, the entire causal chain in this dimension would be messed with!

This was a strike powerful enough to be compared to that of a demigod!

Somehow Fernando had integrated himself into the storm barrier. He made the barrier burst out the great magnetic power and sucked the saints back in again!

Now the five saints and Melmax were all targeting Fernando. Killing Fernando would be their last chance to break through the barrier.

At this time, a horrible storm formed again in Fernando's red eyes.

What were the advantages that a sorcerer had over a priest?

Long life, unpredictable spells, countless triggers, and well-prepared methods for resurrection!

Before the fight, they had been well-prepared. They were going to defeat their enemies using their greatest strength against their enemies' weaknesses!

"Eternal Blaze was coming. ARE YOU PREPARED?"

“I’ve got my appendix at home. Do you?”

Chapter 562: The New Era

Outside of the city of Rentato, the scenic view was still picturesque in this scorching July.

The space above the Thousand-lake place swirled and formed a gate. Behind the gate there was a kingdom of powerful magnetic field and electric currents.

Brook, wearing a white wig, walked out of the gate with Chelsea Holt, the Moon Scholar. When they saw that the entire city was still covered in the divine light, which meant that the fight among the legendaries was still going on, they released a sigh of relief, as they finally caught up to them.

At this time, as if he just felt something, Brook looked up and was shocked to find that there was a man in the sunlight in the air, wearing the divine crown and holding the platinum staff.

“Benedict II? God’s Arrival?”

Brook’s eyes opened big, but he still decided to go there.

He did not know where the strong, bright light came from, but he knew that it wasn’t supposed to be God’s Arrival. Benedict II had already used it before!

.....

The energy ball was being pulled to the magnetic field, and it was getting faster and faster. Melmax and the rest of the saints started to sense this extreme danger, as if there was a heavy rock sitting on their hearts, preventing them from breathing.

They did not talk to each other, but together they were all targeting at Fernando. They had to kill him to get out of the barrier before the insane energy ball fell on them!

They were all pushing themselves to their limit. All of them had decided to use Light of Judgment. They were furious. If they were going to die, they needed Fernando to die with them!

Majestic and vast, serious and bright, the three beams of light shot across the sky at Fernando, with the power stirring the holy light like surges and waves.

At this time, no one bothered defending. The remaining divine power was all they had protecting them from being torn apart in the barrier. But killing Fernando was all the hope they had.

Melmax and Anthony had put their power into their swords, ready to wield the legendary-power hack.

However, Fernando was not even slightly deterred. Instead, he flew towards the light!

The mirror with sophisticated patterns appeared again, connecting the two worlds to each other.

Bang, bang, bang!

Three beams of light hit the mirror and then reflected off of it.

The power of Abrupt Magic Reverse still existed!

After Fernando flew towards the light of judgment, the power of the hacking quickly got him.

Blood and flesh spurting, the Lord of Storm was cut into three chunks. Somehow, the magic robe he was wearing was not working at all.

He was not wearing the Robe of Dominance? Melmax realized something. He realized why Fernando never used Eye of Storm.

However, it was too late!

Fine electric currents lit up the three chunks, and they started wriggling! Within a second, they had turned into Fernando again, but three!

Even that could not kill Fernando completely?

Melmax and Anthony had given up the hope that they could finish Fernando within seconds by using Light of Judgment, but killing Fernando was the only way out!

Staring into the distance, Mecantron, the Angel King, looked rather serious. He folded his arms in front of his chest and was about to kneel down to cast God's Guard. Although in this case, he would not be able to launch attacks against the legendaries, he should be able to be safe facing that formidable energy ball – the divine spell would put him into a different dimension temporarily!

However, Douglas, the Emperor of Arcana, would not leave him the chance to escape. The stars pulled the great gravity strong enough for tearing him into pieces. Mecantron therefore had to cast other spells for defense. There was no time at all for him to cast God's Guard.

"I'm not your God. Don't kneel down in front of me." said Douglas.

According to the plan, Douglas's target should have been Benedict II, the Pope, but now it was the Angel King, therefore, it turned out to be quite an easy job for Douglas. In their original plan no. 4, if the pope had been here, and even if the pope was still somehow able to cast God's Arrival one more time, in the current situation, the pope's target of casting must have been the energy ball, or all of them, including the sorcerers and priests, would be killed all together.

In the plan, Douglas's only concern was that he did not know how long he could keep the pope occupied. Ten seconds, twenty seconds, or a minute?

But fortunately, Douglas's concern had now completely disappeared when the saints' wasted their chance casting God's Arrival.

The holy light burst out from Varantine's body, and the light melted down the dark blue ice which kept him frozen. It was smart of him deciding not to approach the storm barrier. Instead, he chose to cast Light of Judgment towards Hathaway to try to distract her from the chanting.

“Aurora Wall!” said a cold, female voice.

A transparent wall instantly rose in front of Hathaway. The wall was covered in colorful aurora, beautiful like a dream.

The light hit on the aurora wall, and both of them disappeared at the same time.

Hellen, Witch of Iceland, was maintaining the space shackle and, meanwhile, also keeping Varantine fully occupied. That was how far an ordinary saint cardinal was away from a grand arcanist.

The five saints were trying their best, and they indeed had obtained the edge. Within seconds, a series of divine spells hit Fernando directly in sequence. Despite all the defense spells that Fernando cast on himself, the last division of him had been devoured by the holy light.

Was Fernando... dead?

The moment when the five saints started to feel the joy, they realized that the barrier was still there.

A puppet with a strange smile on its face suddenly appeared behind their back, and it then turned into Fernando!

At this time, the energy ball had gone into the barrier, and the devastating power had reached the limit of control!

Fernando's body suddenly exploded and then integrated into the storm barrier. The black magnetic field kept compressing the space, encasing the five saints in all directions.

They were out of time!

Melmax had activated God's Shield and held tight Holy Avenger. He believed that he could survive as long as the spell was not as powerful as God's Arrival.

Then the rest of the four saints did the same thing. Although they were more or less panicking, they had all turned on all the protections they knew to face the horrible impact.

By now, Hathaway had finally finished her long, long spell. She sighed the words like it was a piece of tune,

“Eternal Blaze!”

Instantly, Fernando saw the faces of the five saints lighting up under the power of the energy ball. The five faces were as pale as the finest paper sheet. Somehow, he recalled Lucien’s joke,

“Cry, and yell, and then, go to hell!”

The energy ball then exploded, bursting out the brightest light ever that was much more dazzling than anything else in the world.

.....

Inside the Parliament of Nobles in the Nekso Palace.

The nobles, both the Liberal and the Conservative, had all quieted down, waiting for Her Majesty to continue.

Natasha took a deep breath and resumed her determination as a knight. She then pulled out her Sword of Truth and raised it high,

“Here I swear by my soul and my destiny to the Lord of Hell,”

“I’ll return my power to those who follow me. The only things I will keep to myself are the direct royal manors and the power over arranging personnel.”

The nobles were totally shocked.

“I’ll return my legislation and law enforcement power to the Parliament of Nobles, and only retain the power to veto. I’ll never take it back, nor will my offspring!”

“I’ll give the nobles my executive power. The Parliament of Nobles will be able to choose a prime minister every ten years, and the prime minister will form a cabinet to exert the power. I will only, again, retain the power to veto!”

“I’ll give the cabinet the leadership of Verdict Knights and Sword of Truth's Knights, and only keep the lord titles!"

"The taxation revenue that you gain and the administrative institutes will remain the same, but you'll be able to decide how to spend the tax revenue!"

"Any one of you who leads the knights as frontiers to extend the kingdom's territory will be given one third of the new territory as your own manor, and then, one third for the knights, and one third goes to the kingdom!"

...

"All my words and promises will be written in the Code. I, along with the future kings, and queens will abide by the law just as all you nobles! The Congress of Magic will be the supervisor!"

Natasha's determined words were like strokes to the nobles.

In the past, because of the power of the Church and the Congress of Magic, the nobles had no choice but to unite around the majesty to survive. However, the kingship or queenship had been growing so fast and powerful that the nobles could barely see their own positions. In that circumstance, the nobles could only make constant compromises to keep the balance and to wait for the future change. They never dared to say no.

However, Her Majesty today took the initiative to compromise by greatly reducing the queenship, to the extent that they could never have expected!

Duke James, Duke Solefen, and many of the rest nobles became very excited. The muscles in their faces slightly twitched. The offer was too good for them to reject!

In the noise of electric currents, Natasha's passionate speech got widespread to Colette, Brianne, Calais, and the Northland,

"Here I swear by my soul and my destiny to the Lord of Hell,"

"I'll return my power to those who follow me. The only things I will keep to myself are the direct royal manors and the power over arranging personnel.”

...

Yourcenar, Song of Dusk, sprang up from his seat out of great excitement, which was shared by all the nobles around him. What a bright future it would be!

The Grand Duke of the Duchy of Calais put on a bitter smile seeing how thrilled the nobles were.

Hammer of the Void, Knight of Disasters, Life Reaper, and Burning Lady also had similar responses as Yourcenar.

.....

While Duke Solefen, Duke James and most of the nobles had all stood up to support Natasha, there were still a few extreme conservatives being quite hesitant, as Duke Rex had not showed his attitude.

“His Holiness?!” Rex suddenly saw the figure high above in the sky through the window.

However, before he could say one more word, the horribly loud explosion overwhelmed his voice, like countless bolts of lightning striking the earth.

A new sun had risen. It was so hot and bright that anyone who saw it would feel intimidated. The sun represented a brand new life, and its power was driving away the holy light!

Boom!

That explosion just completely wakened the nobles in their mind!

“This is Eternal Blaze, from the Congress of Magic!” Natasha stared at the nobles and then burst out the cry,

“In front of us is the new era. Everything old will be abandoned!”

“My decision. Who agrees? Who opposes?”

The imperial aura of the queen made the nobles have to kneel, and also because of the great lures she offered. Seeing that Paradise on Earth was rapidly collapsing and the huge mushroom cloud, the leading dukes started kneeling down one by one, and finally, only Duke Rex remained in his seat.

In the end, Rex released a sigh as he took a glance at the sword in Natasha's hand. He kneeled down and said together with the rest of the nobles,

“We pledge our lifelong allegiance to Your Majesty!”

.....

With the structure drawing, Lucien easily broke the core defense of the divine circle. As soon as he stepped in, he heard the loud, horn-like explosion. Knowing that the plan just worked out, he had now felt much relieved. He pushed the divine power barrier to its limit to make sure that those ordinary people in Rentato would not suffer from the fight. And he started humming a merry little tune,

“The east gets red, and the sun rises...”

Chapter 563: The Surging Waves from the New Era

In the Parliament of Nobles in Cocus, the Duchy of Calais.

“All my words and promises will be written in the Code. I, as well as the future kings, and queens will abide by the law just as all you nobles! The Congress of Magic will be the supervisor!”

When the nobles heard those words from Natasha, none of them could remain calm anymore. However, a second later, after an incredibly loud explosion, the voice had been completely cut off, and there were only electric currents left.

“What happened?”

“What’s going on?”

“Something happened to Nekso Palace?! Was it because of the war among those legendaries?”

“Was it the Church? Or the Congress?”

Yourcenar, Song of Dusk, looked northwest where the city of Rentato was.

As a legendary knight, he could see the picture: There was that burning sun radiating its endless light and power in the sky, and then an eye-catching mushroom cloud rose.

At this time, Joaquin, the president of Moonsong League, walked in the front gate. His face was lit up with the wild joy. He claimed aloud, “The electromagnetic signal has been interrupted. That means Eternal Blaze had been successfully launched!”

“Eternal Blaze?” Yourcenar repeated the words confusedly. He never heard such a powerful legendary spell.

But he did not ask, knowing that the information Joaquin had was also rather limited. He supposed that all the communication in Rentato had all been cut off.

Joaquin's joy and confidence influenced the nobles. Recalling Natasha's speech, their hearts were thudding like crazy. The drive and excitement they were experiencing were like flames making them feel rather restless. Some of the nobles were now looking at the Grand Duke of Calais, and the rest was looking at Yourcenar, as if they were begging him.

Yourcenar released a sigh and there was no more hesitation. He walked to the Grand Duke and kneeled down on one knee,

"Your Majesty, the old era has ended, and the new one is coming. Please give the order to expel the extreme South Church and only keep the Moderates as the duchy's religion!"

Under his lead, all the nobles stood up and kneeled down together,

"Your Majesty, please give the order to be ready for the new era!"

The voices joined, lingering in the parliament hall like surging waves. No one dared to block it, as the trend was totally inevitable!

The Grand Duke of the Duchy of Calais knew that there was no way that he could reject this. The shackle of the old era had been destroyed, and the new order was forming. At this moment, even the majesties had to obey the trend of the times, or they would be thrown out of their thrones as the nobles would regard them as betrayers who served the Church.

There was no other choice left to the Grand Duke. His family had not yet produced a legendary knight. Therefore, he stood up and announced aloud,

"I, the Grand Duke of the Duchy of Calais, here give the order to expel the South Church but keep the Moderates!"

"Here I swear by my soul and my destiny to the Lord of Hell, I will return the power to you like how the Kingdom of Holm is going to do!"

Yourcenar and the rest of the nobles smiled,

“We pledge our lifelong allegiance to Your Majesty!”

.....

In Salyvaor, the capital of Brianne.

Bedrenka, Hammer of the Void, and Basor, Knight of Disasters, kneeled down in front of the king of Brianne. Behind them were the members of the Parliament of Nobles,

“Your Majesty, this is unstoppable and inevitable. Please make your decision as soon as possible. If the Congress wins the war on its own, we’ll be of no use to them!”

.....

Colette.

No matter how old Life Reaper was, he now looked like a cheerful teenager with light brown hair. However, at this moment, the smile on his face had completely disappeared. And he was kneeling down as the rest of the nobles and said,

“Your Magic, the new era is coming, and we have to get ready. Please give the order to assist the Congress of Magic!”

.....

In Kasvig, the capital of the city union of the coastal Northland.

As the leader, Burning Lady herself was rather inspired by Natasha’s speech, as Natasha’s words had given her the way to strengthen the loose union. Also, she had got the news sent back from Brianne, Colette, and Calais. Like a red rose, she smiled, and then she stood up,

“The new era is right there. So I am going to assist the Congress of Magic and reform the city union. Does everyone agree?”

The nobles all kneeled down out of joy, “All as you wish, my Lord.”

No one dared to say no at this moment.

.....

After the Grand Duke of the Duchy of Calais gave the order, Song of Dusk had left the hall and soared into the sky to find Torrens. He was going to give an extra strike to Torrens, so that the beginning of the new era would mark his name.

However, far before he approached, Torrens, Angel of Wisdom, had quickly dodged to the other side to avoid the breath of the rainbow dragon. After casting the divine spell to make sure that Erica could not lock onto him for a short period of time, Torrens cast something like Chaos Teleportation and ran away from the battlefield.

Yourcenar was quite confused. How did Torrens know that he was not here to help?

Seeing that Yourcenar had no intention of attacking her, Erica returned to her human form. She smiled, "I was about to run away as well, as anyone approaching right now can be an enemy. It doesn't do harm to come back after making sure who are enemies and who are not."

She got a bit distracted by Song of Dusk's arrival, or she would have been able to keep Torrens here.

Yourcenar realized that Erica was right. Running away was the best option for Torrens no matter if he was an enemy or ally. Torrens could always come back later if Yourcenar was here to help.

"There's no time for acting. I'll stay here to protect Calais, in case Torrens will come back. You go to Rentato." said Yourcenar. Although Torrens knew that it would be more direct and of symbolic meaning if he went to Rentato himself, but the Congress of Magic might doubt his true intention. At this point, the last thing he wanted to do was to distract the congress. Erica going back to Rentato and meeting the legendary archmages and grand cardinals would explain everything, as the teleportation circle connecting Cocus and the Holy City had been destroyed.

Erica nodded, although she was still on her full alert facing Yourcenar. Using Teleportation, she left for Rentato. It was not safe right now using the teleportation circle to go back as the energy storm was too powerful.

In the coastal Northland, the situation was pretty much the same. The Grand Cardinal fighting there also found a chance and sneaked away. But Ines did not get this lucky in Colette, as he was facing Lord of the Undead. Running away had cost him an arm and a leg. The terrible injury had reduced him from level-two legendary to one, and it was going to be extremely difficult for him to recover from it.

.....

When the dazzling light appeared in the sky, Oliver, Hellen, and Hathaway all instantly turned around and flew towards the opposite direction as fast as they could.

They would not have to be in such a mess if Paradise on Earth had not blocked all the teleportation magic spells.

From a distance, then they all cast the defensive legendary spells that they were good at.

The rest of the legendary sorcerers also had no intention to prevent the grand cardinals from running away. Even if the cardinals all managed to run away from the battlefield, it would still cost them hours to recover and come back. And if they were all killed, the Church would definitely send more powerful grand cardinals here who would do much more damage to Allyn and destroy the legends' resurrection tools. In addition, as the Grand Cardinals were not enough close to the central explosion area, the explosion might not be able to kill them but instead, severely hurt them.

Boom!

The "sun" rose, and its light was so bright that it had deprived their eyes of all the colors they could see. Only white was left in their pupils. Then a strange-shaped mushroom cloud slowly rose. After the deafening explosion, the cloud rose in silence but the scene was beyond shocking.

The holy light was dissipated within a second, and then Paradise on Earth started cracking and collapsing like a glass toy.

Mecantron spat out a full gulp of golden blood, and his eighteen pairs of wings suddenly dimmed. The wings were now shaking and swaying like dry tree branches in the horrible storm and high temperature. Paradise on Earth was built based on his power.

When Douglas turned to protect himself from the power of Eternal Blaze, Mecantron seized the chance and kneeled down,

“Whoever prays in your name shall not be harmed.”

The illusionary waves spread out from Mecantron, and his target was the huge-scale transmission circle.

Paradise on Earth kept cracking, as the power of the “sun” extended to every corner of Rentato. The huge-scale transmission circle also started cracking, but at the edge of being completely destroyed, God’s Guard saved it.

Mecantron suffered more from casting God’s Guard. More blood came out from his mouth, and his aura had been greatly weakened.

After completely cracking Paradise on Earth, the remaining energy of the storm kept going. The divine power barrier activated by Lucien had also been severely damaged. In the end, it slowly disappeared.

The west side of the city of Rentato remained almost intact, but the noble district in the east had been razed to the ground. If it had not been that the legendary fight had driven people to the west or close to Nekso Palace, much more severe casualties would surely have ensued.

Nekso Palace was under the core divine power protection. Under the remaining waves of Eternal Blaze, it managed to remain intact.

The nobles looked out from the windows. Their hearts were bleeding – Their houses, treasures, and collections were all gone!

Within the central area of the explosion, the cloud and smoke slowly scattered and disappeared. Melmax, Holy Avenger, was now in a great mess: His legendary armor was now only left with a few pieces hanging, and half of his body had gone from vaporization. Fortunately, the sword in his right hand had not been completely destroyed. But now his power had been greatly reduced to the lowest level as a legendary.

The two saints behind him were even more severely hurt. Anasta and Maria had been burnt black, and now they were struggling to cure themselves.

The power of faith was draining, and their power had been reduced by one rank. They had to thank Melmax for standing in front of them to take the explosion, or the damage would have remained permanent.

As for Anthony and Augusta, who were standing further from Melmax and who were not as powerful as them, had been completely evaporated. Nothing of them remained.

“My two saints...!”

Melmax’s eyes had tears in them.

At this time, as if he felt something, Melmax looked up in the sky. He saw the pope slowly appearing in the sky, who now looked much older.

Finally, His Holiness came back! Melmax was thrilled.

Seeing the arrival of Benedict II, the grand arcanists and legendary archmages were suddenly all on full alert.

Melmax’s joy did not last long, as he sensed that a series of body explosions started happening. The bodies of twenty red robes, over a hundred cardinals, over a thousand priests and the same number of angels exploded one by one, as if the damage occurred to Paradise on Earth had reflected to them.

However, the creepy explosions did not hurt anyone around. The blood, flesh, and tissues joined each other and rose into the sky. A dark-red gate was formed in the air, on which there were messy patterns and symbols.

The gate was suddenly pushed open. A monster reached out its palm.

The look of the monster was beyond description of words. It was all messed up: It had over a hundred eyes, a dozen of heads, hands, claws and feet from countless creatures. The flesh ball was even wriggling changing constantly.

As soon as it appeared, the chaotic, evil power spread out. Its power formed a black ball, and the target was the pope!

While the Lord of Hell formed because of the sins from desire, this thing formed for no reason but just for pure slaughter and devastation.

“The Will of Abyss...” Benedict II’s face went pale.

At this time, the sun in the sky suddenly appeared, and a full moon appeared. Its target was also Benedict II!

They would kill you while you are sick and weak!

Chapter 564: Bliss

The unexpected changed stunned the legendary experts in midair. The battle that had been temporarily split because of 'Eternal Blaze' was still on hold. Everybody focused their eyes on the two demigods who were attacking Benedict II, waiting for a final result.

However, the two parties had opposite feelings. The legendary sorcerers were both delighted and worried. The Will of Abyss was known for his fervency and insanity. After the pope was killed by him, he would definitely launch an indiscriminate slaughter and destruction. Then, the area that the Congress was headquartered would suffer heavy losses. Chances were that only Douglas, Brook, Hathaway and the few other grand arcanists could survive.

After all, the pope would consider whether his battle with Douglas would affect the people of his own side. Therefore, it was easy to stall him. The Will of Abyss, on the other hand, did not have such concerns. Even if the devil lords were here, he would still kill them without any hesitation.

"This is something too chaotic to have a real name and cannot be described..." Douglas thought to himself, frowning.

'Will of Abyss' was a nickname that the ancient dragons gave to him so that they could refer to him.

If he was not defeated by the pope, the sorcerers would have to count on the Silver Moon's help.

Silver Moon Alterna, however, was best known for his lack of interest in unimportant affairs. He observed the world like a real world and barely intervened.

"I would have to go up..." Douglas would rather face the pope. At least, the pope would consider his own life cost when he performed God's Arrival, but the Will of Abyss might detonate himself and spent tremendous time recovering in the abyss. He never counted whether it was cost-effective.

The only thing that reassured Douglas was that Melmax and the Angel King had been heavily wounded. By the time Brook came back, everything would be settled.

The Grand Cardinals had nothing but fear and worries. Should His Holiness perish here, he would be the first pope who died in a battlefield, which would be a major blow to the Church's confidence. Also, if the enemy won, it remained to be seen how many of them could make it back.

Seeing the new situation, Mecantron dropped the idea of wasting several more legendary experts of the Church. After all, if another few saint cardinals and divine knights were killed, the Church would be attacked by all the enemies, like what the Magic Empire suffered in the past. His plan could only be carried out based on the Church.

"Gather in the transmission magic circles and return to Lance. I will resist them for now with God's Guard."

Mecantron's voice echoed in every Grand Cardinal's heart, making them less worried. They began to approach the massive transmission magic circles.

Whatever happened to His Holiness, the Church would survive it as long as the Lord's grace was still there! The Angel King had shown his attitude!

In the sky on the east of the city, 'Night Walker' Winston and 'Heart of Time' Kritonia were also split, watching the falling silver moon and the destructive ball hitting the pope unavoidably.

"Mr. Kritonia, do you see this? The result is already destined..." Winston would rather not fight if he could persuade the enemy to give up.

Kritonia seemed to have grown old by many years all of a sudden. He fell into sorrow and silence looking at the high sky.

The full-strength attacks of the two demigods were about to hit the pope, when new changes happened in the high sky. Overwhelming, sacred ivory light suddenly glowed inside the pope, freezing the time and space around. The silver moon and the chaos could only move forward slowly.

With a peaceful and pious smile on his face, and devoting his body and his soul, Benedict II raised his staff and chanted:

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

“You are the creator, and master.”

“After every prayer, his body would become much dimmer. In Rentato, in the cities of Holm and Brentis, in Lance... all the clerics and believers were touched again. They kneeled and followed him to pray in peace and delight:

“You are one, and everyone.”

“you are the moment, and forever.”

...

“His Holiness has used ‘God’s Arrival’ again...” Melmax, Anasta, Maria and other supporters of the pope had obvious grief and pain. They knew the price of God’s Arrival.

With His Holiness’ capability as a demigod, he was not necessarily going to be killed by ‘Silver Moon’ and ‘Abyss’ even if he were heavily wounded, but to banish the two demigods, he still chose ‘God’s Arrival’...

A clear projection of Mountain Paradise appeared behind Benedict II. The holy spirits and angels from the first to the fifth floor chanted, while light flowed out of their body and gathered towards the sixth and seventh floors.

The six seraphs on the sixth floor all crossed their hands and kneeled on the ground, as if they were praying.

In the next, the holy light surged into the top floor, paying tributes to the boundless, indescribable brilliance.

Looking at ‘Silver Moon’ and ‘Abyss’, Benedict II said solemnly:

“This is the fairest judgment from the Supreme Lord. The undead and the evils shall be purged.”

The holy light in the projection of Mountain Paradise burst out. Silver Moon glittered, and Abyss revealed the deepest and most chaotic darkness.

All colors and voices were seized. The legendary experts could only sense the things within one meter with their spiritual power.

Suddenly, a most miserable scream echoed, and everybody’s lost senses were back. Hathaway saw that the uncanny meatball had many deep cracks. Countless limbs, eyes and heads were bursting out. It flew back into the crimson gate as if it were blown by airwaves. Then, the gate quickly rotted and disappeared.

In the meantime, a silver moon rose again, but it was much more lackluster and gradually eclipsed by the sun.

The aftermath rushed towards Rentato unstoppably. Her silver eyes constricting, Hathaway said in a low voice: “Elemental Protection.”

Gold, silver, white and black spots of light gathered into a sphere and covered the city.

“Magnetic Collapse.”

As the voices echoed, another dark, twisting space was added outside of the shield of elements, which absorbed more than half of the aftermath. The rest of it was blocked by ‘Elemental Protection’.

The previous God’s Arrival had exiled the two demigods?

Although they had seen it coming, such a terrifying combat ability still made Douglas and Melmax look around gravely.

High in the sky, Benedict II was still holding his staff.

“Is His Holiness alright?”

All the Grand Cardinals felt delighted.

The delight of the legendary sorcerers who saw that Brook was back, on the other hand, was replaced by heavy pressure. How many ‘God’s Arrivals’ could Benedict II still perform?

Suddenly, as wind passed by, Benedict II’s clothes turned into broken light. Then, his hands, feet, torso and head were all shattered into spots of light and disappeared into the air, reflecting dreamy and shocking colors under the illumination of the sun.

Unpredictable hymns and music echoed, as if the God of Truth was guiding his spokesperson on earth to return to Mountain Paradise.

“His Holiness has been summoned by the Lord...”

Melmax murmured. It was the first pope who had died in a battle.

“The pope has perished...”

Douglas immediately realized what was going on. Performing a massive telepathic bond, he commanded other legendary sorcerers, “Surround and kill them!”

The Congress of Magic did not have such a huge appetite at the beginning, because Douglas was well aware of their gap with the South Church. They had never thought to fight a life-and-death battle with the Church.

Their target had always been to eliminate two to three Grand Cardinals with ‘Eternal Blaze’ that the Church did not know about. Through such a deterrence and the Dark Congress’ attack in the back, they could coerce the nobles to take their side and force the Church to end the war and evacuate from this side of the Storm Strait.

In short, they attempted to bolster peace through war!

But now that the pope had died on the battlefield, Douglas naturally changed his target accordingly. His new goal was to kill as many Grand Cardinals of the Church as possible.

.....

On the northeast of the city, Kritonia's face changed greatly after he saw the pope's demise. When Winston was about to persuade him to surrender again, he suddenly unleashed the most intense attacks that almost suffocated Winston.

Then, all the pressure on Winston was gone, as Kritonia flew far away.

"It seems that he doesn't believe he will end well if he surrenders."

"If he wanders out there, the queen will have concerns when she deals with his family members. After all, it's hard to resist the assassinations and sabotage of a legendary expert... This is also sort of a balance..."

"However, Mr. Kritonia, you're almost eight hundred years old. Even though you master the power of time, how much longer can you live? As time goes by..."

Regular legendary knights had a longevity of five hundred years. If they advanced into the third level of legendary, they could live another hundred years.

.....

The gravity around changed and made it impossible for them to move. Melmax immediately understood what Douglas thought. At this moment, only a couple of the Grand Cardinals had entered 'God's Guard' and were about to step into the transmission magic circles. The other people were still far away, including himself and Anasta and Maria behind him.

Suddenly, Benedict II's remaining staff went into a free fall. In a fabulous trace, it passed Douglas' gravitational field and Brook's magnetic field and fell to the ground.

Anasta's eyes became so deep and profound that they were like a bottomless ocean. He somehow extended his right hand and picked the staff precisely.

The seven-floored Mountain Paradise appeared again, and Anasta was enshrouded in the holy light.

Hymns and praise also surrounded him, modifying the environment to be sacred and indestructible.

“A bliss?”

“The Lord has chosen a new pope?”

Since every pope had died of natural causes, there was always enough time for a new pope to be elected and approved by the Grand Cardinals. Therefore, the case where the God of Truth directly chose a pope through bliss, as recorded on the Cannon, had never happened again after the first pope.

Anasta's blackened skin faded away. He was rejuvenated, his vibe soaring unstopably. Very soon, it was so overwhelming that even Douglas and other experts at the peak of legendary could not compare to him.

“Blessed Realm.”

The holy light spread out, drowning all the Grand Cardinals and blocking the attacks of the legendary sorcerers including Douglas, Brook and Hathaway.

The Blessed Realm was shaking and bordering on being destroyed, but it still survived until all the Grand Cardinals stepped into the massive transmission magic circles. Douglas, Brook and other legendary sorcerers, seeing that a new pope had been born, dared not push too far, either.

Although it might take the new pope ten years before he grasped ‘God's Arrival’, he was an unquestionable demigod!

Witnessing everything, Mecantron became more gloomier than ever

Chapter 565: Aftermath

As the illusionary colors faded away, the new pope, the Angel King and the captain of the Temple Knights inside the massive transmission magic circles disappeared from Rentato.

After the transmission magic circles became dim, Hathaway's usual indifferent voice was mixed with certain complicated feelings as she muttered: "Elements Resolve."

Crack, crack, crack, crack. The massive transmission magic circles that had been seriously damaged under Eternal Blaze were disintegrated into elements, sinking or dispersing, never to be restored.

The facility that supported the South Church's reign was finally gone, marking that the South Church's influence has left the four countries of the straight and the north coastline.

"What a shame. If it weren't for the bliss..." Oliver felt regretful that the result could've been better.

Atlant was barely helpful because illusions and curses that he was good at were useless under 'Eternal Blaze'. However, he couldn't have looked more at ease. Closing his eyes, he smiled, "Oliver, greed is a flaw that other people will make use of. We have secured the control of this side of the Storm Strait without losing any of the seventeen legendary sorcerers, and our strength has been significantly increased after the six legendary knights join us. Are you still dissatisfied?"

His words were not ungrounded, because 'Master of Transformation' Erica, 'Monarch of Fate' Hull-Chulia, 'Lord of the Undead' Vicente, and 'Hammer of the Void' Bedrenka had all returned. 'Night Walker' had approached, too.

As a result, the legendary forces at the Congress' disposal amounted to twenty-three, outnumbering the Dark Congress which had nineteen legendary experts. Also, it was much more united than other forces. Even when it only had eighteen legends, it was considered to be an organization better than the Dark Congress, because vampires and werewolves hated each other's guts, and the ancient dragons were too proud to bother any species other than vampires.

In the meantime, the North Church only had fifteen legends, and only the pontiff was at the peak of legendary. It was weaker than the Congress of Magic, but there were another twelve legendary knights in the northern kingdoms and duchies. All in all, it was stronger than the Congress of Magic in the past, but because of their lack of experts at the peak of legendary, they were not as good as the Congress now.

Therefore, the Congress of Magic became the well-deserved second most powerful force.

Before Oliver replied, he saw 'Innovator' Davey return with a legion of Golems. He was a slim, sluggish 'young man' that was only enthusiastic when he saw the gadgets he created.

In a bitter smile, Davey said, "Stone escaped."

Then he added, "I was too shocked by the pope's demise. He ran before I came back to myself. Half of the Knights of Grail were controlled by me."

"The Knights of Grail will be transferred to Natasha as per our promise. She'll ask Richard to transform them into royal knights. If they refuse, then..." Douglas had little mercy for the enemy. He turned to the other side, "Oliver, you will hunt Stone with Davey. He may be too far away to be caught now, but you can still add to his pressure so that he doesn't sabotage everything on his way."

"Understood." Oliver was regretting that he did not kill a Grand Cardinal in person just now. Excited, he left with Davey.

The sky of Rentato became quiet, as if God's Arrival and Eternal Blaze just now were only illusions.

Douglas sighed in relief and broke the silence. "I estimated that we would lose one or two legends in the operation, but we have to thank Sard. If he hadn't consumed Benedict II's first God's Arrival, 'Silver Moon' and 'Abyss' would've waited for us to do so."

"Even though the Dark Congress might not succeed, the Church had lost Anthony, Augusta, Sard and Beaver. After Anasta became the new pope, it remains to be seen if the other three saint cardinals would return to the Holy City. The South Church has suffered heavy losses."

"I hereby announce that Project Mushroom Cloud has succeeded!"

The postwar silence was dispelled by Douglas' announcement. For the sorcerers, it meant that they were no longer worried about the night watchers and the enemy next to their headquarters.

Seeing that the atmosphere was enlivened, Douglas chuckled, "Hathaway, ask the sorcerers in the Holm branch to help Richard include them into the new church. Later, we can study the divine powers with the Holmish Church."

Hathaway nodded and reminded the sorcerers through ancient messaging methods, because the electromagnetic environment was still rather disordered.

Then, Douglas looked at Vicente, Holt, Erica, Atlant, Hellen and Hull-Chulia and said, "Fernando and I tolerated the Hand of Paleness, the Will of Elements, the Moonsong League, the Family of Sorcerers and Cabin of Palmeira within the Congress exactly because we hoped for today to come. Your infiltration in your respective countries was successful. I hope that you can defend your territory in the future and do not let the Church or other enemies get things their way."

"My only requirement is that the chair and the vice-chair of the branches must be appointed by the Highest Council."

Douglas proposed the requirement after the triumph while acknowledging the few organizations. Therefore, Vicente and other legendary sorcerers did not object. They were the members of the Highest Council themselves, too.

“Atlant and I will take turns to watch over the Duchy of Calais.” Erica expressed her attitude first, followed by other legendary sorcerers. They divided different areas, like ‘parishes’ in the past.

At this moment, ‘Night Walker’ Winston received a message from the nobles. Knowing their choice, he said with a smile, “Holm is the safest place. I can foresee that my job will be easy.”

In the new situation, the tradition that sorcerers could not enter the Nekso Palace was naturally abandoned. As a result, Hathaway and Davey could take care of the defense of the Nekso Palace while watching over the Will of Elements and the royal magic tower of Holm.

After the brief meeting, Hathaway and Winston reached the Parliament of Nobles, because certain things were still unresolved.

Sheathing the Sword of Truth, Natasha looked at Winston and said, “Mr. Winston, where is Mr. Kritonia?”

“He refused to cooperate with the Congress and escaped from Rentato.” Admitted Winston honestly.

Duke Kritonia’s face immediately became pale, but he also felt lucky that his ancestor at least did not die.

Natasha turned around and looked at the nobles. “Now, I request a trial on a murder case targeting Patrick, the former prince.”

Most nobles looked at her, stunned, not knowing what happened. Duke James was rather worried. Was it finally coming? But Kritonia was still alive!

With the test reports in her hands, Natasha said, “This is the flesh from my uncle Patrick. According to the examination of his cells, the age of his death was at least two years older than his actual age. So, I have reason to believe that Prince Patrick was murdered by accelerated time!”

The murderer was obvious between her lines. Duke Kritonia shook his head in panic, “I don’t know anything. I really don’t.”

Natasha looked at Duke Rex instead of him. “Three people witnessed everything in the Nekso Palace. One was Sard, one was Kritonia, and the last was you, Duke Rex. So, I propose that Duke Rex is to cooperate with the sorcerers and the clerics in their investigation.”

With a bitter smile, Rex shook his head. “That’s unnecessary. I admit that Kritonia did that under the late king’s command. I was an eyewitness and the perjurer.”

“What? My grandfather?” Natasha found it more or less unacceptable.

The other nobles looked the same.

Duke Rex smiled miserably, “The late king had always wanted to rejoin the embrace of the Saint Truth. The prince and him were...”

He did not go on but sighed, “As a noble, I’ve been suffering because I didn’t do anything when my liege was murdered. I feel relieved after the confession. I will answer for my mistake with my death. Your Majesty, I hope that you lead Holm to prosperity.”

Before the two legends could do anything, Duke Rex’s eyes lost colors, and he collapsed on his seat.

Natasha slightly sighed. “Duke Rex’s crime is not severe, and he has answered for it. So, the punishment for the Frenburg family is that their title will be lowered to count from duke. Is there any objection?”

Rex had already died, and the punishment was not severe. Therefore, both the liberals and the conservatives agreed with it and passed the proposition.

In the next, Natasha looked at Duke Kritonia and said, “There is enough evidence that proves Kritonia’s involvement in the murder. Is there anything you want to say?”

Duke Kritonia swallowed and struggled to say, “He did it on his own. I knew nothing. Nobody in the family did.”

The other nobles suddenly grew anxious, fearing that Kritonia would be on a rampage if the queen was too radical, in which case both she and her friends and subjects would be in great danger.

Natasha smiled, “According to the law, Kritonia will be hanged, all the titles of the Kritonia family will be removed, the fiefs and properties will be recalled, and the main family members will be imprisoned for ten years. What do you think?”

She did not propose an exile, because it would only make them reunite with Kritonia in the northland.

It was the fairest judgment that raised no objection. The only problem that was Kritonia, the culprit, hadn’t been captured yet.

Natasha drew the Sword of Truth and declared: “I will execute Kritonia in person!”

It was a goal she set for herself in front of overwhelming strength.

She could’ve been more rigorous about the Kritonia family, but she understood that she had a father, a partner and a family. Also, as a knight, she did not believe in guilt by association.

At this moment, Richard walked in and said to Natasha, “Your Majesty, cardinals and bishops have been sent to other cities of the realm to gather the clerics. Here are a few bills that I want the parliament to pass. After all, the new church will be highly integrated with the nobles.”

“Copy the files and show them to the nobles.” Natasha nodded.

After receiving the files, the nobles browsed through them and discovered that they were entitled to a lot of religious rights. Therefore, they passed it without much hesitation. Duke Solefen, the new president of the parliament, announced it for them:

“... The queen, our sovereign lord, her heirs and successors, kings of this realm, shall be taken, accepted, and reputed the only supreme head on earth of the Church of Holm; and shall have and enjoy, annexed and united to the imperial crown of this realm, as well the title and style thereof, as all honors, dignities, prominences, jurisdictions, privileges, authorities, immunities, profits, and commodities to the said dignity of the supreme head of the same Church belonging and appertaining ¹ !”

...

After everything was over, rarely-seen fatigue and sorrow appeared on Natasha’s face. It was an unacceptably cruel thing that her grandfather ordered to kill her uncle.

As she walked out of the Parliament of Nobles, Natasha blinked her eyes when she saw the handsome man who was wearing a double-breasted suit. She walked to his front in a hurry and hugged him gently despite the surprised nobles behind her, dissolving her negative feelings with his warmth. Then, she joked in a low voice: “From today on, those who do slanderously and maliciously publish and pronounce that the queen should be heretic or question the legitimacy of her marriage will be guilty of high treason.”

.....

On the opposite side of the Stuart, in Stuart, where part of the low-rank clerics gathered, the intense stink of sulfur spread out.

A fuzzy shadow looked at Holm and shook its head. “This monster...”

Since the Angel King used his identity as his cover, he could also develop under the Angel King’s name and give a warning to the guys of the Congress of Magic.

Chapter 566: Holy Name

Chapter 566: Holy Name

Inside ‘Thunder Hell’, in Fernando’s secret chamber...

The amulet of life suddenly turned transparent and glowed, and a section of bloodstained intestines wriggled, split and grew.

It took an entire hour before the Lord of Storm became what he used to be like, and another two hours for him to return to the third level of legendary.

After putting on his usual blood-red magic robe and embedding a weird false eye to his left eye socket, Fernando finally turned on the node of ‘Thunder Hell’ that connected the outside world. It was not because he did not trust Douglas, Hathaway or Lucien, but because of the basic wariness of a legendary sorcerer who had lived a thousand years.

No more than half a minute after the node was opened, the transmission magic circles glowed, and Lucien arrived at ‘Thunder Hell’.

“So soon?” Fernando laughed wickedly. “I thought that you were going to ‘celebrate’ with Natasha.”

Even though Lucien had been quite used to his teacher’s banter, his face was still red. “Prince Patrick was killed under the late king’s order. Natasha was not in the best mood because of that. I comforted her for a while. Then, the King of Nightmare sent Grand Duke of Orvarit over. They hadn’t seen each other for a while, and I was wondering how you were recovering. So I came here.”

“What’s to be worried about? I can fight another battle with the saints.” Fernando revealed his stormy vibe again. Then he shook his head, “Such things are not strange in the royal families. That little girl should’ve seen it coming.”

Seeing that Lucien was casual and could even comfort Natasha inside the Nekso Palace, he naturally knew that the brief war had been over with a satisfactory result. So, he was not in a hurry to ask.

Lucien, however, still looked at Fernando in worry. “Master, why do I feel that you are even more heavily wounded than the Holy Avenger was? You seem to be one step lower now, right?”

The moment Fernando revealed his vibe, Lucien sensed that something was not right.

“The wound on the soul somehow spread to the physical side, but it’s only temporary. I’ll recover in one to two years.” Fernando suddenly grew angry, “While Melmax was stronger than me, I couldn’t have been more heavily wounded than he was if I were in the complete state! I was only wounded because I didn’t bring my legendary items, and my puppets, mirrors and such were used to deal with the five saints.”

That was why he was confident to escape even when he was faced with the pope. After all, he had many legendary items and life-preserving legendary magics.

According to the demise of many legendary sorcerers, the Magic Empire concluded many things that could not be explained with current arcana theories. For example, the Sword of Truth could directly slay the soul, and the attack of pure energy might affect the pieces of soul inside the resurrection device after it destroyed the original soul. If the energy were even greater, and the sorcerer was not defended, they might even be completely obliterated.

The ancient sorcerers had named it ‘causality damage’, which was similar to part of the curses. As for what the fact was, nobody had figured it out yet.

The Highest Council’s opinion regarding the center of Eternal Blaze’s explosion was that the massive energy would disrupt the causality line. That was why they diminished the energy of the attack, fearing that Fernando would be killed along the way.

Lucien was not convinced by the explanation, but he couldn’t think of any other reason yet. He was just an amateur in the studies of the soul.

“Yes, of course.” Lucien knew his master to be a proud sorcerer who barely complimented other people. Naturally, he hurried to nod and change the subject, “Speaking of which, the Congress has really used all the stockpiles to trap the five saints. We may not be able to do the same thing again in the future.”

The one-time items such as puppets and mirrors were essentially legendary scrolls. They were much rarer than alchemical items of the same level. Even the Congress of Magic, which was best known for their alchemy, had only three of them, which all belonged to the legendary sorcerers. The puppets were from Douglas, and the mirrors were Fernando’s collection.

“To keep the losses minimal, other than thorough planning, the most important thing is that you must not be petty about items and scrolls. If you don’t want to pay the money, you have to pay your life!” Fernando appeared rather resolute, but the storm in his eyes betrayed him. “If I didn’t have the mirror and the puppets, I would’ve brought the Robe of Dominance and sacrificed it to stall the five stains, but then, the Congress would have to compensate for my loss with a legendary item.”

Basically, only legendary experts had legendary items, but the Congress had organized many operations to explore the demiplanes of the ancient sorcerers, excavating the items of the legendary sorcerers who died in accidents.

The legendary items and those crafted with the rare materials from the relics belonged to the Congress. Whoever made special contributions or gathered enough wealth could trade for them. The members of the Highest Council could also borrow one of them when they were out on an adventure.

There were four such public legendary items, which were too expensive even for the legendary sorcerers. As for special contributions, only two kinds were acknowledged. One was the sacrifice that Fernando described, and the other was a paradigm-shifting theoretical system. That was how Fernando earned his Robe of Dominance.

A hundred years ago, when a new grand arcanists emerged at the same time, the Congress almost ran out of legendary items. As more and more rare materials were obtained from the alternate dimensions, the Innovator and the Alchemy Master each created one to make up for the gap.

Lucien had a deep understanding about the use of money again. While the Church was much wealthier than the Congress, things were the contrary in the field of alchemy.

Fernando asked about the result of the battle. “How many of the five saints died? What’s the final result?”

Lucien briefly described the result. Fernando listened and snorted, “Had it not been for Melmax, the four saints would’ve all died.”

After Lucien finished, Fernando slightly frowned and said, “We didn’t lose any of the legends, which was great, but it was quite weird that the new pope arrived at the level of demigod all of the sudden. If the pope did receive the favor of the God of Truth, why didn’t he kill all the sorcerers on the spot? Since he already bequeathed a bliss, it shouldn’t have been difficult to launch a punishment.”

In the past, the popes all died of natural causes, and they had plenty of time to select and train their heirs. Even so, it would take the new pope’s one year before they could become demigods.

“Huh, if the pope is really the spokesperson of the God of Truth on earth who can receive the bliss, what about the North Church and the Holmish Church? Why can they also perform divine powers? Why can the pontiff use ‘God’s Grace?’” Lucien also expressed his questions.

Thoughtfully, Fernando said, “I just realized that something was wrong. Since the new popes would only be at the peak of legendary in one year after their inauguration, why did the three demigods never try to seize the opportunity in the past hundreds of years? The defense of the Holy City could resist one demigod but certainly not two.”

Lucien shook his head. If they asked the Silver Moon such a question, there was definitely not going to be any answer.

.....

In the Bright Hall in Lance, the Holy City...

Anasta, who hadn't been officially inaugurated, stood before the remaining Grand Cardinals and said grievously, “The Congress of Magic conspired with abyssal devils and attempted to destroy the world. Thankfully, His Holiness sacrificed himself and crushed the Will of Abyss, saving the pure spirits. I will carry on his last will and eliminate the evils completely!”

That was their official statement on the event. Now that the four countries of the straight and the north coastline had been lost, they had to ensure that their base was steady, and nothing could please the believers more than a pope who sacrificed himself to save the world.

Looking around him, Melmax felt sorrowful. Of the eight saints, two had perished, one had betrayed and died, and one had become the pope. Only half of them were left. As for the regular saint cardinals, one had perished and three went missing, meaning that there were only sixteen Grand Cardinals left now. Thankfully, the Angel King prepared to stay on earth for now to help the Church survive the difficulties.

“We will certainly carry on His Holiness’ last will and eliminate the evils!” The Grand Cardinals drew crosses on their chest and replied at the same time in grief, “Only Truth lives forever.”

Anasta’s voice became slow and solemn, “We have suffered tremendous losses, but we must not lose confidence because of that. This is a test of the Lord, and we will accomplish the final victory with the grace of the Lord. Melmax, you will go find Torrens and other saint cardinals and tell them that, as long as they would like to repent, the Lord will pardon them. They were only on the wrong path because of Sard’s trick, and they can still return to the Lord.

This is the Lord's grace."

Now that he had invoked Lord's grace in front of the Grand Cardinals, it meant that Torrens and other saint cardinals had truly been pardoned. Even if he intended to go back on his words, he had to consider whether or not it would chill all of the Grand Cardinals. Also, Sard's last trump card was 'Will of Abyss'. Those three saint cardinals couldn't have known much about that.

In appreciation, Melmax said in a low voice, "As the Lord wishes and your command."

Only by uniting the majority could the Church recover from the hit.

"I am still not the pope yet." Anasta smiled and walked to the stairs.

There were only seven stairs in total. When Anasta stepped onto the first stair, the hallowed and unpredictable hymns echoed.

When he stepped on the second stair, the vague holy light sprayed down, making the Bright Hall even brighter.

After his third step, countless angels made of light spots appeared and surrounded Anasta.

After his fourth step, the whole Holy City of Lance was enshrouded in holy light. All the clerics and believers knelt on the ground and prayed: "...Your kingdom come, your will be done, on earth as it is in heaven."

After his fifth step, the projection of Mountain Paradise seemed to have appeared in the sky.

After his sixth step, a beam of sacred light illuminated Anasta directly.

After his seventh step, Anasta, whose back was towards everybody, had an extremely pale face, and his left hand was shivering beyond his control as if he were too old and weary, but everything was soon back to normal. He turned around and raised his staff high towards the many Grand Cardinals.

At this moment, a grave and sacred voice descended from somewhere high and unknown:

“You will be given the holy name ‘Benedict’!”

Anasta drew a cross respectfully and spoke with a voice echoing inside the entire Holy City:

“Henceforth, I will be Benedict III!”

Chapter 567: Benedict III's Target

Of the Grand Cardinals on the ground inside the Bright Hall, besides the legends such as saint cardinals and divine knights, there were also about ten level-nine clerics. They were also Grand Cardinals, and they were talents that the pope and the legendary experts had the highest hope in. They were either leading a small parish or managing different affairs in the Holy City, like the six ninth-circle archmages in the Highest Council of the Congress of Magic.

After Anasta solemnly announced that he was Benedict III, Philip, a level-nine bishop, felt that his mind was clear and forgot there were any other things in the world, when he heard the beautiful hymns and touched the peaceful light. While feeling moved, he felt that a light illuminated in his heart. Then, the light gradually expanded into a projection of a seven-floored Mountain Paradise.

The shadow of a six-winged angel flew out into Philip's heart of belief, subliming his soul.

Inside the Bright Hall, Philip was surrounded by a layer of flowing, incessant ivory light. His vibe soared exponentially, turning the environment clean and holy.

Witnessing it, Benedict III put on a sincere smile. "This is the Lord's grace. We now have one more brother and one more companion to purge evil!"

Melmax understood that Philip had finally 'seen' the projection of Melmax in his mind when the voice of the Lord arrived, and that he had advanced into a saint cardinal.

Inside the holy light, Philip's soul became clear from inside to outside. He raised his head, his eyes pure and delighted, and he drew a cross on his chest. "Only Truth lives forever."

"Welcome, fellow. Let's work harder to make the Lord's kingdom on earth as it is in heaven." Saint Melmax, Saint Maria, Auden and other Grand Cardinals all congratulated him.

Benedict III's had much more grey hair than a moment ago. He said peacefully and firmly, "The Lord's grace has never diminished. We will survive any crisis eventually."

"Melmax, your mission to search for Torrens is now transferred to Auden, and you will lead one Grand Cardinal and part of the ascetics to Aalto to reinforce Philibell and Beliel. Danisos has been disobedient. Maria, you will go to the north with two Grand Cardinals, in case the heretics invades the south. Kati, you will bring two Grand Cardinals to Stuart and reorganize the defense in the Storm Strait with the assistance of the legendary knights." Kati was another female saint.

Because there was no need to defend the four countries of the strait and the north coastline, and they had the assistance of the legendary knights, the Church still had enough hands and did not have to abandon too much territory in the alternate dimensions.

Melmax agreed with the plan. Although the legendary experts of the Church would be focused in the Duchy of Orvarit, the Holy Heilz Empire, Stuart and a few important alternate dimensions, making the Holy City of Lance and the central area undefended, there was still His Holiness, the Angel King and the newly-advanced Philip. Nobody could attack the city abruptly.

After the situation was settled, they would be able to restore the previous practice. Only one or two legendary Grand Cardinals would be left in those places for defense with local legendary knights. The rest of them would be focused in Lance for timely reinforcement and attacks.

Thinking for a moment, Melmax asked, "Your Holiness, Grand Duke of Orvarit is gone. How are we going to deal with the Violet family?"

Benedict III shook his head. "It's Natasha's personal action. Punishing the Grand Duke of Orvarit is fine, but striking the entire Violet family might anger the nobles and worsen the situation. So, you and Milton will choose someone from the Violet family to succeed the title."

“As you wish.” Melmax did not object. He, too, did not want the family known as ‘Shield of Truth’ to abandon the South Church like the family of ‘Sword of Truth’, which would panic everybody.

As Benedict III sent out orders and the Grand Cardinals were dispatched to local places, the dangerous situation after the South Church lost the territory on the side of the Storm Strait, four legends, three saint cardinals and six legendary knights were gradually stabilized, and the Dark Congress missed the chance to bite the Church hard due to their internal strife yet again.

With Philibell, Milton and Beliel defending the place with the northern fortress and the divine power circles of Aalto, Danisos could not secure a victory on his own even though he was at the peak of legendary. There were also conflicts within dragons, and many of them were sleeping. Dracula, on the other hand, was too busy hunting a werewolf prince to bother the Dark Congress.

After Ines returned to Lance and Torrens, ‘Angel of Wisdom’, joined the North Church, the Congress of Magic’s ‘Mushroom Cloud’ seemed to have died out. With one demigod, two top legends (the Angel King and Melmax), three level-three saints, fifteen legends and thirteen legendary knights in other countries, the South Church remained the strongest force, but its gap between the North Church and the Congress of Magic had significantly been narrowed.

.....

After he returned to the late pope’s library, Benedict III waved his hands, hinting for the few cardinals to leave. He sat on the chair and looked at the new picture: “Benedict II, 602-824.”

Suddenly, his face became pale again, and both of his hands were trembling beyond his control. His vibe dropped and rose many times before it was finally stable, but his hair seemed even greyer and his eyes even dirtier.

“‘Bliss’ is truly hard to bear...” He heaved a sigh.

After he recovered, he looked at the room where Mecantron, the Angel King, was at, as if he could see him through all the divine power circles and walls.

Mecatron, who was as gorgeous as a female, stood next to the window. His long gold hair had dimmed a lot.

He suffered heavy wounds from Eternal Blaze and the recoil of 'Paradise on Earth'. He coughed every now and then, vomiting gold blood that was as intense as clusters of energy.

However, such wounds were not fatal at all for the Angle King. He was recovering at a visible speed.

Benedict III moved his eyes back and put on an uncanny smile.

Then, he stood up and walked to the cabinet of important files. Finding the column that was named 'Douglas', he drew many files from it and read them again: "The target does not seem to reject my speech..." "He often feels lost..." "He is perhaps vacillating..."

"—By Artil."

Reading those files, Benedict III took out the report of 'latest arcana theories' from the column of 'Congress of Magic', trying to understand the description on the special theory of relativity in it. He said in a low voice:

"Although Artil is not around to influence him, it is evident that his motion system has encountered great problems. Perhaps, he is even more lost right now. I should find a chance to talk to him..."

.....

In Antiffler in the Holy Heilz Empire...

Inside the royal palace, Rudolf II suddenly raised his head in his room of prayers. Eighteen pairs of dreamy wings were unfolded behind him, as he said in both confusion and delight, "Is he wounded?"

Recalling the feeling, Rudolf II closed his eyes, turning unpredictable and hallowed.

.....

In the frozen World of Souls that did not have any sound or additional color, Rhine's red coat was rather eye-catching.

Walking in the disordered shadow of Rentato, he said to himself solemnly, "Where did the thing inside Sard's body run to?"

.....

After he left "Thunder Hell", Lucien returned to the Atom Institution, only to discover that Lazar, Annick and his other students were both scared and happy.

"Master, why did we suddenly declare war on the Church?" Allyn had been spinning like a ball under the energy storm of 'Eternal Blaze' after losing most of the momentum, which was a more terrible experience for Heidi than when she passed the Storm Strait on a boat. Her face was pale because of vomiting, and her voice was weak.

Lucien smiled, "Such a thing certainly needs to be kept confidential. There are a lot of spies in the Congress."

Their families had been moved to Allyn, so the students were all overjoyed after they were back to themselves, announcing that they could finally travel in Rentato and other places. As Lucien's students, they did not even dare to leave Allyn before they reached the third circle.

Then, Heidi, Katrina and other students asked about the legendary battle just now, and Lucien told them the things he knew frankly.

"Master, did you kill many level-nine clerics? Were there Grand Cardinals?" Katrina was rather confident in her teacher, who had escaped from the Demigod-lich when he was only in the sixth circle!

Lucien shook his head. "How could I join a legendary battle? I only helped Nekso Palace in the Nekso Palace."

Because he was too weak, he barely contributed to the plan of operation, except that he informed the Highest Council that Nekso Palace could directly contact the pope. Therefore, those old foxes soon drafted a Plan C.

Natasha's speech that she used to convince the nobles, on the other hand, was written by him. On the premises that she reserved the veto right and the levy right on the nobles' dominions, she actually did not compromise as much as it seemed.

"Master, you will become a legend soon enough." Chelly, having received Lucien's help, adulated him in a joyful mood.

Lucien did not say anything else. There were many things that needed to be addressed. Therefore, he surpassed them and entered his own office.

"Layria, did you see the additional iron ring on master's left hand? Hehe, perhaps he won't be single any longer any soon." Heidi observed keenly and remarked.

Then, Layria also realized it. "'Element', the Holmish crown ring on master's right hand, is also gone. Great men are always picked first. How I envy her."

The ladies were immediately refreshed. In the spirit of gossip, they chattered nonstop.

.....

Inside the Land of Truth, Douglas received a report from the tower guard, who stated that Francois, a member of the Affair Committee and a ninth-circle archmage, had come to visit him.

Francois was an ancient sorcerer who followed Douglas to establish the Congress of Magic at the beginning. They had been close to each other. Therefore, Douglas asked the tower guard to let him in after examining him.

Chapter 568: Stars Above

In the small living room of the Land of Truth, Douglas met Francois.

Because he failed to advanced into legendary, many magic rituals that could extend the longevity by more than five hundred years were not usable for him. He was rather old, his hair sparse and grey. His skin was full of wrinkles, with spots here and there. But his blue eyes were as deep as an ocean, as if they accommodated the wisdom that had sunk in the passage of time.

“Francois, what brings you here? Are you ready for the lich transformation ritual?” Asked Douglas casually. As a member of the Affair Committee, the man should be occupied in such a moment.

Francois shook his head in a smile, “To be a lich, I will have to abandon the enjoyments and entertainments as a man. I may even become extreme and crazy because of negative energy. It really isn’t the best choice. I haven’t made up my mind yet. I’m still waiting to see if my cognitive world can be half solidified.”

“That’s a great idea. Arcana and magic have been developing at a terrifying speed over the past ten years. Perhaps, new theories or achievements that are suitable for you will be proposed soon, allowing you to solidify your cognitive world after years of accumulation.” Douglas nodded, approving Francois’ decision.

In his mind, the crazy development of arcana began with Felipe’s studies on cell memories and Lucien’s submission of the periodic table. He seemed to have foreseen two new legendary sorcerers. Therefore, when Vicente tried to get Felipe away from the Demigod-lich’s incident, he agreed with it and let it pass.

Francois smiled. “Mr. President, it’s true that new theories or achievements that can break my bottleneck will arise soon, but they are also very likely to break my head, especially if they are from Lucien Evans, the Headcrusher.”

Douglas shook his head with a smile, knowing that Lucien was already ‘notorious’ among the sorcerers. “The advancement he brought forth hasn't been fully revealed. Perhaps, you will see the value of his new theories in three, five or ten years."

Francois said in a smile, "Like 'On the Electrodynamics of Moving Bodies and Mass-energy Equation'?"

Douglas smile was gradually gone. He said at a loss, "Yes."

Francois continued, "When I saw the paper, I felt that my confidence was destroyed. It was not because I was shocked at Lucien Evans' talents, but because I was suspicious about myself and the arcana system in the past hundreds of years."

"Mr. Douglas, I've been following you since the end of the War of Dawn. We established the Congress under the suppression of the Church. Your gravity theory and your motion system were the lighthouses that guided me. But right now, one of the two lighthouses has been announced 'wrong'. I really don't know what to believe now. I'm like a boat in a storm, with nothing but darkness before my eyes."

Douglas lowered his voice. "It's not wrong but a low-speed approximation of the relativistic system."

The atmosphere became weird, filled with indescribably silence and depression.

Francois looked at Douglas earnestly, "Mr. President, low-speed approximation means that you neglected too many things in your motion system, and there were too many errors. Also, don't you think that 'time is space, and space is time', 'time depends on matter and is speed's function' completely overthrow our understanding?"

"It is indeed different from our intuition. When I saw it, I also felt that my past thousand years were denied." Douglas admitted rather honestly.

Honesty had always been his attitude towards arcana problems.

Francois said with a heavy mind. "Perhaps it was because our studies were too superficial and too far away from the truth.

Perhaps, when we really approach the ‘truth’, we may discover that it is the opposite of what we believe it.”

“That’s true. The more I study arcana, the more ignorant I realize I am, on time, space, mass and energy or even regarding gravity that I’m best at.” Douglas revealed confusion again.

Francois heaved a sigh. “The truth of this world is beyond our imagination. Too many questions can’t be answered, and more and more things point at the same thing. What’s the nature of gravity? How did it appear in the beginning? If your astronomical motion system works, what’s the initial force that made the planets spin?”

“That’s exactly what I’m confused about. Where’s gravity from? How does it spread? How was it created at the beginning? The more I know, the more lost and scared I am. Perhaps I’ve been wrong all this time.” Douglas’ voice was unpredictable.

Francois’ blue eyes turned deep. “Perhaps, we should look for a philosophical explanation. Perhaps, there was indeed a First Cause and a source that created everything. In that case, the system of celestial body motion can be perfected and constructed.”

Douglas did not hide it from his old friend. He said depressed, “Sometimes, I can’t help but think that way. There’s probably really a supreme being and a First Cause, or the whole arcana system cannot be explained from the origin. It’s like a house without the foundation, which will collapse under the gentlest breeze.”

The atmosphere was even more weird. Light flashed in Francois’ eyes as he spoke, “That is to say, your gravity system and your motion system will collapse without the First Cause, right?”

“Yes.” Douglas added, “At least so far, but there may be other arcana explanations in the future.”

Francois said in a low voice, “Then, what’s the origin of this world? Who am I? Where are we from? Where are we going to? Can you find the answers from arcana studies?”

“Not for now. They are still in the category of philosophy.” Douglas shook his head.

Francois also shook his head. “No, they are in the category of theology. As long as you admit that there is a supreme being and a First Cause, all the questions can be answered.”

Douglas opened his mouth and was about to say something, when his pupils constricted. “Who are you? You are not Francois!”

Something emerged inside Francois’ body, making him sacred and peaceful. “You may call me Benedict III.”

“Pope... Why are you here? Where is Francois?” Douglas was not too panicked. In his own demiplane and his own magic tower, he was confident to fight the pope, the Silver Moon, or the Lord of Hell even if they came in person – on the premise that they did not have God’s Arrival. Therefore, he was not scared of the pope who had been projected into Francois’ body in a strange way.

The mysterious magic circles were activated, turning the Land of Truth outside into dark night with stars in the high sky.

Benedict III showed little reaction. He merely smiled, “Francois willingly let me project. Otherwise, it is impossible for me to be projected into an archmage’s body.”

“So, he has been working for the Church. No wonder there were so many leaks. I had always thought that there were spies in the Affair Committee, but I didn’t know it was him.” Douglas felt sad when he was faced with the spy who was of the highest level. The old friend who established the Congress of Magic with me had betrayed his dream and joined his nemesis in the end?

He also felt lucky that Project Mushroom Cloud was only known by a few trusted members of the Affair Committee, and that Francois was not among them.

Benedict III said peacefully, “Francois recognized arcana’s fundamental problem, so he returned to the arms of the Lord. Douglas, don’t deny it. You are already starting to believe in the First Cause and the supreme being.”

“Yes, I can’t deny that I’m more or less convinced by the First Cause and the supreme being.” Douglas replied expressionlessly.

In delight, Benedict III said, “Very good. If you are willing to be baptized, you will be the First Saint of the Church and the pope later. You will know the secrets of demigods and receive eternal happiness.”

Douglas suddenly chuckled. “Just because I believe that doesn’t mean that I will worship the God of Truth.”

“What? Are you not clear about the power of ‘God’s Arrival’? Did you not see the projection of Mountain Paradise? If you are willing to join the Church, I can reveal part of demigod secrets to you right now.” Benedict III was somewhat surprised.

Douglas pointed at the starry sky outside the window. “Benedict III, you probably have never explored space like we sorcerers have, right?”

“So what?” Benedict III did not understand why Douglas said that.

With extreme zealotry and fascination, Douglas stared at the sky. “Only after you’ve been there will you know how boundless space is, and how insignificant you, I, the Silver Moon, the Lord of Hell and the entire world are compared to it.”

“Even if I believe in the First Cause, I don’t believe that such a great being will fight for territory with us and vampires in such a small world.”

“My god perhaps will accept our prayer and pacify our heart, but the ‘God of Truth’, who launches divine power and graces directly and who encourages the Church to compete for resources and territory in this world, is nothing at all compared to the awe-inspiring, infinite space.”

Then, Douglas turned back around and looked at Benedict III.

“So, do you think that he deserves my belief?”

At this moment, the man who built the Congress of Magic from scratch fully revealed his confidence and pride.

Benedict III looked awful. Douglas was indeed lost, but he was lost in a different way.

“I want to know the secrets of the demigods, but I despise your methodology.” Douglas said with a peaceful smile. “One day, you will realize that sorcerers are not the enemies of faith; it’s just that our eyes are not as limited to this narrow place as yours.”

“The future of sorcerers lies in the boundless space, somewhere close to the ‘truth’!”

Benedict III sighed, “To be a demigod is harder than you think. Sometimes, vastness does not mean the truth; beings of higher levels and forms are. Now that you’ve refused my offer, I’ll take my leave.”

“Let Francois go with you. He contributed to the establishment of the Congress of Magic. I do not want to punish him for his doing, but he must leave the Congress.” Douglas also sighed. Benedict III was obviously only a projection. Killing Francois wouldn’t hurt him at all. In the meantime, he intended to ask Hellen, who guarded Allyn, to watch over Francois in case he sabotaged anything.

Without further ado, Benedict III left the magic tower.

When he stepped into the transmission magic circles, Francois’ body suddenly melted into blood stained with holy light. Then, drawing weird symbols, the blood shut down all the space nodes, as if Douglas had turned off the demiplane on his own.

Douglas frowned and tried to open it again, only to discover that it would take him at least two days. He was more or less surprised. “Is this a demigod spell? My demiplane can be temporarily blocked by sacrificing one projection and one ninth-circle archmage?”

He felt rather lucky again. If they had waited for the Church to attack them, such a method that could cage the top legendary sorcerers in their demiplanes could be very fatal. It meant that they would be divided and conquered. The Congress was far weaker than the Church in the first place. They would be wiped out for sure if they got even more divided.

“Thankfully, we launched the attack in advance and took the initiative. However, what is Benedict III trying to do?” Douglas did not think that he would start a war at such a moment, unless he intended to join the Congress with the contribution of annihilating the Church. Therefore, Douglas was not very anxious, albeit a bit puzzled.

“Although the previous spell was mixed with holy light, it was more like some of the unique, peculiar magics of the ancient sorcerers. It seems that the Church reaped a lot of classics when the Magic Empire was destroyed.”

Chapter 569: Malicious Purpose (3 in 1)

Chapter 569: Malicious Purpose (3 in 1)

In Allyn, the City in the Sky...

The Atom Institution paid so well that Blake was able to rent a villa with a garden in the suburbs after only one year. However, his habits did not change because he had come to Allyn, and he could not go to sleep without listening to 'Arcana Voice' and 'News of the World'.

"...This concludes the Congress' expansion in the four countries of the strait and the north coastline..."

The brisk voice of Lark spread into Blake's ears, making him, who was leaning against the sofa lazily, feel peaceful and delighted from the bottom of his heart. He was integrated into the tranquil night around his house.

Zi, zi, zi. Electric noises echoed from the magic radio. Blake looked at it in confusion. What happened? 'News of the World' should still have half a program left. Was it because of the disorder of electromagnetic signals again?

Rising from the sofa, Blake walked towards the magic radio. He was about to adjust it with his right hand, when an old voice suddenly came out from the radio:

"Mr. President, it's true that new theories or achievements that can break my bottleneck will arise soon, but they are also very likely to break my head, especially if they are from Lucien Evans, the Headcrusher."

Blake was stunned all of a sudden. Mr. President? Did he mean Mr. Douglas? Had 'News of the World' invited him, too? That would be too exciting.

The arcanists who grew up in the Congress had been taught with the president's deeds of establishing the Congress despite all the dangerous through arduous work since childhood. His gravity theory and motion system were also the classics that all the sorcerers worshiped and learnt. After hundreds of years, it was still the two pillars that supported the arcana system. 'Mathematical Principles of Magical Philosophy' was praised to be the most important masterpiece in the history of arcana and magic, and a symbol of civilization that separates darkness and ignorance from the real discovery of the world mysteries.

Therefore, for most arcanists, the president was the mental pillar of the Congress, a mountain that could not be circumvented in the field of magic, and a man who supported the sky of the arcana system. He had been admired by everyone, old and young.

"The advancement he brought forth hasn't been fully revealed. Perhaps, you will see the value of his new theories in three, five or ten years."

Yes. It was exactly the president! Both the voice and the tone suggested so!

Blake suddenly grew excited. He had the privilege of listening to Mr. President's speech indirectly through 'Allyn's Past Week' in 'News of the World', which left him with a deep impression. His easiness, generosity and his unreserved compliments for the new talents were absolutely authentic!

"This is fantastic. They have finally invited Mr. President to 'News of the World'! The only problem is, why is the interviewer an old man with such an unpleasant voice, instead of everybody's old friend, Ms. Lark or Ms. Nightingale? Their voices alone are an entertainment."

Some hilarious thoughts occurred to Blake, but he guessed that the man was Mr. President's old friend, that was why he could invite the president. The two channels had been established for several years, but none of the Highest Council were willing to participate in the talk shows.

"Like 'On the Electrodynamics of Moving Bodies and Mass-energy Equation'?"

“Yes.”

Douglas’ obviously gloomy voice came into Blake’s ears, making the smile on his face disappear.

While he very much admired his boss and the manager of the Atom Institution – Mr. Lucien Evans, it was still only limited in the fields of new alchemy and elements. He had been Mr. President’s follower when it came to the gravity theory and the motion system.

Therefore, he was partly excited when witnessing Mr. Evans disrupt Douglas’ motion system, and partly lost because the mental pillar that supported his arcana ideas suddenly collapsed. The arcana world that was clear and visionary became chaotic and obscure.

Also, the disruption of the relativistic space and time over the absolute time and space, and the mind-boggling descriptions, overwhelmed him, who began to question the whole arcana system.

If Mr. President’s motion system, one of the greatest classics, was wrong, what else couldn’t be?

Thankfully, there was still the awe-inspiring gravity theory!

...

In the broadcast room of ‘News of the World’...

‘Lark’, Samantha, had been reciting her script attentively, prepared to comment on the matter freely a while later, when the door of the broadcast room was suddenly opened.

“Something happened!” The arcanist who walked in spoke palely.

Samantha was both the anchor and the manager whom Lucien entrusted the affairs of ‘News of the World’ to. She hinted that something had happened with her eyes and asked the arcanist responsible for the broadcast to play s.

The arcanist who just entered carried a magic radio with him. He said both in confusion and panic, “Ms. Samantha, your broadcast has been cut off, replaced by a conversation between Mr. President and another sorcerer.”

“What?” Samantha knew very well that Mr. President had never been invited to the show.

She was taken aback by the unprecedented situation for a while.

The new arcanist turned on the radio, allowing everybody in the broadcast room to hear an old voice:

“... suspicious about myself and the arcana system in the past hundreds of years. Mr. Douglas, I’ve been following you since the end of the War of Dawn. We established the Congress under the suppression of the Church. Your gravity theory and your motion system were the lighthouses that guided me. But right now, one of the two lighthouses has been announced ‘wrong’. I really don’t know what to believe now. I’m like a boat in a storm, with nothing but darkness before my eyes.”

His confusion and loss stunned all the arcanists in the broadcast room. That seemed to be the best narration of the questions they had themselves in the past several months. Those who had never experienced mental meltdowns couldn’t have understood the helplessness and hopelessness in the words.

Samantha, of the school of astrology and force field, held her breath and waited for Mr. President’s answer. He had never offered any comment on the issue before.

“”It’s not wrong but a low-speed approximation of the relativistic system.”

Douglas’ voice echoed, just as everybody expected.

Different from the low-level arcanists like Blake, most of the arcanists in the room had the privilege to meet Mr. President when ‘News of the World’ was praised by him, and they could clearly tell that it was exactly Mr. President’s voice and tone. Samantha, who had visited the Land of Truth with her teacher together, was most certain of it.

But Mr. President’s answer was too plain and unconvincing, wasn’t it? It was just Lucien Evans’ quote.

“”Mr. President, low-speed approximation means that you neglected too many things in your motion system, and there were too many errors. Also, don’t you think that ‘time is space, and space is time’, ‘time depends on matter and is speed’s function’ completely overthrows our understanding?”

Yes! That’s the feeling! The arcanists agreed with him in silence. Give us a model or explanation that we can understand, Mr. President!

“It is indeed different from our intuition. When I saw it, I also felt that my past thousand years were denied.” Douglas admitted rather honestly.” Douglas’ old and gloomy voice came out.

Boom!

Most of the people in the broadcast room felt a thunder bursting out in their heart. His life over the past thousand years was denied... Completely denied...

Even Mr. President’s life was completely denied. What about theirs?

Samantha was brooding in a trance first, before she suddenly realized what was going on. “This can’t be Mr. President’s reply! This is the enemy’s scheme!”

“Brian, you go and find Lucien. I’ll ask Ms. Hellen to activate the powerful interference devices to block the electromagnetic signals from Allyn!”

It was an emergency plan that Lucien came up with before. Having been teleported from Earth, he couldn’t have neglected the possibility that the enemy could counter-brainwash the sorcerers with radios and electromagnetic signals. So, he made quite a few emergency plans.

Although only Allyn could be blocked for now, Samantha had no time to bother the branches and the local organizations!

“The truth of this world is beyond our imagination. Too many questions can’t be answered, and more and more things point at the same thing. What’s the nature of gravity? How did it appear at the beginning? If your astronomical motion system works, what's the initial force that made the planet spin?"

Samantha's hand, which was about to touch her communication earring, was frozen. It was the question that puzzled every sorcerer of the school of astrology.

What was the nature of gravity? How would Mr. President reply?

Inertia let her connect to Hellen's secret frequency while she waited for answers. She said with a voice as predictable as wind, "Ms. Hellen, the enemy's signals have hijacked 'News of the World'..."

Hellen, who was defending Allyn on the thirty-third floor, was a woman who looked like an elf of snow. Her lips were blue, but she was surrounded in a weird charm.

Hearing Samantha's words, she was not in a hurry to activate the powerful interference device in Allyn. Instead, she turned on the radio on her desk, trying to figure out who had infiltrated them in what way, so that they could be better prepared in the future.

"That's exactly what I'm confused about. Where does gravity come from? How does it spread? How was it created at the beginning? The more I know, the more lost and scared I am."

Perhaps I've been wrong all this time."

As she listened, shock and a collapse of faith appeared on Hellen's delicate and cold face beyond her control.

Other people might have suspected that the voice was fabricated via magic or divine powers, but as a grand arcanist, she knew very well that after one became a legendary sorcerer, their cognitive world would gradually melt with their soul, and their words would carry their cognitive world's influence and feedback to the real world. Even when they did not perform any magic, their voice still had a unique air, unless they disguised it on purpose.

Unless they knew the constituents of a legendary sorcerer's cognitive world, it was barely possible to duplicate and fabricate the unique feeling. Every person capable of that was the best in the fields of illusion and transformation, like the Eye of Curse, the King of Nightmare and the Master of Transformation, but why would they do such a thing when the Congress had just secured a glorious victory?

Also, two of the six grand arcanists were more or less Douglas' students: the 'more' one was Brook, the Emperor of Control, and the 'less' one was Hellen Paris, the Witch of Iceland.

'Cabin of Palmeira' was a magic group that had controlled the northland since ancient Magic Empire. In its heyday, it had three legendary sorcerers. After it was melted into the Congress, it had developed very sluggishly because they were unused to the arcana principles. Since Hellen was exceptionally talented and had unusual understanding in arcana studies, her teacher thought that she was too good for him to teach and asked Douglas to help with the teaching.

For Hellen, Douglas was like a father who supported the sky of the Congress of Magic and illuminated the path of arcana studies, but now, he was saying 'Perhaps I've been wrong all the time'. How could she not feel that her whole world and her whole life was collapsing? She was so shocked that she even forgot to implement the interferences.

"Perhaps, the voice was fabricated by a demigod..." Hellen tried to explain it.

...

Perhaps I've been wrong all the time."

Felipe was also listening to 'News of the World' in his own magic tower inside Heidler city.

At first, he also thought that President Douglas was a special guest, but he soon realized that something was wrong. However, the content of their conversation was so corruptively charming that he listened on uncontrollably.

When the founder of the arcane system, the explorer of arcana frontiers and the leader of arcanists spoke somewhat in pain that he might have been wrong all the time, even Felipe, who had always been egoistical, felt unbelievably surprised and lost, too, the brilliance in his eyes dispersing.

“Are you going to tell us that you were wrong in the beginning, when we have made it this far after all the hard work?”

Holding the red cup of wine, Felipe looked out the window. The whole Heidler city was enshrouded in the darkness of night. Lights were flickering like stars, like the unsettled mind of all the sorcerers who had heard the conversation.

Even though he was a necromancer, they still had more or less studied gravity, which seemed to contain the deepest mysteries of the world, and they still respected Douglas, who founded the Congress and the arcana system, from the bottom of their heart. His invention of calculus and his studies on geometric models made the advancement of the sorcerers of all schools much easier and less dependent on drugs and materials.

...

In the headquarters of the Will of Elements, Raventi, who was to safeguard the place tonight, looked gloomy, his face tightened, as he listened to ‘News of the World’. It never occurred to him that Mr. President would say such things!

He was in a good relationship with the Tower, and he had profound studies on gravity, too. He understood that the questions like ‘Where’s gravity from? How does it spread? How was it born at the beginning?’ were the ultimate enigma in gravity studies that could not be avoided. He had similar confusion himself.

However, how can you lose confidence and say that you have always been wrong, Mr. President?

It doesn’t matter if there are problems. We can solve them one at a time!

How is it possible to figure out all the mysteries at the very beginning?

Everybody has witnessed the development of the gravity system over the past years. The success of the artificial planets further convinced everyone of its validity. Was it not progress but retrograde?

We cannot be impatient about the problems that involve the origins. We have to walk on the solid foundation that is our current research achievements!

Mr. President, you must not lose your confidence!

If you lose your confidence, too many arcanists and even legendary sorcerers will be confused, lost and even desperate.

“”Perhaps, we should look for a philosophical explanation. Perhaps, there was indeed a First Cause and a source that created everything. In that case, the system of celestial body motion can be perfected and constructed.”

“Sometimes, I can’t help but think that way. There’s probably really a supreme being and a First Cause, or the whole arcana system cannot be explained from the origin. It’s like a house without the foundation, which will collapse under the gentlest breeze.”

The supreme being, the First Cause, and the arcana system which cannot be established without those concepts... You are not seriously trying to tell us that, Mr. President, are you?

We have been fighting the Church and the believers of the God of Truth for our entire life, only to discover that all our pride and faith depends on the God of Truth after all?

Raventi rose from his chair abruptly, his right hand trembling violently. Finding it impossible to believe that President Douglas said that, he began to identify its veracity with prophecy.

It was true...

Even Raventi, an archmage who had pursued truth and despised hypocrisy for his entire life, looked old and weak. He couldn’t believe, nor could he accept, that Mr. President would believe that a supreme being had been dominating everything, in which case the arcana system and the Congress of Magic he established would be a joke, and so would be Raventi himself, who was attached to them.

“Annonis, are you listening to News of the World? Hurry and check if Mr. President’s words are true with astrology.” Raventi remembered that he was not good at prophecies, so he hurried to contact his best friend.

...

When Samantha was petrified by Douglas’ questions about the gravity theory, an arcanist of the school of electromagnetism in the broadcast room hurried to inform Lucien, who was the person with the highest clearances that he could reach out to.

After ending the conversation with Natasha and sending his regards to Grand Duke of Orvarit, Lucien stayed in his office in the Atom Institution and continued the studies on his own magic structure and arcana studies. He felt the passion to work for his family now that they had exchanged their rings and settled their relationship.

Suddenly, Lucien’s monocle became hot.

“Mr. Evans, hurry, listen to ‘News of the World’...” A strange male voice echoed in panic, but he could not explain what was going on in his anxiety.

Lucien asked quickly but got no effective answer. He could only turn on the magic radio and set it to the channel of ‘News of the World’.

“That is to say, your gravity system and your motion system will collapse without the First Cause, right?”

“Yes.”

The First Cause? Isn’t it a concept that those theologists invented? Why is Mr. President discussing it with somebody else?

“Then, what’s the origin of this world? Who am I? Where are we from? Where are we going to? Can you find the answers from arcana studies?"

"Not for now. They are still in the category of philosophy."

Lucien realized that something was wrong as he listened on. He hurried to disconnect the communication and contacted Grand Arcanist Hellen, who was the supervisor tonight.

Beep, beep, beep. The line was busy. He could not reach out to her.

"No, they are in the category of theology. As long as you admit that there is a supreme being and a First Cause, all the questions can be answered."

Hearing that, Lucien felt more and more terrible. There was no time to contact Ms. Hellen. If anything went wrong, his teacher was always there!

"Hello!" Fernando was not in the best mood after his research was interrupted.

"Master, News of the World has been infiltrated. Somebody from the Church may be alluring Mr. President! I can't reach out to Ms. Hellen!" Lucien spoke fast.

"News of the World?" As an impetuous man, Fernando had returned to the Allyn magic tower from his demiplane and left for Hellen's library, fearing that something might happen to her.

As for Douglas, Fernando trusted him as his old friend. It would've been reasonable if his cognitive world collapsed because of the new arcana theories, but they were saying that he would worship the God of Truth and join the Church?

Did the Saint Truth, which had just been hit by one 'Eternal Blaze', really deserve his faith?

After he pushed the door of Hellen's library, he saw her mumbling to herself behind the desk. "What's gravity? What's the nature of gravity..." Fernando felt that his heart was heavy. What exactly had Douglas said that made Hellen so confused?

He believed that Hellen would never mistake somebody else's voice for Douglas'.

"Francois recognized arcana's fundamental problem, so he returned to the arms of the Lord. Douglas, don't deny it. You are already starting to believe in the First Cause and the supreme being."

The storm that surrounded Fernando came to an abrupt halt. He looked at the magic radio, as if he were looking for Douglas' reply, too.

"Yes, I can't deny that I'm more or less convinced by the First Cause and the supreme being."

Douglas' emotionless voice echoed in the library.

Hellen shut her eyes abruptly, and a drop of tear as clear as ice flowed out. The gravest sorrow was spreading out.

Fernando was stunned and then heaved a deep sigh.

"This is a recording of His Holiness' conversation in Douglas' demiplane. The greatest sorcerer also believes in the supreme being."

A peaceful, smiling voice spread out, pacifying everyone.

"If you wonder whether or not it was fake, sorcerers, you are free to check it with your prophecy and astrology."

Zi, zi, zi. The electric noises appeared again, and the regular was restored.

"Jinkela, Jinkela, the best formula! Make your harvest spectacular!"

The room was filled by the hilarious voice, but the atmosphere was more than depressing. Hellen croaked, "I didn't expect that Mr. President, who had been fighting the Church for his entire life, would believe in gods and question his own arcana theories..."

"No, that was not Douglas' style! I absolutely don't believe that someone so close to the truth of the world would believe in the crap like the God of Truth!” Fernando roared, “Hellen, you go find Douglas in his demiplane and see what happened! I’ll find Bergner and ask him to test the veracity of the conversation. The pope is a demigod. He might have methods that we cannot fathom!”

Fernando’s stormy roars woke Hellen up. Yes, suspecting Mr. President blindly without confirming the conversation was not in the spirit of arcana!

...

“Yes, I can’t deny that I’m more or less convinced by the First Cause and the supreme being.”

Clang. A transparent statue on Raventi’s desk was swept to the ground by him unconsciously, breaking into countless pieces.

Seeing the many pieces, Raventi felt that he saw the collapse of one of the pillars that supported the arcana system. An irrecoverable hole had been torn in the sky of arcana.

The magnificent, exhilarating palace of arcana seemed to have been burnt to ashes. The whole world became dark.

“No, how could Mr. President think in such a way? Why would he introduce a supreme being...”

...

In Heidler city, the wine cup in Felipe’s hands were crumbled into pieces by himself. The ever-rising moans of spectres echoed outside of his room, as if many undead creatures had lost control because of their master’s trance.

Wu!

In their sorrowful and terrifying voices, Felipe put on a self-mocking smile on his pale, sickly face. “The founder and perfecter of arcana theories and the spiritual leader of the Congress of Magic has announced that his arcana theories are wrong, and that he believes in a god that controls everything. If that is true, and if that is proved, I’m very suspicious that somebody’s head will be blown up. Even if it won't, their confidence of future advancement will definitely be struck. Perhaps, nobody will advance into legendary for a long time, and it will be barely possible for the legendary experts to improve themselves."

I may be one of the victims...

Wu!

The ghosts, zombies and mummies were screaming so desperately and painfully.

...

"If you wonder whether or not it was fake, sorcerers, you are free to check it with your prophecy and astrology."

Frowning, Lucien stepped out of his office and reached the first district on the thirty-first floor, where the Sky Radio Station was located. He had to confirm the situation before he joined his master, or he wouldn't be able to evaluate the influence of the conversation on most of the arcanists.

After he opened the door of the broadcast room of 'News of the World', Lucien saw Samantha clutching her hair and mumbling to herself, "What is gravity? Where was gravity from at the beginning..."

He looked around, only to hear even more voices of confusion:

"Does it suggest that there was really a god who gave everything a push at the beginning..."

"The gravity theory depends on gods..."

"What is gravity? What is the nature of gravity..."

"Gravity cannot be manifested directly at all. In what way is it spread..."

The arcanist of the school of electromagnetism shouted, half overwhelmed and half lost. "Don't panic, everybody. This is perhaps a recording that the Church fabricated! President Douglas will clarify everything tomorrow!”

Yes, even if Mr. President did say that, we will have to clarify that it was a slander and a lie from the Church! That was the only thing on Lucien’s mind.

“Yes, we will interview Mr. President tomorrow and ask him to clarify it before everyone.” Samantha was back to herself all of a sudden, refusing to believe what she just heard. “Lucien, you’re here? Any news?”

“This is undoubtedly not the truth. I’ll go find Ms. Hellen and visit Mr. President.” Lucien declared resolutely and eased everybody’s anxiety.

Being someone from a different world himself, it was not entirely impossible for Lucien to accept a certain god, but everything had to be founded on repeatable phenomena and experiments. Unproved things were nothing but illusions for him!

In the atmosphere of depression, sorrow, chaos and confusion, Lucien hurried to leave the Sky Radio Station and went to the library of the Witch of Iceland on the thirty-third floor.

The moment he reached the door, Lucien heard his teacher roaring, “Bergner, you’re telling me that it is true?”

“It’s not like your prophecy was never wrong! I’ll find Douglas and ask him in person soon!”

As the terrifying storm rushed to his face, Lucien saw that his teacher was completely on a rampage.

However, Lucien had nothing to worry about other things right now. He asked earnestly, “Master, did Mr. Prophet say that the conversation was true? Did the pope really go to the Land of Truth? Where is Mr. President?”

Holding back his anger, Fernando suppressed his voice and said, “Bergner said that it was something that already happened, and that nobody attempted to disrupt the traces of fate. Therefore, it was very easy for him to tell that the conversation was true. As for Douglas...” He looked Hellen, who was still an ice beauty but who seemed rather reckless – she was trying to open the portal worriedly and impatiently. “The demiplane has been blocked. There’s still no telling whether he closed it on his own or it was the pope’s doing...”

The more he talked, the more difficult it was for Fernando to hold back his urge of roaring. Nothing else mattered right now except for opening Douglas’ demiplane and finding him! Everything would still be easy as long as he was not really devoted to the Saint Truth!

Fernando was quite confident about that with his years of understanding about his friend. Therefore, he was not as lost and befuddled as Hellen.

“Really?” Lucien felt that his knowledge had been disrupted. Mr. President had always been a wise and generous senior in his heart. How could he possibly abandon his arcana theories all of a sudden?

Thinking quickly, Lucien suddenly thought of two things. “Master, ask the Prophet to run another test! This is perhaps only part of the truth. Sometimes, part of the truth is the opposite of the whole truth!”

Truth, only truth, and the whole truth – that was trustworthy information was made of.

Covering part of the truth in order to contort the fact was a trick that many people on Earth were good at. Lucien was quite familiar with it and thought of the possibility very quickly.

“Maybe, but if Douglas does not clarify it in person, many people would still be suspicious.” Fernando contacted Bergner again, not noticing that Lucien had left the room quietly.

...

Allyn loomed in the sky like a gargantuan monster. Far away from it, a black shadow was staring at it in a smile. If he were any closer, he would be detected by the guarding grand arcanist through the lock of fog.

“Your Holiness, I seem to have smelled the air of desperation and confusion spreading out from Allyn after their confidence collapsed.” The speaker was a tall, grey-haired old man, who was none other than ‘Heart of Time’ Kritonia. He sensed the reactions of the regular arcanists inside Allyn and Rentato with his special abilities. “Your plan worked out greatly. Perhaps, the Congress of Magic has been crushed without a war. I fear that they will not be able to show the hopefulness and vigorousness they used to have for a long time. This is a major blow on their ideology.”

On his left hand, an ever-changing small person was changing nonstop, in which the minds of people seemed to be gathered. Benedict III said with a smile, “In fact, the best result would be that Douglas became a saint of the Church. In that case, the Congress of Magic would’ve split and dispersed, if it did not collapse immediately. Human beings can be very strange. As soon as their confidence is gone, they will feel that they are approaching the end of the world. By then, countless sorcerers will reconsider their path.”

“It’s a shame that Douglas was too arrogant.”

“But this turns out just as good. Perhaps, a few legendary sorcerers whose cognitive world is founded on the gravity theory will lose their heads.” Kritonia chuckled.

Benedict III said, not cockily at all. “The legendary sorcerers are not so stupid. They will not believe it blindly until they ask Douglas face to face. Even though I have misled them into testing the truthfulness of the conversation instead of the completeness, they will still retain the final consciousness. The worst outcome is that they will lose confidence in the arcana system, which will make their future advancements very difficult.”

“But Douglas will be out in two days. Will he turn things around?” Kritonia was thinking to sneak into Allyn when it was in chaos to sabotage things and kill certain talents of the Congress of Magic, say, Lucien Evans.

Benedict III smiled peacefully, “As I said, human beings are strange. If he clarifies it two days later, the suspicion of most arcanists will be deep to the bones. They will only suspect his belated explanation. They won’t believe it and regard his reasons as excuses.”

“Your Holiness, it seems that you are also good at understanding people.” Kritonia adulated him.

Benedict III smiled, “This is also their fate. Before planets were discovered, Douglas’ suspicion about gravity and his tendencies towards the supreme being wouldn’t have caused such great influence. However, the artificial planet plan that Lucien Evans proposed fully convinced all the arcanists of the gravity theory. Hehe. Perhaps, he is truly the Dawnbringer.”

...

Blake did notice when he collapsed into the sofa. His eyes unfocused, his face confused, he heard nothing but humming in his ears. How could Mr. President do that? What happened to the arcana system?

At such a moment, he only remembered one person, the man who frequently disrupted the understandings in the past and who had just modified the motion system. Did he hear what Mr. President say? How was he going to reply to it?

On the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower, Fernando’s loud voice echoed passionately, “Was there really something hidden?”

“What? You can’t tell what the hidden part is? Then why do I need a Prophet?”

He knew that he was being too hard on Bergner. After all, it was done by the pope who was a demigod. However, he had always been cranky after he was agitated.

“Even if we find the hidden content, so what? Mr. President’s suspicion about gravity was not fake... Those questions do not have answers...” Hellen was still trying to open the Land of Truth.

Hearing what Fernando said, she remarked gloomily.

Fernando held back the urge to roar at her and went to her side to help her. Suddenly, Fernando looked around in confusion. "Where is Lucien?"

...

After he returned to his office in the Atom Institution, Lucien heaved a long sigh when he recalled Ms. Hellen's confusion and the many arcanists in the Sky Radio Station's questions about gravity. He copied his work in recent years from his spirit library as well as the manuscripts of Evans Geometry and tensor analysis based on that. Then, he gathered them together.

I am incapable of participating in a legendary battle, but I can make some contributions when it comes to arcana!

Picking up the pen, Lucien closed his eyes and browsed through his studies on the general theory of relativity in the past years as well as the files in his spirit library that had been unsealed. As the ideas took shape inside his head, his quill fell to the paper and wrote the title:

'A Relativistic Interpretation and Geometric Description of Gravity and a System of Relativity Under a More General Frame of Reference'

Boom! A thunderstorm suddenly burst out near Allyn!

Looking at the weather change that was only limited around Allyn, Kritonia observed rather in shock, "Is a legendary sorcerer's cognitive world shaking?"

Crack! A silver bolt of lightning illuminated the dark night!

Chapter 570: Weather Change

BOOM! BOOM! BOOM!

The three consecutive thunders made Fernando and Hellen, who was on the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower, slow down their work to open the Land of Truth. They turned around and looked out of the window, observing the lightning that were illuminating this corner of the world.

“Whose cognitive world is shaking?” Hellen’s skin was as fair as ice in the first place, and it was even paler and bloodless right now. Frowning, she commented on the weather change outside, finding it hard to believe.

It was not because the gravity theory was proved wrong, but because the problems regarding the source and nature of gravity raised the confusion of the founder of the field, who even had the idea that a supreme being was behind everything. That was why people questioned the necessity and correctness of the current arcana studies.

The blow on the arcanists depended on their attitude towards Douglas’ authority. To be more exact, the legendary sorcerers were obviously less dependent on Douglas than the ordinary people were. Brook, for example, was an expert who disrupted her teacher’s particle theory.

That was why Hellen was confused. Of all the legendary sorcerers, she was the one who respected Mr. President’s authority most, but she was not vacillating yet. Which dummy had completely lost his confidence without confirming the actual situation first?

If that was what happened, she would wonder how the guy advanced into legendary at all!

Uncontrollably anger and confusion filled Fernando’s face. “Judging from the scale and the feeling of illusion, it’s truly the cognitive world’s influence on the real world, but it is not necessarily vacillation...”

“In any case, let’s activate the defense of Allyn in case of destructive damages and in case the enemy sneaks in during the mess.” After the initial shock, Hellen gradually calmed down.

.....

In the headquarters of the Will of Elements...

Raventi was speaking to the Astrologer who lived in the Tower. Suddenly, the electromagnetic signals became messy and chaotic. Thunder was rumbling obviously.

“Annonis, what’s going on?” Asked Raventi solemnly.

Annonis replied uncertainly, “The weather two thousand meters within Allyn has suddenly changed. A thunderstorm has come...”

“Is it possible...” Raventi did not finish. Gravely, he looked at where Allyn was at and could vaguely see the silver lightning which looked like long snakes in the sky.

“I don’t think so...” Annonis understood what Raventi mean and replied slowly, his voice going down.

“I hope it’s not like what I thought.”

While watching the electric snakes soaring in the sky, Raventi informed Hathaway.

.....

Inside the Sky Radio Station, the half-panicked arcanists were shocked by the thunder, their eyes filled by the lightning. They were obviously stunned.

“Why is there suddenly a storm?” An arcanist asked in a low voice, feeling that the dark, depressing thunderstorm was exactly what was happening in his mind.

The torrential rain poured on their heart and raised unreasonable panic. Somebody comforted themselves, trying to be calm. “This is the Month of Passion. Isn’t it normal that a storm happens anytime?”

Boom!

The thunder burst out again, scaring the arcanists. Somebody blurted out, “No, this is not normal. There were no temperature and pressure changes before it!”

If it were not a normal weather change, what caused it?

The arcanists on the spot suddenly saw the lock of Allyn rising, filling all the areas with vague mist.

Together with the huge storm out there, it added to everybody’s ominous feeling.

“Don’t overthink. If there is anything, the Highest Council will take care of everything. We don’t need to be anxious.” Samantha tried to make herself sound calm.

If what happened just now was real, she believed that she would have to reevaluate the Church. It seemed that they were not so violent and reckless that they could only get things done with strength and assassination.

BOOM!

The rumbling thunder entered into Blake’s ears. Looking at the apocalyptic view outside, he said bitterly with a self-mocking smile, “Has the weather sensed the desperation of the arcanists in Allyn, too?”

.....

Inside his office in the Atom Institution...

Lucien wrote beautiful worlds with the quill in his hand:

“This paper is based on two basic premises, the first of which is equivalence principle...”

“...Through the experiments and proofs above, we can see that all the objects in a gravitational field has the same acceleration, which can be summarized as the equivalence of inertial mass and gravitational mass...”

With the manuscripts he copied and the ideas he accumulated in the past, when Lucien reached a certain paragraph, the paper that was full of words and formulas would fly to him, and he could include them in his article perfectly after the slightest modification.

In such a way, Lucien was extremely fast in writing and connecting his ideas. It didn't take long before he described the equivalence principle and the general theory of relativity. Then, he began the relativistic explanation and the geometric description of gravity.

At this moment, the analysis tools that were completed together with Levski, Milina and other Tower arcanists, including Evans Geometry and tensor, were put into use, making the content esoteric and full of profound mysteries.

In order for the regular arcanists to understand, and to dispel the confusion caused by Mr. President's speech, Lucien added a metaphorical description:

“It can be seen from the geometric model above that space is like an elastic net and the objects in it are like balls that have fallen into the elastic net. Their mass will result to the collapse of the net and the warp of time and space around. Such warping will make other balls of smaller masses on the elastic net to roll towards the ball of greater masses. This is exactly the nature of gravity – warped space-time!”

“Therefore, it is evident that the time and space we are in is not the flat time and space as intuitively described by the Tower Geometry, but a warped space-time founded on the Evans Geometry with a curvature that is greater than zero!”

Boom!

As he wrote on, stars and gravity were changing in Lucien's cognitive world. The luminosity of his Host Star of Destiny was also changing fast!

Gradually, Lucien seemed to see a shadow of a boundless starry sky, which was watching everything from high above. As the starry sky was projected into his cognitive world, countless special and complicated symbols were generated.

His cognitive world flowed fast and interacted with his soul fast, naturally outlining a magic model inside his soul.

The ninth-circle spell, Time Stop!

Boom!

The thunder outside of the window came to an abrupt halt. The lightning stopped, and the rain dispersed in all directions as if it was being blown by winds from different directions.

A layer of profound darkness enshrouded Allyn, twisting the storm, the starlight that darted in, the space and the dark night!

It was a most weird and terrifying scene!

Without any break, after describing his theories with words that common arcanists could understand, Lucien began writing ‘Einstein field equations’, the core of the entire general theory of relativity!

.....

Looking at the appalling view outside of the window where everything seemed to be twisted, Hellen said in disbelief as her eyes widened, “This is the projection of gravity...”

Fernando nodded his head, as if he were much more eased. “This is the half-solidification of the cognitive world based on the gravity theory!”

When the founder of the gravity theory just expressed his confusion, believing that it had been an out-and-out mistake and that a supreme being had been manipulating everything, a sorcerer was half-solidifying his cognitive world based on the gravity theory?

Did he not hear Douglas’ speech?

Or did he find his own path and have even more confidence in gravity?

Inside the Sky Radio Station...

Samantha and other arcanists were all shocked by the creepy scene outside. The dark and twisted space tore the storm apart and spread out vague mist, and black, world-destroying monsters seemed to be lurking in the depths of the mist, waiting for the prey with their mouths wide open.

“What’s going on...” The arcanists murmured.

Samantha thought of something. She said in both shock and delight, “An archmage’s cognitive world is half-solidifying based on the gravity theory!”

Blake, who was inside his suburb manor, was also horrified by what he saw. He had never seen such a mysterious weather before! The twisted dark night, the contorted starlight, and the broken storm – everything was like the end of the world in the bards’ tales!

“What exactly is going on tonight?” Blake said in a low voice, his body shivering slightly.

.....

Far away from Allyn, Kritonia saw that the City in the Sky seemed to be surrounded by a pitch black ball, and that both the starlight outside and the lightnings inside had uncanny contortions. He immediately had a bad feeling.

“This is...” Subconsciously, Kritonia asked Benedict III’s projection.

Slightly coldly, Benedict III said, “This is not a quake of the cognitive world, but the half-solidification of it.”

“Also, it is based on the gravity theory.”

Kritonia asked in surprise, “Did he not hear the conversation between Douglas and you?”

As the quill dropped, the equations of gravitational field was fully demonstrated on Lucien's paper.

Boom!

Lucien was completely trapped in the transcendent shadow of the starry sky. His cognitive world changed drastically, and the special and complicated symbols began to be connected into a whole!

The magic model of 'Time Stop' in his soul, on the other hand, took shape without any trouble as he advanced into the ninth circle!

Boom!

Inside the twisted black storm, illusionary darkness emerged out of nowhere, absorbing the pouring rain, the blowing wind, the striking lightning, the shooting starlight, and the whole ball that caused the weather change. They were collapsed into the horrendous darkness that seemed able to swallow everything and destroy everything!

"This is..."

Fernando and Hellen looked at the scene, slightly shocked.

"This is..."

Samantha and the other arcanists could not understand the ghastly picture at all.

"This is..."

Kritonia was puzzled again.

Although he was trying to contain himself, Benedict III still gnashed his teeth, "This is greatly different from Douglas' gravity theory! Is this the true nature of gravity?"

"Who is he exactly?"

Chapter 571: Constant Changes

Lucien's cognitive world was still changing drastically. The most obvious sign was that the vertical edge of the space began to twist, turning the space from a cube into an oval sphere, as if a twisted barrier had been added to the periphery.

In the starry space, from both the two Host Stars of Destiny and other illusionary stars, the gravity began to twist the rays of light around. The space around them turned transparent and constricted rapidly, giving everybody who saw it an illusion.

The Host Star of Destiny which looked like a black hole was even more horrifying. When it revolved to the front, all the symbols of wind, fire, water, elements, electrons and others surged at it beyond control. It was an utter mess.

The quill in Lucien's hand did not stop at all, and he gave a few prophecies and proofs according to the previous description and the equations of gravitational field:

“Based on the speculation that the mass of the sun causes the twist of space, it is possible to calculate the redundant precession of the perihelion of the Morning Star, which agrees with observation...”

“Based on the time dilation caused by the gravitational field, and subtracting the time-slowness phenomenon caused by the artificial planets, we can conclude that the time on artificial planets are faster than on the ground... which agrees with the adjustment in actual operations...”

“Rays will deviate in the gravitational field. The angle of deviation near the sun is...”

“The redshift of spectral lines...”

After that, his thick paper came to a full stop. Most of the content was from the manuscripts that Lucien accumulated over the past years after some modification.

His eyes half closed, Lucien sensed the stars in his cognitive world. They were connected to the special and complicated symbols and constructed two extremely complicated magic models. He felt that his soul and his spiritual power were entirely absorbed into it after only a quick glance, and he was extremely exhausted and fatigued.

Lucien had the same feeling once when he read ‘Astrology and Elements’ for the first time and witnessed ‘Lord of Elements’ and ‘Prophet’, the two legendary classes.

“A new legendary class...” Not delighted at all, Lucien even frowned. After the half-solidification of the cognitive world, it would be difficult to reconstruct the fundamentals. He had always planned to use quantum mechanics instead of the general theory of relativity as his foundation!

The other legendary sorcerers certainly did not have Lucien’s worries before their advancement. When they reached their level, the constituents of their cognitive world and the path they would like to take were almost fixed. Half-solidification was the last and most difficult step. If he did not have the eighth-circle strength, he might’ve failed due to the insufficient spiritual power.

Of course, after the half solidification, there was one other problem for the archmages, which was to choose a legendary class that matched their cognitive world for easier advancement. Also, constructing basic legendary magics required spiritual power and mathematical knowledge.

That was why every grand arcanist who created a paradigm-shifting theory was easier to advance into legendary than regular archmages. Their legendary class was generated directly inside their cognitive world with the feedback of the real world, and it was an almost 100% match. What they needed was the tremendous spiritual power.

Thinking for a moment, Lucien rose and walked to the cyclotron. Putting a long-prepared metal plate into the magic circle, he placed a paraffin plate behind the metal plate.

Then, while the half-solidification of his cognitive world was not completed yet, Lucien activated the cyclotron and bombarded the metal plate with Helium atomic nucleus.

BOOM! BOOM!

Due to the half-solidification of his cognitive world, Lucien had the illusion that he heard the sound of the Helium nucleus bombarding the metal plate. It was like an intense explosion.

Suddenly, the device behind the magic circle captured the traces of protons behind the paraffin plate and recorded their range and other data.

After the data was out, Lucien calculated with his powerful soul. Conservation of momentum, conservation of energy... The rays that were shot out by the protons gradually revealed their real appearance.

They were of similar masses with protons and could not be captured in the electromagnetic field.

They were exactly the neutrons that the sorcerers had been seeking since 'new alchemy' was published.

Because they were electric-neutral, they were not under the influence of magnetic field and electric field. Therefore, they could barely be discovered directly, and he had to count on similar, indirect ways!

BOOM!

This time, it was the real sound echoing next to Lucien's ears. The cognitive world had intense reactions again, and the nucleus inside finally revealed its true appearance. The protons and neutrons were combined under a certain unknown force.

The intangible and transcendent space arrived at Lucien's sensation again and interacted with his cognitive world, filling the incomplete magic models of 'atomic fission' and 'atomic fusion' quickly.

Inside the 'Sky radio station'...

Samantha looked out of the window in delight. It was truly motivating that an archmage half-solidified his cognitive world based on gravity at such a moment!

The illusionary, all-absorbing darkness gradually dispersed. The storm was weaker and weaker. The weather change came to an end.

"Which Excellency's cognitive world has half-solidified? We have to interview him tomorrow!" Said Samantha in a rarely-seen smile. Her confidence had been greatly shaken a moment ago.

An archmage whose cognitive world had half-solidified, as long as the match of legendary class was above 50%, was very likely to advance into legendary. That was why she began to address him as Excellency.

Another arcanist said delightedly and in relief, "Also, it seems that the new gravity theory is closer to its true nature than the president's. I, for one, have never seen the all-absorbing darkness in any record."

Samantha was about to answer him, when a deafening explosion burst out and shivered the whole Allyn.

Looking out of the window in a daze, Samantha saw that the dark night turned into an abyss. Electromagnetic waves were on a rampage in the sky as visible light, and a rolling fire ball at their center spread out a terrifying storm of energy.

The fireball soared and rose in a mushroom cloud. However, compared to the mushroom cloud of 'Eternal Blaze' that Samantha witnessed the other day, its head was much smaller. The dark air and the fire were dancing with each other.

"What's this?" All of the arcanists were confused.

BOOM!

An explosion even louder burst out. Samantha felt that her ears were humming, and she couldn't hear anything else.

After the explosion, a sun rose from the outside, driving away the darkness and the curses most dazzlingly!

“This is...” Blake rushed to the window from his sofa. If he remembered correctly, that was exactly ‘Eternal Blaze’ he saw in Allyn the other day!

The only difference was that it was an actual image back then but an illusion right now!

“Is it Mr. Evans? Was he behind the weather change just now?”

Inside the Tower...

Annonis, who was speaking to Raventi, found it hard to close his mouth when he stared at what was before him in stun. How could the half-solidification of the cognitive world based on gravity become based on the ‘new alchemy’?

It was an unprecedented phenomenon in the history of magic!

“Annonis, what were the two noises in Allyn about?”

“I seem to see a sun and a mushroom cloud rising in Allyn, right?”

“Hello, hello! Annonis?”

Raventi’s voice echoed, but Annonis was too preoccupied to reply.

On the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower, Fernando’s eyes widened the moment he saw the mushroom cloud. “It’s Lucien!”

“And I was wondering where he went!”

That was the legendary magic which only Douglas, Hathaway, Lucien and himself were aware of. For the other archmages, even if they could half-solidify their cognitive world with ‘new alchemy’, they would not be able to construct the model of the legendary magic due to the lack of feedback from the real world. Therefore, even if they could cause a similar phenomenon, it couldn’t have been as clear and complete!

“Lucien Evans?” Hellen looked at Fernando, surprised. “He has such a deep understanding about gravity? Also, why is the half-solidification of his cognitive world divided into two phases?”

Fernando gnashed his teeth, “How do I know? He must’ve hidden a lot of papers to himself again!”

In the sky far away from Allyn, Kritonia looked at the familiar mushroom cloud of ‘Eternal Blaze’ and asked in confusion, “How many archmages are half-solidifying their cognitive world?”

Benedict III shook his head and said in surprise, “I thought that it was an achievement when Fernando and Hathaway advanced to the peak of legendary, but it seems that it was invented by somebody else...”

When a legendary sorcerer reached the peak, their cognitive world would be completely melted with their soul. It would also trigger weather changes on an even vaster scale. However, they could hide in their demiplanes or alternate dimensions so that the enemy wouldn’t know it.

.....

In his cognitive world, the space was half-solidifying under the influence of gravity, and the elements like wind, fire and water were also half-solidifying because of the preliminary completeness of the internal structure. They burst into such an intense conflict that Lucien’s cognitive world was shaking!

“The discovery of neutron is not good enough.” Gritting his teeth, Lucien turned on the cyclotron again, except that he took out the metal plate and the paraffin plate this time and replaced them with a clear monocrystal.

Inside the cyclotron, the electrons were powered and darted out.

BOOM! BOOM!

Lucien had the illusion that cannonballs were being shot out again. Also, it was more intense than just now, as if a magnificent palace was collapsing abruptly in the crazy explosion!

For some reason, Lucien suddenly became extremely nervous, as if the simplest and deepest mysteries were about to be revealed.

The electrons hit the monocrystal and revealed a beautiful, dreamy pattern through the alchemical device. It was so shocking and unbelievable!

Looking at that, Lucien closed his eyes full of satisfaction.

It was a classic image of diffraction. As a fundamental particle, electrons revealed a diffraction image that only waves could present!

“Waves and particles, what are you significance if you exist independently without each other ¹ ?”

A quote that Lucien read in his previous life occurred to him. The vast and transcendent starry sky descended again, in a more compatible way with the real world and the cognitive world.

Inside his cognitive world, the electrons outside of the atomic structure spread out. Like a cloud that covered everything, it suppressed the half-solidification caused by gravity.

.....

Kritonia and Benedict III watched the mushroom cloud turn into a dark cloud and enshrouded Allyn with the illusionary, ubiquitous monochrome, finding it impossible to understand it.

“This is a projection of what?” Kritonia expressed his puzzlement again.

Benedict III shook his head but did not reply.

Fernando, Hellen and Samantha watched the same scene from the Allyn magic tower, equally unclear what projected it. However, the cloud was soon gone, and the weather change came to a complete end.

“It should be a regular projection during the half-solidification based on ‘new alchemy’. It may not necessarily be associated with existing theories.” Samantha muttered to herself, soon dropping the ambiguous and brief phenomenon behind.

Also, she had vaguely guessed who it was!

Seeing that the weather change stopped, Fernando said to Hellen, “I’ll ask Lucien to participate in ‘News of the World’, introduce his gravity theory, and announce the half-solidification of his cognitive world, so that everybody can be stabilized from this incident.”

“You will keep trying to open the Land of Truth.”

Chapter 572: Gratitude

The changes in the cognitive world came to a full stop. Except for the additional special magic models and symbols, it seemed no different from the past. However, if one were to observe it more carefully, they would discover the curves at the edge of the world and around the stars. Also, the light spots of elements everywhere were much clearer. The protons and neutrons were restrained by an uncanny force, and the electrons around them were in the shape of a cloud. When they were observed, however, they were immediately reduced into particles.

As the background, the other three fundamental forces had minor changes, too. The electromagnetic waves and light were connected to ‘wind’, and the uncanny force that restrained the atomic nucleus glimmered with ‘water’.

The internal members of the atom gathered in groups into different magic symbols, turning into the models of ‘Atomic Fission’ and ‘Eternal Blaze’, two legendary spells. The two models joined with even more complicated symbols into a dizzying cubic pattern.

“Is this the legendary class based on ‘new alchemy’?” Lucien observed with interest. Because he hadn’t really entered the realm of quantum mechanics yet, there were no corresponding legendary spells, and it was still the ‘fission’ and ‘fusion’ like before.

The fundamental legendary magic was the most basic skill of a legendary class. They were shorter and easier to release, and they were much more powerful than the non-fundamental legendary magics. For a legendary class, there could only be two fundamental magics at first, but as they dug deeper into the field, the number of such magics might grow.

For example, the advanced fundamental magics of ‘Demigod-lich Howling’ were ‘Demigod-lich Howling’ and ‘Life Ritual’, and those of the Lord of Storm were ‘Furious Storm’ and ‘Storm Barrier’.

Lucien’s legendary class based on ‘new alchemy’ was unique in that neither of the two fundamental legendary magics depended on his demiplane. However, 'Eternal Blaze' could only be performed at least in the level three of legendary.

Lucien found two pieces of powerful paper made of elvish rinds, the materials to make advanced scrolls. Then, he copied the new legendary class and its two fundamental legendary magics to it.

Bright, refreshing green light appeared, restraining and recording the mysterious cubic pattern. Of course, due to the nature of the materials, they could do nothing more than recording.

"How should I call the new legendary class?" Lucien pushed his monocle. Not bothering to think, he simply picked the most straightforward name.

As his quill fell on the paper, a few more words were added on one side of the paper.

"Atom Controller"!

As for the two fundamental magics, due to the limited time, Lucien still named them as before: "Atomic Fission' and 'Eternal Blaze'

As for the other legendary class based on the general theory of relativity, Lucien decided to keep it as his trump card and only discuss with his teacher about the fundamental magics included in the legendary class.

"This new legendary class will be named as 'Observer of Time and Space'... The two fundamental magics will be named as 'Gravity Collapse' and 'Space Staff'." Lucien named them according to their features. It was a pity that it was not the legendary class he was going to advance into. However, after the quantum system was established, it would have its own view of time and space, too.

After putting the paper into his storage, Lucien finally discovered that he had advanced into the ninth circle without him knowing and that he had an addition spell of 'Time Stop'. Frowning, he thought, "The higher one's level is, the more weird the so-called 'feedback of the real world' feels..."

“Also, the vast and transcendent space was never recorded by any other legendary sorcerers. They also described that something was looking down upon them from somewhere far away and intangible. I also had the feeling, but there was an additional ‘illusionary space’. The feedback of the real world seems to be its interaction...”

Unable to figure out what was going on, Lucien dropped his confusion and opened the door, only to encounter Fernando who had been teleported to his front.

“Let’s talk in ‘News of the World’.” Too impatient to satisfy his curiosity, Fernando brought Lucien to the broadcast room after a blink and asked Samantha, “Get prepared. Continue the livestream of ‘News of the World’. Lucien will be the host!”

“Alright.” Samantha looked at Lucien and the Lord of Storm curiously and turned on the broadcast magic circles without any delay.

The arcanists in the room stared at them in excitement, eager to know the theoretical support of the unusual phenomenon of gravity projection, which could recover their stricken confidence.

Seizing the moment, Fernando asked Lucien, “What new theories have you got?”

Thinking for a moment, he added, “Are they disruptive?”

Lucien’s lips twitched. “Master, I told you before that I was trying to include gravity in the special theory of relativity and extrapolate it to a more general frame of reference. I was still making preparations, but what happened today forced me to finish it in advance. Based on this system, there will be an explanation closer to the truth regarding the nature of gravity.”

“An explanation regarding the nature of gravity...” Fernando seemed relieved. “As long as your explanation is not that a supreme being created gravity, it will be fine. What about the changes that followed?”

Lucien confessed the excuses he prepared. “I stayed in the Atom

Institution to run the experiments in search of neutrons. I was too excited after the half-solidification of my cognitive world and thereby completed the experiments, ascertaining the existence of neutrons. Therefore, the legendary class of 'new alchemy' was fed back, allowing my cognitive world to evolve that way."

"That's too coincidental! You may trick the outsiders, but not me!" Fernando roared in a low voice. He suspected that Lucien had always known how to find neutrons, except that he never did the experiments because he had other purposes, say, obtaining more reference credits with new alchemy. "You completed it at such a moment because you wanted your legendary class to lean towards the new alchemy instead of gravity and the theory of relativity?"

Lucien smiled rather embarrassedly, "Yes. The field of atoms is my foundation and my future direction."

After accepting Lucien's explanation, Fernando held back his urge of roaring. "Give me your paper. You go and prepare your speech."

Lucien nodded and gave his paper to his teacher, before he sat across Samantha.

At this moment, Hellen, in her white magic robe, also arrived at the broadcast room.

"Why are you here?" Fernando glared at Hellen, not caring about the courtesy for a lady at all.

Hellen nodded and greeted him. "Oliver came. He is much better than me in space blockage. So, he is opening the Land of Truth. I'm here to see Evans' paper."

She talked in secret messaging, in case the arcanists in the room were panicked.

Fernando raised the paper that he had yet to open, and they saw the long title:

'A Relativistic Interpretation and Geometric Description of Gravity and a System of Relativity Under a More General Frame of Reference'.

“The theory of relativity...” Hellen recalled that Lucien claimed that gravity would be included in the system. She did not expect that it would be completed so soon.”

The two of them began to read the paper attentively.

Samantha, on the other hand, smiled and spoke to the magic circle before her. “Just now, our radio station was heisted by Benedict III, whose lies may have caused a certain range of panic. We apologize to all the sorcerers for our mistake. In the next moment, Mr. Lucien Evans will clarify what happened earlier to everyone.”

All the arcanists in the room held their breath.

.....

Inside the villa, Blake, who was still dwelling in the consecutive weather changes, suddenly heard the pleasant voice. He then realized that Miss Lark had resumed the livestream.

“What’s the Congress’ explanation on the matter? What will Mr. Evans say?”

Nervous and hopeful, he squatted next to the radio and listened to Lucien’s voice wholeheartedly: “What happened just now was the Church’s scheme. There’s nothing worth talking about.”

Lucien was unaware of what was hidden in the conversation or the president’s actual circumstances. So, he merely dropped the subject.

However, Blake, as well as other arcanists before the radio, found it too unsatisfactory and unacceptable.

Raventi, in the headquarters of the Will of Elements, finally got Annonis’ answer and learnt that somebody’s cognitive world half-solidified. He was immediately relieved. Thankfully, it was not a disaster.

After he learnt the explanation about the matter, the president’s confusion about gravity returned to his head again, making him wonder the true nature of gravity. At this moment, Lucien’s clarification made him frown. It was too ambiguous. Was there really something wrong?

“There’s nothing worth talking about, because Benedict III’s questions do not necessarily depend on the First Cause. I have my own understanding about the nature of gravity.”

What?

Raventi, Annonis, Blake and other sorcerers listening before the radio looked at the black box in shock, as if they were trying to directly see Lucien through it.

Inside the broadcast room, Samantha and the other arcanists were astounded, too. They only hoped that Lucien had done slightly deeper studies on gravity and did not expect that he would answer the ultimate question that overwhelmed Douglas just now. That was one of the greatest enigmas in the field of gravity!

Hellen furrowed her eyebrows. The equivalence principle and the general theory of relativity were easy to understand for her, but the geometric description later stunned her.

In confusion, she said to Fernando, “I know every word and every symbol, but I don’t know what they mean when they are connected...”

Fernando had trouble understanding it himself. “This is an application of Evans Geometry and the related tools of analysis. If you haven’t studied ‘Nature’ in the past three years, I fear that you will find it hard to understand the paper.”

He had studied ‘Nature’ to check his student’s papers. That was why he could manage to follow the paper.

“You should know that I’ve been trying to melt the theory of gravity into the relativistic system and fix the problem that it cannot be extrapolated to all frames of reference. As a matter of fact, I completed the paper on the special theory of relativity a year ago, and I have been working on the problem since. It was a rather difficult journey, particularly when I realized that the previous geometric system could not describe the theory. It was not until I accidentally discovered that Evans Geometry and the related tools that I worked on could support the theoretical system perfect that I made a groundbreaking breakthrough.”

Lucien’s unhurried speech eased the nervous arcanists such as Blake, who thought that he might have really found the nature of gravity.

“...When the theory based on the new geometry was about to take shape, I hit the bottleneck again as I couldn’t find the answers to many problems. It was not until I heard the conversation fabricated by Benedict III that I was inspired and perfected the final formulas. I have to thank my teacher Fernando, the Congress of Magic, and Benedict III, for helping me obtain the general theory of relativity and the explanation on the nature of gravity.”

Most of the arcanists in the room were amused by Lucien’s words. Blake and other people smiled, too. Their previous confusion and loss were entirely gone.

Far away from Allyn, Kritonia listened to the electromagnetic signals that Benedict III intercepted and looked at him, who was flickering, in worry.

“Excellent. Well said.” Benedict III said emotionless.

Chapter 573: Dawn of Astrology

Chapter 573: Dawn of Astrology

“This is one of the two premises of this paper, which I have named the equivalence principle...”

Blake did not find it hard to understand or accept that gravitational mass and inertial mass could be described as equal under an appropriate measure system. Some arcanists had done corresponding research and obtained accurate data. However, they all considered the equivalence of the two masses as a coincidence and did not study the deeper things behind the coincidence.

Listening to Lucien’s brief introduction to the experiment and the data, Blake felt that his head was swelling. He simply took out a piece of paper and a quill, recording and calculating on the table where the magic radio was placed, as careful as a student who was attending the class of a master.

Most of the arcanists who were listening to the broadcast were more or less doing the same. They did not usually have the opportunity to receive the guidance of someone who was half a grand arcanist. Also, what was reflected in the weather changes just now made them curious and excited, too.

“...This concludes the general special of relativity. In the next, I will deduce and construct the whole system with tools such as Evans Geometry and tensor analysis. Because many complicated notions will be involved, I will only give a general introduction so that you can know what is going on...”

Blake’s quill stopped after that. He could understand every single word that Mr. Evans said, but he had no idea what they were talking about when the words were connected. Dizziness spread out in his eyes. Weird, complicated words, symbols and formulas entered into his head without denoting any actual meaning.

It made him feel so lightheaded as if he had entered an obscure dream.

“...I thought that my arcana knowledge was good enough, particularly in mathematics, but today I’ve realized that I haven’t even touched the threshold yet...”

“...Are the senior-rank arcanists working on such stuff every day? But why can I understand half of the articles on ‘Arcana’...”

The same questions were echoing inside most of the senior-rank arcanists, too. They had been very confident about their arcana expertise and their intellectual faculty, but they began to suspect themselves after hearing what Lucien Evans said. It was so hard to understand that they could barely follow!

“Conclusion! Give me your conclusion first!”

They shouted in their heart crazily, deciding to listen to the nature of gravity first and study the paper later.

...

In the Tower...

Annonis also heard Lucien’s speech from his magic radio soon after the weather changes. He was solemn and even slightly skeptical.

For a level-nine arcanist and a ninth-circle archmage of the school of astrology, the gravity theory was of paramount importance. If he could grasp the nature of gravity and use it to solve certain problems that had been bothering him, he was confident to become a real ‘Astrologer’!

However, he retained the basic suspicion until he saw the paper and confirmed it. If the nature of gravity could be found so easily, Mr. Douglas wouldn’t have been so lost and confused.

He knew that Lucien Evans could stabilize the storm that Mr. President’s speech caused by proposing a theoretical explanation regarding the nature of gravity, so it was normal that he exaggerated it a bit. But he was still hoping that Lucien Evans could really resolve the nature of gravity.

Annonis merely listened and calculated in his head when the two basic principles were introduced, but he became more and more attentive when Lucien began the geometric description.

At some point, a pile of paper and a quill floated before him, helping him record and calculate things. Confusion beamed out of his face now and then.

The abstruse mathematical papers on Nature were useless for most arcanists and did not receive their attention, but Annonis was an archmage adept at the field. He had even published a few similar papers. However, even so, he couldn't understand it any better. The paper was much more incomprehensible than he imagined.

Annonis' library was extremely quiet. Nothing could be heard except for Lucien's voice and the noise when the quill brushed the paper.

Suddenly, Annonis sensed something, only to discover Bergner, the Prophet, had walked in at some point. He was also recording and calculating the paper with ancillary magical circles and quills.

Not asking anything, Annonis focused his attention on Lucien's speech again.

In the headquarters of the Will of Elements, Raventi, due to the lack of mathematical knowledge, could only record Lucien's key points for future reference.

...

Inside the Nekso Palace...

Since she had guided her father in his tour after her father arrived, Natasha did not listen to 'Arcana Voice' or 'News of the World' today. Because the thunderstorm in Allyn was too far away, she did not pay much attention to it and merely thought that it was a local rain. After all, it was very typical in the summer.

It was not until the light of 'Eternal Blaze' illuminated the area that Natasha sensed something wrong. She hurried to contact Lucien. After failing to reach out to him, she feared that she might interrupt Lucien and wisely paused, seeking to talk to Hathaway instead.

After confirming that Lucien and Allyn were alright, she was relieved and turned on the magic radio, hoping to find out what exactly happened in Allyn.

Little did she expect that her most familiar voice would spread out from the magic radio, which made her completely relaxed.

The symbols and formulas were too complicated for Natasha to understand, but they could not stop her from listening to Lucien's speech attentively.

As she listened, she held her cheek with her right hand, and her lips curled into a smile with delight beaming out of her eyes.

...

In the broadcast room of the Sky Radio Station...

Including Samantha, all the arcanists looked at Lucien innocently and ignorantly, as if he were speaking a nonexistent language.

Seeing the looks on their faces, Lucien realized that he had gone too deep. He hurried to end the geometric description and the equations of gravitational field and came to the conclusion:

"From above, we can see that mass causes the curve of time and space, which leads to the phenomenon of gravity. The nature of gravity is the curved space-time. We can make such an analogy..."

While the description of an elastic net was not accurate, it made Samantha and the other arcanists beamed with interest. They more or less understood the nature of gravity.

"That explains a lot..."

"Then, is it a force at all?"

"Can it be proved by any phenomena?"

...

Whispers of excitement and suspicion filled the room. Even Hellen was asking Fernando. That was an interpretation of the nature of gravity from an unprecedented perspective. It seemed to be a problem of the four-dimensional space, about the movement of objects in a curved time and space.

“This is completely beyond my imagination...”

“The model of time and space seems even more perplexing right now...”

Blake and the arcanists who listened to the magic radio were partly amazed by the unbelievable and yet spectacular explanation and partly rather suspicious about it, because the nature of time and space and gravity that Lucien described was too complicated even for people to imagine them!

The Prophet and the Astrologer in the Tower, however, looked gloomy. It was completely in violation of their speculations on the nature of gravity, which was now possibly not even a force.

Thankfully, there had never been an authoritative, well-accepted explanation about the nature of gravity, and they dare not found their cognitive world based on that. That was why it did not shake.

“This has to be confirmed by phenomena!”

“This needs to be proved!”

The two masters of the school of astrology said the same. After Levski Geometry, they had agreed that they must not blindly disapprove something with intuition and experience. However, any theory had to be proved by phenomena and experiments, or they would remain hypotheses.

Every arcanist had similar doubt. They listened to Lucien as he went on, “From the perspective of a curved time and space, it is possible to calculate the redundant precession of the perihelion of the Morning Star...”

The calculation was relatively simple. Many arcanists began to calculate in person as Lucien introduced. The Prophet was so excited that he was almost shivering.

Annonis understood him quite well, because the problem had baffled the school of astrology for a long time. The motion system based on the previous gravity theory did not agree with the observation.

The Prophet was suspicious that the error was caused by other stars there, but no traces of redundant gravity could be found after he explored the place in a space jump.

Many arcanists' hair became white and their face was wrinkled for the question.

The Prophet had got the answer after Lucien introduced the calculation procedures.

"They're the same... It's very close to observation..." The Prophet murmured in excitement, "Is this the true nature of gravity..."

Annonis also got the final data. His eyes were suddenly covered in water, and he lowered his head to cover it, feeling satisfied that their years of hard work finally gained an answer.

The Prophet suddenly spoke loudly, "This is an achievement decades more advanced than the current arcana theories! I have envisioned a great development of the school of astrology!"

"I can now die without regrets after seeing this!"

Annonis held back his excitement and his tears. "Mr. Prophet, how can you die now? I still want to learn and explore the boundless space more deeply!"

After Lucien solved the problem of the artificial planets with gravitational time dilation, Annonis was already convinced of the system. His body shivering, he looked at the Prophet and said, "With Lucien's relativistic system, the road ahead of you seems clear and bright again."

"Is yours not?" The Prophet replied with a smile and remarked with complicated feelings, "In the future, nobody will have the courage to say that Lucien Evans made a wrong decision when he chose the school of astrology at the beginning..."

“I’m going to study the paper!” Said Annonis excitedly. He seemed to have seen the dawn of the half-solidification of his cognitive world!

...

In the sky far away from Allyn...

Kritonia rubbed his eyebrow. “So to speak, my blood power is to control the changes of gravity and matter?” He did not understand much of the paper.

Benedict III’s shadow, on the other hand, mumbled in a low voice, “Lucien Evans...”

Chapter 574: Value

Inside the villa at the suburb of Allyn...

Blake completely devoted himself to the calculation of the redundant precession of the Morning Star at the perihelion according to Lucien's formula.

During Lucien's intentional pauses, he wrote quickly, his quill not stopping at all.

Suddenly, he raised his head, his eyes full of shock and disbelief. Then, he rushed into the library searching the arcana and magic books.

He was not a sorcerer who was good at astrology and force fields, and he did not remember the observation of the redundant precession carefully. However, the impression he had about the number was burning inside his head, making him unable to control himself and his head was swollen.

The result of his calculation seemed very close to the observed value in his impression!

What did it mean?

What did it suggest?

One book after another was drawn out by him, only to be thrown away after his casual look. Finally, he found his childhood book from a long, long time ago – 'Fifteen Conundrums About Astrology'!

His hands shivering, he looked into the table of contents and found 'The problem that the observed precession of the Morning Star at the perihelion does not agree with the prediction of Douglas' motion system – Page 39'.

Turning the pages quickly, Blake saw the eye-catching data at first glance.

After a crack, the hard-covered book fell to the carpet with a dull noise. Blake stood where he was like a statue.

The two values were so close. What did it mean?

At this moment, Lucien's voice spread out of the magic radio again:

"After calculation, we can determine the redundant precession of the Morning Star at the perihelion to be... which basically agrees with observation."

His words were filled with such powerful charm that Blake was suddenly back to himself, whose facial muscles were horribly twisted because of his wild joy.

What did it mean?

It meant that the explanation on the nature of gravity had both the theoretical support and factual confirmation!

It meant that Mr. Lucien Evans' general theory of relativity was the theory closest to the truth of gravity so far!

It meant that the problem that baffled Mr. President and many other arcanists was not unanswerable. It was unnecessary to introduce a supreme being for gravity to be self-consistent! Mr. Lucien Evans had offered an explanation that completely surpassed the age and any imagination!

It meant that the path of arcana was not wrong. There were perhaps a lot of unresolved problems, but everybody was always on the path of working them out!

Although he could hardly understand Lucien's general theory of relativity, it did not prevent Blake from deducing and calculating with part of the conclusions. Based on the result, he believed that the theory could explain the nature of gravity. His previous confusion and loss were entirely gone.

Perhaps, it was exactly because he did not understand it that he had no suspicion and directly went for the answer.

The nature of gravity had been explained, and so would the other baffling arcana problems, as long as they forever pressed forward in exploration and research and never gave up!

“Mr. President, have you heard Mr. Evans’ theory? I believe that your confusion must be gone now...”

.....

“After calculating, we can determine the redundant precession of the Morning Star at the perihelion to be... which basically agrees with observation.”

When Lucien said that, Samantha watched him in shock and excitement in the broadcast room. The problem that bothered the school of astrology for years was resolved in such a way. Also, it proved that Lucien’s explanation on the nature of gravity was closer to the truth.

She had been admiring Lucien’s talents and achievements, but she was very confident in herself when it came to horoscopes. Because Lucien had never made any accomplishments in this field, she never realized that he had such astonishing, profound and innovative understandings about gravity and astrology.

Looking at Lucien who was speaking casually, she had the same feeling when Mr. President answered questions for her teacher and herself. They were both so calm and remarkable.

In a trance, Samantha thought to herself. After Lucien resolved the time error on the artificial planets by introducing the gravitational time dilation, her cognitive world was suddenly seething. Even though she had only just learnt the basic content, her cognitive world was already half-solidifying. Her teacher, Neeshka, was an authority in mathematics and only second to Levski and Levski in geometry and tensor analysis. So, she was quite good at that field, too.

“This is definitely a groundbreaking paper... No, a paper that surpasses the age!”

Around her, most arcanists looked more or less the same, except that their achievement was not as great as Samantha because of their insufficient mathematical expertise.

However, the panic that Douglas' speech brought to them vanished. Confusion was acceptable as long as confidence was still there! Lucien Evans' accomplishment at such a moment showed them the bright prospect of arcana. Even though they could not understand it, the conclusion and the final calculation seemed fine.

Hellen had stopped reading the paper and decided to read 'Nature' of the past four years after she was back. She said to Fernando in a low voice, "I seem to have seen another Mr. President..."

"Sometimes, he is not that stupid." Fernando snorted and intended to criticize his student, but still gave a remark of 'pretty good' – for his standard – in the end. Then, he continued reading the paper.

It was the most intricate and abstruse paper he had ever read. He mumbled, "If Douglas sees this..."

In Allyn, in Rentato, in Salyvaor, in Cocus, in the Solar Islands and the Pearl Islands, the arcanists and apprentices, no matter how much they really understood, became refreshed and confident again.

Lucien cleared his throat and closed his backup paper. "This is my opinion on the nature of gravity. It fits the phenomena observed so far, and I have offered a few prophecies to be prove it. I believe that we will have better understanding about gravity and space after the equations of gravitational field are solved."

Then, Lucien suddenly changed the topic, "However, I can only say that my paper is closer to the truth, but it is not the truth. Flaws about the theory will be found, and it is only applicable in a certain range. Up until so far, what we can grasp is the relative truth but not the absolute truth..."

Seizing the opportunity, Lucien introduced certain notions he talked about earlier again. Samantha, Blake and other arcanists nodded slightly, gaining a deeper understanding about the development of arcana in the past hundreds of years.

“...I believe that everybody can be confused now and then during studies. I had similar situations myself and I still do. I am often lost and sometimes lose confidence... This is perfectly normal. There’s no need to feel that you can’t find any field of research. Too many things are out there waiting for us to study.”

“‘The more you know, the more ignorant you feel you are.’ That’s a philosophical proverb, but I would like to add something else to it. ‘It is exactly the reason why we should work hard and stop ignorance from becoming our label. Thinking and exploration should be what we are most proud of when we live in this world.’”

Clap, clap, clap. The arcanists in the broadcast room applauded. They were already freed from the incident just now. Even if the conversation was real, so what? Everybody could be lost and unconfident now and then, but they could also resume their journey after their mood got better!

Seeing that Samantha was about to talk, Lucien hinted her to wait and smiled, “As a matter of fact, I finished another experiment just now, which proved the existence of neutrons.”

What?

The arcanists in the broadcast room and other places couldn’t close their mouth. While accomplishing such a paradigm-shifting paper, Lucien Evans discovered neutrons?

Was it a night of miracles tonight?

For the sorcerers who were adept at elements, such as Larry, K, Timothy, Ulysses and Annick, they felt blood surging into their heads, and they almost passed out.

The discovery of neutrons meant the fundamental validity of the new alchemy. It meant the age of grand development for the school of elements!

Controlling his body, Raventi listened to the experiment procedures carefully.

After Lucien finished, he rushed into his laboratory as if he had cast Advanced Speed on himself.

Discovering neutrons from the conservation of momentum and energy after collisions had always been his methodology, but the materials had to be tried again and again. He estimated that it would take him three years to finish the experiment. But right now, everything was different. With Lucien's experiment, he touched the edge of neutrons directly.

Finding the materials and making a plate, Raventi turned on the cyclotron and let the Helium atom nucleus hit the metal plate again and again.

When he captured the traces when protons were blown out, he had the feeling that his hands were shaking beyond his control.

When the data was recorded, he felt that his eyes were blurry.

When he calculated that the rays that blew out protons were neutrons, two suns seemed to be rising inside his grey eyes.

BOOM!

Rentato was suddenly enshrouded in clouds and thunder!

"Is somebody's cognitive world half-solidifying because of Lucien's paper and experiment?" Natasha looked at the sky out of the window delightedly and proudly.

Kritonia, after hearing Lucien's introduction, noticed the weather change in Rentato in shock. "Another archmage's cognitive world is half-solidifying? Is it because of the explanation on the nature of gravity or the discovery of neutrons?"

"Judging from the disorder of elements and the shadow of the atomic nucleus, it's the discovery of neutrons." Benedict III was also watching Rentato.

Kritonia found it hard to accept. "Before, I only knew that the improvement of arcana studies could strengthen the sorcerers, but can a single paper and one experiment result in such astonishing effects?”

“Does Lucien’s paper and experiment equal five legends?”

“Both the general theory of relativity and the new alchemy are far more valuable than five legends.” Benedict III’s voice became cold. “We did not pay enough attention to Lucien. I will raise his rank on the Cleansing List again and ask ‘Night Executioner’, the top night watcher, to deal with him in person.”

‘Night Executioner’, the top night watcher, was a legendary sorcerer. Therefore, the Church never included him when it announced its power, but only claimed that it had nineteen saint cardinals, five divine knights (Melmax, Anthony, Beliel, Stone and Vaharall). However, when the Congress of Magic and other forces evaluate the strength of the Church, they would still include ‘Night Executioner’ and consider the number of the top experts of the Church to be twenty.

Kritonia found it impossible to understand the consequences of arcana studies, but the consequences had already happened. “Your Holiness, what’s Lucien’s rank going to be?”

“The thirteenth. The Fallen Morning Star will be right after all the top legends.” Replied Benedict III unemotionally.

After the explosion of ‘Eternal Blaze’, the top eleven on the Cleansing List were all experts at the peak of legendary. Ranking from the first to the eleventh were: the pontiff of the northern heretics; ‘Emperor of Arcana’, Danisos; ancient vampire, Dracula; primordial dragon of time, Danisos; the elvish queen; the Prince of Abyss and Duke of Bronze on the first level of hell; Edwyn Brook, the Emperor of Control; Fernando, the Lord of Storm; Hathaway, Master of Infinite Oceans and Lord of Elements; and Rhine, the Silver-eyed Count, who could borrow the power of the Silver Moon and be as strong as the peak of legendary for a short while.

Chapter 575: Reward From the Congress

Hearing what Benedict III said, Kritonia said after a brief silence, “Your Holiness, I will assist ‘Original Fire’ in secret as a way to answer for my sins when I was tricked by Sard. I hope that the Church could send someone to rescue the main members of my family.”

‘Original Fire’ was the legendary class of ‘Night Executioner’. The South Church preferred to address the night watchers by their nicknames, and the outsiders preferred their class name.

“I have already felt your repentance. I believe that the Lord will be happy about that, too. When the situation is less intense, I’ll ask Vaharall to sent night watchers to help your family. By then, I will grant you the title of duke again with a fief near the Holy City.” Said Benedict III peacefully.

Kritonia was a level-three legendary expert, but he was too eye-catching, and Rentato was watched over by Hathaway, Davey, Winston and other legendary experts in turns. Not far away, it was Allyn, the main base of the Congress of Magic. It was more difficult for him to save anyone than it was for the regular night watchers. He even suspected that Natasha imprisoned the main members of his family exactly to allure him to save them. Chances were that the most dangerous traps had been set up there, and he would be collectively attacked by a lot of legendary sorcerers. Therefore, he had to ask for the help of other forces and wait out the enemy’s wariness.

So, having got the pope’s promise, Kritonia smiled. “Your benevolence is remarkable.”

“With you working together with ‘Night Executioner’, I can already see Lucien Evans’ ending. However, he will definitely be thoroughly protected by the Congress of Magic. You must be careful. A living legendary expert is much more important than a dead one.” Benedict III expressed his concerns for Kritonia and then remarked with mixed feelings, “There probably won’t be any greater achievement in this operation. You will hide in the northland for now. I'll ask the Night Executioner to contact you."

He, on the other hand, intended to return to the Holy City and completely ban magic radios for a while.

Until today, although he had recognized the radio stations' guidance in thinking, he did not expect it to be powerful. If the ordinary believers listened to it all the time, they would deviate from their faith and fall into hell.

However, Benedict III knew that it could not be banned forever. The nobles, after being less restrained, would definitely chase after the luxury entertainment. Therefore, he was thinking to establish the Church's own radio station and set up divine power circles to monitor electromagnetic signals.

Kritonia grew solemn. "Yes, Your Holiness."

The shadow in his hands were gone, replaced by vague spots of light.

Looking at the spots, Kritonia sighed. Before, legendary knights were highly autonomous about missions and commands, and he wouldn't have needed to do anything to eliminate a eighth-circle sorcerer. However, when one step went wrong, all the steps that followed went wrong...

"I have to establish my own brightness on this path..." Kritonia turned around and left.

.....

Inside the villa at the suburb of Allyn...

As a member of the Atom Institution, Blake understood the value of neutrons perfectly. It meant that the internal model of atoms constructed by the new alchemy was fundamentally valid, and that the sorcerers who were good at elements would embrace a golden age. It was like Mr. Blake turned the school of electromagnetics from an insignificant field into one of the four most powerful schools within the Congress of Magic after he founded the classic electromagnetic system.

“The discovery of neutrons fortifies the existence of particles. After a legendary sorcerer modifies the meditation of photons based on that, my spiritual particle and my soul will soar... As a matter of fact, there’s already hope that I will advance into the third-circle very soon.” Blake thought to himself excitedly.

After Raventi, Gaston, Chloe and Lacie Carter proposed the random molecular movement of liquid and explained the nature of the phenomenon, the question of whether atoms existed had been determined, which made the sorcerers of the school of elements such as Blake improve more or less.

Ding, ding, ding. Something was ringing in his pocket. Blake hurried to take out the mobile communication item and pressed the button at the center.

“Hey, Blake, did you listen to Mr. Evans’ speech just now?” Alfalia asked, her voice shivering.

Blake replied, equally unable to control his feelings. “I did. It’s truly a night of miracles tonight! Two revolutionary theoretical systems have been established!”

“Don’t be so rash. Although the relativistic system can be proved by phenomena, it only means that the conclusion is correct and does not suggest that the procedures to reach the conclusion are so, until the Arcana Review Board examines it. Of course, I personally would like to believe in the explanation about the nature of gravity.” Alfalia tried to make herself sound calm, but she still expressed her admiration in the end.

In his excitement, Blake became straightforward and talkative. He chuckled, “I’m very suspicious that the good sirs of the Arcana Review Board can understand the paper. It may require the grand arcanists to review.”

“I think so, too. Mr. Evans’ basic introduction was already incomprehensible to me... Hu, I can’t wait to confirm the existence of neutrons myself tomorrow...” Alfalia retained the basic rationally and knew she had to confirm the experiment in person. Because of her level, she did not have the advanced facilities such as cyclotron in her house.

Reminded by her, Blake also looked at the Allyn magic tower passionately. "I don't think I can sleep tonight... After neutrons are proved, there will be three pillars in the field of arcana: Brook's electromagnetism, Evans' relativistic system that includes Mr. President's theories, and the new alchemy..."

"Yes. We need to call him His Excellency Evans now, though." Alfalia smiled.

Blake replied, his voice drifting, "Yes, His Excellency Evans!"

.....

Because they were on a high floor in the magic tower, Lucien and Samantha soon noticed the weather changes in Rentato.

"Disorder of elements, shadow of atom model... Is it Raventi, Donald or Morris?" Fernando dropped the paper and walked to the window.

In Rentato, they were the only three archmages in the field of elements whose cognitive world bordered on half-solidification.

Lucien also stood next to his teacher and smiled, "Whoever it is, it is a success of the Congress."

That being said, Lucien secretly hoped that it was Raventi or Morris.

"It's also your success. The existence of neutrons must've been proved." Hellen's voice was brisk but not indifferent, as if she were embracing a snow in warm clothes.

She believed that whether it was Raventi, Donald or Morris, they must've tested it many times in person before they accepted the existence of neutrons and changed their cognitive world with it.

Now that two grand arcanists were talking, Samantha could only congratulate him with her eyes. The discovery of neutrons and the confirmation of the new alchemy would mean another Holm Crown Ring, but it did not matter. What mattered was that Lucien Evans would be given the glorious title of grand arcanist after tomorrow!

“Congratulations, Mr. Evans.” Samantha said to herself quietly.

After the weather changes stopped, Fernando said to Lucien, “Come to Hellen’s library with me.”

Lucien nodded and followed the two grand arcanists into Hellen’s library. Then he saw Oliver who was trying to break the blockage.

He nodded in greetings. “Congratulations, Lucien, a new grand arcanist!”

Then, he said with a smile of relief, “Your explanation has ended the panic. Also, I’ve sensed that Mr. President is trying to open the demiplane from inside. It’s obvious that he did not seclude himself voluntarily, and there must’ve been other problems with the conversation. With the assistance of the other few legends, perhaps, it will only take a day and a half to cancel the blockage of the Land of Truth.”

Hearing that the president was alive, and the demiplane was blocked by the Church, Lucien heaved a long sigh in relief. Hellen and Fernando were more or less pacified, too.

“Perhaps, your general theory of relativity will help Douglas find his path to becoming a demigod, but I fear that he’ll have to start reading ‘Nature’.” After Fernando was relaxed, he immediately began to joke around. Then, he said before Lucien replied, “The discovery of neutrons proves the correctness of the new alchemy. Although there may be parts that require modification and improvement, it won’t stop you from being acknowledged as a grand arcanist or obtaining a legendary item of the Congress.”

Every paradigm-shifting theoretical system meant the title of grand arcanist. So, the reward of legendary items seemed to be specifically for the grand arcanists.

“Can I choose one tomorrow?” Lucien revealed his obsession with money.

Fernando shook his head. “The Highest Council reached a consensus a long time ago that you would be given the title of grand arcanist for the new alchemy as long as neutrons were discovered. After Hellen proves your experiment, the treasury of the Congress will be opened for your selection. You sabotaged Benedict III’s scheme and revealed the value of the new alchemy. I fear that he will send legendary experts to deal with you. So, if you get a legendary item sooner, your safety can be better ensured.”

“Okay.” Lucien would certainly not turn down such an offer.

Fernando went on. “Your general theory of relativity will be reviewed by me and other arcanists who can understand it. It will be another paradigm-shifting achievement if there’s nothing wrong, and it can also be traded for a legendary item. However, I suggest you choose the ritual of ‘Origin of Magic’ instead of an item.”

He was thinking to invite the Prophet and other Tower arcanists who were adept at mathematics to review it together with himself and Douglas.

“What’s that ritual?” Lucien had never heard of the ritual before. It seemed to be only limited to the Highest Council.

Fernando nodded his head. “You will naturally enter the Highest Council after you become a grand arcanist. So, it doesn’t hurt to tell you in advance. This ritual of ‘Origin of Magic’ provides assistance for the ritual of legendary advancement. It requires the guidance of spiritual power of six legendary sorcerers, in cooperation with rare materials that are as precious as what legendary items are made of, and it is designed for the ninth-circle archmages whose spiritual power is not enough to make a breakthrough. Every such ritual will reduce the inventory of the Congress by one fifth.”

“Your cognitive world has half solidified, and you have a legendary class that is close to 100% match and legendary magic models that are engraved to your cognitive world. There will be high hopes for you to make an advancement with this ritual after you advance into the ninth circle. After you become a legendary sorcerer, it will be terribly difficult to kill you, and you won't have to be chained to Allyn or Rentato without being able to go anywhere."

"You can stabilize your achievements with this incident. In two to three years, after you advance into the ninth circle, you will need the magic ritual to help you."

Because Lucien had been advancing fast and did not have a solid foundation, Fernando believed that it wouldn't be safe for his student to try to advance into legendary until at least ten years after he advanced into the ninth circle. Many accidents might happen during such a long period.

Lucien grimaced. "Master, I am already in the ninth circle."

Huh? Fernando thought that his ears had deceived him. Hellen and Oliver turned around and looked at him, too.

Chapter 576: Legendary Item

Lucien smiled rather awkwardly, “I had the feedback from the truth of the world when I wrote the paper on the general theory of relativity, which generated ‘Time Stop’, the space-time magic, directly inside my soul.”

The spells that involved time and space were an intersection of the schools of astrology, force field, transformation, electromagnetics and light-darkness. They were extremely complicated. The sorcerers who were not adept at the five schools could only construct the models with their mathematical expertise and spiritual power. They were much more difficult to learn than were the spells of the same level.

Lucien’s original plan was to build ‘Spell Sequencer’, ‘Raventi’s Flame Hell’, ‘Meteor Swarm’ and other spells he was good at when he advanced into the ninth circle, but out of his expectation, ‘Time Stop’, the ninth-circle magic that was as famous as ‘Cracking (Advanced)’, was generated on its own.

“Feedback from the real world...” After slight surprise, Fernando became solemn. Every grand arcanist was used to such feedback, which were repeatable and provable. That was also the reason why they were eager to figure out the mechanism of the feedback.

For the arcanists, writing a paper was the process of closure, which was accompanied by the confidence in the final result. They would finalize certain things that they considered for a long time and melt their spirits into it.

If the sketch and thinking alone could trigger the changes of the cognitive world, the wrong and flawed ideas at the beginning could be highly dangerous. It was possible that a grand arcanist’s head might be blown up because of an error he had during his calculation despite his amazing ideas.

Regarding the enigma that only received enough attention a hundred years after the Congress of Magic was founded, Fernando asked for the details and realized that they were the same as before. Therefore, he held back his confusion and said, “Now that you have already advanced into the ninth circle, you can change the reward for your general theory of relativity into the ritual of ‘Origin of Magic’. You will stay in Allyn without going anywhere or telling it to anybody. After Douglas gets out of his demiplane and we decide the value of your paper together, we will hold the ritual of legendary advancement with the assistance of ‘Origin of Magic’ for you.”

For the archmages whose cognitive world had half-solidified, the Congress of Magic would reimburse them for the cost of the ritual of legendary advancement, but the archmages who planned to help their cognitive world half-solidify with magic rituals not only needed to pay for the materials and the legendary sorcerers in the ancillary rituals, but also had to cover half of the cost for the legendary advancement.

It was very realistic but equal. No archmages ever burst into fury because of that.

“Master, would there be any insidious problems?” Naturally, Lucien would love to advance into legendary in advance, which would mean that his safety would be perfectly ensured. Otherwise, even though he had two legendary items, his spiritual power would be drained after he used one or two legendary spells. However, if there were too many insidious problems, Lucien wouldn’t mind staying in Allyn and Rentato for ten years. Natasha could pick up the Sword of Truth while level eight, but she also could only slash it two or three times in a battle.

Fernando cackled. “It’s such an expensive ritual that needs the help of six legendary sorcerers. How can there be any insidious problems? Well, the odds of failure are rather high, though. However, I’ll ask Douglas, Brook, Hathaway, Oliver and Hellen to host the ritual with me. That’s the most luxury lineup in the history of magic. The odds of failure will be greatly reduced. Also, since your foundation is not steady, it will take you more time for you to make advancement after you advance into legendary.”

“You have your own meditation skill, don’t you? In such a way, after you advance into the level two of legendary, your foundation will be stabilized. Of course, you are only slow compared to other grand arcanists. For example, Douglas and Brook both reached the peak in only decades. It was much faster than the sorcerers whose match rate is low.”

There was no need to hesitate. Lucien nodded, “I’ll ask for the ritual of ‘Origin of Magic’ after the review of the general theory of relativity is completed.”

In the Congress of Magic, except for the seven grand arcanists, the legendary sorcerers were all below level three of level-one legendary. The Prophet, the Eye of Curse, the Master of Transformation and the Alchemy Master were in level two, and the Innovator, the Moon Scholar, Absolute Defense, the Monarch of Fate, the Sun King and the Light of Stars were in level one. Among them, the Light of Stars, who advanced only thirty years ago, was the weakest of all.

Seeing that Lucien had made up his mind, Fernando summoned other legendary sorcerers to help Oliver, and Hellen went to the laboratory to confirm the discovery of neutrons.

Soon, Hathaway and Brook arrived and asked for a copy of the paper from Lucien. Their mathematical abilities were exceptional and much stronger than Hellen, Oliver and Vicente’s. If Fernando hadn’t studied ‘Nature’ earlier, he wouldn’t have understood any more than they did. As for the regular legendary sorcerers, only the Prophet had equal mathematical abilities.

“The subscribers of ‘Nature’ will probably soar tomorrow. At least, I’ll be one of them.” Brook was not upset that Lucien made his cognitive world break and solidified at all but smiled gently.

Praised as the most incomprehensible journal, ‘Nature’ had only one thousandth of the subscribers that ‘Arcana’ did. More people only read it in the library when they needed to.

Even though it was funded by the Tower and Lucien and wouldn’t stop publishing, Levski, Neeshka, Milina and other arcanists were quite upset that their work was not appreciated by the public.

However, after Lucien's broadcast today, the discussion of the general theory of relativity would definitely be a hit. Everybody would get a copy of 'Nature' in case they couldn't follow other people in their conversations.

Lucien smiled. "Mathematics are the tools and foundations of arcana studies and the brightest gem on the crown of arcana. That was why I decided to establish 'Nature'."

"Yes, many arcanists today only have the mathematical ability to analyze magic models and refuse to work harder." Hathaway was rather indifferent about the discovery of neutrons, because she had realized that neutrons must be introduced to the magic models when she reverse engineered 'Eternal Blaze' and 'Atomic Fission'.

However, she did speak a rarely-seen long sentence. She seemed excited for the explanation of the nature of gravity and the talented idea.

Brook nodded and said, "Your idea that the speed of light is a constant reference is very enlightening, and so is your description on time and space. We have to figure out the nature of things."

The two grand arcanists did not say anything else because they had to help Oliver get Douglas out.

Lucien waited for a while patiently. A while later, Hellen walked out of the laboratory and declared, "It's indeed neutron. I'll bring you to the treasury of the Congress."

"Lucien, you may think of a tribute for yourself. If you do not want to waste your time on it, Oliver will be happy to do it for you." Fernando smiled next to the portal.

According to the tradition of the Magic Empire, every legendary sorcerer had their unique tribute. In the age of the Congress, the range had been expanded to all the grand arcanists who hadn't advanced into legendary.

Tributes were deeply associated with the legendary class and the specific fields. For example, Douglas' tribute was 'you are the elect of magic and dominator of space; your light illuminates the path of arcana.’, Brook’s was ‘you are the master of the kingdom of electromagnetism who writes poems for the goddess’, Oliver’s was ‘you let elements return to where they should be; you travel between time and space’, Hellen’s was ‘you are the spirit of snow who dances the most beautiful changes in the world’, and Vicente’s was ‘your eyes put souls to sleep; you are the dominator of death’.

Hearing his name being mentioned, Oliver smiled, “I already considered it for you. ‘You are the truth of elements and the staff that masters space and time’. How does it sound?”

Lucien discovered that it was surprisingly fitting, so he smiled, “It’s indeed a poetic tribute. So be it.”

After deciding the tribute, Lucien followed Hellen to the end of the thirty-fifth floor of the Allyn magic tower. He saw a black gate that was engraved with creepy stripes.

Hellen opened the gate with a magic key and led Lucien into a small room inside.

The room was empty except for four cabinets that contained four items. There was a magic robe which was so dark that it could almost absorb the soul, a grey staff entangled with weird decorations, a transparent crown embedded with seven alchemical gems, and a pair of silver gloves.

“The Robe of Grand Arcanists and the Grasp of Davey are the two legendary items created later, the former being a level-two and the latter being a level one.” Hellen briefly introduced the magic robe and the gloves. “The staff and the crown are both from the ancient Magic Empire. The former is named ‘Boundary of Souls’. It’s a powerful item of necromancy. The latter is ‘Thorny Crown’. It belongs to the school of transformation and astrology. Both of them are level two. However, if you choose a legendary item in the field you are good at, you may be able to improve its level with precious materials later, like your master and his ‘Robe of Dominance’.”

Lucien nodded. He knew that legendary items differed from regular legendary items in that they could grow, although the odds of failure could be quite high.

Reading the introduction to the few items carefully, Lucien abandoned the Grasp of Davey first, because it was only level one. Then, he gave up 'Boundary of Souls', because he already had 'Congus Ring'.

In the end, Lucien abandoned the 'Thorny Crown', which could affect gravity, time and space and which was attached with prophetic magic. That was because he intended to craft his own legendary items with 'Observer of Time and Space', the legendary class he did not choose. Many of its functions would be redundant.

"Robe of Grand Arcanists, a level-two legendary item. Only usable for legendary sorcerers or archmages whose cognitive world had half-solidified, or the wearer's head will explode."

"This magic robe created by alchemy masters can reduce the cooldown of the spells below legendary by two seconds and that of the legendary spells by one to 0.5 seconds, depending on their difficulty."

That was the quality most attractive to Lucien. It meant that there would be no cooldown for him when he used the spells below the ninth circle. Even the gap between ninth-circle spells would be reduced to within one second. It would be sometimes even more cost-effective than legendary spells.

"The master of the magic robe would boast the magic resistance of level-two legendary and a defense of level-nine gold knights against the knight-type attacks like longsword. It will double the recovery speed of spiritual power and provide immunity to confusion and chaos. When attacked, 'Magic Absorber' (8th circle) and 'Elemental Skin' (8th circle) will be triggered."

"Terrible legendary force is also entailed in it, allowing it to perform Elemental Protection twice, Space Shackle twice, Grandeur Obliteration twice and Hellish Ball twice every day."

"In the meantime, it will also bring the user a Spell Sequencer (9th circle), two Cracking (Advanced) (9th circle), and three Ruby Reversing Rays (7th circle).”

“The power of sorcerers is from wisdom!”

“By Veronica Claus.”

Chapter 577: A Sudden Thought

After he obtained the Robe of Grand Arcanists, the robe of ‘Immortal Throne’ was naturally abandoned by Life Hiding. The reward from the Hand of Paleness was never as practical as it appeared, and even less so after he had the ritual of ‘Life Hiding’. As for the seventh-circle magic, ‘Weakening Ray’, that Lucien was interested in, he could totally construct it inside his own soul.

Not holding back at all, and since he had his waistcoat and shirt inside, Lucien put on the magic robe after leaving a signature on the pivot of the Robe of Grand Arcanists for his own safety.

The moment he put on the legendary item, Lucien felt that it absorbed his spiritual power crazily like a gigantic swirl. If his cognitive world had not half-solidified, his head might have really exploded because of the quake of spiritual power.

After a long time, when Lucien’s spiritual power almost ran dry, the absorption finally slowed down, and the dark magic robe shimmered. Then, as Lucien’s wished, it turned into a double-breasted suit, and then the doubled recovery of spiritual power began.

Hellen did not say anything, as if she were dwelling in her own world. Just like Fernando said, she was not nonchalant but rather talkative. However, things other than arcana and magic studies could barely raise her interest, which made her look like an icy goddess.

“You have changed?” She was suddenly back to herself. “Evans, what mathematical knowledge do I need to grasp in order to understand your general theory of relativity? Can you give me a list of books?”

“Not a problem at all, but I don’t know what books you have already grasped, Your Excellency Hellen.” Sensing the flourishing recovery of his spiritual power, Lucien felt that his head was clearer than ever.

Hellen shook her head and smiled, “You are now a grand arcanist, too. There’s no need to address me as Excellency. You can assume that I know nothing at all when you write the book list. That way, I will know your mathematical foundation and can make up for what I missed.”

“Alright, Hellen.” Lucien did not insist on calling her Excellency. Otherwise, how would the legendary sorcerers that were not grand arcanists feel? However, his teacher was his teacher, Mr. President was Mr. President, and Granny Hathaway was always Granny Hathaway. Those were personal relationships and he did not need to consider for anybody else.

Hellen closed the door and led Lucien out of the place. “You will rest in Fernando’s library in the coming days until Mr. President gets out of his demiplane and reviews your paper with the Prophet and the rest of them.”

She had an even higher demand than the Lord of Storm did, not even allowing Lucien to return to his own magic tower or the Atom Institution in case somebody took advantage of the weakness. The accident tonight could be ascribed to her untimely treatment due to her emotional turmoil, so she was even more prudent about Lucien’s safety.

Lazar had no objection. “Then, I’ll tell the butler and Lazar.”

Hellen nodded and walked to the front, indicating that she would not eavesdrop on Lucien’s call.

Leo did not know much about magic, and what happened tonight was a major shock for him. He asked Pinocchio to activate the defense of the magic tower while he tried to reach out to Lucien.

After ensuring that Lazar was fine and everything in Allyn was normal, Leo was finally reassured, and then Lucien contacted Lazar.

“Lucien? Oh, I should call you Your Excellency Evans!” Lazar said excitedly, “Your explanation about the nature of gravity is so cool. How did you connect it with space-time?”

Obviously, he didn't quite understand the first part.

Lucien said jokingly, "A good sir named Albert told me in my dreams."

"Haha, you are humorous." Lazar laughed. "You told me that you wanted to include gravity in the special theory of relativity, but I didn't do any research in that regard. How idiotic I was! If I had made any ancillary tools, my arcana level would be raised now."

His arcana credits were almost level five. The benefits from the new alchemy and other breakthroughs in the elemental field were running out, too.

Lucien patted his suit and said, "I found it strange, too. I asked you to work on the special theory of relativity, but none of you did anything except for Annick and the students whom I supervised."

Lazar tried to smile. "Time, space, energy, mass and transformation of frames of reference are too difficult to understand. However, the special theory of relativity is like a lovely kid compared to the dizzying general theory of relativity. I'll keep working on it."

"Just, your students almost went crazy in excitement. They almost blew up my monocle when they failed to reach out to you. You have completely conquered them."

Lucien's lips curled. "That's not a good thing in arcana. 'Master is dear to me, but dearer still is truth'. Lazar, I will help my teacher review papers in the following days and won't go to the institution. You will be responsible for the daily operation."

Lazar accepted it quickly and then said, "Allow me to forget our friendship for now and pay tribute to your great achievements that have surpassed the age. You have explored the future road of arcana and driven away the clouds that loomed in the sky of arcana. The general theory of relativity and the new alchemy are both the most splendid accomplishments in the history of magic. The former is particularly so."

After the call with Lazar, Lucien contacted Natasha.

“...Your Excellency, you are the master of time and space, the controller of stars, and the doorkeeper of the truth of the microscopic world.” Natasha was delighted when she heard Lucien’s voice.

Although she did not understand the general theory of relativity, she had learnt its great significance from Hathaway, Lucien and Morris. Therefore, she made up a tribute as a joke.

Lucien smiled, “You were listening to ‘News of the World’, too?”

“I already listened to ‘Arcana Voice’ and ‘News of the World’ when I was in Aalto.” While magic radios hadn’t been promoted to the opposite side of the Storm Strait, she was certainly not short of such gadgets. It was a source for her to learn the news about Lucien. “As a matter of fact, I always feel that arcana studies are interesting. I can learn them for fun when I am free, although I am not talented in spiritual power.”

Natasha had the necessary knowledge, and she did feel that the arcana studies and experiments were enjoyable. So, she intended to give it a shot, although she did not expect to make anything out of it, and she did not plan to devote herself to it.

Lucien chuckled. “I can teach you as long as you can control the magic circles and the alchemy devices. Let’s see if you can become an experiment disaster creator.”

The two of them began to chatter aimlessly as they talked. It was not until Hellen looked at him from the end of the corridor that Lucien was back to himself. “Because of the accident, I may not be able to return to Rentato for the time being. Send my apology to the Grand Duke.”

“I know. Granny Hathaway told me everything briefly. You just stay in Allyn and don’t go out recklessly. I will sort out the relationship of the parliament, the cabinet and the nobles in the meantime. Then, I will go to Allyn and visit your institution and magic tower!” Said Natasha. Then she added in secret, you don’t know that I’m already a level-nine gold knight yet, and that will be a huge ‘surprise’.

Lucien chuckled. “My students have always wanted to meet the queen. Alright, I’m going to hang up.”

“Okay.” Natasha replied with her biyin, before she said in a low voice, “My grand arcanist.”

After ending the call, Lucien suddenly remembered something. Natasha, Annick and other people must’ve contacted him many times, but he had neglected the scorch for various reasons. As it turned out, he had no idea who had tried to reach out to him, which might make him miss a lot of things.

“Contact management and ‘Missed Calls’ are needed...” Lucien considered the modules to avoid the problem.

It was not difficult to devise a storage circle, but it would significantly increase the requirement and price for the alchemical communication item. Also, alchemical life was made of melted souls. It was better at intelligent management instead of calculation. Therefore, it was necessary to develop computers based on magic.

Although legendary sorcerers were as capable as the computers at the beginning phase, Lucien was very certain that they could compare to the first generation of Galaxy-level computer even if they were combined. He could not abandon the development of computers just because they were not very useful at the initial phase. After all, the semiconductor elements had already been discovered.

While thinking, Lucien hurried to catch up to Hellen.

Hellen eyed him strangely but did not say anything. For her who was dedicated to arcana and magic studies, Lucien’s previous calls were too much a waste of time. Why couldn’t he just tell them what to do straightforwardly?

.....

In the next day and a half, Lucien seized the moment to construct the second ninth-circle spell in order to stabilize his strength.

A regular ninth-circle spell only took two to three days to be diagnosed even if the mathematical foundation and the arcana and magic knowledge were good enough. However, Lucien had ‘Snow Goddess’ Whip’ that he created on his own. He had mastered its structure a long time ago. Therefore, before Oliver and other legendary sorcerers opened the Land of Truth, he had already successfully constructed it inside his soul and stabilized his stance in the ninth circle. In the meantime, he became the ninth-circle arcanist who grasped the fewest seventh-circle and eighth-circle spells.

Up until now, Lucien had only constructed nine seventh-circle spells, namely: Evans’ Freezing Ray, Magic Reverse, Antimagic Ray, Finger of Death, Simulacrum, Forcecage, Energy Immunity, Chaos Teleportation, and Lightning Storm; and nine eighth-circle spells, namely: Magic Order, Maze, Elemental Skin, Mental Barrier, Space Lock, Advanced Curse, Advanced Spying, Strong Magnetic Blast, Foresight.

Suddenly, Lucien felt space turbulence spreading out in waves. So, he hurried to go to Hellen’s library.

The moment he entered the room, the fully closed portal of teleportation was opened. Douglas stepped out from inside and nodded at Fernando, Oliver and the other legendary sorcerers. “Thank you for your trouble.”

Lucien smiled. Everything was good as long as the president was alright.

Chapter 578: Ritual

Chapter 578: Ritual

Seeing that the few grand arcanists and legendary sorcerers had been gathered here, Douglas asked concernedly, “Did Benedict III do anything in the past few days? I think he must have a good reason to expose his secret and lock me inside my demiplane. Did he tamper with our conversation to deceive people or allure someone of the Highest Council?”

Lucien secretly raised his thumb after hearing the president’s questions. Even though he had been caged inside his demiplane, he was still able to infer most of the things.

Of all the legendary sorcerers on the spot, Fernando had the most seniority and least concerns. He said loudly, “Douglas, however confused you are about the nature and source of gravity and the initial cause, you can’t lose your confidence and explain everything with a supreme being, can you? It doesn’t matter even if you have ten thousand whys, but it will be horrible if you can’t come up with a single question but get satisfied with explaining everything with gods. The speech that the Church quoted almost deprived all the arcanists in the Congress of their confidence.”

Douglas slightly frowned. “Benedict III hid the latter part of our conversation to disrupt your minds?”

“I admit that there are times when I am confused, lost and can’t see the way ahead, but when I return to reality and find that there are so many problems waiting for me to resolve, I’m full of momentum again. Also, a supreme being does not equal to the God of Truth. It may be a synonym to the truth of the world. The space is so vast and boundless, and our world is nothing at all compared to it. How can I worship a god that fights for believers and resources in such an insignificant place?”

Fernando smiled. “That’s the Douglas I know. I told them that you wouldn’t demean yourself by worshipping the God of Truth.”

Hellen quietly patted her cheeks and heaved a sigh of relief. Brook, Hathaway and Oliver looked more or less relaxed and delighted, too.

In the rising period of an organization, many contradictions would be covered by the thriving appearance.

Not wasting any time, Douglas asked straightforwardly, "The whole Congress was affected? Was it through the Sky Radio Station. I'll clarify it first and announce Benedict III's vileness to everyone."

He wondered if a delay of one and a half days had made the lie unfalsifiable.

"There's no need to rush. The influence has been cleared. Why don't you tell us what exactly happened?" Fernando was eager to know the details.

Douglas looked at everybody in confusion. "Cleared? Didn't you say that almost all the arcanists in the Congress lost confidence, Fernando?"

That was a rather severe situation.

Because of his relationship with his teacher, Brook had been listening quietly without saying anything. Hathaway never talked whenever she could avoid talking. Hellen felt too guilty to talk. Oliver, finally, picked up the topic. "Mr. President, they lost confidence because the arcanists saw that even you, the founder of the gravity theory, were baffled by the nature and source of gravity and looked for philosophical and theological answers. They had suspicions about the road they were on, but after somebody explained the nature of gravity, everybody was refreshed. Naturally, their panic was gone."

"That's good." Douglas didn't realize what he heard first. Then, he turned his head and said, "Wait, Oliver, what did you say? Somebody explained the nature of gravity?"

He looked at the Land of Truth and asked tentatively, "I was locked inside the demiplane for a day and a half, wasn't I? Did the time flow at a different speed in the outside world, and decades have actually passed?”

There had been absolutely no sign of an explanation on the nature of gravity, so the news was so shocking to him that he suspected it was because of different time speeds. Otherwise, how could a theory have popped up after only one and a half days?

“You were locked away for one and a half days. However, Lucien had worked on it for years. He proposed a theoretical explanation on the nature of gravity. The deductions based on his theory match the observed redundant precession of the Morning Star at the perihelion and the adjustment to synchronize the time in the high sky and on the ground of the artificial planets.

After a brief daze, Douglas asked in a hurry, “Where’s the paper? Let me take a look!”

At this moment, he forgot everything he planned to do.

Hellen gave the copy of the paper and Lucien’s book list to Douglas. “Here you are, Mr. President.”

Taking over the paper, Douglas browsed through it. His calmness was gradually gone, replaced by devotion. Shadows surfaced around him, constructing the ancillary computation circles.

He scratched his head now and then, making his neat hair messy.

Understanding his earnestness about the question, Fernando did not interrupt him despite his usual impatience.

After a long time, Douglas pulled his bow-tie, half confused and half enchanted. “I get basically what it says. The nature of gravity is the curved space-time caused by gravity. I saw the geometry on ‘Nature’ before, too. But is the deduction legitimate?”

As one of the greatest mathematicians, Douglas had already grasped the many new methods including tensor analysis after only browsing through ‘Nature’. However, it was impossible for him to understand the general theory of relativity for the time being.

Fernando answered, "At least, Bergner and I did not find any flaw in the mathematical deduction, except that the methods that Lucien adopted in certain parts are rather clumsy and inconcise."

"Curved space-time... mass... energy-momentum tensor... the curvature of space-time is transmitted as waves..." Douglas mumbled the content in the paper, caught in the state of ten thousand whys again.

Lucien, Hellen and the rest of them kept absolutely quiet and did not interrupt the president. It was not until a long time later that Douglas was finally back to himself. Taking a deep breath, he walked to Lucien and patted his shoulder, "I dare not say immediately that your theory is correct, but you have undoubtedly proposed a paradigm-shifting idea. The greatest achievement of the Congress of Magic in the past ten years is your participation. I regret that I did not insist on my idea and let Fernando become your teacher."

"My everything is based on your foundation, Mr. President." Lucien replied with a smile.

Douglas shook his head. "Oliver, I or somebody else could've come up with the special theory of relativity some time later, but the general theory of relativity is definitely a treasure that depends on an individual's giftedness. Without you, it probably would have taken hundreds of years before the theory was proposed and perfected."

"Personally I thank you very much. I seem to have found my path to advance into demigod. After I confirm the thoroughness of the deduction and obtain part of the solutions, I may be able to touch the gate of demigods. As for how many years it will take for me to pass the gate, that's a different matter."

"So, Douglas, after you confirm the paper, come and help Lucien with the ritual of 'Origin of Magic'." Fernando interjected. He had already invited Brook, Hathaway, Oliver and Hathaway, who were on the spot.

Douglas had never been more surprised in the past thousand years than today. Shocked, he looked at Fernando and Lucien, “Are you suggesting that Lucien has already entered the ninth circle?”

“What do you think? The truth of the world gives copious feedback to such great achievements.” While Fernando was reluctant to compliment his student himself, he was rather happy when other people did so.

Douglas shook his head with a smile. “Lucien, if your advancement succeeds, you will be the youngest legendary sorcerer in the history of magic. Let’s begin the ritual in a moment. Even if the paper proves wrong later, I’ll cover the additional cost of the ritual to express my thanks for Lucien.”

“What happened with Francois and Benedict III?” Fernando asked.

Douglas briefly introduced it and said with confusion in the end. “Francois was a sorcerer from the ancient Magic Empire. He loathed the Saint Truth and thought what the Church did regarded as blasphemy now and then. That’s why I never suspected that he surrendered to the Church. Also, there was no holy light when he died.”

“Something is wrong. Francois was the oldest member of the Affair Committee. He had high clearances and abundant allowances. He only never made a breakthrough because his cognitive world couldn’t half-solidify and he didn’t dare to take risks. Such an archmage couldn’t have been bribed.” Oliver, as a member of the Highest Council who managed the Affair Committee, frowned and said.

“I found it strange, too. If Francois was unwilling, Benedict III couldn’t have projected himself into Francois’ soul over such a long distance. Also, Benedict III’s spell to block the demiplane in the end is in the style of the ancient Magic Empire...” Douglas said something else that was weird.

Including Lucien, everybody discussed for a moment and paused when they failed to find an answer.

Since it was not night and radio time yet, Douglas proposed that the ritual of Origin of Magic and the ritual of legendary advancement be started now. Fernando and Hellen agreed with him. Brook, Oliver and Hathaway were worried that it might be too hasty, but they did not strongly object.

...

After half a day of preparation, in the hall on the opposite of the conference room of the Highest Council on the thirty-fifth floor of the Allyn magic tower...

The moment he entered the room, Lucien felt that he had come to the boundless space. The darkness was overwhelming and ceaseless, and the brilliance of the stars raised his deepest reverence.

When he looked more clearly, Lucien felt that the trajectories of the stars were too complicated for him to capture. It was actually a direct projection of the sky of fate!

“Lucien, find your Host Star of Destiny and stand below it.” Douglas’ voice came from the depths of the starry sky.

Lucien closed his eyes, and the projection of the Host Star of Destiny appeared inside his soul. Through the subtle interaction, he stepped forward and stepped below it after several minutes.

The star was dazzling but surrounded by the deepest darkness. Other people might not notice it, but Lucien could clearly sense the terrifying, all-absorbing air of destruction.

After he stopped, the six grand arcanists moved the circle for the ritual of Origin of Magic, each standing in one corner of the biggest hexagram.

“Are you ready?” Douglas asked gently.

Four top legendary and two level-three legendary grand arcanists – Looking at the astonishingly luxurious team, Lucien nodded his head slightly. Holding back his emotions and closing his eyes, he said peacefully:

“I am ready.”

From today on, his fate would enter a new track.

From today on, he would no longer be a target that anybody could plot against.

From today on, his life would be a real legend.

Do you hear fate knocking on the door? Go and take it by the throat!

Chapter 579: Demiplane

Before the complicated feelings in his heart died away, waves of spiritual power, after being adjusted by the ritual of ‘Origin of Magic’, flowed toward him gently at Lucien’s own frequency.

In the meantime, the whole deep, boundless sky quaked slightly. The mysterious force was concentrated on the projection of Lucien’s Host Star of Destiny. Because Fernando hosted the ritual in person, the ‘star of mysteries’, the terrible darkness behind it that seemed able to absorb everything, was not neglected.

The projection of the Host Star of Destiny hummed and shivered with noises that were inaudible to ordinary people. In the meantime, Lucien summoned his cognitive world in meditation, allowing the bright and dark Host Star of Destiny inside shake at the same time. As they were synchronized, Lucien had the feeling that the real world was ebbing, and that his cognitive world was surrounding his body and his soul.

After the half-solidification, Lucien’s cognitive world was already able to influence the real world as he wished. Therefore, Lucien gradually spread out the feeling and changed everything around him.

At the center of the ritual, the stars were vaguely curved. Symbols of elements flashed in different colors, with the internal structure made of protons, neutrons and electrons. They split and gathered, producing the myriad of elements in the material world, before all the elements were gathered into the pure iron universe.

Lucien’s legendary class, ‘Atom Controller’, did not seem to overlap with the path of quantum mechanics that he intended to walk on, but quantum mechanics were based on the exploration of the microworld after all. The studies on the electron alone had produced amazing and unbelievable achievements. Then, the strong nuclear force and the weak nuclear force, the last two of the four fundamental forces, were recognized, before the basic model of particles was developed and the electromagnetic power and the weak nuclear force were united.

Therefore, the shabby model of atomic nucleus was deepened and developed into a standard model of particles without changing the foundation.

After a while, the pure influence of the cognitive world ‘touched’ Lucien’s body for real, making him feel the tremendous power.

Surpassing his body, his cognitive world and his soul met in the material world. Under their influence, the starry magic models constructed inside his soul all glittered with bright and dreamy brilliance.

Lucien felt that his soul was shaking, and that his ability to think and control the cognitive world plummeted. It was ten times more difficult for him to continue the modification of his soul with the cognitive world.

The magic models were vaguely curved like real stars, which gradually raised Lucien’s viewpoint and gave him a strange feeling that he was looking down at himself from somewhere high.

The quake of the soul was even more intense. The edge became blurry and was connected to the unpredictable cognitive world. Then, it expanded into a fleeting cloud that intended to enshroud the cognitive world from the outside. At this point, Lucien’s spiritual power almost ran dry, but the spiritual power of the six grand arcanists proved by the ritual of Origin of Magic was as incessant as an ocean, ready for him to squander.

With the lofty feeling, Lucien recovered from the shock of melding with his spiritual power. He watched the cognitive world collapse and develop into his soul, containing the magic models.

As a result, three curtains were formed. The soul was at the outermost level, then it was the cognitive world, and there were plenty of magic models inside the cognitive world. He felt that he was in control of everything.

Dwelling in the fabulous feeling, Lucien suddenly felt excruciating pain. He knew that the most difficult test had come, especially when his soul hadn't reached the standard of legendary yet!

His cognitive world suddenly expanded, tearing holes in the soul at the outermost level.

The pain from his soul almost made Lucien give up, but he gritted his teeth and tried to enjoy it while he repaired his soul with the power transmitted by the ritual of Origin of Magic!

Very soon, the pain arrived at the peak. Lucien felt that his soul was full of wounds. Also, the Origin of Magic could not repair his soul as fast now.

If it were any other time, Lucien would've passed out, because the pain surpassed what his body and his soul could bear. However, his mind and his soul seemed separated right now. There was no sign that he was falling into a coma.

Lucien knew that the pain would be gone if his mind returned to his body, but the ritual would also fail if so.

Having no time to recall his life experiences or curse fate, Lucien had only one thought in his head, which was to persist, persist and persist!

At some point, the unimaginable pain gradually weakened, and the 'resistance' of his cognitive world was gentler and gentler. Although his soul was riddled with holes, it was still powered by the Origin of Magic.

Lucien was about to heave a sigh in relief, when unpredictable colors that did not belong to this world glittered. The spirit library that had accompanied him since his rebirth appeared!

Inside the spirit library, all the books were unsealed. Then, the library was smaller and smaller as if Lucien were flying higher and higher, until it was replaced by a beautiful, dreamy planet that was covered with a blue ocean.

Is it Earth?

Lucien had complicated feelings.

Earth was also smaller and smaller as Lucien flew higher. The sun, the eight planets and poor Pluto were connected into a line like a picture.

Is it the solar system?

Lucien's feeling of looking down at everything did not stop. Even the solar system was reduced in size. Countless stars gathered into a surging river.

"Don't dwell in the illusion. Navigate the power into the cognitive world in your soul." Fernando's strict voice echoed next to Lucien's ears. They couldn't detect the changes inside Lucien's soul, but they could infer Lucien's phase from his apparent behavior.

Illusion? Is it an illusion?

Lucien was very confused, but he directed the overwhelming power of the Origin of Magic into his soul without delay, towards the struggling cognitive world.

The humming stopped, and a terrifying energy storm was raised in his cognitive world. The magic models such as 'Atomic Fission', being irrigated by them, shined one symbol after another and melded with the soul, like the magic models from the first circle to the ninth circle!

Boom!

In the soundless explosion, 'Atomic Fission' was quickly constructed without any additional control. That was the 'privilege' of a grand arcanist who had a legendary class and a fundamental spell!

The energy continued surging, but the shimmer of 'Eternal Blaze' already made his soul about to explode. Then, it fell quiet and showed no more reaction.

Even though it was a basic legendary spell, Lucien needed to be level-three legendary in order to construct it, or his soul would not be able to bear it!

The energy was still flowing. The complicated signals of the legendary class, 'Atom Controller', glowed with the 'Atomic Fission' at the center, until they were gathered and unleashed unimaginable spiritual power, repairing and improving his soul.

Lucien sensed the rapid growth of his soul. It turned from weak to succulent and was even about to explode.

Without panicking, Lucien gathered the energy storm and his spiritual power and released them to the void outside!

Tides rumbled, creating a tiny demiplane in the void before him.

The demiplane quickly expanded, absorbing the materials from the advancement ritual of 'Atom Controller' while changing according to Lucien's cognitive world. This was a boundless space where every star was made of two parts in different colors and surrounded by a certain number of illusionary 'planets'. They seemed to be everywhere, but when one observed more carefully, they would be only in one spot.

Among them, the planet that represented iron was larger and larger, turning into the place where Lucien's magic tower would be located.

The demiplane shivered and gradually stabilized. A space node was directly connected to Lucien's soul, so that he could jump to his own demiplane wherever he was as long as nothing was interrupting teleportation. His life was much safer.

After the demiplane was completely steady, Lucien opened his eyes, only to discover that the illusionary sky of fate was gone, the materials in the advancement ritual were gone, and the materials for the ritual of Origin of Magic became ashes.

Sensing his influence on the real world and the terrifying strength, Lucien asked in delight:

"Is this the power of legendary?"

Fernando asked with a loud voice, "What's the name of your legendary class?"

“Atom Controller.” Replied Lucien with a smile.

“The name of your demiplane?”

Approach Science ¹ ... Lucien almost blurted out. Holding back his amusement, he said, “The internal structure of atoms is somewhat similar to space. The microscopic world is like a fractal universe. So, it will be named as ‘Atomic Universe’.

“An integration of the smallest and the largest. Good.” Oliver praised him.

Douglas smiled, “You’d better be adapted to the changes of your soul and your spiritual power after you’re back. The day after tomorrow, you will participate in the meeting of the Highest Council for the first time.”

“Yes, Mr. President.” Lucien was as respectful as before.

Fernando walked out together with Lucien and suggested solemnly, “You need to choose your legendary spells wisely. The level one of legendary can only support three legendary spells. The capacity will grow to six as your strength increases. So, you need to choose them appropriately with consideration of your needs in attack, defense, escape, control and all the other aspects.”

“Master, I understand. I’ll pick the legendary spells judiciously after I’m stabilized.” Lucien nodded.

It was common sense for legendary sorcerers. As their level advanced, they would be able to pick up more legendary spells, and their demiplane would be more complete. The level two of legendary supported ten legendary spells at most, and the level three, fifteen. For the top legendary experts like the president, they could wield twenty-one spells. Also, every advancement in level involved a better integration of the soul and the cognitive world and a strong solidification of the cognitive world.

Fernando nodded, “Keep your advancement a secret for now. Don’t tell anybody except your queen. We won’t tell it in the Highest Council, either. After all, the title of grand arcanist is enough for you to enjoy all the privileges. In such a case, the Church will be 'surprised' if they plot against you."

The Lord of the Undead was not invited partly because he was in the alternate dimension and partly because the Hand of Paleness was not very friendly to Lucien. It was for the sake of confidentiality.

.....

Inside Babel...

Seated on the sofa lazily, Lucien turned on the magic radio and listened to the president's speech:

"...I admit that I was very confused about the nature of gravity, but the supreme being I referred to was the truth of the world and the law of the universe, which had nothing to do with gods..."

"...On the path of arcana, I have as many questions as any of you do. I am often lost, and I have to grit my teeth in my exploration and research. The only difference between you and me is that I have walked further than you for now, but it's possible that some of you will exceed me in the future. Therefore, I do not represent the truth of arcana; your logical, flawless deduction and observation, as well as your strict experiment data and results does. Only the arcana studies based on such things are of actual significance, and the other notions are still in the category of philosophy..."

"...The universe is so vast that we have to stumble forward in fear, but we will never give up..."

"...This time, Benedict III has shown his understanding and application of the magic from the ancient Magic Empire. It suggests that he is much more underdeveloped than we are, and that they are in the bloody, primitive phase. It means that we are on the correct path..."

Listening to the president's speech quietly, Lucien put on a smile.

(End of Volume VI)

Chapter 580: The Highest Council

In the morning two days later, Lucien, who had been stabilizing his strength inside Babel, came to the thirty-fifth floor of the Allyn magic tower early and opened the door of the conference room of the Highest Council.

The conference room was no different from any other conference room that Lucien had seen. They were equally spacious, and they all had a common long cherry desk at the center. The only thing special was that the twenty-four chairs were made of precious materials. Their velvet plating was emitting luxury and yet low-profile redness. Different patterns had been engraved on the back of the chairs to indicate the identity of the members. Among them, there were the storm with lightning, the crown of arcana and magic, etc.

He was the legendary sorcerer who came earliest, followed by an alchemical puppet in the appearance of a little girl.

Lucien looked over, only to discover that the back of the chair was the pattern of the internal structure of atoms, where electrons surrounded protons and neutrons, like an infinitely reduced version of the celestial bodies motion system.

“The classic model that is soon to be outdated...” Remarked secretly, Lucien nodded at Klaus and sat in his spot.

“Mr. Klaus, you seem to have been here for a while?” Seeing that they were alone in the conference room, Lucien asked in smalltalk.

Klaus smiled casually, “Evans, you are already a grand arcanist. Such courtesies are unnecessary. Just call me Klaus. I’m a person who prefers to arrive early. Every time I wait for other people, I feel that I have additional time, and I can think, idle by and enjoy the luxury of freedom without being disturbed. This is a wondrous feeling, don’t you think? You are an early person, too?”

“Yes. I’ll be anxious when I think that other people are waiting for me, but when I wait for other people, as long as they are not late, my mind is peaceful and my head is full of inspirations after I come early.” Replied Lucien with a smile, not expecting them to share the same feeling in that regard.

Klaus opened his hands. “We understand life and enjoyment better than they do. However, for me, the luxury time is over, because there are so many questions that I would like to discuss with you the moment I see you. The new alchemy is full of intoxicating charm. It is even more addictive than all of my puppets, golems and alchemical lives.”

“If the questions are about the new alchemy, I would be happy to discuss them with you.” Said Lucien with a smile.

Klaus knocked the table. A pair of metal arms suddenly fell from the ceiling with a cup of hot red tea. Then, the creature said respectfully, “Your Excellency Klaus, your favorite ‘Count Red Tea’.”

“Evans, what’s your favorite drink? Ask them to prepare it.” Sipping the red tea, Klaus went on. “As a matter of fact, after reading your deductions based on protons, the periodic table, the relative atomic weight and the equivalent elements, I had absolutely no doubt about the existence of neutrons. Its discovery was only a matter of time. However, I do have a lot of confusion about the tracks, transition and radiation of electrons.”

As I expected... Lucien was not surprised at Klaus’s confusion. After asking for a ‘Sky Blue’, he said, “There are indeed many problems in that regard. We can discuss them together.”

The smile on Klaus’s face was gradually gone. “First of all, the electronic transition you described is a quantum process. That is to say, when it jumps from one orbit to another, there will be no journey in the middle at all. It will simply blink to the destination. Is it some sort of space jump or teleportation? Is it what our space magic is based on?”

Because space jump, teleportation and barrier could never be explained, the space magic had been developing very slowly and had an extremely high demand. Even the South Church and the Congress of Magic did not have the wealth to deploy too many permanent transmission magic circles. They could only manage to connect their headquarters to the capitals of the countries. As for the local provinces, counties and cities, they had to count on the primitive way. Things were only improved after electromagnetism messaging, wired phones and telegrams were developed.

“Perhaps yes, perhaps no. I haven’t really studied it yet. The transition of energy level is just a preliminary explanation. There may be better theories to describe it in the future. We can only approach the truth step by step but cannot claim that we already have the truth.” Lucien did not expect Klaus to ask such a sophisticated question.

Klaus nodded, knowing that the problem wouldn’t be resolved anytime soon. After all, the energy level and transition of electrons was still a theoretical speculation in Lucien’s new alchemy and had never been observed in an experiment yet. They could only be inferred based on the observed phenomena.

“The question is, why do electrons have orbits, and why would they ‘transit’? Gravity makes the artificial planets spin around the world and creates their orbits, but the electromagnetic power will only make the electrons hit the nucleus.” An indifferent voice echoed at the gate. Hathaway, beautiful but strict, had arrived early, too.

The studies on the new alchemy had been in the phase of searching for neutrons or other anomalies previously. Although there were such problems, it was not the mainstream. However, after the discovery of neutrons, the explanation of the orbits and transition of electrons became a top priority for the grand arcanists and the legendary sorcerers. Also, it could be seen from her fluent description that Hathaway had considered the problem for a while.

Rubbing his eyebrow, Lucien said, “The electromagnetic power probably does not apply to the microscopic realm. Some other forces are playing a role. Orbits and transitions are just a hypothesis for now. We can only confirm whether it is true based on experiments.”

Those grand arcanists and legendary sorcerers were truly smart. Their questions precisely hit the flaw of the new alchemy in the description of the atomic structure.

“The electrons, neutrons and protons must have certain built-in qualities that cause the orbits; we cannot add orbits to the electrons and dictate that they move according to that.” Hathaway observed, not satisfied about Lucien’s explanation.

“Also, the new alchemy can only describe the simple structure of a single electron. It cannot explain the complicated structure where more electrons are involved. Your theory to explain the original alchemical reactions with the exchange of external electrons fits the reality well, but it cannot be included in your model.” The Lord of Storm, as impatient as ever, had also arrived early.

Lucien rose to greet his teacher. Then he shook his head with a smile, “Forgive me, that model is still premature and has to be perfected by more arcanists.”

Fernando nodded. He sat down and said, “I often feel that deeper mysteries are hidden behind the problem.”

The four leading persons in the field of elements and alchemy began a comprehensive discussion on the new alchemy. In the meantime, ‘Absolute Defense’ Ataman, ‘Eye of Curse’ Atlant and other legendary sorcerers also came.

By the time Douglas walked in with his staff and the meeting was about to begin, the discussion about the new alchemy finally died down.

Lucien took the opportunity to ask Hathaway. “Granny, when will Mr. Raventi advance into legendary?”

In the past days, Lucien had been trying to reach out to Raventi, only to no avail. Natasha was too busy dealing with the parliament, the cabinet and himself to learn the details, either.

Hearing Lucien calling herself as granny like Natasha, Hathaway spoke as indifferently as before, although her right index finger bounced slightly. “Raventi returned to his magic tower and cut off all communication with the outside world. He is devoted to the reorganization of his previous knowledge, hoping to completely grasp ‘Elements Resolve’ that he parsed earlier as soon as possible.”

‘Elements Resolve’ was Hathaway’s unique spell. It was not submitted to the Congress, but the members of the Will of Elements could learn it with their contribution. Lucien planned to exchange the Will of Elements’ reward for him after he became a grand arcanist and a legendary sorcerer for the spell and improve his ‘Elemental Order’ with its reference, changing the latter into a legendary spell.

As for the legendary class, ‘Atom Controller’, Lucien also planned to submit it to the Congress and the Will of Elements in exchange for more legendary spells. Becoming a grand arcanist would be rewarded by legendary items, and becoming a legendary sorcerer would mean that they could pick a legendary spell from the Congress freely.

“I hope that Mr. Raventi advances successfully.” Lucien prayed for him sincerely.

Both ‘Lord of Elements’ and ‘Atom Controller’ should have a high match rate with Raventi’s cognitive world. For him whose cognitive world had already half-solidified, the higher the match rate was, the more hopeful it would be for him to advance into legendary. As soon as he mastered ‘Elements Resolve’, he would be able to try advancing.

Klaus smiled on the opposite side, “Soon, every meeting of the Highest Council will be the end of the world...”

He was rather ambiguous, but since he was looking at Fernando, Lucien immediately understood what he meant. Before, his master had often kept the meetings of the Highest Council in terrible storms on his own; if Mr. Raventi, who was as much a roarer as his teacher, also joined the meetings, it would definitely be the end of the world.

Fernando glared at Klaus, ‘terrorizing’ him to lower his head and evade the pressure. Then, the man said in a low voice, “Evans, you are very creative in inventing and simplifying alchemical items. Let’s communicate more often.”

At this moment, Douglas stood up and looked around at the other eighteen members of the Highest Council, before he said:

“The meeting today is mainly to welcome Lucien Evans to join us.”

Clap, clap, clap. Everybody applauded. The Lord of the Undead, the Monarch of Fate, the Sun King, Donald and another ninth-circle member, were out on missions and not present in the assembly of the Highest Council.

After Lucien stood up and greeted everyone, Douglas smiled. “Our first motion is, when will the ceremony for Lucien’s advancement into a grand arcanist be held?”

Chapter 581: Ambitious Lucien

When Douglas asked the question, he was looking at Lucien. Naturally, it was his own thought that mattered in such celebrations.

“The celebrations for the previous few arcanists were all held together with the celebrations for their advancement into legendary. Holding it twice will be too troublesome and waste too much time. Also, I feel inappropriate to celebrate when I am not a legendary sorcerer yet. So, let’s hold the celebration after I advance into legendary.” Lucien expressed his opinion.

Although being congratulated in ceremonies was a delightful experience for most people, and the arcanists in the past were no exceptions, holding celebrations repetitively for the same reason would turn joy into numbness and eventually torture.

Also, during the celebration, the Elf’s Royal Palace, the Elder Council of the Druids and the friends of the Dark Congress would definitely send their legendary experts to come. When he got in touch with them closely, it would be easy to expose the fact that he had already advanced into legendary. Then, the enemy would avoid the major mistake in intelligence and be much better prepared against Lucien.

Fernando leaned against the back of his chair and nodded, “I agree with Lucien. Although grand arcanist is the most appreciated and glorious title within the Congress, only legendary means the fundamental improvement of life. It’s a sublimation that every class acknowledges.”

Now that Lucien himself and his teacher said the same thing, the other members of the Highest Council naturally did not pursue it any further.

Douglas nodded in approval. “I had been worried that Lucien would be arrogant because of the two major achievements during the ‘night of miracles’. I’m happy to see that he is as modest, cautious and rational as before, and that he understands the importance of his own strength.”

Lucien tightened his facial muscles to prevent himself from laughing out loud. The president was certainly not bad at acting at all!

“However, the fact that Lucien has become a grand arcanist should not be unannounced. Otherwise, the other arcanists in the Congress would be misled into thinking that we do not welcome the growing young people.” Douglas went on, “I propose that ‘News of the World’ and ‘Arcana Voice’ announce the news in their program to make as many arcanists, nobles and ordinary people as possible know.”

“What about the previous methods? Should they be applied?” A thick book, evidently one on the list that Lucien gave to her, was placed before Hellen. She was reading it so carefully that she was only sparing part of her attention to the meeting.

That was her meeting habit. None of the Highest Council felt anything strange about it. Except for the critical subjects and the discussions that involved herself, few things could drag her out of the world of arcana and magic studies. However, since it was her turn to guard Affair Committee in the next five years, she would have to instruct the Affair Committee regarding similar matters, so she had to ask.

The previous methods of the Congress of Magic was to inform the local branches and ask them to forward the news to the sorcerers and apprentices in their jurisdiction. Also, the cover of every journal would be added with a line that specified who was granted the title of grand arcanist for what by the Congress for three issues in a row.

Douglas said affirmatively, “It was my special proposal just now. The previous ways will also be adopted.”

“Part of the sorcerers do not have the habit of listening to the radio. There will be sometime before the journal is released. So, I propose a letter be sent to the magic tower of every senior-rank sorcerer to tell them Evans has become a grand arcanist.” Said ‘Prophet’ Bergner, who was wearing the typical grey, pointy hat of the Tower.

The Congress of Magic did not have many senior-rank members. According to Lucien’s impression, there were only about five hundred of them. It wouldn’t be too troublesome to send a letter to each of them. So, none of the Highest Council objected to the Prophet’s suggestion.

Douglas announced after a smile, “The first subject is now over. On behalf of the Congress, I now give Lucien the title of grand arcanist.”

While talking, he took out an emblem and handed it over to Lucien. It was rather similar to the arcana badge, except the darkness was more profound, and the background was glittering stars, making it look like a real and vast sky.

It was a unique badge that represented a grand arcanist and included the permissions of the Highest Council. Although it only had the magic effect of ‘Free Movement’, it could mobilize the power of the magic towers in Allyn.

After Lucien put the emblem on his chest, applause echoed again. It marked that he had officially become a grand arcanist and a member of the Highest Council.

“The second subject is how to effectively control the four countries of the strait and how to diminish the foundation of the Church’s faith.” Douglas stopped smiling. “You must’ve witnessed Benedict II’s two God’s Arrivals. It is not hard to say that, even though the power of faith was not why it was so destructive, the prayer of the believers and the clerics were at least a trigger to perform it. If the faith of the general public is diminished, it may be difficult to cast God’s Arrival or other divine powers.”

“Whatever the result is, it is at least what we should work on. What do you think?”

Grant, the Light of Stars, said straightforwardly, “We can strike the faith in the God of Truth like how the Church hunted sorcerers in the past.”

He was a tall, slim, middle-aged man without a beard. His eyes were like the most brilliant and pure stars, which filled him with amazing charisma.

“We can’t.” Erica, ‘Master of Transformation’, objected, “The clerics in the four countries of the strait and the north coastline are building a mild church. Also, our control is far from flawless. Reckless actions will only result in turmoil and give other enemies opportunities. You should know that the North Church has been keeping distance from us since we controlled this area.”

Having operated in the Duchy of Calais for years, the Eye of Curse and her were deeply associated with local nobles. They were the pro-nobles within the Congress.

The Eye of Curse followed. “If we strike the mild believers, we cannot dissuade other clerics and nobles in the future. We have to achieve our purpose in more approachable ways.”

“I agree with Erica and Atlant.” Crossing his fingers, Brook said solemnly. “I believe that you must’ve noticed that, because of ‘Arcana Voice’, the ordinary people’s faith has reduced a lot in the past years, which can be seen by their frequency of their liturgical sessions and their daily talk. So, I believe that promoting magic radios and increasing the attraction of the programs are by far the most effective methods.”

There were plenty of sorcerers and apprentices in Rentato, which allowed the Congress to detect the changes of the ordinary people quickly.

Hearing Brook’s opinion, Holt and the other members of the Highest Council looked at Lucien. He was the one who invented broadcast and who settled the programs. He was the authority in broadcasting.

Lucien did not back off but said after rolling his quill for a while. “It’s very reasonable to deploy two channels right now. Together with the two channels that the Hoffenberg family and the Kingdom of Holm are going to establish, we don't need more programs. For the ordinary people, they are busy with life during the day and do not have the time for radio except the night. If there are too many channels in the period, they will be distracted from 'Arcana Voice'."

"The most important thing we should do is to lower the cost of magic radios and promote it to most families."

"In that case, we should ban the personal radio stations." The Moon Scholar added.

Klaus, as the Alchemy Master, offered his professional opinion. "We have received another batch of dwarf artisans, but they are not enough. It will take even longer for us to train our own workers. Therefore, in the foreseeable future, even if the cost of magic radios is lowered, it still cannot meet the demand of popularization."

"If there are more mechanical products that can replace the functions of part of the magic circles, we may be able to make breakthroughs."

"Natasha, James and I had a plan about the popularization." Lucien proposed their discussion last year. In the end, he said, "Apart from that, I have some other thoughts."

"Feel free to speak. You always have new things that amaze us." Douglas hinted Lucien to continue with a smile, and none of the Highest Council objected.

Lucien coughed and said, "The magic radios cannot be popularized partly because of their cost and partly because ordinary people earn too little to afford them. By the same logic, a society based on such a foundation makes it impossible for us to reap more wealth. Although the nobles are rich, there are simply too few of them."

"We should work with Holm, Brianne and other countries and come up with a five-year alchemy industry boosting plan. Through our investment and inventions, the jobs with better pay will increase, so that the ordinary people will earn more, and the overall wealth of the society will grow."

“Lucien, you have the potential to be the prime minister of the kingdom. Your idea of the overall wealth of the society is not bad.” Klaus said half jokingly, “The problem is that most ordinary people are incapable of working in the alchemical workshops.”

The alchemical workshops in the magic society had much a higher demand than the factories in the industrial age, because the ordinary people in the industrial age were already reasonably educated.

Lucien smiled, “Why are they incapable? Because they lack the necessary knowledge and skills, which can be made up by education. I believe that the education in the kingdoms where teachers teach individuals in private is too obsolete. We should promote magic schools and let more people improve themselves by learning. Also, as soon as they know more things and their horizons are widened, they will definitely be less devout.”

It was exactly Lucien tried to do since the beginning: change society and change the fate of the ordinary people!

“Yes, the more knowledgeable someone is, the less likely they will be a pious believer.” Fernando nodded slightly and said, “Before, we couldn’t promote schools because the area was not under our control. It’s about time.”

Lucien added, “I suggest that schools be divided into two kinds. The first kind offers five-year education, where language and common sense in arcana, magic, biology, religion, history and law will be taught. I call it generic education. The Congress of Magic and the kingdoms will cover part of the cost, and the ordinary people will cover the rest. While their fundamental abilities are improved, we can also directly select the people with great arcana talents from schools, which will be easier than the past.”

“The second kind is the professional education designed to provide talents for the major alchemical workshops. The alchemical workshop will cover all the cost, the Congress will provide teachers, and the kingdoms will waive their taxes. The ordinary people will sign an apprentice contract before they enter such schools and have to go to the corresponding alchemical workshop after their graduation. I have named such schools ‘Lanxiang’¹.”

Chapter 582: Transformation of Identities

Chapter 582: Transformation of Identities

“Lanxiang, what does it mean?” Asked Oliver in confusion. He was familiar with the different languages and cultures in many different countries in the alternate dimensions, but he was helpless in front of Lucien’s made-up words.

Lucien said solemnly and sincerely, “Although such schools are based on the apprentice system, they are undoubtedly a brand-new form on their own. The students do not depend on anybody else, and they will be paid after they enter the alchemical workshops, except that their wages are lower and their contracts are longer. Therefore, I have created a brand-new term for them – Lanxiang ¹ . It’s a name for such schools that contains the meaning of dream.”

“What’s your opinion?”

With his eyes closed, Atlant said with a smile, “I strongly agree with the idea to promote generic schools and vocational schools, but there is one problem. In the apprentice system, as long as you raise an apprentice, the apprentice will have to work for the alchemical workshop for free for ten years. All you need to prove is accommodation and food. However, this Lanxiang... Lanxiang demands the alchemical workshop to pay for the education in advance and for the apprentices’ work after their graduation. I don’t think they will take it willingly unless the Congress and the kingdoms browbeat them.”

“Mr. Atlant, times have changed. The apprentice system in the past can no longer meet the demand of the current alchemical workshops. I don’t think you need me to explain it. It can be seen by the fact that the apprentices of the Congress almost all became students in schools.”

“I’ll talk to the few companies I have shares in and ask them to invest in the first Lanxiang. In a couple of years, when their cost is lowered and their market is expanded under the support of incessant professional workers, the other alchemical workshops will probably be still short of hands. The early investment from the companies on their education will be retrieved from the profits they make.”

Lucien made the gesture that he was not forcing anybody to do anything. It was always difficult to make other people pay money. Thankfully, he was no longer the young man who lobbied for environmental protection. Right now, he had become a member of the Highest Council who had his own forces and his wealth. He could totally leave other people behind and set an example for them to follow.

Also, the actual cost wouldn't be too much. He could ask Natasha to allocate a redundant abbey to him as the school, and issue tasks with his arcana points to make the sorcerers and the graduated apprentices teach. Also, starting from the second year, he would arrange for the students in the school to work in the alchemical workshops as 'interns' in their spare time, so that part of his early investment could be recovered.

Seeing Lucien's attitude, Atlant and the other sorcerers who were still skeptical were relieved. He nodded in a smile, "Indeed. Time has changed. The old stuff should be buried in the past. I suggest that the Highest Council vote regarding 'Lanxiang'. We will encourage the alchemical workshop to invest but won't force them to. Evans, if you want to build any, count me in."

Douglas clapped his hands softly. "I agree with the idea, too. The Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company and other corporations owned by the Congress will invest first as examples."

Since the investment was not forced, all the members of the Highest Council raised their hands. The atmosphere was rather harmonious.

"There's one other problem. Is the support of the Congress and the governments enough to popularize the generic schools? Will the students be out of jobs after their graduation? It must be noted that the apprentice system can almost meet the demands of everybody except for the alchemical workshops. Also, unlike the students of 'Lanxiang', they won't be built to fit in a certain alchemical workshop. If they spend a huge fortune only to discover that their life has not improved at all, it's possible that they will hate us and rejoin the embrace of the God of Truth. That's against our wish." Atlant was good at figuring out what people might think.

Lucien smiled, "Mr. Atlant, the change of time is a chain reaction. When the number of alchemical workers grow, the social wealth increases, and the alchemical items that shorten the distance among cities are invented, the whole social structure will definitely go through qualitative changes. Perhaps, one job will be subdivided into many professional jobs, and many things unimaginable in the past will appear. But of course, we will control the scale of the generic education. It will have to suit our wealth and social condition."

"Then, I have no objection. Evans, you are not reckless at all." Atlant did not know much about social development, but his old partner, 'Master of Transformation', was an excellent historian. She agreed with Lucien's prediction that social labor would be further divided. After talking to Atlant silently, she made him drop his suspicion.

The discussion about the generic schools went on for a while. Under the glorious banner of striking the faith of the Church, the Highest Council passed the motion, albeit stressing that it must not overstep the line.

"I would like to say something else." Lucien discovered that he was more and more like a leader. "I suggest we regulate the alchemical workshops in terms of overwork and child labor. The alchemical workshops must not overly exploit the workers, which will push more people to join the Church. It will be best if the working time is limited to ten hours every day. Children can be hired as workers, but their work should be settled according to their age..."

Because of simplification and promotion problems, the alchemical workshops were still underdeveloped, and the workers were in relatively good health. Therefore, Lucien believed that regulations should be made before the alchemical workshops enjoyed the benefit of exploiting workers. It would be much easier this way.

As for child labor, it was only a helpless compromise. Due to the lack of a good charity system, many orphans needed a job in order to survive. He could not pursue his dream without bothering the actual circumstances, which would only hurt them.

“I don’t think we need to talk about such trivia in the Highest Council.” ‘Absolute Defense’ Ataman stopped Lucien from talking on. “Regulating the alchemical workshops and better treatment for workers are suitable for our goal to renovate the image of sorcerers, but all we need to do is to propose the idea. Leave the details to the Affair Committee.”

Oliver also interjected, “Evans, you are now also a member of the Highest Council. You can ask the Affair Committee to draft a law according to your idea first and then show it to everyone. There’s no need to discuss the specific clauses right now. Everybody’s time is precious.”

Lucien nodded slightly, hinting that he was still adapting himself to his new identity. He was no longer a specific executor of orders, but a proposer, reviewer, decision-maker supervisor.

However, after hearing Oliver’s words, Lucien remembered how he lobbied against the pollution problem again. In order for the Affair Committee to pass a similar regulation, he visited and talked to so many big shots. In the end, he had to introduce his opinion in the conference room of the Affair Committee and accept their questions. He was not even involved in their decision-making process but could only wait for a result. However, right now, Oliver asked him to let the Affair Committee draft a regulation as if it were not important at all.

“Is this the feeling of standing on top of all the sorcerers...” Lucien remarked with mixed feelings.

In the Highest Council, the chairman of the Affair Committee was the grand arcanist who supervised Allyn and got changed every five years. The vice-chairmen were Oliver, Ataman and the Sun King, who were good at battles or handling affairs. They would lead the external operations or exploration in the alternate dimensions.

Since the regulation of the alchemical workshop did not involve any immediate loss, the other members of the Highest Council did not object to it. They discussed more about the control of their territory, the construction of the three strongholds and the number of airships.

Lucien did not know much about them and simply listened. After all, even the seemingly clumsy airships were absolutely different from what he imagined. Although they were slow, many magic circles and divine power circles had been established on them, making them air fortresses. General attacks could not damage them at all. They had the advantages that planes did not.

As for the large planes, it was unnecessary for the senior-rank sorcerers, and for those below the senior rank, magic steam trains were a better option to connect more places with railroads.

Without him knowing it, the meeting approached the end. Lucien spoke again, "Everybody, right now, the highest honor in every field of magic belongs to different organizations and countries instead of the Congress, which is highly irregular. Since the most glorious title of arcana and magic is the grand arcanist granted by the Congress, the highest honor should also be a prize issued by the Congress. Also, since the arcana is developing faster and faster with more and more achievements, our standard should be more strict. Not only must the laureates have historic accomplishments, but they also need to have their own theoretical explanation on them."

"If the Congress agrees to set up such a prize, I would like to sponsor it with one third of my dividends to encourage the development of arcana and magic."

After he became a legendary sorcerer, most of the materials he needed were too precious to be bought and had to be exchanged with other items. Therefore, dividends were actually not that important for Lucien. He might as well use them to make up for his notoriety as the head-crushing devil.

"You would like to offer one third of your dividends?" Douglas looked at Lucien, surprised.

Because the Allyn Telephone and Telegram Company was still in the phase of infrastructural construction, Lucien's dividends were more than ten thousand Thales. One third of them were almost a huge sum of sponsorship.

Lucien nodded solemnly. "Yes. That's my wish."

"What about you? Do you have any objection?" Douglas looked at other people, mainly Hathaway, Atlant and Hellen.

Hathaway replied briefly, "It's not bad that the Congress sets up a prize."

They did not need to spend their own money after all, and the standard was so high that probably nobody would win the prize in decades. So, other people did not object to it now that Douglas was tempted.

Douglas chuckled, "Now that everybody agrees, we will set up the prize that contains eleven schools. As for the name, it will be named as Lucien Evans Prize, subdivided into Evans Prize in Elements, Evans Prize in Astrology, etc. The reward will be a level-eight perfect magic item."

Chapter 583: Selection

This is so deja vu... Lucien almost failed to control his facial expression after hearing Douglas' proposal. He blurted out, "Mr. President, there's also pure mathematics!"

"Ah, I almost forgot. Mathematics is the brightest gem on the crown of arcana and magic. How can we forget that? Now, there are prizes in twelve fields in total." Douglas patted his forehead and said humorously, "Lucien, your proposal was a bit late, or you could've won Evans Prize in Elements and Astrology for the discovery of neutrons and the introduction to the general theory of relativity."

Lucien waved his hands unconcernedly, "I have too many magic items for me to use now. So, the rewards are not important. If it's about fame, with the Lucien Evans Prize, I believe I will be remembered together with every prize winner."

'Superconductivity', the Silver Moon Medal, and 'Quanta', the Ice & Snow Medal, had both been issued. However, Lucien had plenty of badges on his chest, and those two did not have special magic effects that could make up his shortcomings. Therefore, he did not wear them in case of interference but kept them in his storage bag.

"Only the arcanists who have won too many awards can be as generous as you." Oliver smiled. Playboy or not, he was one of the few members who were good at talking in the Highest Council. The rest of them all lacked social skills even though they looked normal. For example, Brook, the No. 2 person, was gentle and open-minded, but he was a bit unapproachable.

As for Fernando, Vicente, Hathaway, Hellen and Davey, who did not even look normal, they were naturally even worse.

After teasing Lucien, Oliver turned to Douglas. "Mr. President, I don't think prizes according to schools fit the current situation. It's obvious that the new alchemy will involve electromagnetism, and the general theory of relativity includes many other schools, too. Should we regroup the Evans Prize into a few prizes of larger ranges?”

Douglas nodded in approval, “Well said. When I read Lucien’s general theory of relativity, I obviously sensed the content of multiple schools. In fact, I think that all the concepts belong to the arcane system, and one Evans Prize in Arcana will be sufficient. But obviously, it will not be very convincing.”

“Why not? Elements, electromagnetism, light-darkness, astrology, force field, alchemy and thermodynamics all study the law of the world. It doesn’t matter to call it Evans Prize in Arcana. Illusion, transformation, summoning and necromancy are more about the specific things made of material and energy. They will be covered by the Evans Prize in Magic.” Brook remarkably, didn’t object to it because of their history.

Lucien thought for a moment. “Why do we have to divide them according to schools? The accomplishments that reveal the laws of the world will be awarded with Evans Prize in Arcana, those which are more practical and applicable will be awarded with the prize in magic, and together with the prize in mathematics that is about more abstract accomplishments, there will be three prizes in total.”

“I suggest the studies in the school of necromancy that benefit the body and the soul and the studies on the mind in the school of illusion be combined into one prize, because they are all in the category of meditation. It will help us reshape the image of the sorcerers.” Atlant proposed.

Lucien scratched his chin. Evans Prize in Medicine? Please don’t come up with any stranger stuff. If there was a prize for peace, he would propose that it be awarded to his teacher and Granny Hathaway for maintaining world peace with ‘Eternal Blaze’ and human bomb.

“Very good, Arcana, Magic, Mathematics and Medicine. Four prizes correspond with four fundamental forces.” Douglas made the decision and received no objection. “Alright, the meeting is now over. You will finish the mission given to you or send them to the Affair Committee.”

Hardly had he completed his sentence when he was gone. Lucien, who hadn't stood up yet, was rather shocked. Mr. President was too fast a runner, wasn't he?

"He's devoted to the review and learning of the general theory of relativity. You'd better be braced for the attacks of ten thousand whys." Fernando said to Lucien, not surprised at all. Then, he left and returned to Thunder Hell directly, as space teleportation was forbidden in the conference room.

Fernando was also trying to understand the general theory of relativity, but the discovery of neutrons distracted his attention. He was busy working on the many problems in the new alchemy.

The other members of the Highest Council left without any delay, proving what Oliver said earlier: everybody's time was precious.

"I suspect that the power that restrains neutrons and protons is one of the two fundamental powers that haven't been confirmed." Hathaway said thoughtfully.

Lucien nodded slightly. "I think so, too."

It was not until he spoke that Lucien realized Hathaway had walked to the door without waiting for him to answer at all.

"So, she was only talking to herself." Lucien scratched his chin.

Oliver walked over. "Do you want me to give you a ride to the Affair Committee?"

"Thank you, but no, Mr. Oliver. Thompson is there." Lucien refused with a smile, knowing that he was looking for an excuse to go to the Affair Committee.

Oliver opened his hands. "It seems that there's nothing I can help you with. Lucien, I'm told that you established Evans Music Prize when you were in Aalto? Are you interested in setting up a prize in arts with me?"

Oscars? Lucien was almost choked by the Sky Blue he was drinking.

“Mr. Oliver, I have just given away one third of my wealth. I fear that I don’t have the ability.” Lucien subtly refused Oliver’s offer.

Oliver smiled, “It seems that I have to work on my own now.”

He merely felt that only a great musician like Lucien was qualified to set up a prize with him, but he was not forcing Lucien to.

After Oliver left, Klaus stood up and said with a smile, “I’m used to arriving first and leaving last. Evans, you said that the Lucien Evans Prize requires more strict standards. Will the candidates only be qualified after their theory and discovery blows up other people’s heads?”

“Mr. Klaus, you are truly humorous.” Lucien smiled awkwardly. He was simply too infamous!

After Klaus left, Lucien intentionally coughed aloud. There were only himself and Hellen, Witch of Iceland, in the room.

Hellen was so devoted to Evans Geometry that she did not catch Lucien’s cough at all.

Having no other choice, Lucien kept coughing.

Hellen still showed no response.

“Ms. Hellen...” Lucien simply called her.

Hellen finally raised her head in confusion. “What’s up?”

Then, she looked around and asked in a daze, “Is the meeting over?”

“Yes.” Lucien was rather embarrassed. He was not nearly focused enough compared to her.

Hellen nodded without any surprise, as if she were used to it, and simply resumed studying.

“Ms. Hellen...” Lucien called her helplessly again.

Looking at Lucien with her bright blue eyes, Hellen asked confusedly, “What’s up? Why are you still here?”

“Didn’t you say that you would bring me to select a legendary spell after the meeting is over?” Lucien tried to keep his smile.

Hellen remembered her promise. She cleaned the books, paper and quill before her and then tapped the ring on her left hand, so that she would know clearly what things she needed to ask the three committees to do.

“Follow me.” Then, without any delay, Hellen brought Lucien to a secret library on the thirty-fifth floor.

“According to the standard, you may choose one spell.” Hellen had always been short with words.

Presenting the advancement graph of the legendary class, ‘Atom Controller’, and the two corresponding basic legendary spells, Lucien asked, “What if I submit them?”

“Two basic spells can be exchanged for two, and the legendary can be exchanged for two. You may choose five in total.” Hellen’s attention was finally attracted after she saw the items, but due to regulations, she could only confirm that they were legendary for now. If she wanted to learn them, she would have to trade for them.

Lucien stepped into the library and saw legendary spells and uncanny rituals on the book shelves.

According to the statistics of the Congress, 156 to 165 legendary spells had appeared so far. Some were racial-specific spells, like the vampires’ ‘Real Dream’, and some were the trump cards of the legendary sorcerers, such as Hathaway’s ‘Elements Resolve’. Those spells were not in the library. As a result, there were only 87 legendary spells for choosing.

Among them, the legendary spells that had little to do with his legendary class could barely be learnt, and the conflicting ones could never be learnt, unless his arcana expertise soared.

In the next few years, Lucien could only construct three legendary spells in his soul. So, he had to choose widely.

“My Atomic Fission is a ranged attack that includes high temperature, energy storm and curse, so I don’t need to choose a massive-destructive spell. Also, the ‘Space Staff’ that I intent to build can provide acceleration and deceleration, which can help me escape and control. I can drop the spells in that aspect, too...”

Lucien only had a basic understanding about the terrifying spell based on the general theory of relativity. Chances were that it could really manipulate time and space as he advanced.

“Spells about barriers and locks... My teacher promised to teach me ‘Storm Barrier’, and I don’t need to pick them.” Looking at the names and effects of the spells on the shelf, Lucien considered carefully, “What I need most right now is a legendary spell that attacks individuals...”

As he made up his mind, Lucien soon found three candidates: ‘Snow Goddess’s Anger’, ‘Vengeful Gaze’ and ‘Vaporization’.

In light of the fact that he already had freezing spells, Lucien preferred the latter two to increase the diversity of his spells.

‘Vengeful Gaze’ could create terrible, high-energy lasers with an excellent penetration, while ‘Vaporization’ could put the target in high heat. Even a legendary sorcerer could be vaporized if he did not take any defense.

“Vengeful Gaze can penetrate most defenses. Also, it is very fast and hard to avoid...” It didn’t take Lucien much time before he made a choice. It would be the third legendary spell he was going to construct.

Later, Lucien selected four legendary spells he was going to study later, namely ‘Mental Fulmination’ that affected thinking, ‘Mirror of Fate’ that was prophetic, ‘Reunion’ that could save his life and ‘Abrupt Magic Reverse’, the best magic defense.

Lucien had thought to choose ‘Luxury Cracking’, but he had ‘Elemental Order’ that could be exchanged for ‘Elements Resolve’ and ‘Cracking (Advanced)’. So, it appeared redundant. ‘Elements Resolve’ and ‘Cracking (Advanced)’ combined could help him deal with most situations.

‘Reunion’, on the other hand, was a spell that was cast on the user in advance and would be triggered when the user’s life was threatened. It would teleport the user back to the place where Reunion was cast. The effect could last one month, so it did not have to be constructed inside the soul and could be cast before every quest. It made an excellent combination with Space Staff. However, the magic could work on three people at most and could not protect more people.

...

Inside the villa that Heidi and Katrina bought together, they were enjoying the red tea with some of their girlfriends while waiting for ‘Arcana Voice’ to start. Listening to the programs of the two frequencies everyday was their favorite lifestyle.

“...Before our programs begins, allow me to announce a piece of news. Mr. President has granted Mr. Lucien Evans the title of grand arcanist today on behalf of the Highest Council in honor of his paradigm-shifting contributions with the new alchemy. His tribute is...” Nightingale’s exciting, sweet voice echoed.

“Huh? Our master...” Layria, Katrina and Chelly mumbled. After the discovery of neutrons, they already knew that their teacher would become a grand arcanist, but they still found it hard to believe after they really heard it.

Heidi, on the other hand, exclaimed in joy, “A grand arcanist! His Excellency Evans!”

Lenka and their other friends looked at them enviously. “Twenty-six years old... A grand arcanist that is only twenty-six years old...”

Chapter 584: Benefit Society

“He has accomplished two revolutionary achievements and won the title of grand arcanist at only 26. I’m afraid that nobody will ever break Mr. Evans’ record. Mr. Brook was in his forties when he became a grand arcanist...” Patricia, another lady, had blond hair and looked like Katrina’s sister. She spoke as if she were in a dream, her voice full of admiration and compliments.

Katrina was back to herself hearing what her friends said. With a brilliant and excited smile, she said, “In fact, since new alchemy was proposed, we had been speculating when our teacher would become a grand arcanist. Our general opinion was that it would be thirty years old. Hehe. Even so, our teacher’s record would be amazingly tantalizing. Nobody expected that he would win it at only 26...”

Because they met their teacher when they were teenagers, an age gap of five years felt like the gap of a whole generation. So, they always regarded him as a senior. After they became his students, they were naturally even more respectful and scared. Also, because their teacher was too mature, it was hard for them to remember his real age – Lucien had already changed his age back after his identity as a musician was exposed.

Today, after hearing that he won the title of grand arcanist, she suddenly recalled that he was only 26! She was almost 22 herself, and she only had the hope to become a middle-rank sorcerer. They were of the same generation with a gap in age, but their actual gap was so huge that she could only look at his back in admiration!

“Haha, I’m a grand arcanist’s student!” Heidi was more simple and straightforward, not covering her pride at all.

Lenka looked at them with complicated feelings. “Mr. Evans must have his own legendary class now. Perhaps, you will be a legendary sorcerer’s student in ten years.”

“With Mr. Evans’ talents, he will be a top legend in forty years at most.” Patricia congratulated them. “You will certainly be in the senior rank under his guidance by then. Please don’t forget us.”

In the Congress of Magic, grand arcanists were more important than legendary sorcerers because they could almost always become legendary and it was easier for them to reach the peak.

“In fact, there will be no major difference now. Our teacher’s guidance won’t change...” Layria said in delight while secretly she complained that the only difference would probably be more insane exams.

Patricia held a cup of red tea but forgot to drink it. “How can there be no difference? Things will be much more convenient for you now. For example, there will be no dangerous, mandatory missions. Other sorcerers will prefer to exchange their trophies with you. Your life will be full of such invisible benefits.”

“That does not change our teacher’s strictness. The monthly report on research progress, the mountain of exams, the piles of papers to be reviewed, the prosaic magic exercises... I’m swooning when I just think about it.” Chelly rubbed her forehead. She was admitted by the magic school not because of talents but because of her connections. So, she had to work harder to make up for her shortcoming.

“I would rather suffer that.” Lenka blurted out and then covered her complicated feelings with a smile. “I mean, many sorcerers and apprentices would love to bear the pain in your place. You must cherish the opportunity.”

Heidi nodded solemnly, “Although we complain, we never work less. It’s the luckiest thing in our life to meet our teacher and become his student. We cannot squander our bliss.”

“Well said.” Katrina and Layria looked at Heidi rather in surprise, not expecting her to be so serious.

Then, Heidi put on a ‘creepy’ smile and declared, “Therefore, after I become a senior-rank sorcerer and have my own students, I’ll let them know what ‘lucky’ is. I’ll show them the Evans quiz, tests and exams. No, not just my students, I'll introduce them to the magic school and make everybody enjoy them!"

Katrina's smile was frozen. Was it 'benefit the society' that their teacher said?

Patricia's eyes shined. "Heidi, can you let me try the exercises that Mr. Evans gave to you? I'm very curious about those fearful tests."

Patricia had been craving for the guidance they accepted, but the private lecture was every teacher's secret. If she asked recklessly, they probably wouldn't be friends anymore. Now that Heidi mentioned it on her own, she naturally did not let go of the chance.

Heidi remembered that her teacher said that the tests would be compiled into a book for popularization later. So, she chuckled, "You want to give it a shot? I'm very strict. You have to finish it on time!"

"Really? I'm willing to try them however strict you are!" Patricia said in delight.

Lenka followed, "Can I try them, too?" Her voice was shivering.

The other few ladies expressed the same wish, and intense sympathy beamed out of Katrina and her fellows' face.

When Heidi sorted the exercises, Lenka said gloomily, "Why did we enter the Alborg magic school at the beginning? If we hadn't know you earlier, our life could've been totally different..."

"Our teacher said that this is a time of changes. Whoever is less restrained by the past and the intuitions will improve rapidly. So, you have plenty of opportunities. The future has only just begun." Layria encouraged them.

Patricia nodded solemnly, "Mr. Evans is right. That's probably why the groundbreaking contributions in the past ten years were all accomplished by young arcanists, like Felipe, Larry, Ulysses, Jurisian, Jerome and you."

"We were just lucky. While young people are less restrained by experience, it's difficult for them to make great achievements because of their unsolid knowledge foundation." Katrina reminded them. "Those older arcanists may transform their thinking and understanding about the world after digesting the recent achievements. We must not overlook them."

"The Congress has decided to set up a prize that represents the highest honor of arcana and magic. Thanks to Mr. Evans' sponsorship, the prize has been named as Evans Prize. It's subdivided into Evans Prize in Arcana that represented the law of the world and the mysteries about material and energy, as well as..."

"Evans Prize in Arcana, Magic, Mathematics and Medication... I wonder who will win it first..." Heidi, Chelly and the rest of them looked at the radio, yearning for it.

...

"...Mr. President has granted Mr. Lucien Evans the title of grand arcanist today on behalf of the Highest Council in honor of his paradigm-shifting contributions with the new alchemy. His tribute is..."

Inside the radio, Nightingale, Lark and other anchors were all announcing the news in their different tones.

"The youngest grand arcanist in history, and probably the youngest legendary sorcerer later..." Gaston broke the weird silence in the library and heaved a sigh. "Who could've thought that the first-circle sorcerer you met would become a grand arcanist? I only appreciated his potentials when the periodic table was proved and thought that he could become a senior-rank sorcerer one day. As it turned out, after I'm only improved by one level, he's already totally different from the past... The eighth grand arcanist, His Excellency Evans..."

Eight years for a senior-rank sorcerer was like one year for the ordinary people.

Larry, sitting on his opposite side, said in a smile, "A few years ago,

I envied him deeply and was even jealous of him in private, but right now, all the jealousy is gone. I chose a wrong target. We are not competitors of the same level at all. I can't even see his back now."

"It's good to recognize yourself, but there is no need to feel humble. The new alchemy and the theory of relativity have opened the gate to a new epoch. There are certain infinite mysteries up ahead. As long as we explore hard, we will have a lot of achievements, too." Gaston comforted his student in a smile.

Larry nodded in agreement. "I'm going to study the orbits and distribution of electrons in the new alchemy."

"Me, too." Gaston was satisfied about his students' keenness.

...

In Heidler city...

Listening to the radio, Felipe looked out of the window aimlessly like a statue.

"Grand arcanist... Grand arcanist..." The same broadcast raised different feelings. Felipe was lost and frustrated first, but then his pride was rekindled. He could not be left far behind.

"Lucien mentioned that his modification would be based on the diffraction of X rays..." Felipe decided to learn more about electromagnetism and improve the magnifying magic on his own to meet his demand.

...

In a secret cave that was comfortably and splendidly decorated in the wilderness on the north coastline...

Kritonia listened to the radio on the sofa solemnly. "Lucien Evans has become a grand arcanist, and probably a legend in a few years..."

With his level-three legendary, he didn't have to hide. But the Hoffenberg family had Hathaway who was at the peak of legendary, so he had to be prudent.

At this moment, the fire in the furnace suddenly grew into the shape of a human.

“Original Fire.” Kritonia sensed it the moment the fire changed. He was amazed by the sorcerer with ancient heritage. ‘Original Fire’ was only level-one legendary, but he never discovered the guy until he was near.

Although he wouldn’t be ambushed, it indeed called for wariness.

A hoarse voice echoed from the fire. “He has become a grand arcanist. We need to plan an operation. If we postpone a couple of years, we will be faced with a legendary sorcerer, which will be much more difficult.”

“But we have to wait until the Congress of Magic is less vigilant.” Kritonia nodded in agreement.

...

In Babel, Lucien received Natasha’s electromagnetism messaging.

“I heard the broadcast that you’d been promoted into a grand arcanist. Does it mean that you do not need to participate in the review of papers?” Asked Natasha joyfully.

Lucien smiled. “Do you want me to go to Rentato?”

“Hehe. You disrupted the pope’s scheme only a few days ago. It will be too dangerous for you if you are out of Atom Institution. Also, I’ve been curious about your Atom Institution and your magic tower for a long time. So, I will go to Allyn tomorrow!” Natasha understood the situation quite well.

Lucien chuckled. He was thinking to discuss schools, labor laws and Kritonia with her, and she had decided to come to him on her own so cooperatively.

“Do you not welcome me?” Hearing Lucien’s chuckle, Natasha said jokingly.

Lucien replied with a smile. “Of course I do. My friends and students have always wanted to meet Her Majesty. There’s something that I want to discuss with you, too.”

Chapter 585: A One-Day Trip in Allyn

After the call with Natasha, Lucien did not clean his room and his laboratory for the visit of ‘Her Majesty’, like any other single gentlemen would, because Leo, the servants, the golems as well as the tower guard were enough to make every part of the magic tower clean and tidy.

Also, Lucien was a very organized man himself. He had kept all the experiment materials in his own way in case of mistakes during his experiment.

Lucien focused his attention on the Sun’s Corona. During the last couple of days, he had already cracked the last two barriers and grasped the level nine item.

The second to last barrier could only allow Lucien to perform a level nine divine power named ‘Bane of the Undead’, but the last barrier contained the coordinates of the mysterious land recorded by Maskelyne.

The mysterious place was inside the World of Souls and seemed related to the senior-rank spectres. It was possible that the greatest secret of the World of Souls that Rhine talked about was hidden there.

The information left by Maskelyne included more than ten parameters that were associated with the actual circumstances. Only after he obtained the environment data of the World of Souls could he calculate the mysterious place whose coordinates changed all the time.

“I’m already a legendary sorcerer. Exploring the secrets of the World of Souls and rescuing Mr. Maskelyne should be put on my agenda right.” Without Maskelyne and his gift, he could’ve died on the journey to Stuart. Also, any arcanist whose goal was to explore the world would have to visit the World of Souls sooner or later.

Of course, Lucien did not intend to go there anytime soon. He would wait until the six legendary spells were engraved into his soul and go together with others of the Congress of Magic. That would be the safest way.

“I’ll apply to check the intelligence in a couple of days. My permissions should be enough for me to check the information from the senior-rank spectres like Adol...” Lucien began to study Space Staff and analyze ‘Vengeful Gaze’ after making a decision.

.....

The next day in the morning, Lucien waited outside of Hathaway’s library on the thirty-third floor of the Allyn magic tower.

Soon, space-time ripples spread out, and Lucien smelled something familiar.

Soundlessly, the door was opened, and a tall lady walked out. Natasha was wearing a white hunting suit and long pants, which agreed with her vibe and look and made her even more attractive.

Looking at Lucien’s daze, Natasha pressed her chest with her right hand and bowed, “Your Excellency, you are the truth of elements and the staff that masters space and time.”

“My lady, you are my truth.” Lucien tried to be humorous although he was somewhat regretful. He had gotten much taller, but he was still several centimeters shorter than Natasha. Thankfully, it wasn’t too obvious now.

Standing next to Lucien in a smile, Natasha observed the Allyn magic tower. “This place is more beautiful than I remembered. It’s simplistic and magnificent. The mysterious patterns and the silver brilliance constitute a dreamy style.”

“The Allyn magic tower always leaves an ineffable impression on every sorcerer or apprentice after their visit. Your Majesty, your knight will show you the Atom Institution first.” Lucien extended his right hand as an invitation.

Natasha chuckled, “That is a mysterious, forbidden area all nobles and citizens talk about. The deepest secrets of the world seem to be hidden there.”

Under the introduction of 'Arcana Voice', the regular citizens were quite awed by the Atom Institution who had many major discoveries.

Since there wasn't any pressure or danger, Natasha was rather relieved and asked about everything she saw.

Their conversation and laughter caught the attention of Hellen, who opened her library and asked, frowning, "This is..."

Natasha did not have any badge of magic or arcana on her chest.

"She is my fiancée Natasha and the queen of Holm. You must've met her before, Ms. Hellen?" Lucien introduced, although it appeared that Hellen did not know Natasha.

Natasha also said courteously, "Ms. Hellen, I heard a lot about you from Granny Hathaway. You are one of the most admirable ladies to me."

Hellen's eyebrow loosened. "So, you are Natasha. I saw your image and heard your name before, but I never associated them."

Lucien tried to hold back his laughter. It was obviously not something that Ms. Hellen was interested in.

Now that the identity of the guest was confirmed, Hellen shut the door of her library without any smalltalk and continued dwelling in her world.

"Ms. Hellen has the most delicate look among all the females I know." When they stepped into the life, Natasha praised with a smile.

Lucien's lips twitched. "Why do you care about her looks..."

"What else should you care about?" Natasha felt that it was only reasonable. Then she realized what was going on. "Rest assured, I'm absolutely loyal. I won't have any other thoughts during my appreciation."

Lucien touched the hair behind Natasha's knight hat without a word. What he needed to worry about was truly different from that of common men.

At the edge of life, Natasha pointed at the thirty-first floor. "Isn't the Sky Radio Station. I like Nightingale and Lark's voices. How do they look?"

Natasha asked similar things a few years ago, but Lucien, fearing that he would have more competitors, simply replied to her with excuses. After all, he was not qualified to catch the attention of the Violet Countess back then.

"They are not in the Sky Radio Station during the day." Lucien explained.

"What a shame. But I'll stay in Allyn tonight. Will you show me the Sky Radio Station?" Asked Natasha with great interest.

Now that they had settled their relationship, Lucien naturally did not have his previous worries. He smiled, "That's not a problem. I am still the manager of the Sky Radio Station in name."

.....

Inside the Atom Institution, Lazar, Heidi, Alfalia and other people waited excitedly and anxiously. They had seen the queen's image in the newspaper but never met her in person. Also, it was a sign that Mr. Lucien Evans had officially ended his single life.

In such an atmosphere, the gate of the institution was opened. Heidi keenly saw her teacher walking next to a purple-haired lady.

"She's so gorgeous..."

"How beautiful!"

"No wonder our teacher fell in love with her."

"They are really a match."

Natasha's look fitted the appetite of the ladies on the spot, who believed that she had certain masculine beauty that differed her from the female sorcerers.

After Lucien's cough, Katrina and the students were back to themselves and bowed respectfully, "Good morning, master. Good morning, Your Majesty."

Alfalia and Lowi pressed their chest and their forehead. "Your Excellency, you are the truth of elements and the staff that masters space and time. Good morning, Your Majesty."

After that, Lucien introduced his friends like Lazar and Jerome and his students like Annick and Layria to Natasha one by one.

After the assistants left, Heidi summoned her courage to ask, "Your Majesty, how did your relationship with our master begin? All the sorcerers in Allyn are curious about it!"

"Just say that you are curious about it, lovely little girl." Natasha looked at Heidi with a vague smile. "Long story short, I pushed your master over."

Heidi and Layria both raised their thumbs. How majestic! Being straightforward seemed the best solution to deal with a mild man like their master!

"You seem quite free today." Lucien interjected. "I'll give you another mission. You can study the mechanism of the ancillary computation circles."

Heidi looked awful. Their teacher had obviously translated his embarrassment into a task.

"If you want to know the details, I'll tell them to you later." Natasha followed Lucien to the laboratory with a smile.

After she entered the laboratory, Natasha saw the sharp, cold and simple alchemical devices inside and the indescribable patterns on the experiment platforms, giving permanent shock.

"This is entirely different from my mother's laboratory. It has more... beauty of the space." Shocked, Natasha tried to express her feeling.

“Such is the charm of arcana and magic. Come here, try this cyclotron.” Lucien shared his studies with Natasha.

After activating the cyclotron, Natasha saw the dreamy traces of electrons in the cloud room. She exclaimed in amazement, “Are they tiny electrons?”

Lucien was about to answer, when the voltage part of the cyclotron suddenly broke down.

“It’s not my fault...” Natasha didn’t think she had made any mistakes with the operation.

Lucien checked it. “It’s regular attrition. Come here and try this magnifying magic circle.”

A moment later, Natasha said innocently again, “This is really not my fault.”

“Of course. It’s also regular attrition...”

After Lucien’s tour with Natasha, three alchemical devices and two magic circles crashed. Although they took up less than one percent, it was still the attrition of almost one month.

“Perhaps they are scared of me?” Scratching her chin, Natasha carefully looked for an excuse for such an anomaly.

Amused, Lucien said, “Soon enough, you will be given the title of ‘Experiment Device Destroyer’.”

“It’s definitely because I was not lucky today!” Declared Natasha resolutely.

.....

Lucien showed Natasha the central area of Allyn and returned to his magic tower at noon.

“This is more whimsical and fantastic than the Atomic Institution... Well designed.” Natasha was shocked by Lucien’s ‘Babel’ again.

“Nice to meet you, masteress.” ‘Pinocchio’ greeted her.

Very interested in the wisdom of alchemical life, Natasha looked at Lucien and asked, “You didn’t teach him?”

“Of course not.” Lucien secretly raised his thumb at Pinocchio.

Pinocchio replied proudly, “I am the smart Pinocchio!”

“I remember that Pinocchio was a puppet whose nose grew long if he told lies in your tale.” Natasha chuckled, “Was it a metaphor that you tricked many people?”

Pinocchio said loudly, “No, I’m not a lying puppet; I’m the honest Pinocchio. Yes, very honest!”

Lucien pulled Natasha into the magic tower with a smile and stopped her from further teasing Pinocchio.

After visiting the magic tower and the magic garden, they returned to the living room and waited for lunch.

When Lucien was about to discuss schools and laws with Natasha, Natasha suddenly rose and closed the door of the living room, before she looked at Lucien with a mischievous smile.

“What’s up?” Asked Lucien in confusion.

Natasha kept her smile. “Let me tell you a piece of good news. By perceiving the rules inside the Sword of Truth, I have already advanced into level nine. I’ve finally surpassed you again.’

Born a knight, she was very happy that her strength would be higher for the time being. She knew that Lucien, whose cognitive world had half-solidified, would surpass her eventually, so she decided to make the best use of the years while she had the ‘dominance’.

Therefore, she rubbed her fists eagerly. “I’ll hug you in exactly the same way you did to me! I’m going to relish it!”

While talking, she sensed Lucien’s mood carefully. She would give up if he disliked her being too pushy. It was the fundamental principle of their relationship.

Lucien was delighted at Natasha's improvement at first, but then he simply stood there with a smile.

Seeing no objection from Lucien, Natasha intentionally walked to Lucien slowly and extended her hands at him with wicked laughter.

But all of a sudden, Natasha realized that Lucien was as terrifying as a pillar that was deeply rooted in the earth and could not be moved. Then, she sensed an enormous force on her back and her legs, before she was swept off her feet, unable to resist.

She waved her hands and feet crazily, trying to free herself, but his arms were like two unbreakable manacles.

"You have already advanced into legendary?"

Natasha was back to herself and asked in disbelief, her eyes widened. She was both delighted and panicked, both awed and upset.

.....

The dinner was much later than scheduled. Looking at Natasha who was unusually exhausted, Lucien said in a great mood, "I'll entrust the regulation of the alchemical workshops to you."

Blushing, and with persistence burning inside her body, Natasha swore that she would try to become a legend!

She nodded her head. "I'll ask Duke James to propose a bill to the parliament. Right, the intelligence department mentioned that the dwarf craftsmen are worshiping a mysterious God of Steam. Why do I have the feeling that it has something to do with you?"

Chapter 586: Plan

Chapter 586: Plan

Lucien had almost forgotten about the dwarfs. After Natasha asked, he remembered what happened and said with a smile, putting down the caviar next to him. “Didn’t I tell you about the adventure in the Night Highland?”

“Yes, that was very wicked of you. You added an additional layer of defense outside of the vampire count’s defense core to make it even more ‘solid!’” Natasha was chuckling about it even right now. Lucien was full of such bad humor, but she liked it!

Lucien was quite proud of his reactions back then, too. “That time, in order to trick the dwarfs into coming back, I intentionally pretended to be their God of Steam after they mistook me for him, and I even ‘showed’ them an illusionary gods’ realm – Atlantis. Inside of it was my imagination about the future of the alchemical industry. Hehe. At that time, I even imagined that alchemical bombs that looked like rising suns were created by the great development of elements and alchemy. You know what happened later. Reality is always more unbelievable than fantasies. We already have ‘Eternal Blaze’.”

Now that they were talking about dwarfs, Lucien briefly explained what ‘Atlantis’ was to her.

Natasha was stunned first at Lucien’s answer, then she laughed so hard that she lay on the table. “And I was wondering what the dwarfs were worshipping. It turns out that they were worshipping an alchemical bomb. Haha. How hilarious! I have never seen such a funny religion before!”

They’re just nuclear-bomb believers. I’d seen a lot of them when I played games in the past. Lucien smiled at Natasha as she laughed aloud.

Trying to control herself, Natasha said while laughing, “According to the intelligence department, those dwarfs have been devoutly worshipping silver... Haha, silver iron bombs since 'Eternal Blaze' exploded a while back, crying about god's favor, Atlantis' arrival and such. They also tried to find out who performed 'Eternal Blaze', because they believed that he was the envoy and the saint of the God of Steam."

"If they learn that it's a spell I created, I will be reduced from 'God of Steam' into an ordinary person." Lucien shook his head. A weird idea occurred to him. If the dwarfs perfected their doctrines and rituals, would the power of faith be gathered toward him? Or would it directly be gathered to 'nuclear bombs'?

Lucien had no desire in becoming a god yet. He had learnt a good lesson from Ell. However, he had always wanted to study the congregation of the power of faith. If the gods were unveiled, the deeper mysteries of the world would definitely be revealed.

After talking about the dwarfs' assimilation, Natasha wiped her lips with a napkin. "I'll allocate the additional abbeys to local city halls as the locations of the generic schools."

After the South Church evacuated, the number of believers had reduced a lot. In order to control them, Natasha had confiscated part of the abbeys and real estate of the Church, which built up the queen's treasury. That was why she approved Lucien's plan without any hesitation. She was using her private possessions and did not need the approval of the Parliament of Nobles.

"After the schools you and the Congress establish raise talents after talents, I believe that the royal family will be more steady." Lucien said, smiling.

Natasha put down the napkin and looked at Lucien. "It's your plan, and I definitely support you. Besides, you convinced me."

Lucien nodded solemnly, "If nothing changes, and society remains as ignorant and underdeveloped as it used to be, will there be any joy in accomplishing success? What's the point of becoming the leader of a bunch of pigs? A real arcanist should facilitate the progress of society and make mankind more civilized, giving everybody an opportunity to enjoy the convenience brought by the alchemical items. That will be the greatest achievement for them...”

Hearing Lucien’s heartfelt speech, Natasha became quiet and focused. He looked more charming than ever.

After Lucien finished, Natasha responded with a brilliant smile, “Yes. Being a queen in a poor, underdeveloped country where most people don’t even know how to write is not nearly as pleasant as seeing the country flourish.”

Looking at Leo and two maids who were serving nearby, Lucien rose with a smile. “Let me show you the scenery of Atlantis.”

Natasha was stunned at first, and then she realized that Lucien had something else he wanted to say. Therefore, she picked up her hat and followed Lucien into the living room unhurriedly.

After Lucien turned on independent magic circle, she asked solemnly, “What’s up?”

“Nothing important. Weren’t you ‘angry’ that I didn’t tell you when I advanced into legendary?” Lucien looked at Natasha with a smile.

Natasha blushed as if she recalled something. Then, she coughed and thought quickly. “Are you planning to hide the fact that you are already legendary in order to deal with the legendary experts that the Church will possibly send to kill you?”

Lucien raised his thumb. Natasha had always been keen about that. “Yes. We have to eliminate as many legends of the Church as possible. If I set it to public, they will probably never take any action. After all, a legendary sorcerer can barely be killed. Besides, you are still being threatened by the shadow of Kritonia. I’m thinking to resolve the two issues at once.”

Knowing that Lucien was doing this mainly to help her deal with Kritonia, Natasha meant to object first, but she abandoned her idea after seeing Lucien’s firmness. She smiled, “The problem is, you can always plan to assassinate somebody else, but you can’t always be braced for assassinations.”

“That’s why we need to attract all of them.” Said Lucien without any hesitation. As long as they misevaluated his strength, he would be able to stall them until Mr. President, his teacher and Hathaway arrived.

Natasha scratched his chin. “Kritonia and the possible assassins of the Church can’t be fooled so easily. They are very experienced. They will discover our flaws and take advantage of them if we do anything wrong.”

“Yes. We can’t wander about randomly. There has to be a justifiable, unquestionable reason.” Frowning, Lucien said.

Natasha began to consider how to create such an ‘opportunity’, too. Suddenly, her eyes glittered, and she clapped her hands. “Wedding! Our wedding! While Granny Hathaway and the Lord of Storm will be present, the wedding will be rather crowded and messy, which will give the assassins a chance.”

“Everybody knows our relationship. It’s perfectly normal to hold a wedding now that the situation is steady again.” Lucien nodded in approval.

Natasha added. “We can go one step further. For example, you are a grand arcanist, and I am a queen. Our wedding should be equal. We can hold one wedding in the Nekso Palace and another one in Allyn, or you can come to the Nekso Palace to fetch me, my father, Aunt Camil and the other members of the royal family to Allyn. In such a way, Granny Hathaway will be our only protector on the way. There will be a chance for assassination.”

Weddings were supposed to be held in churches, but since Lucien was a sorcerer, churches were naturally not suitable.

“If the Church takes action, it will probably be the Original Fire or one of the other giants of the inquisition. According to their record, they are all bold and careful. The only problem is whether or not Kritonia will work with them. If not, how can they spare enough hands to keep Granny Hathaway busy? We need to make two different plans.” Said Lucien quickly. The two of them soon settled on a framework after their discussion.

In the end, Natasha asked, “How long will it take before you can engrave the remaining two legendary spells in your soul?”

“Half a year at least, and eight months at most.” Lucien said his estimation.

Natasha nodded and smiled, “Then, we will hold the wedding on April 10 next year, the day when we were separated for the first time. I’ll release the news first. Is the time enough?”
